NUMBER OF STRANDED GIRL FILM EXTRAS MUCH BELOW LAST YEAR

Publicity About Conditions in Picture Colony at Hollywood Beneficial in 1927—Of Those Going to Coast 5 Per Cent Only Got Inside Studios

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

The number of girl film extras requiring charitable assistance in 1927 was almost negligible, as compared with previous years, according to records of the Hollywood Studio Club. It is an organization maintained for the welfare of girl studio workers.

National publicity given Hollywood's unemployment problem and propaganda circulated by local civic organizations is said to have reduced to a minimum the number of penniless girls. Formerly they yearly poured into Hollywood ex-

7 NEW HOTELS GOING UP IN TIMES SQ.

Times Square as a hotel center took form when the Chanin-built Lincoln opened at 8th avenue, 44th-45th streets. It represents an investment of between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000, with 1,400 rooms, all with bath.

Within three blocks, three other hotels of top class are shortly to open—Piccadilly on the 45th street block nearer Broadway; Paramount, directly back of it on 47th street, and the President on 48th street, nearer 8th avenue. In addition are building the Victoria at 51st street and 7th avenue, Century on 46th street east of Broadway and now open, and Leftcourt, designed as a major structure on 47th street west of Broadway (now the site of a warehouse).

These seven hotels are spotted in the heart of the theatre district. Those west of Broadway give promise of enhancing the proper-

Guest's Success

During the Beaux Arts ball at the Hotel Astor Friday night, when boys and girls in all sorts of dress, some fancy, were wandering over the hostelry, one of the regular guests attached a sign to his door reading:

And with much success, he stated.

WAY OF REFORMERS

Washington, Jan. 31.

A speech released last week by the Lord's Day Alliance as having been made by Congressman Lankford (Ga.) on his Sunday closing bill for Washington, was not delivered by the Congressman.

Tied up in an unexpected committee meeting, Lankford could not attend the meeting called by the Alliance here. He was to have been principal speaker.

So the reformers let the talk go to the press anyway.

Golf Champ in Six Films

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Walter Hagen, national professional golf champion, has signed with Tiffany-Stahl to make six features.

The stories will all contain a golf background.

Prison Shows Off

Auburn, N. Y., Jan. 31.

No more shows by inmates of Auburn Prison.

The show has been an annual event, with public admitted.

A report from the State Commission in charge recommending against it squelches future events.

Queen Asks About Harvey

Toronto, Jan. 31.

Queen Mary of England was amongst those who cabled asking for the condition of Sir Joan Martin Harvey, who collapsed during the first act of "Scaramouche" and was almost immediately operated upon for intestinal trouble.

The actor will recover.

Insistent Report Republicans Look to Hays to Deliver U. S. Screens to Their Party—Hays Without Authority in Moving Picture Business Details — May Have Couple of Chains Favor Him, Perhaps 500 Theatres and That Doubtful — Over 7,000 Indie Houses

DEMOCRATS WATCHFUL

Negotiations between members of the Republican party and the Hays organization for the purpose of getting screen support during the forthcoming elections, especially for Hoover as presidential candidate, are reported at an unsatisfactory stage.

It is said Hoover representatives have already asked for national screen support from Hays. In independent circles the impression is that Hays' ability, or inability, to deliver the screens will have its reaction in an influence on the pending Brookhart bill.

Independents have been trying to combat the belief, held by political leaders, of Hays' power in the mo-

SUIT TO COMPEL N. Y. 'TELEGRAPH' TO PRODUCE PRIZE PLAY, 'CLAIM'

E. J. Reilly Awarded "Telegraph's" Judge's Decision 2 Years Ago Claims Daily Failed to Fulfill Obligation of Contest—Unique Enforcement Action

On behalf of E. J. Reilly, author and playwright, Abnor J. Rubien, attorney, has been retained to start suit against the New York "Morning Telegraph" for specific production of a play entitled "The Claim," awarded first prize in a contest conducted by the "Telegraph" about two years ago.

The contest was used as a ballyhoo by the "Telegraph" for over a year, with David Belasco presiding over a group of judges comprising some of the best-known legit and literary names on Broadway.

Though winning the contest, Reilly alleges in his complaint that

Chorus Blames Weak Singing on Low Wages

Berlin, Jan. 20.

Chorus of the Dresden opera is so badly paid that it is not singing as well as it did in former days. The chorus is accused of passive resistance, but denies this, stating that they are not able to get sufficient nourishment from the salaries they are receiving.

The 93 members of the chorus and ballet asked for a combined increase of $5,000, one-third of the raise in salary which Fritz Busch, leading conductor, has been given this year. Demands of the chorus have been definitely refused.

"Hot Mush" Announcers

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

"Hot Mush" announcers is what the average radio fan calls a number of station announcers who seem to regard themselves as the last word.

Either their announcements are so full of egotism they drive the average listener to tune in on another station or their words are so mumbled that it takes some guessing to find what station is on the air.

Among the principal offenders are the announcers at KSL (Salt Lake) and KOA (Denver).

At station WBBM (Chicago), the announcer of the midnight revels sing-songs his announcements so rapidly it's next to impossible to gather what is being said.

SHOOLMAN MUST PAY TODAY OR LOSE $400,000

Max Shoolman and his associates stand to lose $400,000, the price of their option on the lease of the Poli circuit, unless the deal is closed by today (Feb. 1). It is said Shoolman has had a speculative motive for a turnover of the option to the purchase of the Poli string.

It is reported Shoolman realized the $400,000 cash deposit from a syndicate of 12 men and hoped to sell the option for $1,000,000 or more or lease the chain to one of the sev-

LONDON AS IT LOOKS

By HANNEN SWAFFER

London, Jan. 20.

London theatre managers have once again been wondering who it is has the right, every now and then, to call up the "Daily Mail," the "Evening News," the "Weekly Dispatch" and the "Daily Mirror" and tell them to boom some play or other.

Some years ago, when the whole of the Northcliffe Press began to say how marvelous Seymour Hicks was in "The Man in Dress Clothes," people could understand it, because it was known that when Northcliffe went to see the show, it was the first play he had seen for years.

The Mystery of "Quest"

The case of "Quest," though, is a more puzzling one. I saw this play on the first night and thought it a very poor comedy, written around obvious flapdoodle, and destined, it seemed, to drag along the four weeks it deserved.

Then, suddenly, the other day, I saw in the "Daily Mail" in big type, at the top of a column, the words "Miss Heather Thatcher." I thought it was a warning at first, and that Heather Thatcher ought to be missed.

But, no! Underneath, it said, "Defines Test of a Play's Success."

A Boom That Was Not There

Then I went on to read that "Business is booming in the London theatres," which was not true.

A little further down the column, I read that "'Quest' at the Criterion theatre is taking more and more money at every performance." If that were true, I wondered what all the fuss was about, because, obviously, it was a puff, one of those mysterious things that Carmelite House goes in for, every now and then, choosing, invariably, some play which has aroused merely my sense of irony.

Punk About the Pit

"If the pit is the test of a play's appeal, then 'Quest' is an undoubted success," Miss Heather Thatcher was reported to say in this same article. "The pit is full every evening."

Now, as, when there is a success at the Criterion, there is usually only three rows of a pit, it was extraordinary what fuss was made of this ingenuous statement.

The Courage of Gordon Beckles

Theatre managers wondered what it was all about. Later in the day, the "Evening News" boosted "Quest." On Sunday, the "Weekly Dispatch" was expected to have another go, although I am delighted to hear that Gordon Beckles, the boy critic of the "Weekly Dispatch," refused to print a puff in his column.

Fleet Street is ringing with the news of his bravery. I applaud young Beckles's display of courage. It was what I expected of him. He looks so stalwart. He is not even afraid of Lord Rothermere—or me.

Then, on Monday, the "Daily Mail" had another go. There was more about Miss Thatcher and the pit. It was marvelous to know that this great actress was coming into her own, at last.

Then, in the "Evening News" that night, I read about "Quest" that "People who have gone to this play feeling out of sorts and down in the dumps have found in the acting of Miss Thatcher and Mr. Hugh Wakefield an invigorating tonic, and their laughter has been as loud and whole-hearted as that of the really fit members of the audience."

Who Feels Their Pulses?

Now, I ask you whether theatre managers go round among the audience, before a play starts, take their temperatures, ask to see their tongues, test their blood pressure, knock their knees, and do all the other things done by Madison avenue specialists to make certain of their health before the bunk starts.

Publicity has gone mad when this sort of thing is allowed.

Pity the Real Tryers!

Now theatre managers occasionally spend thousands of dollars on a production; now and then, they select their companies with the greatest care; sometimes, they go to the trouble of obtaining the help of great artists and famous musicians; they have even been known to stage one of the world's greatest plays. When they do this, they are usually left to themselves, to go bankrupt. But when some little comedy in which an ordinary actress like Miss Thatcher is appearing is staged—this is not the first time there has been a Heather Thatcher boom—more fuss is made of it than if Shakespeare and Gordon Craig and Sybil Thorndike and Elgar and the Albert Hall all combined in one great art effort.

Why, then, take any trouble at all about the theatre.

More Bunk, Yes, Even More!

I read in the "Evening News," too, right across a screaming headline, that "Ivor Novello has grown a moustache." It is most manly of him. I applaud his fortitude. Perhaps, now, Noel Coward will sprout a beard.

We do live in days of bunk, don't we? Andre Charlot was saying, the other day, that as people wanted amusement on Sunday nights, he was going to start a new society to produce Sunday plays and he wanted to pay the artists!

A day or two later, Mrs. Geffrey Whitworth wrote to me, appealing for my aid for a matinee at which the boys and girls born of acting stock were to play "The Young Visiters," so that the Stage Society could be helped with the money. Now, the Stage Society, the first and most important of all Sunday night play societies in England, has been supported by Shaw and the brainiest people in the English theatre.

It has done a great work for the English stage. In fact, it is by far the most distinguished society of its kind in this country. But, in order that it can go on, kindly little children have to give a charity matinee once a year to help it along. Does Mr. Charlot know this, I wonder?

Truex Again in the Limelight

Anyway, I went along and I saw two of Sybil Thorndike's children, two of Ernest Truex's, the Dorothy Dickson girl, and a handful of Russell Thorndike's babes, oh, a whole array of infant effort, very clever, very charming, but, dear me, pity the poor Stage Society!

The afternoon was a joy, of course. Ernest Truex's oldest boy played the Prince of Wales with a fine American accent that made us all scream. The younger boy, as the Earl of Clincham, in speech was as refined as George Grossmith. Ernest Truex was to have sold two copies of the play by auction, to help the Stage Society, the funds of which were to be aided by the autographs of the baby actors. Fortunately, he had a cold, so he only sat on the stage, silently, while someone else sold them for him.

The War of the Paragraphers

Theatre managers are very pleased, anyway, about the new fight between Eric Barker, a theatre paragraphist on one evening paper, and Norman Hillson, a new rival on another. They have started a way to best each other with paragraphs. So the consequence is a manager can get, at the top of a column now in either paper, a story which, a few months ago, would have been given two lines among the greyhound racing.

The two men do not speak; their friends have taken sides; one contradicts what the other says. One new joke is to call up one man and tell him what you think the other has got.

For years, Eric Barker has prided himself on getting scoops about theatrical marriages. The other day, Hillson actually discovered that a girl who had acted in "Broadway" was going to marry a Canadian. It was on page one, with picture. Eric Barker turned green.

They tell me that Eric Barker goes in to his office every day to explain why he did not get what the other fellow got. As the other fellow calls himself "Argonaut," they are calling Barker "Argueneot."

Anyway, it is good for trade. Why advertise?

The Truth About Thomas Hardy

I must tell you about Thomas Hardy. Will Hays may have heard that he was one of England's greatest authors. He died at the age of 86, earning a funeral in Westminster Abbey.

Then a reporter went down to his native town in Wessex and interviewed an old woman relative, on whom Hardy based the character of Tess in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which is one of the greatest novels in England, although Micky Neilan put a motor car chase and a night club into its film version.

The old woman was called Theresa Hardy and she said that "Tom" had been very unkind in altering her and calling her Tess, and that "Tom" ought to have remained an architect, although he seemed to have done well with his novels.

I suppose they talked about Shakespeare like that in Stratford-on-Avon, three centuries ago. Even Sophie Tucker must have odd things said about her when she goes to her home town.

WILL MAHONEY

The New York "Sun" in reviewing "Take the Air" said: "There is no funnier person on two feet than Will Mahoney. His rendition of the song 'Lily' is a scream and his comedy tap dancing and falls, even more than that. But why go on? You will see him anyhow. You must see him. He's great.

Reinhardt, Barnowsky, Robert Quit Mgrs.' Ass'n

Berlin, Jan. 22.

Reinhardt, Robert and Barnowsky, the most important group of private managers in Germany, have resigned from the Managers' association. As a result the Authors' and Play Brokers' association is not allowed to close contracts for plays with these managers.

The Reinhardt combination is protesting and is suing the three above named affiliated associations. The seceding group claim that they have been badly treated in the Managers' association, as this takes care only of the interests of the municipal and state theatres, which are in the majority. The court ordered the Reinhardt group to make specific charges against the Managers' association and also to make statements of what plays they had already made contracts for before they had retired. The court recommended that some sort of a compromise be reached whereby the three directors could still remain under the jurisdiction of the agreement between the autho s and play brokers, but need not return to the Managers' association.

Decision has been postponed until the end of the month.

AMERICANS ABROAD

Paris, Jan. 22.

In Paris: Wanda Lyon, en route from China via Russia to New York; Arthur M. Loew; Joseph Freeman; Robert F. Wilson and wife; Wm. C. Burton, artist; Henry Bolitho, author; Claire de Lorez, film actress, from Berlin.

PARIS' LIDO

Paris, Jan. 31.

A new cabaret to be known as Lido is being inaugurated by Edouard Chaux and Rosenthal about Feb. 15.

Ernest and Yvonne, German dance team, will be featured with the Versailles band; Barbara and Graham are listed here for March. Fischer will figure on the program, as also Pizello, from the Casino de Paris, accompanied by a Neapoliten band, and Manuel Pizarro with Sechiari's Septur string band to follow.

E. S. Fernandez is to be m. c. Billy Arnold and H. Carson are booking.

Freddie Rich in Berlin

London, Jan 31.

He opens a month engagement at the Winter Garden in that city February 6.

RITZY

When the Embassy theatre, New York, first opened with run photoplays, Gloria Bishop was widely exploited as its "hostess," though she seemed conspicuous by her absence. Prior to that time she had appeared semi-professionally as a toe dancer and before long she departed from her native land and dropped from sight. She has family connections in various parts of Europe, including an aunt, the Duchess Helie de Tallyrand (Ann Gould), in Paris a sister, Lady Decies, in London another sister, Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., at Biarritz, and two uncles, Howard and Frank Gould, on the Riviera.

Mrs. Bishop, it seems, came into an inheritance last May of over $600,000 from the estate of her father, the late George J. Gould, and has since sojourned in Rome. Her husband's parents live in Bridgeport, Conn. Gloria's mother was Edith Kingdon, an actress, and her stepmother was Genevere Sinclair, also an actress, now Viscountess Dunsford. Her uncle, Howard Gould, married Katherine Clemmons, an actress, and her uncle, Frank Gould, chose as the second of his three wives Edith Kelly, an actress, now Mrs. Albert de Courville. Howard has long been devoted to Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn, who was Edna May, the actress.

Nazimova's Settings

The stage setting and costumes for Nazimova's playlet-act this season, "India," were done by Natalie Hays Hammond, heiress daughter of the rich and fashionable Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington. Natalie has also appeared semi-professionally as a dancer.

Her brother, John Hays Hammond, Jr., is an inventor of renown. In 1926 he surprised society by announcing that for a whole year he had been secretly married to Irene Fenton, who had taken up portrait painting after divorcing Frederick Reynolds, a shoe dealer of Gloucester, Mass. Another brother, Richard P. Hammond, lives in New York.

Alice Joyce in English Film

Years ago Alice and Mabel Normand were models posing for New York artists. Becoming friends, they went into the movies together, starting as extras. Later, when she had become a leading lady, Alice married and divorced Tom Moore, by whom she had a daughter. Later Tom was divorced by Rene Adoree.

Alice then married the son of the former proprietor of the old Knickerbocker hotel, and they, too, have had children. She then got her brother into the hotel business, and one of his ventures was the Hotel Joyce, on the upper West Side. The senior Regan, who in his day was a well known figure, got his start through the late Col. John Jacob Astor, original owner of the Knickerbocker.

COLORED EDITOR SAYS RACE LOWERS STAGE

Weekly's Owner Creates a Spreading Discussion Among Negro Show People

Not in recent years have Negro professionals been so stirred up as they have over a recent article written by Theophilus Lewis, editor and part owner of "The Tattler," colored weekly, which he wrote for the publication, "Ebony and Topaz."

Lewis emphatically blames the Negroes for the present state of theatricals which he claims is deplorable.

Lewis said the general tone of the Negro stage has never risen above the level of the burlesque show. He pointed out its defects, shortcomings and tendency to draw it down instead of uplifting Negro stage work.

He claims that the Negro stage panders generally to lasciviousness of the feebleminded and depraved elements of the race. He also averred that the Negro actor has not only failed to make the stage a vital part of the Negroes' cultural life, but had degraded it below the notice of the better classes of the race.

From mouth to mouth the tenure of the article, scathing in its arraignment, has sped among the colored theatrical circles and opinion is about evenly divided. Some are censuring the writer in no mild terms while others leclare he spoke the truth in plain, unvarnished words.

Winnie Lightner's Break

London, Jan. 31.

Cecil Cunningham opened at the Trocadero restaurant last night (Monday) and management claims she is the biggest success the place has had. She will be retained indefinitely.

Saturday Miss Cunningham substituted for Winnie Lightner at the Alhambra (vaudeville) and was also called upon to replace another headliner at the Victoria Palace, another vaude house.

Miss Lightner is having a tough break here. Due to throat trouble she had to cancel the best part of last week at the Kit Cat restaurant and Alhambra and is out of both this week.

London, Jan. 31.

DeMarlo, previously appearing with the Olympia circus, opened at the Coliseum (vaudeville) yesterday (Monday) and did nicely.

DeMarlo and his wife, La Marletta, were brought here by Bertram Mills for the circus. Mrs. Marlo was badly hurt during a performance, whereupon her salary ceased as per contract.

Other vaude openings included Jewett and Page at the Holborn Empire yesterday, who got away fairly on their first local appearance, although given the opening spot.

A cabaret opening yesterday was that of the Three New Yorkers, who made their bow to England at the Cafe de Paris.

The trio opened slowly, but began to unload a few comedy numbers, and from then on had nothing to worry about.

Riviera Bookings

Paris, Jan. 22.

Dayelma ballet troupe of 15, from the Scala, Berlin, is booked by Julien Duclos for the Casino (Ambassaders restaurant), Cannes.

Among C. Wyn's bookings for the Riviera this season are Patricia Storm, Beth Berri, Vivian Glen, Mario Abreu and Polly Day, Peppy Abreu, late husband of Wilda Bennett, and John Pickering.

"Crime" in Provinces

London, Jan. 31.

"Crime" will close at the Queen's March 3 and go on a nine weeks' tour of number one provincial towns.

Woods Buys "Quelle"

London, Jan. 31.

Al Woods has bought "Quelle," produced in Paris.

Titheradge-Stuart Marriage

London, Jan. 31.

Dion Titheradge will wed Madge Stuart Feb. 2.

STUDIOS' AVERAGE PAY

"YES," PARIS OPERETTA, REVEALS RENE DEVILLERS AS A "FIND"

Premiere to Piano Accompaniment—"Lord Babbs" Produced in Paris and London at Same Time—Gemier Stars in 90-Minute Playlet at Odeon

Paris, Jan. 31.

Four new attractions within a week give the Paris stage the aspect of unusual late winter activity. Features of the newcomers are the operetta, "Yes," at the Capucines, and a 90-minute playlet with Gemier at the Odeon.

"Yes" scored despite the fact that the incidental music was furnished by two pianos instead of an orchestra. The book is by R. Pujol and Soulaine, and music by Maurice Yvain, the book being trivial, but the score of great charm. The plot: Maxime, disobeying his father's demand that he marry the daughter of a wealthy friend, pretends to be wedded to a manicure girl, Totte by name, the marriage having taken place during a trip to London.

Totte really is in love with Maxime, but unwillingly consents to going through the motions of a counterfeit divorce, awaiting the time when Maxime's father relents, as he ultimately does.

The piece marks the Parisian debut of Rene Devillers, who is a revelation in the role of the demure manicurist. Constant Remy is excellent as the father. Louvigny is only fair in the role of Maxime.

Gemier in Double Bill

The presence of Gemier gives importance to the double bill at the Odeon. He appears in a playlet, "The Game of Love and Death," doing the character study of a physician who sacrifices himself to save the life of a fugitive whom his wife loves. The piece is of the period of the French Revolution. The single act lasts an hour and a half without intermission.

On the same bill is Paul Vialard's two-act comedy, "Le Bocal Bleu" ("Blue Bottles" in reference to chemist shop containers), which was indifferently received. The story has to do with the domestic situation of a country druggist, who believes his wife is trying to poison him and who suffers accordingly until he is convinced that his suspicions were unfounded.

The New Heart

"Un Coeur tout Neuf" at the Caumartin is a comedy by Paul Vialar, poorly done and coolly received. The sentimental plot deals with the austere landlord of a seaside villa, who believes his tenant, a pretty widow, is supporting a gigolo and tries to evict her on moral principle. He has all but compromised the woman's character when he learns that the supposed lover is really the widow's son.

Meanwhile the boy is led to imagine his mother is guilty and quits her home in disgust. His sweetheart, however, brings the tangle to a happy termination and the mother marries the honest but muddling landlord.

A group of English players took possession of the Albert Jan. 27 to give "Lord Babs," Kebel Howard's farce. It fared only fairly well. In the cast are Edward Stirling and Margaret Vaughan, Isobel Edmonds and Bernard Merefield.

The plot has to do with an English nobleman who flees from the consequences of an automobile accident in which he was concerned, until he suddenly finds that there was nothing to be terrified about.

Sisters in Triangle

The Comediens de la Croix Nivert, an independent stage society led by Paulette Pax, presented late last week "La Parade Amoureuse" ("The Romantic Procession"), by Andre Ransan. It scored a moderate success, particularly by friends of the group.

The story has to do with a youth who carries on a flirtation with two sisters at the same time, being forced to retire from both affairs before he has committed himself. Cast includes Solange Sickard and Berthe d'Yd. Marcel Herrand was originally in the piece, and upon his retirement the author had to read the missing part.

"CRADLE SNATCHERS" OVER IN LONDON

London, Jan. 31.

"Cradle Snatchers," known here as "Sauce for the Gander," came into the Lyric last night to a cooling reception. Its dialog has been polished a bit but the main hair-tearing scene is included and the production is brilliant.

Iris Hoey, in the Mary Boland role, won uproarious laughter and the show looks like a certain winner. Some of those who saw it in New York claim it is being better played here. That's a tough one to swallow by those who recall Miss Boland and Edna May Oliver at the Music Box.

The Q theatre also had a premier last night, "Temptation of Eve," one of those examples of good acting wasted on a badly constructed script. Unfolding a prolog and three acts, "Eve" registered as a poor society drama minus any outstanding scenes.

London, Jan. 31.

Remaining London theatres belonging to Gulliver and the Variety Controlling circuit are being transferred to the new company, headed by Sir Walter Gibbons, which took over the other houses. Date for the final change overs is Feb. 13.

Val Parnell, booking manager for Gulliver and Variety Controlling, will remain with the new concern in the same capacity. Artists holding contracts with Gulliver have been worrying about the possible evasion of their bookings, but Gibbons, queried on the subject by a Variety reporter, stated he would assume all existing liabilities.

Royal Command Acts

London, Jan. 31.

Following artists have been named to appear, subject to the approval of the Lord Chamberlain, for the Royal Command performance to be held at the Coliseum March 1st.

Gracie Fields, Anton Dolin, Noni and Horace, Stanelli and Douglas, Larry Kemble, Victoria Girls, Jack Hylton's Band, Will Hay, Clarkson Rose, Lillian Burgiss and Victor Andre.

"Lord Babs" Over

London, Jan. 31.

"Lord Babs," coming in at the Vaudeville last week, revealed itself as a roaring farce, starring Billy Merson.

Cordially received, it nevertheless carries provincial entertainment values which will likely limit its success as a West End attraction.

The show is doing splendid business.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

A survey on prevailing salaries paid studio workers discloses a wide gap between the top and low paid for the same work.

No two studios pay the same scale of wages or salaries, except for mechanical labor and office help, yet the latter surpass as a whole the scale paid the same occupations in any other type of industrial employment.

"BURLESQUE" AGREEMENT

London, Jan. 31.

Clayton and Waller's prospective British presentation of "Burlesque" has been called off.

Paris, Jan. 31.

Harry Pilcer was out of the Moulin Rouge revue a week, the victim of influenza. He is now recovered and back in the show.

NOEL COWARD BARS SWAFFER, BUT SWAFF PICKED 'LUMBER LOVE'

Variety's Star "I" Correspondent Has Hectic Week in Home Town—Predicts Native Musical Will Throttle American Show Flood

Vic Palace's Americans

London, Jan. 31.

Manager John Hayman has lined up the following potential bookings of American acts at the Victoria Palace during the coming summer: Edith Clifford, Dooley and Sales (last played England in 1914); Bob Albright (two years ago), Togan and Geneva (four years ago), Trahan and Wallace (last year), Fanny Brice, Hyde and Burrell, Jerome and Grey, Davis and Darnell, Harry Holmes and Co., Castleton and Mack, Sylvia Clark.

All these are besides the all-American bill scheduled at this house week of July 23.

London, Jan. 31.

Hannen Swaffer has just had a peculiar week. He was courteously barred from the opening of "The Second Man," but may see a two-year personal campaign in favor of "Lumber Love" realized in fact.

Hannen's absence from the Playhouse for "The Second Man" premiere is explained by Noel Coward's friends, who state that Noel felt that inasmuch as he had a difficult role to play, he could do better by it if Swaff weren't in the house, saying, "I didn't mind him coming the second night, but there's nothing personal in this. It is merely that I felt I couldn't act if Swaffer were there during my first performance."

Produced by Basil Dean in association with Daniel Mayer, "Second Man" was warmly welcomed and will probably enjoy good business until its highbrow patronage is exhausted. Coward gave a brilliant performance the first night.

More About Swaff

Swaffer's real exultation lies in "Lumber Love," the all-British musical which he has touted for two years, as the show took off in Birmingham last week to break the theatre's 38-year-old record. The outlook is so bright the management of the show voluntarily raised the salaries of the cast and staff 10 per cent.

The wise bunch continue to say the musical has no chance in the West End, but Swaffer is predicting that its London success will stagger local managements, and that this effort will put a stop to the American invasion of the local musical field.

Mr. Swaffer is Variety's special correspondent and also dramatic critic for London's "Daily Express," besides being "the" real commentator on British legit theatricals.

London, Jan. 31.

Harry Cohen and partners, who produced "The Wrecker" here, will also do the piece in New York.

Broadway presentation is due before spring.

London, Jan. 31.

Robert Loraine is negotiating for an American tour with a repertory company, to include "Cyrano," Strindberg's "The Father" and "Dance of Death."

ARCH SELWYN'S MISSION

London, Jan. 31.

Arch Selwyn has arrived here with authority to arrange for the London productions of "Coquette," "The Royal Family," "Burlesque" and "Paris Bound."

"Coquette" will be produced by Sir Alfred Butt.

KADJA SIMONSON, 'PRODUCER,' RETURNED TO INSANE ASYLUM

Kept Russians of Hollywood and Auto Dealers Dizzy With Promises—Broke Parole—Now Back Indef—Long Hairs Hadn't Anything Else to Do

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Kadja Simonson, Russian, 21, had the Russian mob and a few automobile dealers dizzy telling them about all the money she was going to put into picture oducti and the expensive cars she would buy, until the authorities picked her up for observation at the instigation of a brother in New York. They found she had broken a parole from the State insane asylum at Paton, from which she was released three months ago.

Kadja, as she called herself professionally, came to California a little over two years ago and called herself the female Balieff. She posed as a Ukrainian refugee. Fanchon and Marco gave her a job at Lyman's Club Alabam.

Kadja faded out after the first night and then decided to make a carcer for herself in pictures. They let her join the Lob in De Mille's "King of Kings," and the girl thought she was another Pola Negri. But no one had any work for her. Then she thought life was not so sweet and tried to leave this world by the poison and razor route.

After recovering in the hospital she was sent to Paton. There she remained until last fall, when she again visited Hollywood. About three weeks ago Kadja started going around with the long hairs. She promised all work in productions, going to studios and inquiring about rentals, etc.

Having nothing else to do, the long hairs fell for the spiel. At the lots they were told that there was no producer named Karja there. Then they would get hold of the girl and she would reply that the lot did not have the facilities, but that she would be at another lot.

As all producers have class autos for a front Kadja thought she would do likewise. Dealers need some cash for their cars, but she had them drive her around and teach her to drive the car, stopping off at intervals in different studios to show she had a car. When three days had passed with a certain dealer the girl would say that the car was not what it was represented and would get another dealer to fall.

Her stay at Paton this time, it is said, will be indefinite.

Katz and Dembow Leaving This Month

Katz, recently confined to his home, leaves for Palm Beach this Friday (Feb. 3) to be gone about two weeks.

Dembow goes to the coast the end of February to attend the opening of the new Publix houses in Seattle and Portland. He will be gone about three weeks.

Al Boyd's Resignation

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

It is reported that the resignation of Al Boyd, the Stanley Company's picture purchaser, is still before the company with no action as yet taken.

Hoot Gibson's Publicity

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Hoot Gibson is a good business man as well as an actor, as he makes his publicity kick back with a profit.

He has had for the past year or more a Hawaiian band which broadcasts over the radio weekly featuring his name.

Hoot is now negotiating for a hockey team to play in a local Hockey League, and identified as the Hoot Gibson team.

ACTOR'S 30% NET

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

A film actor who played the lead in an independent "art" film some months ago agreed to wait for part of his salary until the picture was sold for distribution. Release deal was set, but the actor was refused his money as it was claimed other obligations had to be first met.

The actor placed the claims with his attorney, but if the money is ever collected the actor will get about 30 per cent of it. He has to pay the attorney 25 per cent for collection; 10 per cent goes to the agent that got him the job, another 10 per cent is payable to the agent to whom he is under contract, and he also has to shell out for his press agent.

PASCAL GUILTY OF ASSAULT ON GIRL

Ass't Mgr. of East Side Theatre First Charged With Rape—Sentence Indefinite

Paul Pascal, 24, assistant manager, Hollywood (films) theatre on 2d avenue, New York, was sentenced Jan. 23 to serve an indefinite period on Blackwell's Island when Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions accepted a plea of guilty of assault preferred by Millie Locastro, 16, at the instigation of the Children's Society.

Pascal was first charged with rape in the second degree. The District Attorney's office accepted a plea of guilty of assaut in the third degree and the other charge was dropped.

Attorney Louis Nizer (Phillips and Nizer) told the judge that Pascal was a victim of circumstances and that the girl was not of chaste character; that it was Pascal's first offense; that he had been sufficiently impressed with the majesty of the law and that there was no danger he would offend again.

Judge Mulqueen said he was impressed with the plea for mercy as Pascal's previous record was good. The judge cautioned theatre owners to see to it that their managers did not take advantage of their positions in theatres.

Under the change of the charge, Pascal's offence was deemed a misdemeanor and his sentence will be of short duration.

Brown Chills "Heat"

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Willis Goldbeck is working on a new script for Greta Garbo's next picture.

Clarence Brown, who will direct, decided that "Heat" was not a good story or title, and shelved it in favor of a yarn with a Java background.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Buffalo Bill, Jr., Pathe western star, is laid up for repairs following an unprogrammed fall over a cliff while making a picture.

Pathe has the largest roster of cowboy stars in the trade, so jumped Wally Wales into the breech without losing a crank.

Menjou's Wedding Set

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Adolphe Menjou and Katherine Carver, who has played opposite him in several pictures, are to be married May 5.

May 19 they will sail for Paris.

ROSCOE AILS

Mr. Edward Fay, owner of Fay's chain of theatres, says: "Roscoe Ails' new act is the best buy in vaudeville. His new scene wherein he does a travesty on the Siamese Twins is a positive new thought and the biggest scream in present day variety."

Direction SINGER & WARD

P. A. Gets Ford Display For House Auto Show Wk.

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

Eddie Gallinagh, State theatre press agent who will handle publicity for the new F. & R.-Publix 4,200-seat Minnesota theatre, is credited with putting over the best tie-up in local theatrical annals for this house.

Learning that the Ford company could not agree with officials of the Twin City National Automobile Show regarding space and would not be represented by any display at the exposition, which last year drew 130,000 people in the midway district and will be held this year in the new local Municipal Auditorium for the first time, Gallinagh arranged to have the new Ford car on display at the State during auto show week.

A stage presentation is being build entirely around the car. Eddie Dundstedter, State organist, has devised an organ novelty called "Let's Go A-Fording." After he has played several appropriate numbers including "Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzy," and the audience has sung the words flashed on the screen, the curtain will rise to reveal the new Ford in the center of the stage bedecked by the State ballet girls in one-piece bathing suits.

The State show will be boosted at the local Ford plant, employing 5,000 people, and at all the numerous Ford Twin City agencies which will hold open house for the thousands of visitors always attracted here from all northwest points for the auto shows.

Warners' Company for British Quota Films

London, Jan. 31.

Warner Brothers are arranging to immediately ship to England an entire producing unit to comply, in every way, with the British quota bill.

The troupe will include star, director, cameraman, scenario and continuity writers.

"Newsreel Nick" as Film

Dave Butler, Fox director, has come east to shoot part of the scenes for a production temporarily entitled "Newsreel Nick," with Sally Phipps and James Stewart. The Fox newsreel staff were called into conference for a story and gag material and will also appear in several scenes in the picture.

Truman Tally, editor of Fox News, Dan Doherty and Russell Muth were among those who helped frame the story and will probably appear in the picture.

Seymour for Coast FBO

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

James Seymour has been brought from the New York offices to succeed Earl Wingart as publicity director for FBO here.

THEATRE'S DOOR TENDER NOW CO-FEATURED IN FULL SIZE FILM

Jimmy Murray of Capitol, New York, in "Rose-Marie"—Also "The Crowd"—Went to Hollywood on Spec and Busted in Right

Not only does Jimmie Murray appear with Joan Crawford in "Rose-Marie" (M-G-M), shortly to make its initial Broadway appearance, but he also has an important role in "The Crowd."

"Rose Marie" is expected to follow "Love" at the Embassy, New York, and then later play the Capitol, where the ushers and other attaches who knew Murray when he was doorman there will have a thrill that the James Murray on the screen is the same Jimmy Murray they knew.

Jim Murray decided there was no chance for him in New York, although his Broadway experience had seen him an assistant manager at the Picadilly, now Warner's theatre, and later manager, and also as understudy in "The World We Live In," and he did a "bit" in that show when produced in 1922.

Murray made his way to Hollywood with no job in sight. For about three years he bummed around L. A. and the film lots, doing extra work, but getting more disgusted than anything else.

King Vidor came out of the M-G-M studio and saw Murray. The director thought he had discovered the very type for "The Crowd." King asked the young man to report next day at the studio. Murray had a test and was given his first real film job.

With Murray set for a film career it means something else. He is a son of Christopher Murray, living at 412 East 202d street, New York. Murray has four brothers and two sisters. Jimmy Murray was born Feb. 9, 1901, in New York, and attended school at Evander Childs in the Bronx.

He's a tall chap, broad, of the Irish type, considered good looking, and with an expansive grin that is infectious; has short, wavy brown hair, in fact, according to King Vidor, who discovered him, as having all the qualification for a film principal.

WEATHER FORECAST

Washington, Jan. 31.

Information obtained at the U. S. Weather Bureau gives the following outlook for the coming week:

For the country east of the Mississippi, rain or snow Wednesday (Feb. 1) will be followed by generally fair weather Thursday, Friday and possibly Saturday.

Rain or snow again first part of next week (Feb. 6).

U SENDS TROUPE TO NEW ZEALAND FOR FILM

Carl Laemmle Sold on Alex Markey's Suggestion—By-Products of Trip for U

Universal will send Alexander Markey, director and two cameramen to New Zealand to film a story of the wild country in the interior. The troupe leaves for Aukland, N. Z. Feb. 8.

Markey was formerly editor of Pearson's Magazine. In recent years he has been engaged as world traveler, writer and lecturer. He presented his idea for a picture to be made in New Zealand to Carl Laemmle, head of Universal, who was impressed with the nominal expenditure.

Lew Collins will go along as director. Wilfred Cline and Harold Smith will handle the camera equipment. Cline will act as first cameraman.

It is expected the crew will be away four months, with six weeks necessary to obtain the material necessary for the screen story.

The cast will be composed entirely of natives, with present plans calling for 20 of the latter to return to this country and appear in a prolog to run with the film in key cities.

It is also intended to obtain the most out of the trip by having the cameramen shoot stuff at several stops along the way, for three or more one-reel travelogues. Collins will also obtain as much material as possible which can be used as stock shots for his film library.

House Mgr. Carries Town

Nevada, Ia., Jan. 31.

When the Sunday movie question was submitted here at a special election, expenses of which were borne by W. P. Grossman, manager of the town's only movie house, the vote was in favor of repeal of the ordinance.

"Beverly Hill" as Flop For Barbara Leonard

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Barbara Leonard did not keep her screen name of Beverly Hill very long and will appear in pictures under the name of Leonard.

She had a term contract with Tiffany-Stahl and given the Hill cognomen for the screen. Later the company officials decided her regular name was better for publicity purposes and made the switch back.

DeMille as M.P.P.A. Pres.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

According to an authoritative source, Cecil B. De Mille may be the next president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, replacing Jesse Lasky.

It is said his election would be a diplomatic move to bind him to the Hays organization.

Berlin, Jan. 22.

German children have been forbidden to attend performances of Murnau's "Faust" film. Although for two years they have been permitted to see the picture, the censor has now revoked his decision, intending that certain scenes are likely to disturb the youngsters' morals.

Although Ufa made the point that children may read Goethe's poem, the censor thought that this did not affect the matter.

Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" has been forbidden for performances in Switzerland, too. No grounds are given but it is thought that the tendency of the film is considered anti-German and provocative of antagonistic feeling.

GLORIA LEE FEATURED

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Gloria Lee has her first feature role in pictures, opposite Buzz Barton.

Miss Lee returns to F. B. O. to play a feature role with Bessie Love in "Sally of the Scandals." Lynn Shores directing.

STARRING MISS VIDOR

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Paramount will again star Florence Vidor. Her next story, untitled, is to be directed by Harry D'Arrast. When completing it she is to be cast opposite Adolphe Menjou in the final film the latter will make under his present Par contract.

FOX GETS 145 F & R HOUSES

ROSSHEIM SUCCEEDS M'GUIRK AS PRES. OF STANLEY COMPANY

McGuirk Becomes Chairman of Stanley's Board—Dissension Over Internal Policy and Many Factions—Mastbaum Interests for Rossheim

Irving D. Rossheim, formerly treasurer of the Stanley Company of America, was elected president Friday at the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors in Philadelphia, with the resignation of John McGuirk, president, who becomes chairman of the Board of Directors, hitherto inactive position, now becoming active with salary attached.

Rossheim, it is understood, represents Morris Wolf, attorney for the Mastbaum interests, as well as the banking group, E. B. Smith & Co., the Stanley's financiers.

It is reported the presidency of Stanley was previously offered Judge Horace Stearn of Philadelphia, who gave up a practice of $200,000 annually to go on the bench. The latter preferred to remain on the bench.

The change in office hardly affects the internal management of Stanley affairs, with the exception that McGuirk is now off the firing line where he has been a target for attacks of three groups in Stanley, who disagreed with the expansion policy. They are the Mastbaum stockholders, Al Boyd, general picture booker, and E. B. Smith.

Boyd, and some of the others, have been protesting against the reinvestment of profits for extensive construction, preferring to draw most of the surplus. Boyd claims he made more money as an independent operator with a few theatres than in the hookup with Stanley.

Don't Like Losses

As has been the experience in other chains during the past year internal dissension has been caused on account of the purchase and construction of theatres which resulted in losses. How the change in presidency can affect the operating policy, especially with the McGuirk-Sablosky power still present, is not evident. In addition, a policy of retrenchment has already been adopted.

To offset possible market reaction a financial statement was issued with the announcement of Rossheim's appointment, showing $3,235,336 net for 1927. The tentative statement gives the amount paid for dividends in 1927 at $3,181,039, leaving a tentative surplus of $54,247.

Rossheim's Record

Rossheim's election is technically for the unexpired term of McGuirk, which ends in July. Rossheim was born in New York. He has resided in Philadelphia since 1901, graduating from the Wharton School in 1909 and from the law school in 1911. He was a member of the faculty of the Wharton School from 1908 to 1918 in the departments of economics, accounting and corporation finance. He became indentified with Stanley as comptroller, acting as treasurer for the past four years. James Brennan, assistant treasurer, takes Rossheim's place.

Recently the Stanley stock has has been subjected to heavy selling pressure, under which the price dropped to 47½. In 1927 it sold above 90 before the declaration of a stock dividend and the reports of the proposed consolidation with Keith-Albee. After the issuance of a new stock under a stock-purchase privilege plan sales went as high as 72. Friday the closing quotation was around 53, rallying from 47½ a little while ago.

McGuirk followed the late Jules Mastbaum as Stanley's president.

It is said that Al Boyd, the Stanley's film buyer, lately went to the west with the Stanley's officers, on the matter of buying product from [illegible]. It seemed that

MINN. BARRED HICKMAN FILM

Mayor Instructs Police to Prevent Film Showing

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

Mayor George E. Leach has prohibited the showing in Minneapolis of a photoplay called "Hickman, the Fox," and having for its central figure the fiendish Los Angeles murderer, now on trial.

Advertisements for the picture state that it "covers the complete story of the most famous crime in modern times and to present the prineipal incidents in its perpetrator's career."

An exhibitor to whom the film was offered notified the mayor who ordered the police chief to instruct all department members to advise photoplay exhibitors on their beats that "this film will not be tolerated in Minneapolis." He further directs that if an attempt is made to show the picture it be stopped immediately and the offending theatre closed.

FBO-PATHE GETTING CLOSER TOGETHER

All signs point to a closer understanding being steadily reached between Pathe and F. B. O., whereby, if the proper time should arrive within a reasoinable period, a juncture could be made between the two picture producers.

Reports from Hollywood have said the staffs of the organizations out there have commenced to look upon the merger as set. Reports, however, in New York remain as were printed in Variety two or three weeks ago.

While the prospect of a Pathe-FBO union are favorable, a story has it that several angles are yet to be worked out. Particularly on the Pathe end.

One is mentioned as concerning present financing for the Pathe 28-29 product, which the Pathe banking house (Blair and Company) is reported taking in hand.

Mulhall-Mackaill Dissolve

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

With the completion of "Lady Be Good," First National will dissolve the team of Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill.

Mulhall will then be featured alone in "The Butter and Egg Man" under direction of Richard Wallace with other pictures to follow.

It is understood F. N. will not renew the contract of Miss Mackaill at its expiration.

Offsprings in Same Film

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Offsprings of a number of motion picture people are appearing in De Mille's "Godless Girl." Among them are Marcella Edwards, daughter of Neely Edwards; the two Carter De Haven kids, Jr. and Marjorie, and Edward Pell, Jr.

Other juveniles include Mary Jane Irving, Buddy Messenger, Peaches Jackson, Pat and Mickey Moore and May Giraci.

Swift Purchase of West Coast Theatres Circuit Followed by Quick Action for Finklestein & Ruben Chain in and Around Minnesota—No Positive Report Whether Publix-Loew Will Withdraw Coast Houses From W. C. Operation

FRANKLIN'S BIG PROFIT

William Fox is on the verge of closing for the purchase or control of the 145 picture theatres operated in and around Minnesota by Finklestein & Ruben.

These houses are additionally to those purchased last week by Fox and numbering 295 houses included among the West Coast Theatres chain (245) and Saxe circuit (50).

Together with Fox's own houses, including his vaudeville theatres capable of playing a presentation policy, Fox is in control and will operate 475 theatres. It places Fox as a theatre chain in the foremost rank of American house operators.

The addition of the F. & R. circuit is in line with the first contemplated plan of Harold B. Frank-

England's Theatre Situation Looming Toward Battle

London, Jan. 31.

Confirming Variety's inference that the theatre situation here is leading to a battle between the Szarvasy and Ostrer banking interests for control of the picture house field, the Osterers, who promoted the Gaumont British merger, are quietly buying theatres all over the country.

Recent purchases include the West Kensington super for $230,000 and the firm is also being offered the Princess (pictures), and Hippodrome at Blackpool for around $1,250,000. These two houses have a net profit over the last three years of $240,000.

Milwaukee, Jan. 31.

With Dave Schooler, M. C., on a two-week vacation, the house last week supplemented its newsreel with shots of Schooler in New York. They showed Schooler crossing 7th avenue to the Roxy and interviewing Roxy. Shots also showed the m. c. in the Ghetto, "among his friends"; at the various booking offices, dancing schools and cabarets.

3-Feature Bill

The first actual Broadway film house presentment of three features in one day for the same admish came to light during the recent week end. The Uptown, 170th and Broadway, New York, for Jan. 28-30 played up the trio.

Wanger's Vacation

There seems to be no positiveness about Walter Wagner's contemplated vacation abroad.

Up to yesterday the sailing appeared indefinite.

HAYS TALKS TO PRESS AGENTS; FREE LANCES TOO LIBERAL

Studio Practices by Some P A.'s Frowned Upon as Injurious to Industry—Taking It Up With the M. P. P. A.—Gifts to Reviewers Topic

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

For the first time in two years Will H. Hays held a meeting with press agents employed by members of the M. P. P. A., at the Roosevelt Hotel today.

At this meeting Hays told the men he had no fault to find with the majority, but that many free lances, members of the Wampas, were functioning in a most unethical manner and that he expected these boys to stop that practice, as it was injurious to the industry.

Certain practices in studios where press agents were spending unreasonable amounts of money for gifts were discussed. One press agent working for an independent producer is alleged to have spent $1,100, while one studio was charged with spending close to $2,000 for getting alleged good will of newspapers and fan magazines.

It was pointed out that fan representatives called at certain studios and expressed themselves plainly as not liking the presents given, saying, also, that others had given far better things and that free lance press agents did better by them than anyone else.

This matter was taken under advisement by Hays and will be presented at the producer's meeting next week.

Lina Basquette's Role Calls for Head Bare

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Lina Basquette, now appearing in De Mille's "Godless Girl," was forced to have her hair shaved off to conform with the custom of the picture's Girl's Reformatory, where she is incarcerated.

Several years ago Anna Q. Nillson was forced to undergo the same operation for her part in "Ponjola."

To date these are the only two girls known to be shorn of all their hair for a picture part.

"Abie" as Road Show

J. S. Zamecnik will write the musical score for the screen version of "Abie's Irish Rose," to be released as a road show by Paramount.

Specialized Organists In Big Broadway Houses

Broadway seems to be following Chicago's lead in the matter of specialized organ stuff for the big houses.

Henri Murtaugh is to be featured at the Capitol, New York, and Loew's State has brought Marsh McCurdy from the Lexington (New York) to emphasize the organ.

Auditions for Acts Held in Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Officials of the William Morris agency have completed arrangements with Paul Ash whereby auditions may be held at the Balaban and Katz Oriental theatre.

Talent under consideration by the Morris office and Paul Ash will be given tryouts at these auditions, scheduled each Tuesday after the show.

At the first audition 36 appeared and seven were selected.

Griffith Set for 2

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

On his return from New York Friday, D. W. Griffith ready for production "Battle of Sexes" around Feb. 28.

When finishing this picture he will start making "Madame Butterfly," a picture he has wanted to [illegible] for 10 years.

Phila. Rift in Operation of Fryhoffer Houses by Stan

Four or five neighborhood houses in Philadelphia operated by the Stanley Company on a lease from the Fryhoffer (baking) interests may not be released to Stanley at the expiration of the lease contract.

It is understood Fryhoffer has been questioning the Stanley policy of making theatregoers patronize the downtown houses, owned and controlled by Stanley, while operating the neighborhoods on a less attractive policy.

Fryhoffer is of the belief, from report, that the present system is resulting in the depreciation of the realty value of his theatres, though these are now being operated profitably. He is considering the future value of the houses rather than current grosses, the account says.

Fryhoffer, reputed worth over $10,000,000, derived from over 25 baking plants, has been causing Stanley plenty of grief with his arguments. Stanley has tried to squeeze the neighborhoods on account of Fryhoffer's attempt to dictate operation, Stanley finally saying it would build a theatre in opposition to the Fryhoffer house in Frankfort, the baking man's pet Philly's neighborhood.

Statements attributed to Fryhoffer are to the effect that if Stanley builds opposition in Frankfort, he will build five theatres in opposition to choice Stanley houses, in retaliation.

Bill Mizner's $65 Laugh

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Wilson Mizner spent $65 for a laugh and got it the opening night of Charlie Chaplin's "Circus" at Grauman's Chinese. Mizner that afternoon scouted around and bought an old ramshackle Ford for the $65. He half wrecked the car and got hold of a picture gal, Cecile Evans, to go to the opening with him.

The duo had on their evening clothes as they drove up to the entrance. The girl got out of the car and Mizner after her. The starter waived to give Bill a ticket for the car. Bill with a smile across his jaw turned to the youngster and [illegible] the buggy is [illegible] and walked into the theatre.

"DOVE" IN NEW U. A., L. A., $29,400; $5,000 OVER LOEW'S STATE LAST WK

Chaplin's "Circus" Starts at $5.50 Top With $1.50 Regular and 80-Minute Prolog — "Lovelorn," Hearst-Plugged, at Met, 3d at $22,800

(Drawing Pop., 1,450,000)

Business just below normal all around last week. Weather at times mild, other days crisp and sort of kept folks out of the theatres, on the auto roads at night.

"The Dove" at the United Artist, was the leader on the week in the initial stanza of its engagement. Norma Talmadge is a corking good bet locally and trade built up daily.

One newcomer in "The Circus," opening at Grauman's Chinese to a $5.50 top Friday night. With picture only running around 70 minutes, Sid Grauman put on a stage show which is atmospheric and has good lineup of circus entertainers. This runs some 80 minutes and is an asset for an all around program at advanced prices.

Biltmore seems to have a worthwhile film in "Wings" at $2 top. Consistent in draw on second week by doing practically as much as the first one. Eighth week at Carthay Circle for "Sunrise" showed better than $200 increase over the week before, with picture scheduled to haul freight Feb. 5.

Of the downtown weekly change houses Loew's State for second successive week was ahead of the Metropolitan. On the stage Eddie Peabody was in second week, while on the screen they had "Lovelorn," Cosmopolitan and Hearst newspaper plug picture which, of course, counted for a healthier gross than an average program would have drawn here. Peabody back after a long absence proved much on the draw, too, and can be credited with contributing greatly.

No Push-over

Metropolitan, thought to have a "push-over" in Beery-Hatton combination, "Wife Savers," did not so click. Rather a low gross for this couple, who have always drawn very big in this house.

For third and final week at Million Dollar "Love" got about 34 per cent. as much money as it drew on opening week, with its total on the three weeks $47,686 nothing to sneeze at when obtained from a house listed as a "has been."

Egyptian got good break with "Baby Mine," which came out from Loew's State and beat the week before by around $600.

"A Hero for a Night," Universal, at the Boulevard, where Gene Morgan continues as major domo on stage, did not turn out such a wow. Business about $1,500 below the week before, indicating Morgan alone was the draw and that the picture was just part of evening program.

Estimates for Last Week

Grauman's Chinese (U. A.)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,958; 50-$1.50). Opening to capacity with short free list at $5.50 top. Got great start in first five days to $17,600, with $8,655 of that at the premiere at $5.50 top.

Biltmore (Erlanger) — "Wings" (Par) (1,661; 50-$2.20). Trade for second week on par with initial stanza, about $17,750.

Carthay Circle (Miller-W. C.)—"Sunrise" (Fox) (1,500; 50-$1.50). For final week of second month jumped ahead week before to $9,400.

Criterion (W. C.)—"Jazz Singer" (War.) (1,600; 50-$1.50). This Jolson product natural hit here. Small drop on sixth week. $13,000.

Loew's State (W. C.-Loew)—"Lovelorn" (M-G-M) (2,200; 25-99). Peabody on stage with this Hearst paper-heralded film drew $25,500.

Metropolitan (Pub.-W. C.)—"Wife Savers" (Par) (3,595; 24-75). Not as good as any of Beery-Hattons generally do here. $22,800.

Million Dollar (Pub.-W. C.)—"Love" (M-G-M) (2,200; 25-99). For third week did fairly though dropped $5,000 below second, exiting with $9,000.

United Artists (U. A.-W. C.)—"The Dove" (U. A.) (2,100; 25-$1). Norma Talmadge does not seem to have lost in popularity locally. Initial week $29,400. No stage show.

Boulevard (W. C.)—"Hero for Night" (U) (2,164; 25-50). Gene Morgan on stage nightly—hero—not guy on screen. Former credited for most of $6,750.

Egyptian (U. A.-W. C.)—"Baby Mine" (M-G-M) (1,800; 25-75). Arthur-Dane combination good bet here with $9,000.

Broadway Palace (Orpheum)—"Fortune Hunter" (War.) (1,540; 15-40). Wrong house for this one, as $3,000 draw shows.

SCREEN SHOWS GROSS EFFECT AT FOX'S, WASH.

(Estimated White Pop., 450,000)

Another demonstration that with a half-way worth-while picture the Fox gross jumps was again given last week at this newest of Washington houses with "The Wizard." Consistently presented stage attractions have failed to stem the tide when a "weak sister" is on the screen. Business went up about $4,000 last week over the preceding seven-day stanza.

"Patent Leather Kid" held up well at the Met., considered all the more remarkable after the terrific skid the house had gone through prior to this picture and "The Jazz Singer" previously. "Jazz Singer" is being brought back again, beginning next Sunday, something in itself.

Earle isn't getting by so well. Last weeks' picture failed to please and the stage show helped but little. Business dropped considerably.

Storm Saturday raised havoc with night shows on the beginning of the current week, but the matinees were benefited, as most of the government departments turned loose their employes.

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia (Loew)—"Student Prince" (M-G-M) (1,232; 35-50). As with all specials after $2 runs in Manhattan brought here at usual scale and packed them in. About $12,500.

Earle (Stanley-Crandall)—"No Place to Go" (F. N.) and Hyman presentation (2,300; 35-50) Nobody got excited. Possibly $8,500.

Fox (Fox) "The Wizard" (Fox) and stage attractions (3,432; 30-50-60-75). Added interest because of higher rating picture; $21,500.

Met (Stanley-Crandall) "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (1,585; 35-50). On second week of run scheduled to go four weeks. About $10,500 on second week.

Palace (Loew) "Love and Learn" (M-G-M) (2,363; 35-50). Picture characterized as pleasing, coupled with stage tab of "Merry Go Round." Liberally estimated at $16,000.

Rialto (U) "City Gone Wild" (Par) and stage presentation (1,978-35-50). No improvement. Something like $6,000. Current week marks switch in stage policy offering musical comedies in tabloid, doing "Little Jessie James" first.

This Week

Topeka's $3,200 for G. O. 1 Nite, $4.40; Startling

Topeka, Jan. 31.
(Drawing Pop., 85,000)

The big smash of the week was "The King's Henchman," Topeka's first real opera performance. Tuesday night at the Grand it got $3,200, one performance, despite the highest prices ever charged here, $4.40 top.

The really bigger surprise of the occasion was that every first run picture house and the vaude house did capacity business the same night. Theatre Guild rep. due here Tuesday, and two days in advance most of the house has been sold.

Heavy week, with Clara Bow in "Get Your Man" taking the biggest share of the gravy.

Estimates for Last Week

Jayhawk (1,500; 40) (Jayhawk), Colleen Moore in "Her Wild Oat." Hit rather hard first half; good Wednesday business, something unusual. "Adam and Evil" last three days stood up well. Week's take $4,000.

Orpheum (1,200; 40) (National), Clara Bow's "Get Your Man" liked. Clara vamps better than she flaps; $2,200.

Cozy (400; 25) (Lawrence). "Pajamas" first three days did well, but weakest in proportion for same three days. "Arizona Wildcat" didn't pull well except from children. Week's total about $1,100.

MARY'S HOME TOWN IS COLD TO HER

"My Best Girl" Got $8,500 in Toronto, $15,000 Expected —Bad Storms

Toronto, Jan. 31.
(Drawing Pop., 700,000)

In a week when everything in sight was dropping below average except the Tivoli with "Ben-Hur" (M. G.), the surprise was Toronto's abandonment of her most illustrious daughter.

When the rubberneck wagons cruise up University avenue the ballyhoo men never miss a chance to exercise lungs on the birthplace and early home of Mary Pickford, but when Mary's "My Best Girl" (U. A.) was spotted at the Regent last week it opened to a handful and built steadily but slowly to something over $8,000. This had previously been thought a good week at this small house, but when "The Gaucho" and "Sorrell and Son" averaged better than $10,000 on a month's run better things were expected of the Pickford flicker.

There was a line-up most of the day and night to see "Hur," and this indirectly helped nearby houses. Snowstorms that blew like blizzards at times were too much for the patience of some in the line, and they sought shelter at other houses. The $11,000 or better done here represents about all that can be crowded in this house at present prices.

Probably as a reward for his excellent publicity jobs on "Ypres," "The Somme" and other British pictures released in Canada through Regal Films, Tom Daley, manager of the Regent, has been named publicity director for all Canada for Regal. With importations of British releases growing steadily, this becomes an increasingly necessary and important job. Two are immediately on tap, simply waiting a favorable spot. They are "Mademoiselle From Argentiers" and "The Battle of the Falkland Islands." They will likely be spotted at the Tivoli first.

The censors wouldn't let "Rain" ring up the curtain here, but the Film version has passed with practically no major cuts. It's a different lot of censors. "The Dove" will follow "Sadie."

Managerial shifts bring Jules Bernstein back to Loew's, with J. McManus temporarily recalled to New York with a berth in the south as his next step. McManus was the only manager in town to tackle a house of this size and did a good job of 10 weeks.

Better things than $8,400 were expected from "Helen of Troy" at the Uptown, but it was slipped in as a routine picture with no explanatory advertising, and the hoi polloi didn't know what it was all about. If ever there was a chance of salesmanship on a picture that was entirely overlooked this was it.

"Wings" (Par), on its third week at $2 top, showed better than $10,000 and departed for Ottawa with the record of being the first picture at this price ever to get a three-week run in any Canadian city. This leaves the Princess, Erlanger legit house, dark. Legit attractions will come in later, but meantime more $2 pictures will be tried.

Estimates for Last Week

Tivoli (F. P.) (1,400; 30-60)—"Ben Hur" (M-G). This one didn't lead town, as there weren't enough seats. Just under Loew's at $11,400. Excellent. Held over.

Loew's (2,300; 30-60) — "West Point." Name against it and shoppers kept home by storm. This house thrives on department store patronage. Not quite $12,000. Fair. Bernstein back as manager.

Hip (F. P.) ("Silk Legs" (2,300; 30-60)—Just under $10,000. Would have been worse except for absorbing some of Tivoli turnaway. Picture didn't mean much, but well handled.

Uptown (F. P.) (3,000; 30-60)—Helen of Troy." Picture drew corking notices, but when the auditor checked up, money just wasn't there. About $8,500. Not so good because routine advertising wasn't enough for this one.

Regent (U. A.) (1,400; 50-$1.50)—"My Best Girl" (U. A.). Nobody can believe it, but Toronto passed up her own celeb at $8,400. Expected to do $15,000 whether was good, bad or indifferent. Think some reason up for yourself.

Princess (Erlanger) "Wings" (Par) ($2). Better than $10,000, practically all at night. Afternoon biz bad. After three weeks picture moves to Ottawa to catch crowds in town for session of House of Parliament, just opened. Established film record of three weeks at $2 here. Never done before.

Pantages (F. P.) (3,400; 30-60)—"French Dressing." This giant F. P. house has slipped recently. Went under $9,000; about as bad as can be expected.

"HAVANA" BOSTON'S BEST

Said to Be Best Publix Unit Yet Seen There

Boston, Jan. 31.

A few thousand youngsters were introduced to the Metropolitan last week with the first showing at pop prices of "Old Ironsides." Exploitation among school principals and history teachers in Greater Boston made a kindergarten of the house. While the picture did not come up to the heights of previous screenings of the season, it hit $42,600. "Havana," the stage presentation, proved hit of the season.

"The Loves of Carmen" at the State ran up to $21,500. Downtown Loew house, Orpheum, showed Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight," and ran behind the Back Bay Loew's State at $20,000.

New bills at the Metropolitan are advanced a night beginning Feb. 3, when Emil Jannings in "The Last Command" inaugurates the policy. Saturday has heretofore been the opening night at the Met with an odd bill Sunday. Shows in the future will open Friday and close the following Thursday and the Sunday show includes operatic and radio stars.

"The Love Mart" ran high on the magic word "Love" at the Olympia and Fenway. "Come to My House" maintained the average at the New Boston. "Open Range" had a strong week at the Scollay Square Olympia where anything that sounds western is still sure fire. "Woman Wise" (Tiffany) at the Modern and Beacon played to the customary houses.

Estimates for Last Week

Met (Publix) (4,000; 50-60). "Old Ironsides" (Par), "Havana" on stage. Second week of mild slump. $42,600.

State (3,500; 35-50). Strong week with "The Loves of Carmen" (Fox). Back Bay theatre on winning streak. $21,500.

Orpheum (3,500; 35-50). Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" (M-G-M). Packed them in early in the week, slumped a bit later; a gross of $20,000.

'QUALITY ST.' LIGHT IN SEATTLE, $15,400

"Jazz Singer" Big at $11,000 in 4th Wk.—"Dove" No Panic at $11,000—Stock Fine

Seattle, Jan. 31.
(Drawing Pop, 450,000)

Slump still continued due largely to holdovers and to comparatively weak features.

Closing of Liberty, former Jensen-Von Herberg ace house, did not seem to stimulate the other houses.

All plugging for following shows except the Blue Mouse, going at dandy clip into the fifth and final week of "The Jazz Singer." Columbia will hold "Beau Sabreur" for second week although this fails to measure up as worthy companion of "Beau Geste." Biz held good at that.

President (stage stock) came close to its record when giving shows (four mats) and clicked close to $10,000 with "Dulce." "Rain" attraction and Leona Powers great as lead; also Howard Miller. Olga Printzlau is here for premiere of her new play, "The Show Down."

Estimates for Last Week

Fifth Ave. (W. C.) (2,700; 25-60). —"Quality Street" (M-G-M). Looks like bust, with nobody raving. "Back Stage Idea" of F and M also lacked polish naturally, although ending with fair finale. Slow at $15,400.

United Artists (W. C.-U. A.) (2,100; 25-60).—"The Dove" (U. A.). Nothing big here. Sofer and orchestra nice feature. $11,000.

Columbia (U) (1,000; 25-50) "Beau Sabreur" (Par.). Not in it with "Beau Geste," which stayed three weeks at $12,000 for opening week. "Sabreur" is due to remain two weeks, fair. Ushers garbed a la Beau. $8,700.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (950; 50-75). "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.). Proving best repeat picture ever here, fourth week holding strong. Catching repeaters. $11,000.

Pantages (1,500; 25-65).—"Silk Legs" (Fox). Rather nice with Madge Bellamy, while Francis X. Bushman big draw on stage in playlet. De Wight Johnson band also (Pan.). $11,000.

Orpheum (2,700; 25-75).—"Let 'Er Go Gallagher" (Pathe). Holding to average. $14,700.

President (Duffy) (1,650; 25-$1). —"Rain" (Duffy stock). Like "Rain" a lot. Advance sale biggest ever at this house. Held strong all week, mats and evenings, practical capacity. $9,300, big.

Pollard Doing "Show Boat"

Despite reports to the contrary, Harry Pollard is still assigned to direct "Show Boat" for Universal and is preparing the story.

UFA'S 'WALTZ,' FRISCO, BIG AT $29,000

(Drawing Pop., 750,000)

There was one bright spot along Market street last week—Loew's Warfield, where gross intake nearly equalled that of the Granada and California combined. It was a big week in every sense, brought about by nobody knows what. Screen feature was the UFA production, "The Last Waltz," with a cast practically unknown to film followers. Many of the Warfield regulars had witnessed "The Waltz Dream," another UFA production, in which several of the current players participated, but from the box-office standpoint almost anyone would have been justified in laying odds that it wouldn't hold a candle to the Beery-Hatton combination at the Granada. The unexpected happened and Warfield literally swept the street.

The three other West Coast houses—control acquired last week by Fox—didn't do so handsomely. Granada was a distinct disappointment. While the screen feature did not rank any too well, there was a corking Fanchon and Marco stage show, one of the best all-around bills sent here in months. There is a new orchestra leader at the Granada, who got over like a house afire. Owen Sweeten has only been here a week, but he looks set.

Mary Pickford's latest, "My Best Girl," wound up a dismal two weeks at the California. "Sadie Thompson" slipped on second week at the St. Francis, though the revenue kept the house in the profit class. This one has still a third week to go, but present indications are the final week's intake will be perilously close to the danger mark. Looks very much as though two weeks headouts are enough for any of the big pictures.

"First Auto's" Flop

Mournful week at the Embassy for Barney Oldfield's film debut, "The First Auto," didn't mean a thing. Oldfield was only briefly featured, but the title was a sure-fire "stop" when it came to patronage. Out Wednesday night to make room for Tin-Tin-Tin on screen and in stage appearance.

Ruth Elder was two days late in opening at Pantages, but will be held through Saturday and Sunday to make the full week. Aviatrix had a satisfactory week, but business was nothing to brag about. Screen feature just ordinary.

Estimates for Last Week

Warfield—"The Last Waltz" (Par) (2,672; 35-50-65-90). No question but Rube Wolf is responsible for much of heavy draw. Close to $29,000. Considered immense.

Granada—"Wife Savers" (Par) (2,785; 35-50-65-90). Looks like pay crowd is getting fed up on Beery-Hatton combo. Last week's $22,000 didn't spell much joy.

California—"My Best Girl" (UA) (2,200; 35-65-90). Only fair business for Mary Pickford. Final week, about $11,500.

St. Francis—"Sadie Thompson" (UA) (1,375; 35-65-90). Gloria Swanson given credit for draw, though curiosity to see treatment of "Rain" helped. Second week at $10,000, profitable.

Embassy—"The First Auto" (Warners) and Vitaphone (1,367; 35-50-65-85). Another instance where indications are you've got to have something on screen to draw 'em. Title didn't mean a thing at box. Good exploitation helped what revenue there was. Little better than $7,000, disappointing.

"Girl From Chicago" Is Strong in Tacoma, $5,000

(Drawing Pop., 125,000)

Last week found interest centered at Broadway, where Dave Good opened to good results as m. c. House has been without one for two weeks and it didn't help the Fanchon-Marco shows any. In fact "Back Stage" especially lacked something. Good made good and seems finished master of stage.

(Estimates for Last Week)

Broadway (W. C.) (1,600; 25-50). —"Love" (M-G-M). Gilbert and Garbo nice pair to draw to. Biz up. $6,800.

Pantages (1,450; 25-50).—"Silk Legs" (Fox). Just so so. $6,600.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (650; 25-50).—"Girl from Chicago" and Vita (W. B.). Started off like house afire. $5,000, very big.

Rialto (W. C.) (1,250; 25-40).—"Beau Sabreur" (Par.). Not up to expectations. $2,400.

Colonial (W. C.).—"Les Miserables" (U) and "Underworld" (Par.), second run and split week; improved a little $1,100.

JANNINGS HAS RIALTO'S RECORD; $51,000 WITH "LAST COMMAND"

Griffith's "Drums" Acting Funny at $2—"Simba" of Animals Evidencing Strong Support—Roxy Hit $106,000—"Student Prince" Holds Over

No real excitement along the Street last week, Joe's back from Florida and there won't be much for him to look at. One highlight was the Rialto going to a new record with "The Last Command," which ticked off $51,000 at the Rialto. This is about $1,400 better than "In the Navy Now" did there but, like other Jannings pictures, "Command" accomplished the figure without much fuss. Everybody knew the 42d street corner was pretty busy and just took it for granted.

Roxy and the Paramount each leaped ahead, $106,000 and $7,300 respectively. "Sharpshooters" turned in $106,000 to the Cathedral, while "Beau Sabreur" and a good unit pushed the big Publix house to $73,600. Greta Garbo's holdover week at the Capitol slipped back $12,500 to $65,200, while $50,200 was claimed for Chaplin's third week at the Strand. This picture is finishing its originally scheduled four weeks this Saturday and will not stay over that period. It is also currently playing the Brooklyn Strand.

"Texas Steer" did fairly by the midget Cameo in turning in $4,000, while "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" didn't do much for the Colony, where around $9,000 was tabbed.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" distinctly disappointed at the Rivoli at but $23,200 for the second week. The picture's three weeks' stay will be cut short this Friday at six p. m. to make way for a special reserved seat "society" showing of "Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) that night. Local debs will act as the house staff for the performance and all that sort of thing. "Sadie" starts to grind the following noon.

"Simba's" Backing

On actual figures "Simba," the Martin Johnson animal picture, far outran "Drums of Love" by getting $16,400 compared to around $7,500 for the Griffith film. The hunt film has the backing of natural history societies and plus the advance rotagravure section stuff in the Sunday dailies has been bouncing along nicely.

The Griffith film is a complex. Tabbed a beautiful picture by everyone, business never really got started until Sunday night. It opened Tuesday (Jan. 24). Figures to do better than this opening week, but by just how much is the question. United Artists understood to have another six weeks to go on its lease of the Liberty, "Gaucho" having already finished nine weeks and "Drums" one.

Tieup with school children and party nights helped "Uncle Tom" climb $1,200 to $8,500. "Jazz Singer" goes along evenly at $18,900, and "The Enemy" is trying to stave off the inevitable rigors of a $2 showing. "Chicago," at $6,100, is another picture feeling the strain of trying to make the $2 grade over too long a stretch. Film never meant to be two bucks worth except for exploitation and four weeks. Just holding on now until Fox takes over the house Feb. 12 with "Four Sons," opening Feb. 13.

"Wings" increased slightly in registering $15,400, and "Love" dipped away from capacity at the Embassy in its ninth week to $9,800.

Heavy snowstorm Saturday and a slippery Sunday didn't help the Broadway houses over the weekend.

Estimates for Last Week

Astor—"The Enemy" (M-G) (1,200; $1-$2) (6th week), Causing worry, and understood boys have held meetings as to what can be done to help overcome $2 handleap; maybe $9,000.

Cameo—"Texas Steer" (F. N.) (549; 50-75). Will Rogers film did fairly for this little house; $4,000. "Helen of Troy" current.

Capitol—"Divine Woman" (M-G) (4,620; 35-50-75-$1.10). Second week for Garbo coasted down $12,500 to $65,200; house currently playing "Student Prince" for first showing around here at pop prices and holds for second week.

Carroll—"Simba" (997; $1-$2) (2d week). Animal picture started off briskly, with natural history societies, students, etc., much interested; getting overflow from program theatres on week-end nights, but late drop-ins only procuring seats from adjoining lobby specs; consistently good all week and at $16,400 strictly okay.

Central—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) (922; $1-$2) (13th week). Play for school children and church night parties beginning to count; last week showed increase of $1,200 for old melo classic at $8,500.

Colony—"Thanks for Buggy Ride" (U) (1,086; 25-50-75). Still to get picture which will sponsor substantial gross jumps for house; this one not it with $9,000.

Criterion—"Wings" (Par) (973; $1-$2) (25th week). Not yet seriously disturbed; as long as they keep Lindbergh flying won't be doing this one an harm; $15,400 steady and slight increase over previous week.

Embassy—"Love" (M-G) (596; $1-$1.65) (10th week). Heavy screen romance dipped away from capacity after nine weeks; all right, though, at $9,800.

Gaiety—"Chicago" (Pathe) (808; $1-$2) (6th week). Picture in nearfinal week, with one more to go before Fox takes house; "Four Sons" (Fox) due here Feb. 13; satirical film on Mayor Thompson's town not supposed to stay over four weeks at $2 and feeling strain of forced golug; $6,100; will eventually reach Strand, on the next block.

Liberty—"Drums of Love" (U. A.) (1,234; $1-$2) (2d week). D. W. Griffith film mystery; rated eorbing picture with tingle enough to fashion as to drawing power; first capacity house Sunday night following Tuesday opening; should subsequently better $7,500.

Paramount—"Beau Sabreur" (Par) (3,400; 35-50-75-90). "Beau Geste" sequel drew on that relationship and outstanding stage unit; doing $73,600, inereased gross $7,300 over preceding week.

Rialto—"Last Command" (Par) (1,960; 35-50-75-90) (2d week). Sent house to new record with $51,000; about $1,400 above previous high, held by "Navy"; second week end, despite Saturday snowstrom, as big as opening for $17,000; house running film eight times a day.

Rivoli—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) (2,200; 35-50-75-90) (3d week). Below expectations since opening; second week's $23,000, $7,800 drop; exits Friday at six o'clock to allow for special showing that night of incoming "Sadie Thompson" (U. A.); latter film starts following day.

Roxy—"Sharpshooters" (Fox) (6,205; 50-$1.65). Helped house little; jump of $14,000 from week's total of $106,000; currently playing U picture with another from same firm to follow next week, "Love Me and World Is Mine."

Strand—"The Circus" (U. A.) (2,900; 35-50-65-75) (4th week). Chaplin will not stay beyond scheduled plan of four weeks; $50,200 for third week, drop of $19,900 from second week and $31,000 under first week's announced figure.

Warners—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,360; $1-$2) (17th week). With "Wings" as steadiest of $2 entries; last week, $18,900.

'PAJAMAS' AT $12,000 MONTREAL'S LEADER

(Drawing Pop., 600,000)

Sub-zero weather latter half of week and a blizzard Wednesday dropped gold as well as mercury. Up to Wednesday all houses were set for good returns. Both legitimate theatres well attended and three hockey games playing to capacity.

Vaude short turns at the Capitol are about 50-50 as an attraction with the pictures. Change in opening date at this house from Sunday to Saturday has emphasized the difference between it and the Palace, where the picture is the main show.

"Beau Sabreur" started out well with the ballyhoo on the "Beau Geste" sequel angle. The Palace looked like getting a big gross, but weather beat it down to $11,000.

Loew's and the Imperial continue to stress vaude end of their shows.

Estimates for Last Week

Capitol (2,700; 60-85), "Get Your Man" (Par.). Rates with vaude; $11,000.

Palace (2,700; 55-85), "Beau Sabreur" (Par.). Started out with a bang, but fell off owing to weather; $11,500.

Strand (800; 30-40), "Honor First" (Fox); "A Harp in Hock" (F.D.C.); "Silver Slave" (Warners), and "Arizona Wildcat" (Fox). All together, $3,500.

"Ironsides," $13,000, Record, Strand, Prov.

(Estimated Pop., 300,000)

With schools closed for the mid-year graduation period, business made the most of a good break and let the afternoon houses bring the grosses up to good totals.

Again the Strand with a record week with "Helen of Troy." At the Majestic "Come to My House" along with Movietone and Tom Mix helped to keep an even keel.

A very good film, "Sharp Shooters," teamed with a large stage revue, for good biz at Fay's. Uptown, across the city, failed to continue its sensational second run draw.

Estimates for Last Week

Strand (Ind) (2,200; 15-50), "Old Ironsides" (Par.) and "That Certain Thing" (F. N.). Great stuff, with new high gross around $13,000.

Carlton (Fay) (1,474; 15-50), "The Wizard" (Fox) and some passable vaude. Satisfactory at about $3,800.

Majestic (Fay) (2,500; 15-50), "Come to My House" (Fox) and Tom Mix in "Arizona Wild Cat" (Fox) along with Movietone. Around usual at $6,000.

Fay's (Fay) (2,000; 15-50), "Sharp Shooters" (Fox) with smart vaude. Somewhat better than par at $5,600.

Uptown (Ind.) (1,500; 10-25), "Spring Fever" (M.-G.) and "Girl in Pullman" (Pathe) first half; "Gentleman of Paris" (Par.) and "Bugle Call" (M.-G.) closing half. Second run across city good for about $2,650.

Rialto (Fay) (2,000; 10-25). Repeat offerings carrying along with fair success, around $1,250.

PHILLY'S BLIZZARD BROKE UP WEEK END

But Stanley Did $36,000 on Whiteman's Return — Fox, $26,000 With Stage Show

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

Paul Whiteman again wowed the town last week when he brought his orchestra back to the Stanley after their two highly successful weeks last fall.

With weather decidedly against them and the accompanying picture one of only moderate drawing power, the Whiteman bunch pulled the Stanley's gross last week up to $36,000, and perhaps a little over. It might have hit the $40,000 mark without the heavy rain and the Saturday afternoon and evening blizzard.

Up to Thursday business was O.K. all around, but after that most of the houses had tough scratching to offset the weather handicaps.

"Wings" held on prettily up at the Aldine and kept over or around $17,300. It's the special's ninth week in Philly. It looked up to Thursday, as if "Sunrise" at the Fox-Locust would be able to get $15,000 gross, but when the storms came along that chance was passed and the final figure was just over $12,000.

The Fox, with "Gateway of the Moon" as the feature and "Syncopation Revels" as the presentation headliner, got fairly good notices and showed every sign of building steadily throughout the week. Result was a gross of $26,000. Good.

Karlton changes its policy to include first-run specials, with a higher top, and the first picture is "Love," with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo.

The Fox-Locust and Aldine are, of course, holding over "Sunrise" and "Wings" respectively.

"The Jazz Singer" is announced to come into the Fox Feb. 6 and stay for a run.

Estimates for Last Week

Stanley (4,000; 35-50-75)—"The Gorilla" (1st Nat). Picture only fairly strong, but return of Paul Whiteman and his orchestra brought gross up to $36,000 despite very bad weather.

Stanton (1,700; 35-50-75)—"My Best Girl" (U. A., 3d week). Dropped to $10,000 or maybe less in third and final week. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" opened Monday.

Aldine (1,500; $2)—"Wings" (Par, 9th week). Aviation special still big, although weather brought it down to $17,300 last week. Stay indefinite.

Fox (3,000; 99)—"Gateway of Moon" (Fox). Picture fairly well liked and bill, headed by elaborate dance and jazz act, "Syncopation Revels," built steadily up to time of blizzard Saturday. Got $26,000, despite weather.

Arcadia (800; 50)—"The Harvester" (F.B.O.). Popularity of book held week's business up to $4,000.

Karlton (1,100; 50)—"Tea for Three" (M-G). Lew Cody picture just fair at $2,500. This week house inaugurates new policy with run pictures.

Fox-Locust (1,800; $1.65)—"Sunrise" (Fox, 2d week). Weather hurt, but $12,000.

"NOOSE" SENT CHICAGO TO $50,000; 'H.O.T.,' ROOSEVELT, $18,000, GOOD

"Last Command" Opened at McVicker's to $28,000; In for 4 Weeks—Garbo Film and Ash at Oriental, $41,000; Below Average—No Alibis Last Week

Chicago, Jan. 31.

If Chicago weren't a village of pioneers, brought up on crook-beans and salt pork, the brutal, ear-freezing climate that came riding in last week on one of those famous Chi breezes would have hammed the box offices for a row of reds. But grosses had nothing to blush about.

The Chicago dropped five grand in taking on Barthelmess's "The Noose," but $50,000 in admissions can't be wrong as long as the house average is in the lower 40's. This film secured a good line of daily notices.

"Private Life H. O. T." was warm enough to buck the weather, and wound up its first week with $18,000 at the Roosevelt. With plenty of encouraging comment bandied about by those who saw, the film should keep its foothold here for a while.

Another new entrant, "The Last Command," got off nittily at McVickers with $28,000 from the Jannings devotees. Usually a sart like this at McVickers indieates a four-weeks' run. At the Oriental a normally good Paul Ash show and Greta Garbo in "The Divine Woman" lifted taks-ins $3,000, with this still a little under the previous pace.

Ninth week of "Teh Jazz Singer" saw a small drop at the Garrick but still getting good play.

Estimates for Last Week

Chicago Publix)—"The Noose" (F. N.) (4,100; 50-75). Barthelmess picture gave house several thousand above normal at $50,000. Previous week was $5,000 above that.

Garrick (Shubert)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,293; 50-$2.20) (9th week). Only picture in city on legit scale, dropped little through bad weather break, hitting over $14,000; caught on unusually well here.

McVickers (Publix)—"The Last Command" (Par) (2,400; 50-75). Jannings picture on opening doubled gross of previous week and looks okay for three more; very favorable notices; $28,000.

Monroe (Fox)—"Sharpshooters" and Movietone (Fox) (975; 50-65). Manager Cohen got something his boys wanted and recuperated somewhat; $4,100. Tom Mix is in this week.

Oriental (Publix)—"Divine Woman" (M-G) (2,900; 35-50-75). Garbo picture best Oriental has had in moons, but with Ash show house still couldn't hit former stride; did $41,000.

Orpheum (Warner)—"Beware of Married Men" and Vita (W. B.) (776; 50). Moderately good week on drop-ins with $7,200.

Playhouse (Mindlin)—"Jeanne Dore"—"Jungle Gods" (Fox). Art has tougher time of it here than in New York. In New York it's just tough; Sarah Bernhardt revival and travelog $4,100.

Roosevelt (Publix)—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (1,400; 50-60). Erskine's satire brought raving notices and plenty of talk; debutted at $18,000; very good.

State-Lake (Orpheum)—"Texas Steer" (F. N.) (2,800; 25-50-65)—Will Rogers feature in unfavorable spot with vaude; got house up a little to $18,000.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,702; 25-75). Second week of Fairbanks showed $10,000 drop to $24,000, but still okay; "The Circus" follows.

LOCAL KIDDIE STUNT BIG IN MIL., $10,500

Majestic Did Best Week in Year With Hoo Ray Tie-Up —Kids in Drove

(Drawing Population, 650,000)

Old man winter scored again last week and while Milwaukee shivered the grosses went on the toboggan the last half, knocking them down below any figures written for some weeks. Starting out great, the cold took the upper hand Wednesday and the houses were unable to entice the public from the fireside.

Garden closed the "Jazz Singer" after four weeks. Closing week's $8,100 brought total for the run to $40,000 or more, setting a record for holding a picture.

Thomas Meighan showed the doubtful he is still a drawing card in Milwaukee. His picture opened big at the Alhambra but died suddenly in midweek when the cold wave set in, closing to $8,300.

Purchase of the Midwesco chain, formerly Saxe, in the Fox deal, left that string in the air with no reliable grosses obtainable for last week. Clocking would indleate a drop for the Wisconsin due to the absenee of Dave Schooler, m. c., and the cold.

Estimates For Last Week

Alhambra (U.) "City Gone Wild" (Par.) (1,800; 30-50). Saturday and Sunday business big, got about half gross of week; $8,300.

Garden (Brin.) "Jazz Singer" (War.) (1,200; 25-50-75). Four weeks came to juicy end with big total of above $40,000. Last week's hit $8,100.

Majestic (Orph.) "Wolf Fangs" (War.) (1,600; 10-25-50). Monster business brought in by Jackie "Hoo" Ray, "Our Gang" movie kid on tieup with newspaper and stores on making local kid movie. House packed from opening to closing daily despite cold. Kids came in droves. House did best business in year. Easily mounted $10,500.

Miller (Midwesco) "Camille" (F. N.) (1,400; 25-50). Stage band and second run down town. House held up at usual gross of around $7,000.

Palace (Orph.) "Come To My House" (Fox) (2,400; 25-50-75). Picture no draw with fair stage bill; $14,000.

Wisconsin (Midwesco) "Man Crazy" (F. N.) (2,400; 35-50-60). Stage show not so big without Schooler, m. c.; picture hit fairly well. House may have gotten $15,000, from clocking estimate.

BUFFALO BUT AVERAGE

Buffalo, Jan. 31.

Little stirring at the Buffalo picture theatre box offices last week. Business appeared to have settled down to merely average takings.

"King of Kings" at the Erlanger overshadowed everything else in town. The Teck being dark, last week was another all-picture week for Buffalo.

Estimates for Last Week

Erlanger (1,300; 50-$1.50)—"King of Kings" (Pathe). Showed extraordinary strength toward end week. $15,000.

Buffalo (Publix) (3,600; 30-40-65)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Treasure Ships." Picture feature showed strong at the beginning and end of engagement. Personal appearance of Ruth Taylor Wednesday failed to bolster midweek business. $18,500.

Loew's (Loew) (3,400; 35-50)—"The Lovelorn" (M-G) and vaude. No particular distinetion in program. $12,500.

Great Lakes (Fox) (3,400; 35-50)—"The Wizard" (Fox) and vaude. Accent decidedly on vaude side. $10,000 to $11,000.

Lafayette (Indc) (3,400; 35-50)—"Wild Geese" (Tiffany), Vita and vaude. Bill chiefly remarkable for return of Vita. Proceed slightly, but still far from satisfactory. $11,000.

CHAPLIN'S 'CIRCUS' ON TOO SOON NEEDED ADVANCE NOTICE?

Comedy Film's Run but 2 Weeks in Strand to $7,500 2d Week; $10,000, 1st—"West Point," 1st Wk. at State, $17,000, Minneapolis Last Week

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

It's just one blizzard and cold wave after another this winter. Last week's bliz hit Wednesday and the temperature flirted with 10 below for four days.

"West Point," at the State, built up and seemed to have just the sort of stuff local screen devotees want.

Week produced an unexpected surprise in the comparative flop of the new Chaplin picture, "The Circus," at the Strand. First week, at around $11,000, was a disappointment, for a Chaplin, but it was thought trade would build. Takings, however, did not hold up sufficiently strong to warrant the retention of the picture for another week and it was bowed out. This is the shortest run for a new Chaplin film here in years.

Broadway Reports

Minneapolis was the first city in the country outside of New York to get "The Circus," the arrangement having been in celebration of the treaty of peace signed between F. & R. and United Artists. The picture, too, was very well liked, nothing but favorable comment being heard on every hand. The conclusion reached is that it is a mistake for a local house to run a big picture day and date with New York, and that the most profitable procedure is to wait until after the film has had the prestige of a Broadway engagement and reports of its merits have filtered in on the public through various agencies and routes.

The fans liked "Shepherd of the Hills" and it did fairly well at the Garrick, considering the weather and that the house offered nothing else for the 60c admish. One week, however, was sufficient for this picture.

Dolores Del Rio drew quite a bit of trade to Pantages in "Gateway of the Moon," while "Ben-Hur," at 25c, was a magnet for the Grand. Bancroft and Conklin did not get much of a play with "Tell It to Sweeney," at the Lyric.

Estimates for Last Week

State (F. & R.) (2,500; 60). "West Point" (M-G-M). Wm. Haines, star, and picture great combination. Public waxed highly enthusiastic. Close to $17,000. Remarkable under all circumstances. Prolog only on stage.

Garrick (F. & R.) (2,000; 60). "Shepherd of Hills" (F. N.). Well exploited; trade not any too brisk; $7,000; fair.

Strand (F. & R.) (1,500; 50) "The Circus" (U-A). Second and last week. Whale of comedy, but failed to get up high box office momentum for some unexplainable reason. About $7,500. Very disappointing.

Lyric (1,350; 35) "Tell It to Sweeney" (Par). New comedy team of Chester Conklin and George Bancroft did not click strongly in initial offering. Picture pleased: $7,000.

Hennepin-Orpheum (2,890; 50-75) "South Sea Love" (F-B-O) and vaude. Picture not much, but vaude splendid for change; $15,500; very fine.

Pantages (1,650; 50) "Gateway of Moon" (Fox) and vaude. Star, Dolores Del Rio, and picture magnet; $8,700; good.

Seventh Street (1,480; 40). "Chain Lightning" and vaude; $5,000; fairly good.

Long Work 'Womanhood'

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Not satisfied with the adaptation made by Rupert Hughes of "Womanhood," an original by an unknown writer for the Inspiration-Halperin production for United Artists, Olga Schoel, local screen writer, has been engaged for a screen treatment of the story.

Inspiration-Halperin has big ideas for "Womanhood," claiming to have worked two years in building the story, and will spend a year in production.

Gloria de Cota, sent to Hollywood by the Mexican government through winning the Mexican national beauty contest, and given six months' work at the DeMille studios, has been released by the latter.

She is being given screen tests by the Inspiration-Halperin combination for a lead in "Womanhood."

MIDLAND-MAINSTREET DID $50,000 ON WEEK

Kansas City, Jan. 31.

"The Student Prince" at the Midland, and "Shepherd of the Hills" at the Mainstreet, were the choices last week, with business heavy at each. It looked like old times to see these two houses, a block apart on the same street, jamming the seats.

The other half of the story for the first runners in that district at times not enough in to pay for the lights. Business was so bad it seems but a question of a few more weeks like the past two before some will have to drop out.

Capitol, formerly Garden, starting earlier as a vaude-film house, and a few weeks ago changing to a musical tab policy, with pictures, washed up Sunday.

Estimates For Last Week

Midland (Loew)—"Student Prince" (M-G-M) (4,000; 25-35-60). "Syncopation" on stage and sure enough jazzy. Picture well liked. Saturday opening capacity and Sunday night house unable to care for ticket seekers. $32,000.

Newman (Locw)—"Two Flaming Youths" (Par) (1,920; 25-35). Good old-fashioned hoke, but not much money getter. But slightly better than preceeding week. $3,000.

Liberty (Ind) — "Coney Island" (1,000; 25-50). Sam Carver, running this house independently since Universal gave it up, doing everything to lure fans in; serving tea and cake on mezzanine in afternoon and giving two street car tickets to evening trade, but last week worst house has ever known. Picture good entertainment but title and lobby display failed to draw. No other excuse. $1,700.

Mainstreet (Orpheum)—"Shepherd of the Hills" (F. N.) (3,200; 25-50). Fact that author, Harold Bell Wright, lived in Kansas City when writing this story of Missouri Ozarks gave engagement local angle. Also stage show. Lines in front looked like old times. One of best weeks in months. $18,000.

Pantages—"Wolf Fangs" (Fox) (2,400; 25-30-50). Picture full of thrills. Vaude full of variety. Show well liked. Business just little under normal. $6,500.

"What Price Glory," Movietone, at Globe, offering in connection with stock. New Uptown (Universal) on split week, had "Wild Geese" first half, and "Cheating Cheaters," last half, for pictures.

Evelyn Egan's Operation

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Evelyn Egan, picture actress, injured several months ago when her machine collided with a steam shovel, has left the hospital and was given an office position by Al Christie until her injuries are completely healed.

She has now returned to the hospital to undergo a plastic operation. An attempt will be made to cover up all facial scars so she can return to acting.

ATMOSPHERE!

Riviera Film Corp. is doing a production in New York under the title of "A Son of New York." What could be more natural that the leading man indicated in the title should be an Argentine dancer named Bruno Valletty.

More native atmosphere in the person of Fifi Rodiva, French dansceuse. On top of that one of the character roles is done by Raffale Bongini. Among the authentic metropolitan backgrounds are places in Central Park and "West 110th street," according to the press agent's copy.

PITTSBURGH RUINED 'SADIE' WITH 20 CUTS

Drawing Pop. 1,000,000)

Generous slicing by the censors of "Sadie Thompson" in the last two reels, and 20 cuts in all, hurt business at the Penn accordingly, as the house opened to a near record Monday, with a dropping off during the week. Weather, bad Wednesday and Thursday did not help, either, this condition being in all theatres.

In the Swanson picture as here one got no idea of what it's about in the last reel at all. The Penn did $33,500, drop of $3,300 on "West Point" of the week before.

Grand did only fairly with "The Love Mart." Davis had "Two Flaming Youths" and also sort of flopped. At the Aldine, Claire Windsor in "Fashion Madness" did no better than others.

(Estimates for Last Week)

Aldine (Loew) (2,000; 25-35-50). Vaude and "Fashion Madness"; $10,230.

Cameo (U) (600; 35-40). Conrad Veidt in "A Man's Past." House using line "Where the picture's the thing." Average business of $1,400.

Davis (Keith-Stanley) (2,100; 35-50-75). $9,500 gathered up with "Two Flaming Youths," assisted by 7 stage acts.

Grand (Stanley) (2,700; 50-50). "Love Mart," Billie Dove. Not as good as former Dove pictures: $10,570.

Penn (Loew) (3,700; 25-35-60). $33,500, about average for this house, with Gloria Swanson in "Sadie Thompson" and stage show. Business opened with a rush, but business had the heart cut out of it.

STATE, ST. L., LEADS WITH 'PRINCE,' $39,900

St. Louis, Jan. 31.

(Drawing Pop., 1,000,000)

"The Student Prince" at Loew's State last week classes with the best pictures, says one St. Louis reviewer. Jolson's "Jazz Singer" Vitaphone performance at the Grand-Central went into its fifth week.

Estimates for Last Week

Ambassador (Skouras)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (3,000; 35-65). Called well worth while by reviewers. Ed Lowry still hittin' 'em over the fence with his stage shot; $34,300.

Missouri (Skouras)—"Wife Savers" (3,800; 35-65). These low comedy favorites always seem welcome to certain type of fans; $20,900.

Grand-Central (1,700; 50-75).—"The Jazz Singer" (W. B.) Vita. Fifth week, $15,200.

Loew's State (3,300; 25-35-65).—"Student Prince." Teddy Joyce continues to please as m.c.; $39,900.

St. Louis (4,280; 35-65)—"Silk Legs," Vaud. After two weeks of poor pictures, St. Louis presented interesting little comedy. Vaudeville also.

Orpheum (2,200; 25-50-75)—"The Wizard" and vaudeville.

Champ Crasher's Job

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

"One Eyed" Connelly, the world's champion gate crasher, has come into his reward. He has been made gate tender at the Fox studios, defending the Western avenue entrance.

He wears a gray uniform and authority sits upon him like a flaming sword. If you haven't a pass, you haven't a chance.

"One Eye" is, in short, the toughest gate man west of the Rocky Mountains.

'SORRELL,' AT $15,000, BIG WEEK IN PORTLAND

"Jazz Singer" in 5th Week at Blue Mouse—Oriental, $30,000 With "Eagle"

Portland, Ore., Jan. 31.

Broadway jammed them to near capacity with "Sorrell and Son" and Franchon and Marco's "Lace Idea." "The Jazz Singer" keeps up getting money at the Blue Mouse. With Vitaphone in fourth week.

"We're All Gamblers" given a panning by the press, but came through with a profitable gross.

Tebbett's new Oriental sure clicking. This new house will continue to bring the trade for at least a few months.

Upon the taking over the J. J. Parker and United Artists of the West Coast Broadway, some time in February, the Rivoli, at present the run house of the town, is scheduled to be turned into a grind.

The new Publix house is nearing completion, although no opening date announced. It is said the house will be ready by Feb. 20. It will seat 3,200 and is patterned after the Paramount, New York City.

"Wine," Universal re-issue, which was originally booked for the Columbia, but which was refused a permit by the Censor Board for a local showing, has been bought by the Orpheum. Hal Murphy, manager of the Orpheum, will make a bold attempt to get the picture into his house. The city fathers have refused to intervene in the matter

Oriental (Tebbetts) (2,500-25-35), "Fighting Eagle" (De Mille). Big independent house brought good crowds, but slipped on week over previous weeks. Srodka's orchestra and Glenn Shelley, organist, popular. $30,000.

Broadway (W. C.) (2,000; 40-60). "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.). First U. A. picture in house for months. One of biggest weeks. Fanchon and Marco's "Lace Idea" and Ollie Wallace on stage. $15,000.

Columbia (U.) (800; 35-50), "We're All Gamblers" (Par.). Tommy Meighan picture given panning by press, but got good week. $6,000.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (750; 50), "Jazz Singer" (Warners). Film could run indefinitely. Fourth week and held over. Biggest run business in history of house. $6,800 and again held over.

Music Box (Henry Duffy Players) (1,300; 35-50-75), "The Goldfish." Henry Duffy stock. After completing two big weeks on "Rain," Duffy company connected to over $7,500 on "The Goldfish."

Liberty (W. C.), "Open Range" (Par.). This house going along for no reason at all. Expected that West Coast Theatres will soon install a Punch and Judy show here as a stimulant for biz.

Hollywood (W. C.) (1,600; 25), "London After Midnite" (M. G.). Lon Chaney picture bolstered business at this big suburbanner. On three-day run, house connected to the extent of around $1,500.

Rivoli (Parker-W. C.) (1,210; 35-50). "The Shepherd of the Hills" (1st N.). Picture slowed down on second week. Santaella's orchestra and Cecil Teage, organist, hits.

HEALY COMM. COUNSEL

Washington, Jan. 31.

Robert E. Healy, of Vermont, has been named chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission. He succeeds Bayard T. Hainer, of Oklahoma, who resigned because of ill health.

Mr. Hainer argued the Government's case in the Famous Players-Lasky case before the commission.

SKETCHES FOR TWO

A requisition has reached New York to procure playcts suitable for vaudeville, for Renee Adoree and Irene Rich.

STARS DON'T HOLD UP IN SOUTHLAND

New Orleans, Jan. 31.

Variety's declaration that westerns were dying was borne out last week when Tom Mix, in "The Broncho Twister," sent the gross at Loew's State almost $2,000 below normal. Westerns used to be great for the house, with Mix the standout of all cowboy luminaries.

Another important star failing to stand up was Norma Talmadge, in "The Dove." She dropped the Saenger down $4,000 from the previous week.

"The Divine Woman" surprised at the Strand by giving that house its best gross in months, but "The Devil Dancer" did not mean much to the Liberty. Nor did "Dance Madness" help the Orpheum, which skidded terribly.

A ray of sunshine at the Palace when "Monte Cristo" sent that theatre above $5,000. The Tudor limped along with "Slightly Used."

Estimates for Last Week

Saenger (3,568; 65), "The Dove." Only $16,100.

Orpheum (2,400; 75), "Dance Madness." Just $6,700.

Strand (2,200; 50), "The Divine Woman." Generally commended; $4,800.

Palace (2,300; 40), "Monte Cristo." Drew splendidly; $5,300.

Tudor (800; 40). "Slightly used." Lucky to do $1,200.

Nellie Revell Walks Out; Couldn't Stand Anger

Nellie Revell abruptly left her job as publicity director for the new United Artists theatre here last week. It happened after a run-in with Lou Ang-r, the U. A. representative.

The same occurrence was reported between the publicist and Anger-when Miss Revell attended to the free space for the premiere of the U. A. theatre in Chicago. It was reported in Chicago before Miss Revell had been there a week and with frequent stormy seances with Anger that she intended quitting but is said to have remained through her fondness for Jos. M. Schenck.

This latter was made quite evident when Miss Revell, upon her first salary day in Chicago and after she had filled the local papers on the U. A. opening and "The Dove," its opening attraction, a check for one-half week's salary was handed to her by Anger. He is said to have informed Miss Revell that since she did not arrive in Chicago until Thursday only a half week's salary was due her.

Nellie Irritated

Working here for the new U. A. house with an advertising appropriation of $5,000 for three weeks and against the tremendous local newspaper influence of the Kunsky theatres, Miss Revell became intensely irritated at the constant nagging by Anger.

All Miss Revell would admit was the quitting and intended returning to New York. She added that while she liked Joe Schenck for a boss, she couldn't stand Anger.

This is the first regular publicity post Miss Revell has accepted since her remarkable recovery and departure from a hospital in New York, after four years there as a ceiling watcher. In Chicago her space grabbing for the U. A. house had never been surpassed.

Proctor, Film Salesman, In Theatre "Feel" Jam

Salt Lake, Jan. 31.

Tom Proctor, 30, salesman, was arrested charged with improper advances toward a 11-year-old girl in a downtown picture house here. A policeman in the boxoffice of the theatre ran up the aisle, chased Proctor out and caught him.

He protested, saying he had merely stretched out his legs during the show and crowded the girl. A scuffle followed, the man refusing to go back to the theatre.

Proctor was overpowered. The girl's story was that he had attempted to maul her.

INDIES APPROACH SAPIRO

FARM ORGANIZER MAY LINE 'EM UP

Attorney Who Obliged Henry Ford's Apology May Attempt to Organize Independent Exhibs Thruout U. S.—Starting With Greater N|e|w York—$100,000 Yearly Salary With 5 Percent Film Purchase Tax by Indies to Provide Funds

NOT TO OPERATE

Negotiations are on between the leading independent picture theatre owners of New York and Aaron Sapiro, attorney and organizer, who sued Henry Ford for $1,000,000 for libelling the Jews and won his case, in the form of an apology, to form a booking combination representing to the exhibitors what the Hays organization is to the producers and distributors.

Sapiro is being offered $100,000 a year salary, this sum and the cost of his office to be met by a 5 per cent, tax on total amount of film purchased.

Thirty exhibitors so far, some representing independent chains, are interested. This buying power represents $3,500,000 a year.

With the launching of this organization it is expected the other independents will join, the purchasing power of all the independents being in the neighborhood of $6,000,000 yearly. The independent theatres of the better grade, around 300 in New York, would constitute a greater buying force than all the chain houses in this territory combined.

Trying for Years

The independent exhibitors planning this deal, members of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, have been trying to form a combination for several years, so far unsuccessfully. Most realize, finally, that unless they combine, and soon, they may be driven out of business within the next three years.

While no one has ever been able to mold the local independents into one body some hope is held out that Sapiro may be able to accomplish the hitherto impossible on account of his succesful experience in organizing the farmers, who were an even more irreconcillable group than the exhibitors. Sapiro has organized a considerable number of other enterprises, all successfully, from reports.

If Sapiro can handle the local situation he may be requested to follow with a national organization campaign.

The combination would be invaluable to exhibitors because it would give them an opportunity to get pictures at a reasonable price where

Joan Crawford Wearing A Wedding Ring

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Joan Crawford wore and displayed a platinum wedding ring at Friday night's opening of "The Circus" at Grauman's Chinese. She is reported to have married Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., last week in Mexico.

Fairbanks is under age and would need parental consent to marry in the United States.

Neither would confirm.

JAMES HALL'S DIVORCE SEEMS BIT IMPORTANT

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

The names of James Hall, Paramount screen actor, and Merna Kennedy, Chaplin's leading lady in "The Circus," are being linked romantically.

6 Road-Show Films' History

Just six genuine $2 roadshow pictures to date. This takes in all pictures and lists only those films which have gone across the country and profited by special showing at special prices.

It's an elite circle into which few have been able to break, including "Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East," "The Covered Wagon," "Ten Commandments," "The Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur," in that order.

Of these six but two were sent into production with road showing the release plan, "Ten Commandments" and "Ben-Hur." Of the sextet it is noteworthy that D. W. Griffith has had two, Paramount two and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer two.

At the present time Paramount is threatened with another, "Wings," which has done well in the key cities but has yet to prove itself in the lesser population centers.

"Birth of a Nation." Decision made to roadshow the picture around a table in Schrafft's 23d street store less than a month before the picture opened in New York on March 3, 1915. D. W. Griffith, J. J. McCarthy and Henry E. Aiken around the table at the time, with Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" from which the "Nation" was adapted, having to be argued into the plan. The first $2 picture.

"Way Down East." D. W. Griffith and J. J. McCarthy decided to road show the film in the lobby of the 44th Street theatre the third or fourth night after the opening. Road showed one season, and could have gone two.

"The Covered Wagon." Already sold on program to about 400 exhibitors when J. J. McCarthy walked into Adolph Zukor's office and said he'd like to handle it. He had viewed it at the Criterion theatre shortly after it opened. Result was a conference between Zukor, Sidney Kent and McCarthy with picture sent out for $2.

"The Big Parade." J. J. McCarthy was on coast to look over "Ben-Hur" and watching advance footage on "Parade" in a studio projection room when he tagged it as a road show picture. Scene of girl being dragged by truck, and then a solitary figure in the middle of the road on her knees convinced McCarthy it was $2. Picture unfinished at that time.

Before leaving Mr. Boag said he had no complete idea, but admitted the producing bug had bit him. As general manager for his wife, Gilda Gray, Boag was largely active while her various pictures were in the making.

Miss Gray is now making personal appearances with her latest Goldwyn picture (U. A.), "Devil Dancer." As Miss Gray will travel with the film for about 20 weeks, it suggests that there may have been more in the recently reported marital differences between the pair than the suspected press agentry, although there is no doubt of the latter angle.

It is said that if there is to be a Boag-Gray separation, it will be arranged amicably. Report is that Miss Gray recognizes to what heights she has been brought by her husband and freely credits him, leaving nothing to be settled between them excepting a division of property.

Boag denied he had a young woman on the coast as a star for a production, should he decide to start one. He said rather he would first look about for a connection with a releasing organization when reaching the studio hunting grounds.

Chi. Exhib. Meeting

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Members of the contract committees representing exhibitors, distributors and producers held meetings at the Congress Hotel today for the purpose of deciding on procedure. Pete Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., was elected chairman of the exhibitors' committee.

Voting on a new form of contract, scheduled for tomorrow, may be done in closed meeting, with only the three members representing each faction present. Exhibs wanted open voting so that they could observe the trend of affairs.

Money Man's Aid On Coast for Info

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Grant L. Cook, Detroit attorney and business advisor to I. A. Young, financial backer of Tiffany-Stahl, is now on the coast with headquarters at the Tiffany-Stahl studios.

CRUZE, BURNING UP, GIVES PATHE NOTICE

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

James Cruze will not renew his contract with Pathe-De Mille to release his productions after his present contract expires.

Last Friday in the Ambassador, Cruze was conferring with Elmer Pearson on the matter, when the director started to burn up. Hot words were freely exchanged, and Cruze walked out, after telling Pearson he was through with Pathe for good.

It is understood Cruze is now negotiating with F. B. O. for release of his pictures, and that he will go to New York to sign a contract next week.

Von Eltz Flat

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

After spending several years in independent pictures Theodore Von Eltz has accumulated $6,300 in liabilities and has no assets.

He says so in bankruptcy.

MATIESON RUNAROUND

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Otto Matiesen, screen actor, claims he is getting the runaround from Sam Friedman and Edward Spitz, producers of "The Last Moment." They had him in the picture with the understanding that he would get a percentage of the profit. The picture was directed by Paul Fejos and made at a cost of $3,000.

Matiesen worked for about five weeks with the understanding he would receive $5,000 from the first moneys when the picture was distributed.

Now the actor claims the film is being shown in the east and that Friedman and Spitz have refused to make payment or permit him to examine their books.

Mindlin in Court To See Daughter

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Frederick A. Mindlin, part owner of Chicago's Playhouse theatre (pictures), was divorced in 1926. The Mindlins have a daughter, now four. Shortly after securing her decree, by default, Mrs. Mindlin married James Clark Hoskins. Since her marriage to Hoskins it was alleged that she had represented him to the child as her father.

Mindlin, per attorney Benjamin H. Ehrlich, appeared in Judge Thomas J. Lynch's branch of the Chicago municipal court and sought to modify his divorce decree so that he might see his daughter. In 1926 Mrs. Hoskins was given sole custody of the child.

Judge Lynch continued the motion for 90 days and ordered that Mindlin may visit his daughter once a week and call her on the telephone at similar intervals.

Saving Time Again

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Starting March 4 the present schedule of 63 hours on Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe railroads from Los Angeles and Frisco to Chicago will be cut to 61 hours and 15 minutes.

This saving of 1:45 applies on extra fare trains.

DIRECTORS AFTER INFO IN HICKMAN TRIAL

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

The opening of the trial of William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnap-murderer of Marian Parker attracted a score or more of directors and actors who sought first-hand information of major case court procedure. Local authorities co-operated with the film men to the extent of reserving close up seats for those who expressed a desire to attend the hearing.

Among those present on the opening day were Edward Sloman and Edward Laemmle, Universal directors; Richard Wallace, First National; Victor Fleming and Ernst Lubitsch, Paramount; Clarence Brown and King Vidor, M-G-M.

Vidor wrote a by-line story of the case for a local daily. Several directors suspended studio work to attend the trial.

R. Crewe With Hearst And Due for Coast Job

Regina Crewe of the "Morning Telegraph" goes Hearst within the month to do a news letter on movies for the New York "Mirror." Eventually Miss Crewe will go to Hollywood and do for Hearst's tabloids what Louella Parsons is writing for the New York "American" and nationally syndicated.

Miss Crewe succeeds Dorothy Herzog, who is now film editor for FBO. Miss Herzog was formerly picture reviewer in New York, going to the coast to do film correspondence. Bland Johaneson has since succeeded Miss Herzog as the picture critic and quickly commanded attention for her pithy and breezy film critiques. Miss Johaneson remains on the "Mirror" as its picture reviewer.

Miss Crewe's husband, Herbert Cruikshank, continues on the "Telegraph," which paper he rejoined after leaving it for a spell to go on the now merged "Picture World." Eventually Cruikshank will accompany his wife to the coast, where he has other connections and which "The Telegraph" open for Bernard leaves his film reviewing post on Simmons. The latter is now the advertising manager but has written picture stuff and will combine both duties on Cruikshank's resignation.

"Board of Trade" for Eastern Film Hopes

A mysterious "Board of Trade of the Motion Picture Industry" has appeared on the scene with the motto, "bring production back to its birthplace."

Membership appears to be among merchants and others who were hit hard when the eastern studios closed and who would profit by a resumption of production around New York.

The new "Board of Trade" is located at 145 West 45th street in the office of Joseph Ornato, producer of short subjects and industrial films. Inquiry there developed that it is little more than a mail address for the propaganda scheme.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Love's young sweet dream is poison to Helene Costello, Warner featured player, and Jack Regan, former college hero, who have separated after four months of married life.

Regan is returning to Washington, where he will work in the advertising department of a newspaper.

Lady Douglas in 'B'way'

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Lady Sholto Douglas, English night club hostess now on the coast, will appear in the cast of Universal's film version of "Broadway," if officials of the studio succeed in persuading her to accept an offer made her.

Lady Douglas has not given the producers an answer as yet.

AMUSEMENT STOCKS SINK BACK; PATHE CRASHES; STANLEY WEAK

Ticker Sharps See Liquidation in Loew—Fox Makes Best Showing on Talk of Heavy Wall Street Backing—General Market in Midst of Scare

Influenced partly by general market conditions, but more by individual considerations, practically all the amusement shares sank back from their tops last week and early this week, or dropped further into new bottoms.

Loew was back below 62 yesterday, after touching for the third time its old top of 64, accompanied by the comment of shrewd ticker readers that there were signs of liquidation by important operators. Paramount was quiet at and generally below 113, the line at which it had developed resistance to selling pressure up to the last week or so.

Pathe crashed again, this time to 13¼, with corresponding weakness in its bonds, a 7 per cent. issue which returned to its former low of 80. This slump was attributed, besides the dividend passing, to frightened selling by small holders who had the stock wished on them when the Keith-Albee connection was ballyhooed last year.

Fox did best of the group, although even that much-touted issue was not immune from pressure during the worst of the uncertainty about tight money, Federal Reserve Board brakes on speculation and such things. In this case the inside "dope" was that the Wall Street banking sponsorship for the Fox stock was engaged in an effort to clear itself of a speculative following. In this connection stories are afloat downtown which seek to identify the sponsorship of Fox as one of the biggest interests—indeed the very biggest—in the financial district.

Customers' room gossip has it that this concern does not want a public following of tradlers, and from time to time will maneuver to shake it off. Meantime a large part of the stock has been taken out of the market and the floating supply so reduced that only minor buying has a disproportionate effect.

Stanley, which sold above 90 before the distribution of stock last year, climaxed its progressive decline last week, selling around 47, but promptly rallying to better than 50. The bottom was reached just before the announcement of the income statement for 1927, showing dividends just earned but net not appreciably above the showing of 1926. Recovery was based on belief the worst was known and had been discounted.

This was only one of a number of financial statements made by film and theatre concerns. Most important was the unofficial forecast of Paramount's 1927 net, placing it at the rate of between $12 and $13 a share of common. The Street had been led to expect something better. What particularly threw cold water on enthusiasm was the figure of around $3.75 for the Sept-Jan period. This and the feeling that pool holdings had been reduced, put the issue in a highly unfavorable light to ticker followers.

Loew Operation

The explanation of Loew's sudden upturn, during a session when prices were falling all around, was that that information had been allowed to leak from inside, tending to show that appreciation of real estate holdings would make a brilliant showing on reappraisal. That explanation sounded weak, as it had been called to attention many times in the past. It isn't reasonable to believe that rising real estate values over a 15-year period could result in a sudden wave of buying some Wednesday morning. The fact that the move started during a generally weak market was the best indication that it was a deliberate operation. When the upturn halted on the old point of resistance, the conclusion was obvious that it was with the consent, if not with the co-operation, of the operating clique.

Stanley showed net profit of $3,235,337 for 1927, compared with $3,148,809 in 1926. For the same periods the gross was $37,060,000 compared to $22,909,000, an excess for 1927 of nearly $15,000,000, indicating either enormously increased operating cost or, as likely, important expansion.

Shubert Theatres reported net of $630,626 for the six months up to Jan. 1, equal to $3.75 a share of common, compared with a net per share of $4.03 for the same period of the preceding year. This, of course, was sufficient explanation for the dip from 75 to yesterday's price of 64¾, and also for the inspired upswing of a couple of months ago.

GOLDBERG PANNED BY SCREEN WRITERS' GUILD

Article in Society's Bulletin—Recites Complaints of Writers for Indie Producer

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Screen Writers Guild does not take kindly to the tactics of Jesse J. Goldberg, independent film producer, in his business relations with its members. Several complaints have been made regarding transactions had with this producer, who is also known as James Ormont.

Specific complaints are being printed this week in the Screen Writers "Bulletin," official organ of the Guild, which carries the following article:

"Jesse J. Goldberg, Producer

"Jesse J. Goldberg produces for First Division Pictures, Inc., and directs as James Ormont, also accepting screen credit for authorship on his productions as William Gilbert.

"Goldberg engaged Ruth Todd to write the adaptation and continuity of a picture to be called 'Comrades.' Miss Todd's agreement called for payment of one sum for adaptation and continuity, and another sum, two-thirds as large, as a bonus if the picture was made for less than a stipulated production cost.

"Miss Todd's understanding was that Goldberg's financial backers would not approve the amount unless payment were handled in this manner, and that the picture would certainly be made under the bonus deadline, and that she would receive all the money mentioned in her agreement. But the picture, unfortunately, ran past the bonus amount and she received only the flat price mentioned in the agreement. Story was credited to William Gilbert but only part of the price she expected was credited to Ruth Todd.

"Goldberg engaged Arthur Gregor to do a story and continuity for an advertised title, 'Polly of the Movies.' Gregor wrote four stories, the last of which was sufficiently acceptable to prompt Mr. Goldberg to issue checks covering half payment of the price agreed upon for story and continuity. One of these checks was dishonored by the bank (Miss Todd had the same experience), but later made good.

"Then Goldberg quarrelled with Gregor and took legal action to force Gregor to return the money he had received, attaching money due Gregor at another studio and attaching Gregor's bank account.

"The net result of Gregor's employment is that Goldberg had four stories and a script, made a picture based on one of the stories, paid half the price agreed upon and forced Gregor to spend money for legal aid to keep the other half. Goldberg also claimed, as due him for this money—after demanding that Gregor return it—another story written by Gregor and sold to one of the larger studios. This claim was withdrawn by Goldberg when the studio refused to attach any importance to it. Goldberg has also annoyed Gregor in other ways.

"Jean Plannette and George Dromgold, as a team, agreed to write, scenarize and title a production for Goldberg, payments to be made on account as the work progressed to stated degrees of completion. They delivered an accepted story and script and received their money, partly in checks dishonored and later made good, up to a final $100 claimed by Dromgold. Goldberg now refuses to pay this $100, and has informed Dromgold that his attorney is under instructions to proceed legally against Dromgold for the return of the money he has already received.

"It is obvious that these writers have profited more in experience than in cash as a result of their employment by Jesse J. Goldberg."

F. R. JONES' COMEDIES

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

F. Richard Jones, formerly supervisor of the Hal Roach comedies and later director of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho," is negotiating with Pathe to produce two-reel and feature comedies, to replace the contract held by Mack Sennett.

IN BETWEEN FINDS HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS 50% UNDER NORMAL

5,000 Studio Employes Idle—Preparing for New Programs—How Producers Are Now Working —Fox Is Busiest, but Still at Two-Thirds Normal

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

While preparing for the '28-'29 program of production, coast studios are working 50 per cent below normal, with approximately 5,000 regular studio employees idle.

United Artists, two companies working where four is normal.

M-G-M, two with six normal.

First National, six with eight normal.

Pathe-DeMille, five against eight normal.

Warner, dark since New Year's, one company making Vitaphone records, as against five feature companies normally.

Universal is making a grandstand play to clean up all productions in preparation and working eight companies, against the same number normally.

Hal Roach, anticipating to close two months ahead of its annual vacation, working to capacity with three short comedy companies.

FBO, two companies actually shooting, against six normally.

Fox, considered the busiest studio on the coast at this time, working eight features and three comedies, against a total of twelve, normal.

Metropolitan, rental studio when Pathe can spare it, two companies working, with facilities for six.

Christie working to capacity with two companies, hoping to complete its Paramount '27-'28 program in time to close the studio at the usual vacation time.

Tiffany-Stahl, two companies working, with facilities and aim for a normal condition of six.

Educational, preparing to clean up on last year's product, with but two companies working where five is normal.

Paramount, four companies working, with facilities for eight normal.

Aside from the leasing studios, including Tec-Art, California and Poverty Row, there is very little doing in production.

Critic's Xmas Gross Gone

A New York evening tabloid film reviewer (femme) lost an exceptionally large haul of Xmas graft through an attempted display of importance. The girl film scribe, who also does some radio work for the tab, got an exceptionally large gross from both sources. She decided to pile it all into a taxicab and make a cruise to Broadway for the purpose, in turn, of dropping off a little token to the girls connected with the Broadway picture houses.

The first stop-off, at the Capitol, to see Bessie Mack, the revieweress took her little bundle with her into the theatre building, leaving the cab waiting for her with its tonneau full of the gross.

When she came down to the street again, taxi, Xmas presents and all were gone. And not traced to date.

CHRISTIE'S 42 COMEDIES FOR PAR NEXT SEASON

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Charles Christie, business head of Christie Studios, leaves for New York Feb. 15 to confer with Paramount officials on the schedule of Christie comedies for next season. Christie produced 36 two-reel comedies for Par. distribution this season, and will probably increase this number to 42 for next season, making six additional comedies to take the place of the Edward Horton series of six made by the Harold Lloyd organization last summer.

The Christie contract for Paramount distribution covers three years and also provides for Christie to produce one special feature comedy each year. "Tillie's Punctured Romance" is the season's special, with nothing definite set for next season's feature.

WARNERS' NEW OFFICE

General Offices Shortly Moving to West 45th Street in New Building

Without announcement, Warner Brothers have erected a building on West 45th street, next door to the Martin Beck theatre, just west of 8th avenue, for their general offices.

Removal will occur the later part of this month.

The building is of six or seven stories, with some space rentable to outsiders.

STANLEY CO. CHANGES

some of the Stanley crowd thought Boyd should give First National far the best of it on picture purchases. Boyd declared to the contrary, saying he was buying of Paramount as needed and at a fair price. Besides which Boyd pointed out that Adolph Zukor had been generous in advancing money to Stanley when the latter needed it, and all of that money had not yet been repaid.

That subject grew so serious from accounts, that Zukor and John McGuirk were drawn into it. McGuirk is said to have stated he was powerless in his position as president of the Stanley company, through the authority of the executive council prevailing.

Boyd, looked upon as one of the best film buyers in the country, is reported to have tendered his resignation or threatened to. From accounts, if he did so, it was tabled. It is said Boyd, very wealthy and the owner of much real estate with considerable in the Times Square section, received several offers from large chains when the Stanley fuss became known.

Warners' Studio Fire Loss of $100,000 Insured

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Estimated damage amounting to $100,000 was done to Warner Brothers studio when a blaze started on one of the stages, setting fire to a whole block of sets. Loss is covered by insurance.

The fire is believed to have been from the sparks of a trash burner on an adjacent lot. The fire department soon had it under control with a few firemen and studio employees slightly injured by falling timbers.

Film laboratories containing valuable products escaped injury through efforts of studio employees, who immediately poured water over the roofs of the building.

As the studio had been closed for three weeks no financial production loss was incurred.

Par. Starting 5

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

With 52 features to be made this year Paramount will start five productions within the next 10 days.

Stories in preparation are "She Wouldn't Say No," featuring Bebe Daniels, to be directed by Clarence Badger; "Ladies of the Mob," featuring Clara Bow, with William Wellman directing; "When Romance Rides," Zane Grey western directed by John Waters; "Three Sinners," featuring Pola Negri, with Rowland V. Lee directing, and "Easy Come, Easy Go," featuring Richard Dix with Frank Tuttle directing.

F. N. Heads West

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Clifford E. Hawley, president of First National, with R. A. Rowland and Jerome Beatty will reach the coast in February to confer with Watterson Rothacker and Al Rockett, First National studio heads.

It will be on the layout of next season's program.

EXTRAS' HIGH DAILY AVERAGE IN '27, $8.59; 330,397 PLACEMENTS FOR 35,000

Twice as Many Women Registered With Central Casting Agency in Hollywood as Men, but Twice as Many Jobs for Men as Women—David Allen, Mental Wonder, in Charge of Agency—Only Two Complaints Last Year on Miscasting—More Colored People in Demand

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers who obtain their extra talent through the Central Casting Corporation paid a total of $2,838,136 for the services of men, women and children, given 330,397 jobs during 1927. Of this amount $1,453,036 was disbursed between July 1 and Dec. 31.

As the people were paid for overtime the average daily wage earned during the year was $8.59. For the first six months the daily earnings averaged $8.18 and likewise for the last six months without the overtime allowances. The daily wage paid ran from $3 to $25, according to the work required.

In the casting office are three times the number of women registered for employment over men, while there were twice as many jobs for the men during the year as for the women.

This office has been operated for two years under the general management of Dave Allen. Prior to taking the position he operated the biggest casting employment agency for extras on the Coast. Though there are some 35,000 people registered for employment with the Central office, Allen appears to be personally acquainted with about 90 per cent. of them. This is brought out through the fact that only two complaints were made by directors that they had not gotten the exact types called for. In both instances a check up made by Fred W. Beetson, president of the Central Casting Corporation, revealed that the people complained about by the directors had been on a studio request list, and though the Central office knew that they were not the exact types desired, simply followed instruction.

Allen's retentive memory has proven a great time as well as money saver as the Central office during the year expended an average of 32 cents a head in the placement of adults, and 55 cents with children. The latter represented only four per cent. of the placements on the year. The State of California which operates its only free employment bureau during the same year with an organization that has been intact for nine years expended an average of 46 cents a person in securing jobs.

The expense of placing people in positions is borne by the members of the Producers' Association who pay 5 five per cent. of the total daily wage received by the actor for this work. This money is independent of the actor's pay as the latter receives the net amount he is engaged for. It actually cost the producers $141,906 during the year to operate the Central office. In the past the actors were compelled to pay agents from 7½ to 10 per cent. of their salary for securing employment.

During the year there were 220,345 jobs for men with 103,015 of these placements paying $7.50 a day. Though one would expect there would be an abundance of people used at $3 a day, only 2,429 placements of men were made at this figure. For the $5 paycheck 37,078 men signed, while 59,793 got work at $10 a day, most of them wearing dress clothes, and 8,353 found $12.50 checks awaiting them at the end of the day for being in the better dressed class or playing bits.

In the $15 division almost 500 more found employment for bits with actually 8,816 drawing this sized check while 862 men found employment doing small parts for sums ranging over $15, and not exceeding $25 a day.

In the women's division 44.74 per cent. of the placements or 43,800 were given employment at the $7.50 per diem rate. Ten dollar checks were drawn by 31,004, while 865 got $3 slips, and 16,595 drew $5 checks. Only one-fourth of the amount of work was given women at the $12.50 and $15 rates as was given men. For the former figure 2,086 worked and at the latter 2,976. Between $15 and $25 daily employment was given to 221 females.

$5 Daily for Kids

There were 7,070 days' work for boys and 5,074 for girls. Almost 54 per cent. of the jobs given the boys were at the $5 rate, while nearly 61 per cent. of that given girls was at the same rate. A total of $46,428 was paid out to boys working in pictures and $31,755 to girls during the year.

Besides paying these kiddies salary the studios had extra expense. They all maintain school rooms and teachers for the youngsters while the latter are on the lots. This item alone runs the studios better than $50,000 a year, which signifies that the kids per capita cost more to employ than the adults.

On the year a total of $1,823,205 was paid to the men employed, while the women drew an aggregate of $801,747.50.

Not Steady

That figure alone might lead people to believe that work was steady for these people all around. Only 55 women averaged two and one-half days or more a week during the 52 weeks of the year. Also but 12 women of this number hit the two and one-half average; 23 the three-day-a-week average; 13 three-and-one-half days a week; five, four days; one, four and one-half days, and one, five days a week on the year.

Extensive and Expensive Clothes

Eighty-four per cent. of those to find this amount of employment are listed in the casting office as dress women, who have an extensive as well as expensive wardrobe.

In the male division a total of 135 averaged three days or more a week during the year. In figuring out the way they worked, 74 worked three days each week during the year; 40 got three and one-half days; 13, four days, and four, four and one-half days, with the same number getting five days each week. Of this number 65 per cent. are classified in the dress group.

Of the placements made 23,763 were given to veterans of the World War with the total wages to this group amounting to $158,499.

As many extras are always changing their phone numbers or home addresses it is the duty of the phone operators in the central office to list these changes. During the year 4,943 changed numbers one, two, or three times.

The phone in the casting office is used exclusively for placing the people in employment. There is no waiting line in the office each night or morning. The people phone in twice a day and ask if there is anything for them. If there is and they have not called, the central office calls them. The average daily calls made during the year by the central office notifying people of jobs were 493, while 803 made calls each day during the busiest hours to inquire whether there was work for them.

CAREWE EAST FOR STORIES

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Edwin Carewe, U. A. producer-director, is en route to New York to complete negotiations for the purchase of four stories to star Dolores Del Rio during the current year. He will remain east about six weeks.

N. Y.'s Last Caster

J. Francis O'Reilley, the last of the picture casting agents, formerly numerous around the Square, has converted his offices into a dancing school.

O'Reilley teaches the fandango to children's classes.

HERCULES' 4 SPECIALS

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Its first is "The Little Wild Girl," from the story by Putnam Hoover with a cast including Lila Lee, Cullen Landis, Frank Merrill, Sheldon Lewis and Jimmy Aubrey.

Others are "Shadows of the Night," from a story by Shelley Carpenter; "Sally o' the South Seas," Hawaiian story by Gordon Romoly, and "Broken Hearts," from a story by Louella Sorrel, who is said to be a newspaper woman on the coast using a nom de plume.

Writers for T-S' 5

Los Angeles, Jan. 1.

Raymond L. Schrock is supervising story development for five pictures to be put in production by Tiffany-Stahl during the next six weeks.

John F. Natteford is writing continuity for "Dellarosa," which Arthur Gregor will direct. Phil Lonegan is preparing "Green Grass Widows"; Harry Ditmar has adaptation and continuity assignment for the next Jack London story; Ben G. Kohn is making story treatment for "Ladies of the Night Club"; and Ethel Jamieson is writing the story for "Lingerie."

Pathe Losing 3 Directors

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Three directors, according to reports, are going to leave Pathe-DeMille shortly upon the expiration of their contracts.

They are Paul Sloane, William K. Howard, and Rupert Julian. The latter and Eric von Stroheim until last week were negotiating to return to Universal, but as that studio will close in a few more weeks for at least a six-weeks period, all negotiations were called off until the studio is again in operation.

Par Directors' Jobs

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

New assignments at Paramount include Frank Tuttle to direct Richard Dix in "Easy Come, Easy Go"; Gregory La Cava to direct the next Esther Ralston picture; Harry D'Arrast to direct Florence Vidor in "The Paris Buyer"; Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton will appear in "Great Guns" with Frank Strayer at the megaphone.

Tuttle will also direct Clara Bow in "Private Pettigrew's Girl."

TIFFANY'S COLORS ON COAST

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Tiffany Color Classics started its first production on the coast with Hans Reinhardt directing. It will be known as "Souvenirs" and has Anna May Wong, Joyzelle Joyner, Esther Garcia and Harold Miller in the cast.

These subjects were formerly made in New York for Tiffany-Stahl release.

S-F 5,000-SEATER IN N. J.

In the present building plan of the new Journal Square theatre in Journal Square, Jersey City, by the Stanley-Fabian Corp.'s chain of 65 in New Jersey, the S.-F. interests are going in stronger for the larger seating capacity as evidenced by the J. S. seating 5,000.

"Katy O'Doone" for Vera Reynolds

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Pathe-De Mille is preparing "The Heart of Katy O'Doone" for Vera Reynolds.

Tay Garnet is writing the story.

Syracuse House Goes Presentation

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 31.

Loew's new picture house opens here Feb. 18 with a Loew-Publix stage unit, 'Fan Flirts.'

Incandescent Lighting for Films Now Demonstrating

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Demonstrations of incandescent lighting applicable to pictures are being conducted twice weekly at Warner studios under auspices of the academy, under the direction of the Technicians' branch, in cooperation with the Society of Cinematographers and the Producers' association.

Cameramen skilled in the use of mazda lights for film work are in charge of the demonstrations, open to all cameramen, laboratory workers, art directors and technicians. The Warner studios are being used as little production is now going on at that plant.

The first night of demonstrations found nearly 150 present, with the following nights getting attendances of over 200. The experiments are creating widespread interest among cameramen and others.

The final week of demonstrations will take place week of April 2, prior to the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers which will be held this year on the coast.

CONSIDINE'S 5-YR. CONTRACT

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

John W. Considine has signed a five-year contract with United Artists to function as general manager of their Art Cinema productions.

SENNETT'S SHUT DOWN COSTS 300 JOBS

Everybody Out but 2 Actors and Writer—$400,000 Tied Up in Feature

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Mack Sennett has practically stopped making pictures for some time to come. He has rid himself of his entire executive, acting, directorial and technical organization with three exceptions: Johnny Burke, Sally Eilers, players, and a writer.

Sennett, it is said, besides losing his Pathe releasing contract has around $400,000 invested in a feature length picture, "The Goodbye Kiss," for which he has not as yet made releasing arrangements.

John A. Waldron, Sennett vice-president and general manager, is said to be prepared to leave the company until Sennett requires his services, as is Lee Huganin, business manager for the producer.

About 300 people came off the payroll when Sennett decided to shut down.

PARAMOUNT'S '28-'29 PROGRAM OF 70 PICTURES—20 SPECIALS

Stories 85% Selected—Largest Number of Specials Ever Listed by Par.—Jesse L. Lasky in New York—Sales Conventions End of April

For the new season Paramount has settled upon a total of 70 full-length picture productions. Of these, 20 will be in the special class, the largest number of specials ever contemplated by that organization.

Jesse L. Lasky, now in New York, stated that of the total of 70, about 85 per cent had been settled upon, in the story way. He will leave for the coast in the course of 10 days.

Lasky does not expect to again come east until the Paramount sales conventions toward the latter end of April, next. These will take place, as customary, in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

FBO's 3d Vice on Lot

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

With Charles E. Sullivan elected vice-president of FBO at a meeting held in New York, that organization now has three vice-presidents in its coast studio. Others are William LeBaron and Edwin C. King.

Sullivan in the past was studio contact man for the New York office. In the future he will function as business manager on the lot, work which King formerly performed.

King is to be in charge of the physical and technical production, while LeBaron will be in charge of production, handling of directors and writers and passing on stories. The latter returned here from New York this week.

Need Stories for Team

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

M-G-M has not yet decided whether they will re-sign Aileen Pringle for a new series which would team her with Lew Cody. The company offered a contract calling for $1,000 weekly for 20 weeks out of 28, with continuance beyond a week to week basis and two weeks' notice to be given her at any time the company wishes to discontinue.

Miss Pringle is said to have accepted the proposition, with the company holding the deal in abeyance until certain that the team of Cody and Pringle can be supplied with suitable stories.

PATHE PROGRAM CONFERENCE

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

William Sistrom, manager for De Mille-Pathe studios, is en route to New York for a two-day conference with J. J. Murdock and John C. Flynn on outline of next year's production. The program was compiled at a studio conference between De Mille, Sistrom, Elmer Pearson and Flinn, but the latter had to leave before completed.

ANOTHER VITA SKETCH

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

It is "Sunny California," co-written by Hugh Herbert and Murray Roth.

German Director Leaves Fox for Paramount

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Ludwig Berger, German director brought to this country by Fox, has resigned, without making a picture. He goes to Paramount to work on "Koncert," by Herman Behr.

If Berger develops the picture version to pass inspection by Paramount officials, he will be given a contract to direct, with Emil Jannings starred in the film.

Pathe's New Program

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Elmer Pearson will remain on the coast until the end of February, completing the line up of next season's releases for Pathe De Mille.

Pearson is laying out the program with Cecil De Mille and other studio officials.

Both Leatrice Joy and Vera Reynolds, under contract to Pathe-De Mille, have a number of months to go before the option periods arrive on their contracts.

Each player will make at least one picture for the company before the options come up for consideration.

LAURA'S "HUSBAND HUNT"

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

"One Rainy Night," one of the stories involved in the Laura Jensen-Maxine Alloo writer-agent legal controversy, will not be filmed by Universal as Laura La Plante's next.

Instead, "The Husband Hunt," original by Harry O. Hoyt, will be made by the star when she returns from a vacation to Honolulu.

Wesley Ruggles will direct.

RUMORED DIFFERENCES ON PRODUCTION MAY SPLIT PATHE-DE MILLE FROM K-A

J. J. Murdock, for K-A, Reported Insistent Film Affiliations Turn Out Lower Cost Product of Better Quality Than at Present—Hot Conferences Going On—Bankers Called Attention to Production Appropriation and Its Use

Heated conferences have been held between Keith-Albee and Pathe-P. D. C. executives. A split may result with K-A throwing its picture affiliations overboard.

Banking interests whom the Albee group influenced to finance Pathe are protesting as but half the pictures required have been made on the money appropriation mapped out for Pathe production activities at the beginning of the season. If the program is to be completed the bankers will have to produce more funds, it is said.

In addition the K-A executives have evidently heard from the bankers whom they interested in Pathe to the effect that they have learned the money spent in production is not recoverable on sales on account of quality and limited outlet, these complaints being passed on to Pathe by K-A.

While Keith-Albee cannot be held legally for the money advanced to Pathe, the former feels partially responsible on account of influencing the financing of the Pathe-P. D. C. affiliation.

The Keith-Albee people are not satisfied, it is said, with the type of picture production turned out by Pathe this season, feeling the difference in receipts in Keith-Albee houses where Pathe pictures have been shown.

De Mille's Position

Difficulties between Keith-Albee officials and Cecil B. De Mille have been current for some time past. With De Mille in a position where he is not obliged to accept orders from Keith-Albee these difficulties have continued up to the present without change in conditions.

It is reported K-A had an official working with De Mille, who was dismissed for trying to show De Mille how to make pictures.

During the conferences held in the past week it has been proposed that a representative of the K-A and banking interests be appointed to advise De Mille on type of picture wanted and to hold down costs, this executive to be paid by Pathe and kept independent of De Mille for salary and position.

It is doubtful whether De Mille will accept the plan. Several Pathe men are being considered for the precarious job.

Murdock's Stand

On the K-A side the chief stickler for low cost productions of a quality to at least draw back their production investments through theatre circulation is John J. Murdock. Though Murdock is president of Pathe, his show interests are mainly with K-A.

It is said Murdock accepted the Pathe presidential post with the understanding all Pathe-P. D. C.-De Mille product would be made at a reasonable cost, not to exceed its possible circulation's gross.

This has not been done, from accounts, through Pathe's limited area for feature films, with Murdock reported continuously remonstrating, to the effect he would prefer to vacate the presidency of Pathe, rather than to be continually at odds with its production division.

Other than the banking connections, neither K-A nor E. F. Albee or Murdock, K-A's principal executives, has any actual money investment of their own in any of the three combined picture concerns.

Salesmen's Officers

New York Film Salesmen (ass'n.) has chosen for the ensuing year: president, G. W. Wolf (Fox); first vice, Gus Soloman (F. N.); 2d vice, Matthew Cahan; treasurer, Saul Fraunce (Hollywood); recording sec., M. H. Markowitz (Hollywood); financial sec., B. Rappaport (Tiffany); historian, Jack Goldstein (Commonwealth); sergt-at-arms, Jules J. Jasper (Educational); trustees—Frank Walsh (Fox), Sol Raile (Educ.), J. Beard, Joe Weinberg (Big U), Joe Felder (Pathe), Richard Gledhill (Fox), Jack Ellis (FBO), L. V. Seider (Pathe), Bernard Scholtz and Sealy).

Home Office Slogan

An ex-manager of a chain theatre says the home office idea is:

Good business, good show.
Bad business, bad manager.

FOXES 5,000-SEATER IN ATLANTA'S MOSQUE

Atlanta, Jan. 31.

A new mosque to serve as headquarters for Yaarab temple of the A. A. O. N. M. S., including as its principal feature a theatre-auditorium, seating 5,000, leased for 21 years by Fox, is to be erected at Peachtree and Kimball streets, in the center of fashionable Atlanta.

The development, exclusive of the amount paid for the lot, will cost $2,000,000 and the auditorium-theatre will be the sweetest thing of its kind in the south.

The policy of the new theatre will include Fox pictures with the matter of stage fare unsettled.

With Atlanta overseated, the boys are trying to figure what a cut the new theatre will take out of the patronage of the downtown houses. The new theatre is on the edge of the fashionable northside residential district and is only a few blocks from the Erlanger theatre.

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

An $11,000,000 picture theatre seating 5,000 is to be erected on the southwest corner of 17th and Market streets by Fox.

The transaction has involved the acquisition by the Fox interests of one of the largest sites ever assembled for such a purpose, including a frontage of 248 feet on Market street and a depth of 176 feet on 17th, extending to Ludlow street.

Denny's English-Mades

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

During the shutdown at Universal City for February and March, Reginald Denny will go to London to make two pictures for British National.

Universal will release the pictures in America.

GERMAN TRIP OFF

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Ernest and Edward Laemmle and Willie Wyler, Universal directors, who were to have left this week for New York to sail for Germany, are not going.

It is likely that German directors will turn out the necessary pictures to conform with the German quota.

CHANEY IN "KONGO"

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

M-G-M purchased the screen rights for "Kongo," stage play, and will make a picture from it with Lon Chaney starred.

Carewe's Crew's Return

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Edwin Carewe, United Artists producer; Lew Jerome, business manager, and Harry D. Wilson, press agent, will return from New York March 5, at which date production on "The Bear Tamer's Daughter" starring Dolores Del Rio, will begin.

Lang Back With Columbia

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Walter Lang, director, returns to Columbia to make a picture.

Lang is under a term contract to Columbia. He was loaned to James Cruze to direct two pictures for Pathe-De Mille release.

Fight Film, Ohio-Made, Is Finally Passed

Chicago, Jan. 31.

After prolonged legal controversy, showing of the Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures finally has been permitted in Ohio.

John L. Clinton, state censor, had refused to review the films on the grounds of illegal transportation. The Midwest Film Exchange secured a mandamus and forced Clinton to review the picture, proving the print in question had been made in Ohio. The film was passed.

Leatrice Joy's Change

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

On the expiration of her contract with De Mille March 1, Leatrice Joy, Pathe star, will sign with Inspiration for one picture to be released through United Artists in England.

The story, by Finis Fox, has been written. Fox will also direct production, which is scheduled to start in London early in June.

JIMMY STARR AS ADVISOR

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Jimmy Starr, who was known as the official lot jester for Warner Bros., where he wrote titles in his spare moments, is now functioning as a gag man at First National.

The balance of the time he is writing a series of articles in the Los Angeles "Record" telling producers why they are right and wrong.

NILS ASTHER'S BASE CHANGE

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

M-G-M has purchased the unexpired portion of United Artists' contract with Nils Asther.

He plays the lead in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," for M-G-M.

UFA EXCHANGES IN EASTERN SECTION

The Brilliant Film Corp. has been formed to distribute UFA films in the entire eastern district, headed by David Brill, for the past year manager of the Tiffany Exchange at 729 7th avenue, New York. Brill severed connections with the Tiffany offices Jan. 28.

The new distributive channel for UFA has a contract signed by Brill for five years. The contract also includes 26 short subjects.

It is the agreed plan of Brill, with Wynne Jones, New York representative of UFA, assenting, to establish exchanges in various cities.

Joseph Stock has been named treasurer of the new distributing organization.

Buenos Aires Studio

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Hollywood Argentine Film Company, which will produce Tom Mix pictures in South America, have signed Edward Langley as art director. Langley was with Douglas Fairbanks in the same capacity for eight years.

Under his contract with the South American company Langley will supervise construction of a studio to be built in Buenos Aires, and will leave New York with the first group to go south Feb. 18.

McCarthy on M-G-M Lot

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

John P. McCarthy is back on the M-G-M lot to direct the picture originally called "Women Love Diamonds." A picture was made and released under that title last year.

McCarthy and M-G-M temporarily parted company when the director declined to play second fiddle to Robert Flaherty, who was sent to the South Seas to make a picture.

JUNE COLLYER'S STATUS

June Collyer was mentioned in Variety's issue of Jan. 25 as an M-G-M player.

She is with Fox and one of this year's crops of Wampas baby stars.

EXHIBITORS OPPOSED BEFORE TRIAL BOARD

Matter of Protection on 'Glory' in Brooklyn—Fox Let Out as Defendant

William Morrow, operating the Heights theatre (Borough Hall) Brooklyn, N. Y., brought suit against Fox before the joint arbitration committee from the T. O. C. C. and New York Film Board of Trade, for alleged violation in protection of "What Price Glory?"

Fox, represented by Louis Nizer, attorney, joined A. S. Goldberg, attorney-exhibitor, owner of the Gold and Borough Hall theatres as a co-defendant, claiming Goldberg was responsible for any breach proven against Fox.

Upon Nizer's statement to the board of the facts and Goldberg's assent, Fox was let out of the case.

This made Goldberg the direct defendant and the hearing continued. After arguments the board found in favor of the plaintiff and awarded Morrow $250 damages for one picture. This means that Goldberg will be held responsible for all other films played by him (Goldberg) ahead of Morrow.

The suit was treated as the action of one exhibitor against another, Goldberg represented himself and Theodore Cooper looked after Morrow's interests.

Goldberg's defense was that, according to a booking arrangement between Morrow and himself, Goldberg was permitted to play the picture ahead of Morrow, despite the contract.

Morrow argued that the booking arrangement had been ended by Goldberg and he had no right to play "Glory" ahead of him.

Rudnick's Case Dismissed

An application for an injunction against Paramount brought by M. Rudnick (Rudy Corporation), heard by the joint arbitration committee of the T. O. C. C. and the New York Film Board of trade, was denied by the board.

Exhibitor Rudnick, by his attorney, Harry Sehuman, claimed that he had bought protection for his Myrtle theatre over the Parthenon at Myrtle and Woodbine streets, Brooklyn, and that Paramount was serving Keith's Madison ahead of him.

The defense declared Keith's Madison was farther away than the Parthenon and could not be included in the protection.

Ingram's All-English Film

Louis Blattner, of International Production, has engaged Rex Ingram to direct a picture for United Artists release. It will be made in England with an all-English company, starring Alice Terry.

Ingram has not chosen the story as yet.

RALPH INCE'S DOUBLE WORK

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

"Notices," an original by Viola Brothers Shore, will be Ralph Ince's next for F. B. O.

Production starts Feb. 15.

MONTA BELL ASSIGNED

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Monta Bell, M-G-M director, returned from Europe, has been assigned to direct "Dark Fires," original by Dorothy Farnum.

Hunt Stromberg supervising.

Gordon Cooper, Pathe Director

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Pathe-De Mille has Gordon Cooper as director on a term contract.

Von Sternberg's Police Story

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Joseph von Sternberg will direct George Bancroft and Evelyn Brent in a story of the New York police written by Oliver P. Garrett, former New York "World" reporter.

Jules Furthman is writing the screen adaptation.

M. G. Cohen Elevated

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Marvin G. Cohen has been promoted from film editor to head of the cutting and editing department of Tiffany-Stahl productions.

CHICAGO'S HEAVY BREADLINE TELLS OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Since December the Salvation Army has had a breadline in Chicago ranging from 200 to 600 persons daily.

Statistics compiled by the Illinois Department of Labor show the present number of unemployed is greater that at any time since 1922.

The horde of 'boes and panhandlers infesting the Loop makes New York's Times Square parasites seem like a coterie of philanthropists in comparison. Loop workers remark that they are being nicked for more "coffee money" than they have been in years.

An unusual angle of the unemployment situation this year was disclosed by Sidney W. Wilcox, chief of the Illinois Bureau of Labor Statistics. Wilcox stated the breadline was exceptionally small in comparison to the number of jobless, as quite a percentage of the latter are of the class who subsist with the aid of relatives and friends during tough periods, indicating the jobless are of a higher type than ordinarily. Such a condition usually makes itself felt in show business a few months after it has been in existence.

So far show business has not been affected by the employment slump, with the poor showing of legit theatres attributed to the town's picture house inclinations, and high B. O. top.

Because of sound financial qualities, it is believed by authorities here the unemployment wave will be relieved considerably this year.

Boston, Jan. 31.

Theatre owners in textile cities of New England are watching carefully the outcome of the numerous wage cuts, averaging 10 percent. Indications point to contests in some of the cities. Many thousands of mill operatives are affected.

LOCAL NEWSREEL SHOTS

Hand cameras are being supplied for the convenience of all Universal theatres for the purpose of getting local or neighborhood items, to add to the weekly newsreel.

Roach May Take 30 Day Rest in April

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Hal Roach's studios may close in April for the annual 30-day vacation, instead of July as in former years.

The closing will take place earlier than previously as Roach will be finished with this season's product by that time.

Employees at Roach get half pay during the four-week vacation.

Paramount Dull in Feb.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Paramount will not have more than two productions in work during February. Starting on next season's program around March 1, about 10 companies will be shooting at that time.

ASS'T DIRECTOR ACTING

George Ellis, assistant director with C. B. De Mille on "The Godless Girl," was selected by De Mille to play a part in the picture and relieved of his assisting duties.

Sedgwick's Year's Contract

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Edward Sedgwick, M-G-M director, whose contract expires with his next picture, Buster Keaton comedy, has been signed for another year.

LEGISLATIVE OPINIONS NOT UNIFORM ON BROOKHART BILL

Washington, Jan. 31.

At the request of the independent New York exhibitors, Emanuel Celler, Democratic Congressman from the 10th New York district, has introduced the Brookhart bill, in its entirety, in the House.

In a statement issued by the Congressman he says that though he realizes that "portions of the bill may be harsh and involve Congress in matters concerning which it should have no jurisdiction," that he is, nevertheless, introducing the measure if for no other purpose than to renew discussion "concerning the unfair trade practices and monopolistic tendencies of film producers."

Mr. Celler feels that the only hope for the independent exhibitor is Congressional intervention and that unless the producers "clean house" he proposes "to place them under a reasonable and constructive accountability to governmental agencies."

That the Brookhart-Canon, and now Celler, bill is creating interest in both the Senate and House is becoming more outwardly evident as the promised hearings, scheduled by Senator Watson, chairman of the Senate interstate commerce committee, draws near.

Also that its importance is growing is further evidenced in the fact that another legislative worker has been added to the Hays office here.

Leaders Won't Talk

Actually Congress is in a predicament over the bill, at least the leaders of both parties indicate that in refusing to permit themselves to be quoted on the proposal.

Attitude of many is disclosed, after questioned by a Variety reporter, that they are opposed to regulating block booking on principle. In other words, as a Senator put it, "If we start it where will it end?"

Farm bloc of both Houses draws the simile between block booking and selling their steers "blind." They put the lean animals in with the fat—and that's their attitude, as expressed.

Cotton growers from the South make the same comparisons—they bale the low grade cotton right along with the better and sell it that way.

"The Little Fellow"

One Senator said that "the little fellow" has got to be protected in every business. He cited the chain stores and their price cutting and adherence to specified and generally accepted "better lines" of goods. He carried this farther by adding that in the chain stores wholesalers will sell to the other dealers but that in the pictures they won't—and then he refused to be quoted.

Meanwhile the petitions continue to come in and Congress is learning more about the inside of the picture industry than it did in all of the hearings granted Canon Chase and his reformers urging Federal censorship during the last session.

Questions put to Senator Brookhart brought but one answer: "Everything is coming along splendidly."

It was added that within the next week or ten days a personal conference between the Senator and Col. William J. Donovan of the Department of Justice on the legal phases of the bill is due to take place.

Usually the department renders a written opinion when questioned on a bill by members of Congress and lets it go at that. This seems one of the rare instances when the department has asked for a personal conference with the Senator or Congressman sponsoring a measure.

PROVIDENCE HOUSE TOLD TO OBEY THE FIRE LAWS

Providence, Jan. 31.

Continental, movie house, has been notified by the police commissioners that unless orders from the Fire Commission are carried out, the house will be closed.

It is said fire drops are out of repair and one jammed with a screw driver so that it couldn't drop if there was a fire.

It was also charged that at times a man with a fireman's coat wearing tan shoes and other indications of a misfit uniform officiated instead of the fireman required by law.

Another indictment accused the Continental of allowing boys 16 and 17 years old to run the projecting machine instead of a licensed operator.

Louis Blumenthal, head of the Blumenthal-Harring circuit, New Jersey, has disposed of his seven theatres in Jersey City and Union City to the Stanley-Fabian Company.

Stanley-Fabian bought the houses outright. It is understood Blumenthal got his own price, including over $1,000,000 in cash.

Blumenthal is retained as general manager for Stanley-Fabian houses, the new 4,000-seater now being constructed also scheduled to come under his supervision.

Stanley-Fabian executives have been watching Blumenthal's method of operation for a considerable period and he may be given wider control in the affairs of the company following his work as county supervisor.

Kunsky Taking to The Neighborhoods

Detroit, Jan. 31.

Kunsky, heretofore confined principally to downtown operation, is showing an inclination to penetrate the distant neighborhood. Two Kunsky houses have opened in the last two months and another is set for February.

The three play straight pictures and are located in the suburbs for which they are named. Newest is the Redford. It seats about 2,000. The Birmingham has been running since November, while the Royal Oak, not yet completed, is shortly to open.

It is likely that one of the trio, probably the Redford, will try weekend vaude in the near future.

Acts at Ritzy Egyptian

Egyptian, ultra presentation theatre in the ritzy Cynwyd section of Philadelphia, which houses the haut monde of Quakertown, opened last week with the American Singers (radio) and Rosa Polnariow as the feature attractions. Art Gillham, radio and Columbia record artist, is in this week.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Upon completion of Corinne Griffith's first picture, since renewing with First National, Frank Lloyd will make "Lady Hamilton" as his first special for First National.

"The Ticket Chopper," Original

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Rod LaRocque will be starred in an original story by Kenneth Raisbeck. It's about the New York subway and is called "The Ticket Chopper."

Hector Turnbull will produce for DeMille.

Brook's Defers

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Clive Brook will not play opposite Pola Negri in "Three Sinners," her next for Paramount. He will not finish in the Billie Dove next film for First National in time.

"Western" Actor for 5 Years

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Ted Wells, Western picture actor, has signed a five-year contract to Universal, to be featured in Universal westerns.

TRANSPORTATION TO DOWNTOWN AND NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSES

New York's Residential Condition Alongside Chicago's—Chains Expected to Go Into Community Building—Motor Traffic the Puzzler

The matter of successful picture house palaces in the New York neighborhoods is again before the dopesters with the belief that it is a matter of time before Publix does what has been the case in Chicago, with the outlying theatres doing heavy business. Despite the argument that Chicago lacks what New York has, excellent transportation facilities such as the subway, the eastern metropolis' congestion is now being analyzed with the neighborhood angle in mind.

Motor traffic is a problem of years' standing, and the subways are no better attraction.

The success of the Brooklyn neighborhooders, theatres in Fordham and the Bronx, in Queens and Jamaica, of varying policies from vaude to legit, including pictures, has given rise to a belief it is a matter of a short time until the chains go in for presentation theatres in the residential neighborhoods.

"Suppress Agents"

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Press agents on the coast are now called Suppress Agents by members of the fourth estate.

They are charged with utilizing more effort to suppress news than to express it.

PUBLIX UNITS AT CAPITOL, NEW YORK

Capitol, New York, which opens with a Publix unit policy Feb. 11, will only have that program idea in force for eight weeks, until eight additional units are produced to fill in the additional time on the Publix circuit. The Loew house additions have created 27 weeks as against the original 19.

Frank Cambria's first unit production, and not Boris Petroff, as reported, will have 12 Foster girls, 3 Le Grohs, Eddie Hill and his wife, in addition to Walt Roesner and the Capitolians, band.

VITA SHIFTS ORCHESTRA

Omaha, Jan. 31.

When the Rialto opened with Vitaphone, last week, the entire orchestra was sent to the Riviera, giving the latter house 26 pit musicians.

This will continue whenever the Rialto has a Vita feature until expiration of the musicians' contract, Sept. 1.

The union has battled out good contracts in all down-town houses and in all neighborhoods but three, for both organists and orchestra players.

Receiver Sells Lease

Waterloo, Ia., Jan. 31.

Lease and equipment of the Isis, Cedar Rapids, one of the five houses of the Frank Amusement chain, recently closed, has been sold by Herbert Parker, receiver, to Lannan Buechel of Omaha, for $9,500. Buyer assumed $500 indebtedness against the house.

Other houses of the chain, which has gone into bankruptcy, will be sold also, Parker has indicated.

PETTIJOHN AND WOODHULL FAIL AS CONVINCERS WITH EXHIBS.

T. O. C. C. Meeting on Brookhart Bill—T. O. C. C. Suggestions for Changes in Standard Contract Mentioned by Suchman

Answering claims voiced by C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, and Pete Woodhull, alleged representative of independent exhib interests, Leo Brecher stated at the meeting called by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce last Thursday that unless the Brookhart bill was passed and enforced real government control of the motion picture industry would inevitably follow. He added that government regulation is not government control and read a telegram from Senator Brookhart stating that "the government will control only the evils that threaten the industry."

Though Pettijohn and Woodhull were given every opportunity and complete attention, neither proved anything except that the independents are right in almost all of their contentions and charges of unfair business practices.

Brecher partially absolved Will Hays when he said: "Hays has been generous in arranging numerous conferences and in frequent expressions of good will. But he has no authority in matters of real business."

In reply to Pettijohn's charge that the Brookhart bill would result in increased film rentals from 15 to 300 per cent, Brecher explained that the bill does not make buying of pictures in block an offense and that small theatre owners, whom Pettijohn seemed worried over, would be able to buy in block if they so desired. The measure would merely serve to stop producers from forcing exhibitors to buy in block against their own interests.

Pettijohn Agrees

Brecher pointed out, also, that under present conditions some exhibitors are not able to buy any good pictures at any price. He reminded Pettijohn that this charge had gone unanswered. Pettijohn replied that he, personally, agreed that Brecher had grounds for complaint along those lines.

Pettijohn's claim that 70 per cent of the theatre interests in the country, including chains affiliated with producers, was answered by Sydney S. Cohen, who stated that from replies he had received the great majority of independent exhibitors were in favor of the bill.

From the presence of Pettijohn, there on invitation, the gathering assumed the tone of a ballyhoo. Meetings of this kind, undertaken by local independent exhibitors for the express purpose of enlisting public support, have so far proven futile. Despite frantic, improperly organized attempts to gain its attention, the public has so far remained uninterested.

Harry Reichenbach, who was evidently also under the impression that the meeting was called partly as a bid for public sympathy, proposed that the exhibitors launch a systematic publicity campaign via 2,600 dailies, reaching 47,000,000 readers. If the exhibitors are aiming at public interest high pressure publicity would be the only means of properly getting the message across. Occasional meetings do not help much.

Proposals

Harry Suchman, one of the early speakers, announced that the T. O. C. C. had forwarded suggestions for changes in the standard contract to the committees in Chicago.

Among the proposals were included the following:

Exhibitors shall have the privilege of canceling road show pictures if kept too long before released generally.

Standard exhibition contract shall be deemed binding if signed by an employe of a distributor. The exhibitors do not feel they should assume responsibility for the acts of salesmen employed by distributors.

Any contract signed between an exhibitor and a distributor's representative shall be deemed binding and not a mere application for purchase.

Exhibitors shall have the option of refusing pictures in which stars, directors or stories have been changed.

Film destroyed in projection shall be paid for at actual laboratory costs instead of the arbitrary charge of 4 cents per foot.

Distributors shall be held responsible for delay in shipping films. The contract is between the exhibitor and the exchange. At present the procedure is switched so that one exhibitor is suing another who has been unable to make the shipment.

Play dates shall be rewritten and set down in plainer terms. Second and subsequent runs shall not be held up unnecessarily. Under present conditions a first run house may hold up a play dates for six months.

Protection period should be computed from last day instead of first since, in cases of 7-day protection, some exhibs are deprived of all protection. The contract should provide for specific dates and names.

In arbitration procedure the unit rule shall be imperative. No two exhibitors shall have the power to vote down a third, dissenting member. If one exhibitor disagrees the matter should be left to the seventh arbitrator.

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

Two feature films are included in a show running three hours offered at a 10c. admission by the Crystal theatre, 600-seat grind house in the lower Loop district.

The theatre is filled all day and night, but a large percentage of patrons do not remain throughout the entire show. It helps it to obtain a turnover. Fourth and fifth run pictures are used. Independently owned and operated, the house is said to be mopping up.

Engravers Demanding 40-Hour Week's Work

An ultimatum has been set before the boss engravers of the Photo Engravers' Board of Trade in New York by the Photo Engravers' Union, demanding a 40-hour working week. No demand in salary raise was made.

This would give the bosses of the association but a five-day working cek. They have been strongly holding out against the workers' demand.

The workmen claim that the night forces work but 40 hours weekly, through having Saturday and Sunday nights off. That is the basis of the demand for a similar working week by the day forces.

"JAZZ SINGER" AT POP SCALE

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

"The Jazz Singer," and its Vitaphone hookup, comes into the Fox here for two weeks starting next Monday, Feb. 6.

"WHIP WOMAN," $2.20 in G. V.

"The Whip Woman," First National's big feature dealing with a Hungarian romance, has been marked for general release Feb. 26. Two weeks prior to that date it will open in the Greenwich Village theatre, New York, at $2.20 top.

STANLEY'S 4 OF BLUMENTHAL

Stanley Co. and Herman Blumenthal of New Jersey closed Monday for the Central, Ritz and National, Jersey City, and Lincoln, Union City, Blumenthal houses.

They will be booked under Jack McKeon's direction from the Acme Booking (Stanley) offices in New York.

SUBURB THEATRELESS

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Wilmette, one of Chicago's more exclusive suburbs, is minus movies. Closing of the Village theatre deprives the district of its one and only cinema house.

The theatre, purchased by James Wray, of Wilmette, will be remodelled for commercial purposes.

EXHIBS CUTTING DOWN RENTALS CAUSED SENNETT TO QUIT SHORTS

Couldn't Meet Pathe's Demands for Lower Production Costs—Making Features and Specials Until "Short" Market Conditions Improve

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Mack Sennett's failure to meet Pathe's new terms for the '28-'29 program of short comedies is attributed to exhibiting conditions.

Exhibitors are demanding lower rentals for short comedies and in turn Pathe demanded reduction in production costs, which Sennett could not do with his present organization.

Sennett had been spending $30,000 on each subject with a lot of grief and small profit. When approached for lower negative cost he decided to quit shorts in favor of features and specials until exhibitors pay a price within reason for the two-reel comics.

Sennett's B'way House

Sennett and two other producers are negotiating for the lease of a New York Broadway theatre, where they will divide the time in three parts during the first year of the lease to afford them a first run. If the deal goes through Sennett will use his time for "The Goodbye Kiss," as this will decide whether the picture is good enough to road show.

Three comedies went into production at the Roach studios this week.

Ed Kennedy is directing the Stan Laurel-Babe Hardy picture with Otto Lederer and Jack V. Lloyd in cast. Robert McGowan is directing Our Gang with Charles King and Lillian Leighton in cast; Fred Guiol directing Charles Chase's next with Edna Marion, Eugene Pallette, William Orlamond, May Wallace, Otto Fries and Alfred Fischer in the cast.

Roach has completed four star comedies for M-G-M release: Charles Chase in "The Family Group," Max Davidson in "Came the Dawn," Stan Laurel and Babe Hardy in "Soup to Nuts" and Our Gang in "Barnum & Ringling, Inc."

Vita Back in Lafayette

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 31.

A settlement seems to have been arrived at in the suit for recovery brought by Vitaphone against the Lafayette theatre (indie). The adjustment, if any, includes the revival of Vita in the theatre, becoming a regular part of the weekly bill. Meanwhile the Great Lakes in the same city contracted for "The Jazz Singer" with Vita, and started it last week. That agreement was made while the Lafayette allowed the Vita equipment to loaf.

Vita's contract for the Vita service was for three years, and is understood to gross $90,000. That perhaps takes in equipment installation. At the time the suit was started about $3,000 had accrued in rentals.

$500,000 ESTATE

Davenport, Ia., Jan. 31.

Charles D. Rosenfield, president of the Rosenfield & Hopp Theatrical Co., Rock Island, who died more than a week ago, left an estate valued at $500,000, according to the will admitted to probate in Rock Island.

MILLION DOLLAR MOVIES

IF it is true that the play's the thing, it is also true that to a very great extent the players make the play. And any way you take it, Metro is there in both departments.

"HERB" CRUIKSHANK

"More stars than there are in Heaven" is, after all, no idle gesture on the part of M.-G.-M. And the fans are surely star-gazers. Exhibitors know that.

A million dollar movie might have everything in the production world save stars and be an awful flop. But when big stories and big names are moulded together into big pictures it looks like a box-office millenium.

From time to time a year has arrived that has truly been a Godsend to exhibitors. A year when the company with which the showman deals delivers hit after hit with the rapidity and precision of bullseye machine-gun fire.

For the boys who hold Metro contracts 1928 is going to be one of these things. It is difficult to imagine a greater line-up than is presented. It is hard to conceive of a better break for showmen than the opportunity offered by the M-G-M organization for lucrative screen decoration.

Just imagine! Here's a year in which it is possible to play "Ben-Hur," "The Big Parade," "The Student Prince," "Love" and "The Enemy" within a single year. The tremendous power of five million-dollar movies with which to jolt the competition into a permanently horizontal position.

Talk about hits! This batting order holds more box-office four-baggers than Babe and Lou combined. Next year will take care of itself. No one can prophesy what may transpire. But one thing is a cinch. This year is a Metro year. And a year when the wise showmen will be found right by the lion's cage enjoying a million-dollar season with million-dollar movies.

BRITISH FILM FIELD

By FRANK TILLEY

London, Jan. 20.

Lots of things happening around. Land boom being promoted at Elstree, for example. Where British International Pictures, Ltd., has its studio. When B. I. P. got in there they omitted to secure more land than they needed. Now they want more. So do other fellows. All sorts of schemes afoot to build, erect, construct.

Louis Blattner sells the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, to John Maxwell, head of British International. With the money he gets himself a bunch of options. On some 400 acres of land with some frontage right opposite the British International studios, and running a way back. Some good land and some not so good.

Gets Sir William Veno, of patent medicine fame, interested. Also Wilfred Ashley, minister for transport. And the Marquess of Queensberry at this writing is down Hampshire way with Ashley.

Going to build studios galore, hotels, picture house, bank, offices, 'neverything. Lots of people going to live there in the future when it comes to be a movie city.

So they say.

Whitehall Starts Studio

Whitehall Film Company really began its studio building last week. First National-Pathe will most likely have studios there after they get through hiring floor space from British International, as they have done for two films and are now shooting on one of them.

One of the coming new companies, Westminster Films, expects to build there. The Exhibitors' Circuit crowd, still flirting and more with the idea of going into production, are looking that-a-way also.

Others Pop Up

But while all this stampede is going on, other studios schemes keep popping up all over the place. Several attempts have been made to come to some sort of terms with Lord Waring for the Acton site, but so far no one has succeeded in getting his lordship to see eye to eye with them on the price. So they say. Probably his version would be none has seen eye to eye with him!

The derelict grounds which once held Earl's Court Exhibition have been sought after. J. D. Williams, then later First National-Pathe made approaches. But it is not a good studio location, despite its nearness to town, and terms are too high to make it a proposition.

Then someone has started to promote a studio scheme at Hove, near Brighton. Used to be a little studio at Shoreham, bungalow town where many vaude artists live, nearby. Too small to be of modern use. "Somewhere around Brighton" idea has intrigued many people in the past and there was the famous occasion just before the film bill was promoted when a Beddington Behrens told beautiful stories of studio plans and local council concessions and interviewed everybody in the business on his idea. But it died down, and Wardour street no longer echoes his tripping footsteps.

The Form Complex

This Cinematograph Films Act, 1927 (official title and description) has caused an outbreak of pink paper in all the Flicker Alley offices. Language to match.

They have to fill up a form, to register a British film, showing when the film was made, who made it, where the company was registered, who owns its stock, where the interiors were taken, what nationality the producer, the director and the chief artistes may be, where they live, how much they get, who pays them, why, how, and so on.

After that, there's another form, appropriately—and often—called "Form D," on which has to be stated the date, page and column on the newspaper in which the trade show has been announced within the 14 days demanded under the act as a condition of registration.

Most of the distributors and producers are so busy filling in forms they haven't time to make and sell film. And that's a fact.

Another feature of the bill's effect is the stampede for trade show dates. Until a film has been registered and trade shows (English for preview) it cannot be booked or offered for booking; legally, that is.

So all the American organizations, with their current stuff already block-booked ahead, are stuck for immediate business unless they have a regular swarm of these trade shows. For example, Producers' Distributing Co. has five listed in 14 days, with three on consecutive days.

The Flood

Artistes, directors, and assistants coming over, looking for those big money jobs they were told are waiting here. Those who mean anything stay and fit in. The others—well, there's Nice and Berlin still to try!

Two who may land here are Frank Mayo, now in London, and Alma Rubens, at present on the Continent. Both are being dickered for by British producers.

Rumor as to the death of the Exhibitors' Booking Circuit scheme trickles of the moves being made by Sir Walter Gibbons to gather together a large circuit have shaken it up, and a meeting of the committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association working on the national circuit plan met to give it a further push. Private meeting, of course. Still following the hush-hush policy.

But the meeting was mainly concerned with the results of the submission of the scheme to the branches of the association and the results thereof. Few of these branches have turned the scheme down entirely, but many criticisms have been offered and some further ideas. Now the committee is trying to clarify these and at the same time bend the scheme so it fits the opinions and needs of the general exhibitor.

There has been a report Thomas Ormiston, originator and chief advocate of the circuit sheme, was retiring owing to ill-health. This led to the suggestion he was through with the scheme and gave rise to most of the runiors. Ormiston has a very sick wife and is himself a sick man, but he is seeing the scheme through or out before he retires. And anyway, E. T. Hewitson, president of the C. E. A. and powerful supporter of the scheme, is taking care of it plenty.

Powerful moves are being made to group this or any other section of exhibitors into a production and studio building scheme but at present the theatre men are merely nibbling warily.

Goverment's Committee

Under the Film Bill the Board of Trade was obligated to constitute a committee for the purpose of advising on the administration of the act. This committee consists of Sir Alexander Frederick Whyte, K. C. S. I., special corespondent for the London "Daily News" at the Versailles Peace Conference.

Production is represented by Lieutenant-Colonel A. C. Bromhead (head of the Gaumont-British combine) and H. Bruce Woolfe (managing director of British Instructional).

T. C. Elder, head of the Stoll Film Company, and Simon Rowson, ditto of Ideal Films, represents the distributors. As Ideal is the Gaumont-British combine, this group has two people on the committee.

The exhibitors' representatives are the present and three former presidents of Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, E. T. Hewitson, Major A. J. Gale, Thomas Ormiston and William W. Blake.

Also four members designated as "persons having no pecuniary interest in any branch of the industry." They are Sir Robert Blair, educationalist; E. St. John Ervine dramatic critic and staunch opponent of the screen; G. R. Hall Caine, M. P., son of the novelist and Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of the Right Hon. Philip Snowden, Socialist Member of Parliament and Chancellor of the Exchequer during the Labor Government.

Office is held by the chairman for three years and members are selected by ballot, one-half holding office for two and the other for three years. H. J. Phillips, M. B. E., of the Board of Trade, is the secretary to the committee, apparently permanently.

THANK YOU, CHICAGO!

I APPRECIATE those wonderful receptions, the applause and encores so generously given to me at each performance during the three weeks I was playing at the Chicago Theatre.

I AM grateful to Balaban & Katz for the marvelous advertising campaign, the prominent and complimentary billing and support given me each week.

I WISH to thank Phil Griffiths for his splendid co-operation in selling so many of my Victor records.

I ALSO wish to thank Dave Silverstein, Milton Weil, Rocco Vocco, Al Beilin, Harry Hume, Willie Horwitz, Billy Cripps and their boys for having made their various songs so popular that they would have gone over even if played quite simply.

THANK YOU, "Variety," for that wonderful boost in your issue dated Jan. 18, which helped to make my Chicago engagement the happiest period of my professional career.

DRUMS OF LOVE

United Artists production and release. Directed by D. W. Griffith. Story credited to G. J. Lloyd. Karl Struss, photographer. Assistant cameramen, Harry Jackson and Billy Bitzer. Score by C. W. Cadman, Sol Cohen and Wells Hivley. At Liberty, New York, for twice daily run starting Jan. 24, at $2 top. Running time, exclusive of intermission, 115 mins.

Princess Emanuella..........Mary Philbin
Duke Cathos De Alvia...Lionel Barrymore
Count Leonardo De Alvia....Don Alvarado
Bopi.............................Tully Marshall
Duke of Granada...............C. H. Mailes

D. W. has turned himself out a program picture in that cycle which enfolds "Flesh and the Devil," "A Night of Love" and "Love." For program and b. o. purposes it rates with any of these if not as dynamic.

Highly romantic with a tragic ending, "Drums of Love" is technically as great as anything that has come out of Hollywood within the past 12 months. And that includes "Sunrise," as well as "Flesh and the Devil." Whether this is the best program feature Griffith has ever made is an open question, for they still talk of his "Avenging Conscience," which this director turned out some 13 years ago. But there is no doubt that this tops anything he has done outside of that one.

Doubts have been expressed as to whether the beauty values here can overcome the tragic double killing at the finish. But if the love story, the appearance of Mary Philbin and Don Alvarado and the performance of Lionel Barrymore can't make this release box office as well as artistic, then there'll never be anything but clinch finishes until they push a button to watch and hear entertainment in the parlor.

"Drums of Love" is a loge section film. The art centers will dote on it. That's sure. It's basic appeal is to the playgoer who thoroughly enjoys the Theatre Guild. Yet, the accentuated love theme is easily potent enough to get off the screen and reach the last rows up and downstairs.

The shock of having the husband knife his wife to uphold the family honor she and his brother have smirched, and then turn to his brother and do the same to him, kissing both before each thrust, centers on the girl. By the time Cathos (Barrymore) reaches Leonardo (Alvarado) with the blade, the worst of the cold shower is over. It's not as abrupt as the finish of "Love," but there's no need of regret for having included it.

The script is based upon the story of Paolo and Francesca. This screens as a triangle of two brothers, one handsome, the other deformed, with the girl forced to marry the ruling big hearted brute to save her people. The locale is South America in the 19th century.

Into this Griffith has woven superb camera work, a delicacy of interpretation and a performance by Barrymore that is this actor's outstanding camera achievement to date. The placing of a blonde wig on Miss Philbin is a revelation. At various times she resembles Alice Terry, Mary Pickford and Marilyn Miller, and looks better than all three. A wig and a good cameraman. Add to this that Miss Philbin can act and she totals a pretty fair piece of work for one picture. Better than "Merry Go Round."

Griffith, as famous for his form clinging negligees as De Mille for his bath tubs, is part of the answer. The rest is lens technique, lighting and the knowledge of how to handle people. Witness the work of Alvarado.

Beautiful shots are constantly cropping up without over shadowing the story or resorting to double and triple fades and trick stuff.

Bitzer is listed as an assistant cameraman.

The scene where Emanuella enters Cathos' chamber the night of their marriage is a classic from all angles, and various other sequences are as eye filling if not so trying on the nerves.

Appearing to be 90 per cent studio-made, Griffith is reported to have turned "Drums of Love" out, without waste both as to cost or time, unusual for him. The story lacks that necessary vitalness to make it $2, even for a swing around the key cities, but it should carve its own path within the program houses as to financial returns, for which it was made. It would be perfectly set within such a house as the Embassy in New York.

To those liking a story with some sense to it transformed into a well made picture, this is all wool and yards wide. Technically, it's a triumph. Hence, there remains the question of that finish. But Greta passes on in both "Flesh and the Devil" and "Love" and there is nothing cheery about Jannings' closing footage in "The Way of All Flesh" or "The Last Command." It will make them talk and, perhaps, argue. And if anyone hears 'em arguing they're going to drop in to find out what all the shootin's for.

It won't be easy to cut this picture from 115 minutes, but when they drop it down to around 90 most of the clipping will probably take place in what is now the first half. A few battle scenes, reminiscent in tactics of the "Nation," help the early footage along, and the accompanying score is excellent.

"Drums of Love" will get the support of those who have been yelling for "better pictures" and may feel censorship in certain sections.

13 WASHINGTON SQ.

Universal production and release, directed by Melville W. Brown. Starring Alice Joyce and Jean Hersholt. From the play of the same name by Leroy Scott. Titles by Walter Anthony. At the Roxy, New York, week of Jan. 28. Running time, 70 minutes.

"Deacon" Pyecroft............Jean Hersholt
Mrs. De Peyster..................Alice Joyce
Jack De Peyster................George Lewis
Mary Morgan....................Helen Foster
Mathilde ....Zasu Pitts
Olivetta....................Helen Jerome Eddy
Mrs. Allistair..............Julia Swayne Gordon
Mayfair.......................Jack MacDonald
Sparks...........................Jerry Gamble

Entertaining picture, with its appeal to the intelligent among the screen public and likely to be voted mild by the gum-chewing clientele. Away from the Universal style, U ordinarily making program pictures for the masses. Will please as a program release, without setting any high marks as an independent draw. Stars and title not figured as a pull.

But will please regular house following, on the score of its clean-cut romantic story, its atmosphere of elegance and comedy that is robust while not rowdy. Beautifully produced and acted with crisp competence. Mystery element is turned to comedy purpose and the thrills are not worked up. Has a world of mild laughs, but they never get beyond the polite classification.

All of which adds up to an average picture for better class patronage. The kind of film the screen critics demand in their crusades for better pictures, but the kind of product the mob doesn't crowd in to see. Would be poor opposition for a name star with a hot title.

Zasu Pitts, in the comedy role of a lady's maid who always gets her long words mixed up, has the prize character and plays it. Here is a character comedienne who has seldom been supplied with parts that would advance her. In this picture she gives a finely balanced performance in a part that could have been clowned to death. Alice Joyce, as an aristocratic mother, has a charming and graceful figure, but aristocratic mamas do not make popular pictures. Jean Hersholt plays the sympathetic crook part that came near making the piece when it was on the stage. It isn't a screen part, calling for too little significant acting and too much illumination in titles. Most of the interesting things the crook does are conveyed by title.

Romantic story is just a side angle of interest. Sympathetic interest is bound up in the mother and the crook, and what grip the story has in its celluloid form is confined to these two. For the rest there is little action in the cinema meaning of the word, and an impatient flapper fan might call it dull.

These defects are inherent in the story material, for it has been produced in faultless taste. The settings showing an aristocratic home in Washington Square are remarkably well done. A room in Washington Square is just that, instead of a de luxe furniture display set out in Grand Central Palace. Acting is scaled on the same moderate and reasonable plane.

It's satisfying playing of this sort of material, but the substance of the story never once gets hold of the sympathies. Rush.

BUCK PRIVATES

Universal production and release with Lya de Putti featured. Directed by A. Melville Brown. At the Colony, New York, week of Jan. 28. Running time, 60 mins.

Anne..............................Lya de Putti
John Smith..............Malcolm MacGregor
Hulda..................................Zasu Pitts
Major Hartman..................James Marcus
Sergt. Butts.......................Eddie Gribbon
Capt. Marshall...........Capt. Ted Duncan
Cupid Dodds.....................Bud Jamison
Mose Bloom...........................Les Bates

Nicely balanced comedy feature with agreeable romantic interest and some beautiful scenic shots. Story is set in Europe just after the armistice and deals with the comedy side of the A. E. F. Not a suggestion of war stuff in it, except the uniforms.

American troops in Germany have been given permission to pass through Luxemburg on their way out of the Rhine country. They descend upon a picturesque village and the hero (Malcolm MacGregor) is billeted with a giant pacifist and a beautiful daughter, whom he is forbidden to address or look at. Villagers set up the rule that soldiers may not fraternize with native maids and any girl caught being friendly toward a uniform shall have her head cropped.

The hero, a private, has as a rival for the lovely Lya, his top sergeant in the laughable person of Eddie Gribbon, who is a better clown than ever he was a baseball player, which is a compliment. Hero wins the girl, but sergeant butts in and is caught kissing her against her will in the moonlit garden. He is up for court-martial and can only escape by marrying the girl.

Picture is a neat blending of romantic story and vigorous comedy. For the most part the comedy is intelligent and free of the ordinary grade of film gagging, but at the finish it goes a little Sennett. To tell the truth, this finish gives a peppy period to an otherwise quiet picture and makes it something of a rowdy, but effective entertainment.

Production is in the best manner of Director Brown. Foreign atmosphere is capitally built up in the settings and the characters. This scenic element gives the picture a good deal of engaging beauty in its backgrounds. One love scene between hero and village girl is a charming episode, particularly in pictorial surroundings.

Acting is remarkably uniform in its excellence. Zasu Pitts once again steals a good deal more of interest than she was entitled to in the script. This actress has a veritable genius for doing the impossible with drab roles. Gribbon is a low comedy treat and MacGregor makes an engaging young leading man. The role of the Dutch heroine is out of Lya de Putti's line. Character bits are made to stand out. Nothing more realistically military has been seen than the captain of the company, and men villagers such as the barber who plants the shearing idea. Title writing is crisp and bright, as when the hard boiled sergeant says on his way to his own wedding, "I feel as nervous as a pullet about to lay her first egg."

Good, honest comedy with qualities that will appeal to the best grade of fans, and enough robust fun to please the flaps' saps. Rush.

THE HAUNTED SHIP

Tiffany production and release. Directed by Forrest Shelton. Adapted from Jack London's "White and Yellow." In cast: Dorothy Sebastian, Montague Love, Tom Santchi, Ray Hallory and Alice Lake. At Keith's-Hippodrome, New York, week Jan. 23. Running time, 48 mins.

One of those rough and ready yarns calling heavily on the imagination to make it credible. As a picture it appears capable of holding up on single day stands. Strictly a meller and making up in a mutiny for the absence of a storm at sea.

Montague Love is the heavy-fisted master of the schooner who fifteen days before has cast his wife and young son adrift on a raft, believing the boy isn't his and that his first mate (Santchi) is responsible.

For that, fifteen years the first mate has been shackled in the ship's hold where Gant (Montague Love) administers floggings to make his victim confess. A switch to South Sea locale shows the boy, full grown, (Ray Hallor) as a nondescript beach comber who is shanghaied aboard Gant's craft along with "Queenie" (Dorothy Sebastian), shipwrecked member of a theatrical troupe.

Gant is after the girl and the boy seeks his unknown father for vengeance. The relationship crops out and aided by the crew the boy overthrows Gant, releases the first mate and everybody deserts the ship Gant has fired.

All but Gant and the first mate who are trapped in the hold as the ship sinks. The boy and girl cling to a crate and are washed ashore on some undetermined coast where the picture ends.

Miss Sebastian gets a certain s. a. into her characterization while Love plays his usual burly brute effectively. Santchi never comes out from behind his beard and only goes into fistic action during the memory cutback. Hallor is neither good nor bad as the boy.

It's elemental love and hate drawn in broad strokes and should appease the cheaper admission clientele. Footage in a low dive will interest from the flesh angle. Story's pace is carried along at a fair clip and photography okay. Sid.

THE THRILL SEEKERS

Superlative Pictures production. Cast includes Lee Moran, Jimmy Fulton, Ruth Clifford and Robert McKim. Distributed by Hi-Mark Productions. At Stanley, New York, on double feature program Jan. 29. Running time, 57 mins.

Too much phoney melodrama knocks this one cuckoo. Old type of deep-dyed villainy starts early and wallows in such a quagmire of palpable dramatic impossibilities that it was too much of an overdose even on double feature day. The story is the kind that has been cameraed to a whisper, but may survive the double feature demand and bring back the original investment to its independent makers.

Hero and his side kick butler take a lot of punishment physically, yet they come right back for more, and the principals pummel each other all over the screen.

Picture smears itself with a deluge of heroics that became such mockery as to make the audience giggle.

lin, president of West Coast and who immediately absorbed the North American Circuit on the Pacific Slope when going into W. C. At that time as reported the Franklin plan was to go take over the F. & R. and Saxe circuits, the latter in Wisconsin, giving West Coast a perfect line eastward from its own W. C. terminal in Montana.

Fox's Coast to Coast

This line of procedure appears to have been followed by Fox, with whom Franklin is now associated through the Fox West Coast purchase. It also gives Fox a direct line to the Atlantic seaboard through his own eastern circuit encompassing the larger key cities of the east, and make the Fox chain coast to coast.

It is expected that Fox will announce the F. & R. buy within 10 days. The report is that it is virtually completed closed, except for minor matters.

Finklestein & Ruben main stands are Minneapolis and St. Paul. In a couple of F. & R. de luxe houses of those cities, Publix is interested.

At various periods it has been reported Publix would make a general deal with F. & R., as it had been also rumored that Publix at one time had the Saxe circuit in purchase view.

P. L. vs. Fox-W. C.

A chain battle is confidently claimed by the trade to follow the capture of the West Coast Theatre circuit by William Fox, as reported in Variety last week.

It was probably the fastest theatre transfer deal of any size on record. The deal actually did not take over 48 hours. It was closed before those interested on the coast were aware of it.

By the terms of the purchased control, Fox allowed $55 a share for West Coast (Wesco also) stock in case or an exchange into two-thirds of one share of Fox common for one share of W. C. Fox has been quoted of late around 86-88. Neither Fox Film (production) nor Fox Theatres A was affected by the W. C. coast deal on the stock market, Fox slipping a point or so following, while Fox theatres held steady at around 20.

It is said a new financial interest came into the West Coast-Fox deal in the Am. Telephone and Telegraph Co., behind Fox. Total amount involved in the W. C. buy is placed at from $15,000,000 to $17,000,000.

An erroneous impression prevailed that the recent rise in Fox (film) stock was through the discounting of the West Coast absorption. Neither Fox nor Harold B. Franklin, nor the bankers, Hayden, Stone & Co., knew of the deal that happened so swiftly until the Stanley Company-West Coast proposal seemed impossible about the middle of the week before last. At that time, Franklin with Fox and John Dillon (for Hayden, Stone) got together, rushing their deal through.

Option on 20,000 Shares

Franklin realized $500,000 in cash for himself from the transaction. When accepting the presidency of West Coast Theatres circuit, Franklin's contract called for a yearly salary of $65,000, 10 per cent. of the net profit by W. C., and an option on 20,000 shares of West Coast common at $30. Selling his 20,000 shares to Fox, through Hayden, Stone & Co., which financed the transaction, gave Franklin a profit of $25 per share.

Abe and Mike Gore, founders of W. C., and holding 70,000 shares, received nearly $4,000,000 at the same share price, $55.

Up until now from accounts Franklin has had no definite understanding with William Fox. Franklin's contract with West Coast remains in effect. The points undecided from the stories are whether Franklin will remove to the general headquarters Fox intends establishing in its New York offices, and if Franklin will continue to operate only the West Coast circuits (including North American), or add also the present, building and proposed Fox deluxe picture theatres.

Fox has, or has started or will start theatres of the deluxe type, none seating less than 4,000, and mostly of 5,000 capacity, at New York (Roxy), Washington, Brooklyn, Detroit, Philadelphia, Newark, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Los Angeles and San Francisco. These are in addition to the present Fox vaudeville (vaudfilm) theatres. In Philadelphia Fox contemplates a 5,000-seater on top of the two present Fox picture theatres there at present.

Fox, by taking the F & R chain, has taken care of the northwestern end, provided Publix and Loew do not withdraw their houses on the slope, including Portland and Seattle.

Need Operator

It is said that the Stanley group was most anxious to secure the West Coast affiliation in order to have Franklin as its theatre operator. A similar thought is reported held by the Keith-Albee people, who recently added the Orpheum Circuit. Both chains are virtually without a picture house operator, K-A is said to have offered to buy in on West Coast, but couldn't get Franklin down to cases.

The control-purchase by Fox that stopped all Stanley negotiations with West Coast was a bombshell in the ranks of the First National's New York executives. They had confidently anticipated the Stanley-W. C. affiliation, through Stanley and West Coast jointly holding First National control. By his purchase, Fox, with Stanley, if remaining together on the First National proposition, will have a say in the business and producing direction of a competiting producer. It is perhaps the first time, outwardly, that has occurred in the film trade.

If Publix and Loew's withdraw their coast deluxe houses from the West Coast operation and association, along possibly with them leaving West Coast, will be United Artists theatres, likewise now West-Coast operated.

While in the battle of the chains expected to follow if this occurs, it is also said that a fight for supremacy in First National may again come up, under the proposition that Fox and Stanley will not be in unison on First National. Fox and Stanley have been battlers ever since Fox boldly walked into Philadelphia with a lone house, to fight Stanley in its home camp, at the cost of all the Stanley product buying patronage.

The Inside

To the observant bunch in Times Square the inside on the Fox-West Coast deal appears to be that Franklin got the impression Nick Schenck and Sam Katz wanted to lock him up in California. That thought must have hit Franklin when he found the W. C. proposed deal with Stanley was not too cordially received by his New York theatre-operating associates, and that he was asked by either Katz or Schenck why he had encroached upon their territory by taking over the Saxe houses in Wisconsin. If the reports on this phrase are accurate, the Wisconsin comment must have convinced Franklin his former Publix associate and Mr. Schenck thought the Pacific Slope plenty big enough for him. It evidently did not coincide with Franklin's views.

It was at this juncture, the account says, that Franklin convinced Richard Hoyt and John Dillon of Hayden Stone, that the Fox deal would be preferable to the Stanley proposition. Some antagonism had also developed on the Stanley end when Jacob Fabian of Newark demanded that he go to the head of the Stanley company or withdraw his Newark string from that connection. If withdrawing, Fabian offered to pay the Stanley company a profit reported at around $1,500,000.

With the flop of the Stanley-West Coast negotiations happening, the changes in executive direction of the Stanley Company came, as reported elsewhere in this issue. John McGuirk retired from his $65,000 annual salary as Stanley's president, to become chairman of the Stanley's board and probably hanging onto his salary agreement.

Previously to assuming command of West Coast, Franklin had been in charge of Publix, in which post he was succeeded by Katz.

As also recounted elsewhere, the withdrawal of the Publix-Loew big first runs in L. A. and San Francisco would leave West Coast without a de luxe in the downtown district of either city, with that condition prevalent until either Fox builds out there, or Fox via West Coast make other connections.

One of those connections could be Keith-Albee walking into the Fox-Franklin deal, thereby giving K-A the theatre operator it so sorely needs in Franklin, and giving West Coast the big Orpheum theatres on the coast, which could be converted overnight from vaud-film into presentation houses. This is considered very unlikely by the observers.

Film Service

In film service, the situation is even more complex upon the coast. Though Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer remained with their chains and held their services to the Publix and Loew's first runs, neither of the big film producers would have sufficient coast outlet to reckon against their present gross circulation in the 250 theatres of West Coast in the slope territory.

With Fox's present list of 475 theatres, the entire possibility of a competitive complexion may change. The Fox-string is claimed to now be too big for any producer to ignore.

Fox's Sure Benefit

On service Fox will greatly benefit in any event. Should Par and M-G-M be held out of the W. C. theatres, the indie producers would have an in to no limited extent, another situation Par and M-G-M might prefer to avoid. In figuring film service for the Coast First National ranks with Par and M-G-M and possibly going their way, unless Fox can use influence.

Fox at present has a film service agreement with Pantages that takes in the coast. For what time or to what extent under that contract is not known. Also up to now Fox has had but one theatre in California playing his Movietone, the Tower, an independent, in Los Angeles, a small house but well located downtown.

Neither Messrs. Fox or Franklin has been seen within the week by a Variety reporter. It is thought the film trade would prefer the reports, fairly reliable, to a stereotyped statement. At a convened meeting in the Fox offices last Wednesday night, William Fox made a verbal announcement of his purchases. Mr. Dillon was present and offered whispered suggestions to Fox but said nothing himself to the newspaper men. The latter were invited to ask any questions, but few took advantage. Franklin, who was present at the start of the announcement gathering, left before it had fairly gotten underway.

A Season in Time

In referring to the West Coast circuits and without mentioning Franklin by name, Fox called their present administration of West Coast "the perfect management."

The picture business appeared to well regard the Fox movements. It also seemed the impression that the deal operated mostly in Fox's favor for prestige and influence. Fox's playing time, east and west, cannot yet be computed for stage shows. It is easily a season just now for the average picture house stage turn.

In service the W. C. acquisition gives Fox Arizona as a practical closed state for the Fox products. With other closed sections, Fox is estimated to have 17½ per cent. in all of this most desirable territory.

An immediate eastern reaction to the Fox consolidation is foreseen in the predicted first step along that will be undertaken by the Stanley company, if not by others which may be affected much or little.

Milwaukee, Jan. 31.

Acquisition of the Midwesco, formerly Saxe, chain of Milwaukee and Wisconsin houses by Fox has set this old burg on its ear.

The 43 houses are the key to the movie situation in Wisconsin.

The former Saxe houses are stocked to the hilt with First National, Metro-Goldwyn and Paramount bookings. Fox has not had an inroad here with his films at the downtown theatres with the exception of a few specials, and most of regular releases went into the combo houses.

SLEIFER, U. A.'S DIV. MGR.

L. J. Sleifer has been appointed by Al Lichtman, of United Artists sales division manager of district No. 1, including New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo and New Haven.

A RACE FOR LIFE

recommended for the very apparent skill it demonstrates in the art of constructing a theatrical scaffolding around a quadruped leading man.

As Rin-Tin-Tin is the professional father of all the cinema pups and has been a star and a money-maker for a longer time than any other woof-woof hero, it is not surprising that there is a certain factory-like efficiency in the turning out of these pictures. There is certainly nothing in this one that could be called even a new variation of old stuff. Yet it possesses a confident manner, as if director, scenarist and dog trainer were sure of their goal and driving straight for it.

Enjoyment of a picture such as this requires a naive and sentimental disposition plus a regard for dogs. Where and when dog-pictures are exhibited in big cities it is invariably as one-half of a double-feature bill.

In the smaller communities, however, the dog opera can and does stand alone, unaided and unapologetic. For these stands "A Race for Life will probably be okay. There is enough heart tug of a sort to have the kids whistling at Saturday matinees.

Bobby Gordon plays Rin-Tin-Tin's boy friend and is the only player with much to do. Gordon may be the lad he is represented to be, but the many-sided versatility of his boyishness suggests advanced years and considerable trouping.

WEB OF FATE

Dallas M. Fitzgerald production released by Peerless. Story and direction by Fitzgerald. Lillian Rich featured. Cast includes Eugene Strong, Henry Sedley, Edward Coxen, Frances Raymond. At Loew's, New York, on double bill, Jan. 27. Running time, 49 mins.

A fair state righter, without much support from "names" of any sort. Lillian Rich, featured, is the only one with any probable box office registry.

It is a drama of high jinks amongst the swells and depends upon the w.k. device of two gals who look alike, the innocent one being blamed for the murders and one thing or another of the loose bimbo. The usual misunderstandings are okayed in the end, when newspapermen discover the hard-boiled jane, thereby saving our Nell from the hoosegow.

Lillian Rich, turned blonde, uses a sweet to identify the n.g. gal. When playing the heroine she seems very sweet. It isn't a bad pical detail are above "quickie" job of duo-characterization.

INDES AND SAPIRO

they are now unable to buy film at any price. Sapiro believes that while it might affect the chain theatres unfavorably it would help the distributors gauge the exact amount of product needed to fill the wants of a combination and know the price they could get, and it will be a higher price than they are now getting from their own theatres.

Some of the exhibitors leading the movement for the combination find themselves in the position where they cannot buy pictures at any price on account of producer-owned theatres in their neighborhoods. An independent chain consisting of 10 houses cannot get a picture in Brooklyn if a 500-seat chain house in that territory wants it. The loss in revenue affects the producer as well as the independent theatre operator.

Stopping "Trustification"

The combination of indies would be in a position to deprive any producing organization of from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 in revenue and no single producing company can stand the loss of that amount of business.

This combination could also curb the construction of theatres by producers; not by law, but by discontinue buying its films.

A buying combination of this kind, under capable leadership, is probably the most practical solution of independent exhibitor troubles. If the deal is consummated it may end what the Independents have been calling, "The trustification of the motion picture industry."

5-Year Contract

Sapiro's attitude on the proposed combination, and the viewpoint of the independents joining, is that they are not going to war. The latter believe the producers should welcome the combination since it will give them, for the first time, a central, responsible figure, representing exhibitors, to deal with.

According to the terms of the contract drawn up and expected to be signed within 10 days, Sapiro's power with the exhibitors will exceed that of Hays with producers and distributors. Sapiro is to be given 100 per cent. power of attorney over about the theatres now in the deal, for five years. The exhibitors asked Sapiro to assume that jurisdiction.

The exhibitors were also responsible for a proposed clause in the contract to the effect that the association may take an injunction to stop any member who wishes to resign.

One of the most far-reaching results of this combination will be the elimination of the speculative builder. The association's rules may provide against accepting for membership any operator putting up a theatre in an over-theatred area. Circuits controlled by producers will be requested to stop building in sections where they threaten independent members of the association, or where there are already enough seats. Circuits suffering from over-building should profit through this arrangement.

Small houses owned by independent circuits and operating at a loss will be closed. These would have been closed long ago but for the probability that some other operator would rush in. The association rules will provide that no member shall operate or assume for operation any house closed by a member of the organization, unless purchasing the privilege or with consent of the former operator.

LITERATI

Arthur L. Clarke Dead

Arthur L. Clarke, 58, managing editor of the San Jose "Mercury-Herald," died at San Jose, Calif., Jan. 24, following an apoplectic stroke.

Mr. Clarke secured his early training on the Omaha "Bee." He was associated with Hearst newspapers for about 18 years and served as executive on publications operated in Boston, New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

During the Boer War he was correspondent for the Chicago "Tribune" in South Africa and also represented it in London and Paris.

The deceased was known as the "father of the tabloid," having established the New York "Illustrated (Daily) News", the first daily tabloid in the east.

He is survived by his widow and two sons, Richard W., art editor of the New York "World" and Rodger L., country editor of the "Mercury-Herald."

Kidding

In a recent issue of "Life," the humorous weekly, is a piece by one W. J. P., Jr., entitled "Variety's Critic Reviews 'Elmer Gantry'." This bit attracted much attention among the 37½ per cent. intellectuals. It goes:

"This ought to be a panic. Name not too hot, but it's a sexy with a new twist, and Lewis' rep's a cinch to click with the brows. The plot is about a big prayer-and-sermon man who starts out playing the sticks till his act brodys. Then he picks up with a round-heeled gal who has a big time preaching road show.

"This doll has plenty of s. a. and they lay 'em out in the aisle 'til her church burns up and the dame gets bumped off. Gantry takes it on the lam in the fire and then shows up as a hero.

"This kibitzer's ace-deuce line hooks him up with another big-time outfit. He always milked the audience with an act full of larceny, but it held up the exists. Gantry two-timed his ball and chain and gave the others plenty of fast counts, but they never squawked. He was a heel, but the Bible-boosting game was a pushover, so he gave the peasants the works and ended up on the main stem with his own show. This book started like a smash and looks set for a run."

Stage Fan on Side

Thomas C. Stowell, well known amateur actor and playwright, has been elected president of the Legislative Correspondents' Association of the State of New York, and as such will have charge of the annual dinner and show at the Ten Eyck, Albany, March 8. Stowell, who has been a political writer on various papers for many years, is now with the New York "Herald Tribune." With his wife, Faye Smiley, and Jacob Golden, manager of Proctor's vaude house in Troy, Stowell organized the Albany Players, who have made professional appearances in the Capitol district. The annual show is attended by officials and politicians as well as some of the Broadway gang.

Another Critic Let Out

Bob Swayze, dramatic editor of the Portland, Ore., "Journal" for eight years, was let out recently on a moment's notice. Swayze was considered one of the ace critics in the Pacific northwest.

Reason for Swayze's departure is not known. Grant Showerman, reporter on the same paper, is at Swayze's desk. Firing of Swayze is the second for local critics, the previous one being handed Don Skene, formerly drama editor of the "Morning Oregonian," now a member of the sports department on the New York "Herald Tribune."

O'Neill and the Mob

The stiff rapping Eugene O'Neill has gotten for his "Marco Millions" from the Algonquin set of writers is figured along Broadway as being due to two things—one being O'Neills refusal to sign up as a member when he's in town and the other Alex Woollcott's lack of friendship for George Jean Nathan, who called Alex the Seidlitz powder of Times Square.

Nathan was the O'Neill champion long before the famous dramatist became famous, while O'Neill is the sort of fellow, famous or not, who'd not give a rap whether he ate in the Algonquin at a round table or at the Astor or in a cafeteria.

Another Woollcott peeve is said to be his irritation at one of the roles in O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," which the Guild opened this week. The role is that of Marsden, one of the three men who go after the woman of the play. Marsden is the one who outwaits the others.

Meanwhile O'Neill's "Marco Millions," which some of the boys have been rapping plenty, sticks an extra matinee in weekly from now on to take care of the trade, which so far has been standee.

Winchell as an Actor

"Graphic" is syndicating Walter Winchell's "Diary of Joe Zilch" weekly. The feature deals with a small-time vaudevillian and his wife and partner, Zilch and Zilch. It is mostly based on Walter's own experiences as an actor when playing on the Pantages vaude circuit. Walter in some ways is still an actor.

Getting "Rejections" Across

A method successfully used by some of the now standard periodical contributors is that of sending their rejected stuff to the outstanding columns like F. P. A.'s, Hi Phillips in the "Sun," Russell Crouse in the New York "Evening Post," et al., for gratis publication. The effect of landing it in type and making the publication thus recall it has had a psychological effect.

In many cases the skits and short stuff are more impressively set up and printed than when coming through the mails along with a raft of manuscript to the editors. The latter are known to read the humorous columns and it was in this wise that at least one author commanded such attention that the editor of a national comic weekly sent for him for a little chat. The writer told the editor that everything he had seen in the daily columns were rejections.

Jim Europe's Memoirs

Noble Sissle, colored composer and singer, now in London, is writing "The Memoirs of Jim Europe," which will be published by Sears & Co., It will be off the press in February.

Sissle was a partner of the famous colored bandmaster and served overseas with Colonel Hayward's celebrated fighters from Hell's Kitchen.

'DUMB' ACTS OF NOVELTY TYPE ORGANIZE—WHITE, COLORED

Federated Novelty Acts, New Society, With 125 Represented at Start—Several Objectives—Jack Wilbur Credited as Organizer

With the Federated Novelty Acts now a reality, it is an organization in which only novelty acts can affiliate.

The Federated held an open meeting in International hall, 424 West 49th street, New York, Jan. 26. Billy Cross (Six Abdallahs) presided and outlined the purpose of the meeting. Among other speakers were Ben Bellclair (Bellclair Bros.), Alex and Felix Patty (Patty Bros.) and Jack Wilbur.

Jack Wilbur, who was top mounter with Joe Rexford in the Rexford Troupe and later with the Spencer Sisters and Wilbur in vaudeville, is the organizer primarily of the F. N. A. He told what the organization stood for.

The F. N. A. proposes to combine all merited novelty acts into one association; to create ways and means of marketing their product with the public; to encourage originality in novelty acts in order that they may regain the interest in which they were held when vaudeville was in its infancy; to protect the originators of new novelty material against infringement by imitators; to discourage the booking of forcign novelty acts without at least 20 consecutive weeks prior to their departure for this side; to establish a minimum wage scale for all worthy novelty acts; to creat a fund for members in distress; to establish a permanent summer and winter quarters for members close to New York, and their animals, with training facilities suitable for every kind of a novelty act; to supply a complete list of novelty acts available for circuits and circuses without charge; not to create or allow to be created any individual or body of individuals with authority or power equal to the will of the majority of the rank and file, and that the will of the majority shall rule; and all matters of importance to the association's welfare must be decided by a referendum vote.

Coming Over on Spec

It is declared by members that in many other seasons acts have come from Europe on speculation; that some have been booked for one or two weeks pending prospective continuous dates, only to be left high and dry and no opportunity to play at all where the time is filled.

The F. N. A. says it has nothing to sell other than the membership right to voice its feelings at the regular meetings, which are to be held once a week, with the referendum vote the deciding factor. A suggestion box is now at 226 West 47th street, used as the temporary headquarters of the association. Members are invited to drop in any and all suggestions that might improve the organization.

The next closed meeting will be held in about two weeks, when an election of officers will be held.

The F. N. A. has no restrictions on its membership, except it must be of "novelty act" classification. Colored turns will be admitted as well as white.

Novelty acts include circus acts, illusion turns, etc.; all dumb turns that depend on novelty to put them over in theatres and under canvas.

125 Respond

There were about 125 at the meeting last week, accepted as an indication that the F. N. A. is attracting attention.

In recent seasons dumb acts have found time hard to get, especially consecutively. Where many acts claim novelty, the result has been retroactive in the sense that it has given the wrong impression to the outside world.

The F. N. A. claims that of its present personnel they are all working, and that is one reason why meetings have been called for 11 p. m. instead of earlier; so that acts can report following their usual night's performance.

Gloria Foy Gets $200 Plus Retraction

Gloria Foy, readying for rehearsals in the new Shubert operetta, "Under the Red Robe," with Walter Woolf and Harry K. Morton, settled a $100,000 libel claim for $200 and a retraction by the New York "Graphic."

It started with a squib that Gloria Fay, an actress, was suing Charles Schwartz for a separation and Schwartz' parents for alienation of affections, because of a difference in creed. With the yarn was Miss Foy's photograph.

The tabloid settled for $200 which it offered Miss Foy, in addition to a published correction. J. Lewis Lindner acted for the actress.

Janette Gilmore as "Rio"

Immediately on her return from London, Janette Gilmore was signed for the Ada May role in the Australian company of "Rio Rita." The American danseuse opens in Australia about April 15. The company is rehearsing in America.

Miss Gilmore was abroad for several months in Laddie Cliff's review and at the Embassy club.

FILM NAMES STAMPEDE TOWARD VAUDEVILLE

Ian Keith and Ethel Clayton are scheduled for the Riverside, New York, in two weeks.

Just as soon as suitable sketches can be found for both Renee Adoree and Irene Rich they will be given vaude dates.

Dorothy Mackaye, widow of Ray Raymond, for whose death Paul Kelly is serving a prison term at San Quentin, Calif., will have to defend Jenie Jacobs' commission suit for $1,200 by deposition. The case is up for trial shortly. J. Lewis Lindner, representing Miss Mackaye in New York, has given notice he is ready.

Miss Mackaye is also serving a limited prison term of one year for concealment of facts in connection with the death of her husband and for which Kelly was convicted. She is a prisoner of the State of California and could not be extradited in legal custody as was the case recently when she was temporarily released in a California civil action.

JAKE LUBIN'S VACATION

Loew's Booking Head Finally Takes Rest—Away from New York

No one is taking the credit but someone must have chloroformed Jake Lubin and put him aboard a boat for Havana.

Anyway the head of the Loew booking office is down in the Southland for five weeks, with Marvin Schenck in charge of the Loew books during Jake's absence.

Allen McQuade, Possible

Allen McQuade, Irish tenor, of the Atwater Kent Radio hour, is contemplating vaudeville in the early spring.

He will be under the management of Jack Lewis.

RUTH ELDER MISSES SHOW

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Ruth Elder missed her first show at the Pantages Monday, as the airplane in which she was flying here from San Francisco broke down at Bakersfield through engine trouble.

On account of this delay the trip over the downtown shopping district before landing had to be postponed, Miss Elder appearing at the theatre for the second show in street clothes and doing three instead of four shows the first day.

JULIAN ELTINGE

who came East to play four weeks for Keith-Albee and is now in his fourteenth of capacity business.

The new act is a gem, and every woman in America will want to see the greatest artist in his line strut his stuff.

FLOP INSTALLMENT PLAN FOR ADS BY K-A IN N. V. A. PROGRAM

Slips Enclosed With Contracts to Actors Generally Ignored—Outside Houses K-A Booked Also Ignored Requests—Money Scheme Goes Wrong

A Little Rough, But—

"Yeah, over de Mille to de poorhouse."

Marx Bros. for W. C. $10,000 Weekly and P.Ct.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Four Marx Brothers in "Cocoanuts" (stage) in San Francisco will start a tour for West Coast circuit opening at the Metropolitan here, Feb. 9, with a guarantee of $10,000 a week against a percentage of the gross.

The contract provides that after one week here they will go to the Granada, San Francisco, and if business warrant West Coast will continue them for 14 subsequent weeks.

The deal calls for the Four Marx Brothers and about 20 of their people to appear in an act running 45 minutes. It will probably be similar to the one the boys staged when on the Orpheum Circuit about five years ago.

Pantages also had bid for the act.

Walking on "G. V. F."

Eddie Lambert walked out of the "Greenwich Village Follies" last week in Boston, dissatisfied with his opportunities. Rene Riano breezed for the same reason and Blossom Seeley and Bennie Fields among others are equally dissatisfied with J. C. Huffman and J. J. Shubert's direction.

Pays Stray Wire Loss

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Jimmy Dunn, a performer working out of Mort Infield's office, has been advised by his attorney, Louis J. DuRocher, Chicago, that the Western Union Telegraph Company has reimbursed him in full for time lost by the actor due to a telegram which was forwarded to Springfield, Mass., instead of Springfield, Mo., as directed.

The amount involved was $235.

Rose Loses Ted Braun

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Rose Perfect of "Scandals" is single again. Her divorce plea on grounds of cruelty, non-support, etc., has been granted against Ted Braun, New York theatrical agent, associated with Max Hart.

YACHT CLUBBERS FILMHOUSE

T. D. Kemp, Jr., who handles the act, is tied up with London production, returning Feb. 11 to England, after a fortnight's stay over here, has placed the Yacht Clubbers' business management in the hands of Lou Irwin.

PRISCILLA DEAN'S START

Subsequent bookings are contingent upon these dates.

Miss Dean is doing a sketch by Blanche Merrill.

Harrington and Maher Apart

Maher has formed a 2-act with Jack Mooney.

The installment plan idea on corraling advertising for the N. V. A. program has proven a flop, from accounts.

Despite a number of acts having been whipped into line to sign advertising pledges and remit weekly on account, few have been doing it. It looks as if another literary teaser may be issued any day.

With most of the former Keith-Albee standard acts on other circuits, the deduction scheme has gone awry since the pledges call for remittances on K-A dates.

Independently operated houses booking through K-A are also reported as having balked on the deduction idea, refusing to be a collection agency.

The pay weekly plan to insure forced advertising for the annual N. V. A. program was hit upon last summer. With issuance of K-A contracts, slips were enclosed and actors urged to sign the pledges. While not actually a part of the contract that inference was attempted, with the acts looking upon the frame as applesauce.

K-A and Orpheum circuits' contracts sent abroad also contained the slips, which received much the same reception.

Hayakawa's Substituted Support Without Notice

A sudden switch in casting of Sessue Hayakawa's act at the Palace, New York, this week has Lucille Lortel playing opposite the Japanese film star, instead of Gilda Kreegan, as announced. The shift was decided on Saturday, and is said to have been suggested by Max Gordon.

Miss Kreegan was at the theatre Monday afternoon ready to go on, and claimed she knew nothing of the change.

Joe Brown, Film Actor

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Joe Brown, who came to the coast as a star of the musical comedy, "Twinkle, Twinkle," is now a picture actor.

He has been placed under contract by Ralph Ince at F. B. O. through Jesse Wadsworth to do two pictures. The first is now in production and called "Crooks Can't Win." His second, entitled "Notices," is a story of the theatre which will also be directed by Ince.

Importing Mex. Band

Fitzy claims the band will paralyze New York and other points, that only know chile con carne by smell.

ADELAIDE-HOLBROOK TURN

Adelaide (Adelaide and Hughes) has formed a dancing team with Willie Holbrook (former partner of Harriet Hoctor), and will open Feb. 20 at Fox's Audubon.

Miss Adelaide has not appeared since the death of her husband last July. Harriet Hoctor was signed individually by Ziegfeld.

IRENE FRANKLIN'S RETURN

The booking is for 10 weeks, and a quick return engagement.

Act Burned Out

Benton Harbor, Mich., Jan. 31.

Stage property of Billy Purl and Co. was destroyed by fire in transit here from Saginaw.

The act is being rebuilt.

PUBLIX-LOEW UNITS WEST

TOSSING CHAIRS, HOCKING ICE AND SWATS IN DIVORCE CASES

Helen Henderson May Haul Down $100,000 Besides Her Decree—Real Estate Man's Rough Ideas Cost Him Wife—And There's Plenty Others

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Blanche Yurka, playing here in "The Squall," was granted a divorce from Ian Keith, now in pictures, on allegations that Keith tossed a chair at her two weeks after they were married in 1922.

Claiming her husband beat her when she tried to stop him from hocking the family jewels, Mrs. Valeria Bruchas, opera singer, was freed of matrimony by Judge Lynch in Superior court.

Helen Henderson, the former "Follies" girl who blew out on 60-year-old Aaron Benesch and all his millions last November, secured a divorce here Thursday on grounds of cruelty. Helen is going to get $100,000 in money besides, it is said, she charged Aaron took a couple of swats at her in the Blackstone hotel Oct. 16.

Alma Jane Wilday of "The Desert Song" rang the curtain down on Johann Berthelsen, artist, through Atty. Ben Ehrlich. Miss Wilday got her decree on desertion alleged to have occurred in 1925. They were married seven years before that.

Gentle Mate

Charlotte Kelber, who works at the Frolics cafe under the name of Ellickson, obtained a decree upon testifying that Arthur E. Kelber, real estate man, pushed her down a flight of stairs, broke her ankle, socked her in the jaw, and kicked her. Mr. Kelber, says Charlotte, is a jealous mate and got violently peeved when he futilely asked her to give up show business. The Kelbers were married the first night they met in a night club—July 29, 1925—at Crown Point, Ind., where such things happen. As replacement for husbandly love Charlotte gets $50 weekly for support of two children, and the former family home at Brookfield, Ill. Atty. Wm. F. Ader represented her.

Claiming Wm. F. Friedlander, actor, used to come home from prizefights and demonstrate the punches on her, Lillian Friedlander secured a decree through Attorney Phil R. Davis on cruelty grounds. They were married ten years.

Gene Lawrence, married to Francis Lawrence, father of Vincent Lawrence, the playwright, has filed suit for divorce on charges of desertion. Mrs. Lawrence last appeared in "Adrienne," and is also represented by Attorney Davis.

Voice Wrecked Marriage

Johnny Powell, of Moore and Powell (vaude), and actually named Horace Lee Davis, has started suit against Pearl Dorothy Headford Davis on allegations that Pearl took him to Europe where she could study opera and refused to come home. Powell says he went broke after a while. When the wife refused to come back to the States with him he had to return alone. As far as Powell knows she is still in Italy.

Earl Juul, bond man and one time pitcher for the Cubs, has obtained divorce from Gloria Davis Juul, now on the coast in pictures. Juul claimed Gloria used to go on wild parties and took punches at him.

Gave Barnum Air

Barney Barnum (Bailey and Barnum), David J. Hodges, off stage, was granted a divorce from Irene L. Hodges because he claimed she gave him the air while they were staying at the Sherman House and hasn't been near him since 1924. Mrs. Hodges had strenuous objections to show business. Wm. Ader the attorney.

ALBEES IN PALM BEACH WITHOUT PAT CASEY

Customary Winter Trip Notwithstanding Recent Merger Deal and Other Business

Palm Beach, Jan. 31.

E. F. Albee and his party from New York are here for their annual visit, arriving yesterday.

It seemed to surprise the vaudeville section and others upon hearing that in the midst of the present show business excitement through deals, mergers, and so on, Messrs. Albee and Lauder would leave the center of the swirling at this time.

J. J. Murdock remains at his Keith Circuit headquarters.

It is said Pat Casey declined to make the journey at this time, in view of the conditions and a greatly deferred decision to look after himself first.

Ordered from City

New London, Conn., Jan. 31.

James O'Brien, 25, who went to New London with the alleged intention of producing a show in that city, has been ordered by the court to make himself scarce within the city limits.

O'Brien was arrested on a charge of intoxication and while awaiting trial, a second warrant, charging him with a violation of the Mann act, was served. In court, the Federal charge was dropped.

He was fined $10 and costs for intoxication and ordered to leave the city.

WARING'S NEXT WEEK

Waring's Pennsylvanians' Palace booking has been set back a week until next week. The band is current in Boston and last week broke a house rule by staying a full week at the Coliseum, New York, otherwise a K-A split weeker.

Waring comes in for three weeks with an option for a fourth and may repeat at the Albee, Brooklyn, right thereafter.

AL FRIEND REVIVAL

Al Friend, formerly of the vaude team of Friend and Downing will come out of retirement in alliance with Billy Watkins. They will revive "The Smugglers" former Friend and Downing act.

Unit Show's Break-In

A. B. Marcus and his tab show is breaking in for Loew, playing week Feb. 13 at Norfolk, Va. Featured principal is Elmer Coudy, comic. The Marcus Co. gives the entire show, 2½ hours.

COAST-TO-COAST BOOKED CIRCUIT

Another Indicator of Severance of Business Relations Between Publix and West Coast in California and Northwest—May Mean Fanchon and Marco Presentation Productions Coming East

FIVE COAST WEEKS

Chicago, Jan. 31.

A coast-to-coast booked Publix-Loew presentation circuit, for its stage shows, will have been established late in February, when the P-L unit headed by Mae Murray and opening at the Chicago theatre for a three-week tour of the local Balaban & Katz houses, will open in Seattle for Publix.

It will play in turn Portland, San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles. After the latter city the unit will leap to Denver for the remainder of its eastern trip.

Miss Murray will leave the unit upon completion of the Chicago time, replaced by Accent and Janesco, dancing team.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

A decision by Publix-Loew to launch their stage units for picture presentation all over the U. S. map, as reported, leaves its conclusion of another indicator that sooner or later, Publix and Loew's will withdraw the Pacific Slope de luxe theatres from their present opcration by West Coast Theatres circuit.

It is believed here that if the P-L road units play in this section, West Coast in reprisal will send its Fanchon and Marco "Idea" units east, for general picture house stage booking. This will offer the F. & M. units in opposition to Publix and Loew's theatres in eastern towns other than those which may have Fox de luxe theatres.

The Loew coast houses under operation by West Coast are the Warfield, San Francisco and Loew's State, Los Angeles. Publix first runs are the Mctropolitan here and Granada, San Francisco. Besides Publix has houses under construction in the northwest, due shortly to open, and other theatres toward Minneapolis way that will give it a complete route.

United Artists

West Coast is also operating for United Artists the new U. A. theatre here just opened, also a couple of U. A. houses in the northwest also.

While the position or attitude of United Artists is not made clear, it is generally thought if Publix and Loew's break away from the West Coast association in this section, Jos. M. Schenck will order the U. A. houses also U. A. operated, unless making a deal for their handling by P-L.

Fox is building in San Francisco and claims to have a Los Angeles site. It is also said he may go into the northwestern cities.

In and around Los Angeles, West Coast has 60 of its theatres, all playing pictures or a combination policy with pictures. None is in the downtown section nor is any a first run, though any number could be made first runs with the big de luxes off the West Coast chain.

It is claimed by the West Coast people that the Publix-Loew stage units coming into the coast Publix or Loew first run de luxes would create too large an overhead, and might become an example whereby the Fanchon-Marco stage shows would have to be produced at a larger cost than they have been. Marco and Fanchon have been organizing stage units traveling over the W. C. time for some time now. The F. & M. shows have never been

MURDOCK MAY LINE UP K-A STAFF WHILE OTHER OFFICERS ARE AWAY

Major L. E. Thompson Made Gen. Mgr. K-A New York Theatres, Vice Maloney, Resigned—Lauder and Darling in Charge of All Bookings

It's expected that J. J. Murdock will line up the Keith-Albee headquarters staff for the merged K-A and Orpheum Circuits within the next month or so. During that time E. F. Albee and Ted Lauder will be spending their winter vacation in Florida.

Major L. E. Thompson, formerly chief assistant to Murdock, has been appointed general manager of the K-A New York theatres, with Arthur Cleary his assistant. Maloney is reported having made no other connection but is believed to have an understanding with B. S. Moss, another recently retired K-A executive.

An official announcement was issued last week of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum consolidation. It confirmed the report that the Orpheum had been a wholly absorbed by K-A The announcement was only noticeable for the sparse mention of any former Orpheum official. The only one mentioned was Marcus Heiman, late the Orpheum's president and now a vice-president of the merged chain. E. F. Albee is president, a post it is said he may vacate in the near future, to be succeeded in it by his son-in-law, Lauder. Lauder, meanwhile, with Eddie Darling, will be in general charge of all bookings on both circuits, a position they have been occupying for years.

Gordon's Contract.

Max Gordon, former general manager for the Orpheum, does not appear to have been provided for as an executive other than listed as the nominal head of a production department. Gordon holds a five-year contract with the Orpheum at $25,000 a year. He also was awarded by Heiman when falling into his soft agreement, a block of Orpheum stock to be paid for out of dividends declared upon it.

Among the board members of the capitalized K-A chain is Mrs. Caroline Kohl, of Chicago. It is believed that through Mrs. Kohl, an exceptionally large holder of Orpheum stock, and from the personal friendship with Albee, whom she always has looked to as an adviser, along with the coast cotorie of Orpheum stockholders the merger with K-A was forced through.

Up to date the merger has not visibly affected Orpheum stock quotations. Orpheum dropped around 23 on the Stock Exchange, then regained to over 24, with the price reported for the marketed new stock of K-A at 25, with an even exchange of it for Orpheum common. Orpheum preferred is 101.

With Pathe around 13, a drop of 27 from its high of 40, the picture affiliated concern with K-A does not either appear to affect the Orpheum's price.

The announcement of the merger exaggerated to quite some extent the number of theatres (given as 700) the merged chain is operating or booking or both, along with the number of performers it claimed to have under management, 15,000, and also admissions as well as capacities. This may have been for public consumption in anticipation of a stock offering.

BILLY ROSE FLEW TO L. A. IN PLANES

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Billy Rose, song writer, came to Los Angeles from New York via aeroplane, arriving here yesterday after going through several storms and several forced delays.

The reason for the risky trip William hinted to a Variety reporter at the flying field was none other than Fannie Brice, whose songs he writes. She was present at the field. There were no other friends present and the only sheet represented was Variety, so it didn't look like a publicity frame for Fannie's present Orpheum tour.

Rose expects to remain on the coast three weeks. He is believed to be the first professional ever to make the trip from New York to Los Angeles by air.

He went through several storms and much disagreeable weather.

Billy Rose left New York on the spur of the moment, Jan. 26, in an airplane, reaching Chicago Jan. 27, with the delays following that take off.

No publicity appeared to have been thought of by the song writer. He mentioned on Broadway the day before he wanted to get to Los Angeles in a hurry. Someone replied:

"Why don't you fly? Bill Rogers did."

Rose answered, "that's a good idea," made the arrangements and left the next morning in a passenger plane without informing anyone of his trip.

Irene, Dancer, Hit by Taxi—Not Critical

The week-end blizzard in New York took its toll Saturday afternoon at 3:30 when Irene of Dario and Irene, dancers, was struck by a taxicab while crossing 6th avenue at 58th street. She is suffering a concussion of the brain, but Miss Irene's condition is not critical.

She is under a cranium specialist's care who holds forth hopes for her recovery.

BILL ROBINSON PROMOTING FLORENCE MILLS' BENEFITS

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Bill Robinson, colored comedian who was touring the Orpheum circuit, is arranging in every city he goes to give performances for the Florence Mills memorial.

He gave one here several weeks ago, which netted around $2,000, and contemplates another one in San Francisco next week.

Robinson, personally, defrays many of the minor expenses incurred in promoting the performances. He also insists that the show be put on with a $1 top.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS PA.-OHIO CLOSING MANY VAUDE HOUSES

Mostly Keith-Albee Booked Theatres Either Dark or Turning to Straight Picture Policy—Actors Aid Needy Miners' Suffering Families

Numerous out-of-town Keith-Albee houses have been closed during the past few weeks as a result of low receipts. Other houses suffering have dropped vaudeville for a straight picture policy.

Almost all the K-A houses booked by Bill Delancy, through the mining districts of Pennsylvania and in Ohio, have been closed during this period. The trouble in the mining regions is partly responsible for the situation, with vaude business reported practically at a standstill.

Authentic reports are to the effect that actors playing in the mining sections have been feeding hungry families since Christmas. This vogue started when a set of troupers, deeply affected by the polgnant evidences of wldespread poverty, asked local citizens in such towns as Morgantown, Sharon and Kensington, Pa., to pick a few needy families for immediate relief.

The actors were led to the miners' quarters in the towns mentioned, where they found scores of children on the point of starvation, many barefooted and without warm clothes to protect them from the severe winter weather.

Danbury, Conn., Jan. 31.

The city of Norwich has found four theatres too many to support, and the Broadway, pictures and vaudeville, closed Sunday night for an indefinite period.

Harry Bulger, Jr., Given 4 Mos. for Drug Cure

Harry Bulger, Jr., 34, actor, of 301 West 50th street, son of the old comedian, was again sentenced to the Workhouse in Special Sessions, after pleading guilty to possessing narcotics. He was given four months during which time he will undergo a cure.

Bulger pleaded guilty. His police record showed he had been convicted and sentenced twice since 1922.

CAPPS OPENS SCHOOL

St. Louis, Jan. 31.

Kendall Capps, whose last appearance was in the "Greenwich Village Follies" in New York, has opened a dancing school here in the Odeon theatre building. Capps is established here, having played at local picture houses.

Frey Monologing

Henry Frey, veteran monologist, is returning to vaudeville after an absence of two years. Frey went from stage work into a managerial post for B. S. Moss and managed Tiiyou's, Coney Island, until Moss disposed of his chain to the K-A interests.

Billy Montgomery Beats Habit, Court Is Told

Billy Montgomery, divorced husband of Florence Moore, star of "Artists and Models," is again in the good graces of Broadway and free of the law. Billy is trying a comeback.

Last Friday night Justice Thomas F. Nolan, of Special Sessions, cancelled the year's parole of Montgomery after Probation Officer Jacob Lichter had informed the court that Billy had lived up to his probation diligently, reporting as ordered at least once a week; that he had been entirely cured of the habit and that he was employed steadily in a cabaret.

Lichter also assured Judge Nolan that the comedian had avoided associating with the users of drugs who infest the White Light district.

BEAT UP "PLANT"

And That Cost Radiana's Prof. Popje $5 in Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

Prof. J. Popje, Dutch scientist exhibiting a machine called "Radiana" in vaude and who played the Seventh Street theatre here last week, was arrested and fined $5 for assault and battery in municipal court.

Wells, who said his salary was $20 a week, testified that Popje owed him wages. When he went backstage to see if he had any mail, he said, Popje attacked him.

"My 'Radiana' machine, which will do anything a human being can, is a delicate piece of apparatus and I was afraid this man might try to break it, so I pushed him out in the alley," Popje told the judge.

Popje also complained to the court that American audiences are "too bashful," making it necessary for him to employ the "plant."

The judge asked Popje if he told the audience he hired Wells to volunteer to come on the stage.

"Oh, no! That would be poor showmanship," replied Popje. "Over in England it's different. Members of the audience will volunteer to assist one over there. They're not bashful like in America."

Bernard's Annulment

Joseph E. Bernard (vaude) had his marriage to Winifred A. Bernard (non-pro) annulled, on the wife's complaint he failed to state he was previously married.

The Bernards lived together two years. Vaudevillian did not contest his wife's suit.

BOOKING AMATEURS AS 'LOCAL TALENT' IS NOW SYSTEMATIZED

$5 Nightly, Win or Lose, Guaranteed—Prizes Won as Offset—Several Hundred Amateurs Registered in Many Agencies—The Worse the Better

Several agencies around the Square supplying amateurs for local talent nights in the small vaude and picture houses. Amateurs are guaranteed $5 a night, win or lose. Cash prizes awarded are generally $10, $5 and $2. If copping one of the prizes it applies against the office guarantee. Prizes are awarded on a basis of elimination applause and are generally on the up and up.

Bookings are from day to day. Agencies will not give the amateurs a contract in advance. They must report at the office at 5.30 and are sent to the theatre in a body, under the wing of a master of ceremonies, generally a professional.

Agencies discovered early that the talent would fail to appear half the time if engaged on any other system. Where the theatres are far out, as in Jersey or Long Island, the agencies had particular trouble with colored amateurs from Harlem. They would fall asleep on the trains and ride to the end of the line, consequently not arriving at all or late.

Temperament

While there is no conspiracy to keep the amateurs ignorant, the agencies never praise any of the amateurs. They get swollen easily and develop temperament.

Most important of all the agencies do not want the amateurs developing a professional polish. It is essential that they remain awkward, otherwise they lose their market value.

Individual theatres have to depend upon these clearing houses for amateurs because of the uncertainty of response to neighborhood contests. When parlor talent does show up they are generally enlisted by the agency. The worse they are the better.

There are many hundred registered amateurs.

Muskegon Oil Strike Near Actor Colony

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Oil has been struck in three places within a fifty-mile radius of Muskegon, Mich., where numerous show people have summer homes. Oil companies are signing leases and negotiating for more territory.

A few of those holding property in the vicinity are Tom Branford, Mrs. Lew Earl, Rawls and Van Kaufman, The Dancing Kennedys, Ed and Jay McCrea, Cook and Oatman, Capt. Max Gruber, Jack Gardner, Dick and Nannie Gardner, Harry Broslus, Mad Miller, Chamberlain and Earl, Bayle and Patsy, Gene and Myrtle Moore and Gene Green.

Chain's Tab Dept.

The Chain Vaudeville Agency recently organized to book Universal houses will have its own production department operated by N. W. Stephens, who also has charge of bookings for the circuit.

Tab musicals will comprise the entire stage entertainment and will be booked as presentation features in the Universal houses not playing regular vaude bills.

W. & V. Cut Salary Acts in K-A Houses

Acts accepting fill in time to break the jumps at cut salary from Lawrence Leon, Willmer & Vincent booker, report several instances where they found themselves playing in Keith-Albee houses.

Contracts come through from the K-A office, which has since attempted to get the acts to accept a cut rate permanently on the pretense that they had already worked for less money for K-A.

Despite ensuing complaints and explanations no one has taken steps to correct this practice.

Leon was called before the Commissioner of Licenses of New York last week for issuing play or pay contracts to an act for a house he no longer booked.

It is reported the act found on arrival that the house they had been sent to in Pennsylvania had discontinued vaudeville but Leon failed to notify them. The act had a two-week contract.

STILLMAN'S CLOTHES HELD

Three-Act Splits—Patricia Fay Sued for Costumes

As the result of a split between the Stillman sisters, Dot and Eleanor, and Patricia Fay, with the former leaving the act, Miss Fay was sued by the Stillmans when she held the costumes worn by the girls in the turn.

Efforts were under way this week by Miss Fay's attorney to settle the case out of court.

Houses Change Bookers

Several houses have changed booking agents: Park, Brooklyn, went to Walter Plimmer. Formerly handled by Fally Markus. East Rutherford, N. J., former Plimmer house, taken by Al Dow. Great Neck and Bayside, L. I., houses now booked by Max Linder; before by Arthur Fisher.

Norwich and Middletown, Conn., houses, formerly booked by Markus, went to Dow. Bethelehem, Pa., from Dow to Markus.

Three houses in Pennsylvania, Hazelton, Carbondale and the Westside, Scranton, returned to the Amalgamated Booking Offices from a Philadelphia agency.

The Amalgamated has reclaimed three former stands in Pennsylvania which dropped from its books some months ago but returned last week. The houses involved are West Side, Scranton, Pa.; Hippodrome, Pottsville, Pa., and Poli's, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. All will play four acts on split week booked by Bud Irwin.

MARK LEDDY'S NEW JOB

It does not interfere with Leddy's vaudeville agency, booking for Loew's, which Joe Leddy and Ed Smith of the office are actively handling.

LOEW'S FIRST YONKERS BILL

A new Loew theatre opens tomorrow (Feb. 2) in Yonkers, N. Y.

Inaugural bill consists of Five Maxellos, Margie Coates, O'Donnell and Blair, Buck and Bubbles and Parker and Balnell band.

DUMB ACT AGENT

Ernest Brengk of Brengk's Golden Horse has gone to agenting with William A. Weston, an actor himself once upon a time.

Brengk will specialize in handling dumb acts. Mrs. Brengk is continuing on the road with the act.

DEMPSEY FOR VAUDE

Sam Salvin's Coast Trip

Sam Salvin and his wife go to the coast on a combined business-pleasure trip the end of this week. Salvin will look over the west coast situation of Lyons & Lyons, in Los Angeles, where William Rowland is in charge for the agency.

Perlberg With Myers

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

William Perlberg, of the William Morris office, New York, is due here this week to function as assistant to Walter Meyers, in charge here, for that concern.

Harry Richman in Film House

Harry Richman closes with "Scandals" in four weeks and goes picture houses for a few weeks.

He will first go to Havana for a fortnight.

Woman Promoter Called Up for Not Paying

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Mrs. C. Lindgren, theatrical promoter, was charged with misrepresentation of employment conditions in complaints filed with the Labor Bureau by Ethel Holt, Alda Hendrickson and Dave Manuel. All three performed in an act produced by Mrs. Lindgren and failed to receive salary.

Miss Holt stated in her complaint she was engaged in San Fransisco and brought over here by Mrs. Lindgren on promise of steady employment at $30 per week. So far she has only received $15 and wants to be sent back to Frisco.

About the same situation applied to Miss Hendrickson, who asks to be returned to Seattle, her home town. Manuel is a local musician.

Mrs. Lindgren through a proxy informed the Labor Bureau business was n. g. with her at present but that things look better for the future and she feels confident that her proteges will be making a living wage before long.

Meantime the Labor Bureau has ordered her to make some payment to the claimants within a time limit or action will be taken against her.

Liquidated Damages Provision Sustained

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Another unsuccessful attempt to prove the liquidated damages clause in play-or-pay contracts illegal was made in Municipal Court here by Edward Wyerson, manager of Tiebor's Seals.

Tiebor's Seals were contracted for two fair dates by the Gus Sun office in Springfield, and it is alleged they failed to appear. The Gus Sun office claimed $750 due them because of non-appearance, later withholding a $400 week's salary when the act again played for them.

Wyerson claimed in court that the liquidated damages clause in contracts is illegal because it is technically a penalty. The court upheld Attorney Ben Ehrlich's contention for the Sun office that the clause is legally compensation for non-appearance, agreed on beforehand by parties of the contract.

Andy Rice's Promotion

Andy Rice has been elevated to supervisor of all Fox comedy productions.

The playwright and vaudeville author went to the coast as a gag man and comedy constructor and soon made an impression.

C. K. Young in "One"

9 ILL IN 2 DAYS

Unusual Number Last Week on Loew Time in New York

An extraordinary number of disappointments occurred on two days last week in the Loew New York theatres.

Nine acts reported ill within the 48 hours, necessitating fast switching by the bookers.

All were genuine cases and ascribed to the changeable weather.

JUDGMENTS

Agents' Dinner

Association of Vaudeville Artists' Representatives, sometimes known as agents, will hold its annual dinner-dance at the Pennsylvania hotel, Feb. 19.

A comedy announcement is out to stimulate attendance.

K-A WATCHDOG

James Dolan, former treasurer of the Orpheum, Brooklyn, has been appointed general supervisor of box offices for the K-A Greater New York houses.

Dolan had been transferred from Orpheum to Palace, New York, two weeks prior to his recent promotion.

DuFor Boys Splitting

With the end of the season the DuFor Boys, together as an act for 15 years, will separate.

Dennis DuFor has a production offer he may accept and Harry contemplates an elaborate vaude turn with himself at its head.

T. O. B. A. Adds One

T. O. B. A. (colored circuit) has another theatre in the Ensley, Ala. Milton Starr, president of the circuit, has taken it over by purchase.

The house will open under its new T. O. B. A. regime Feb. 1 (today) with vaude and pictures.

Tab "Blondes"

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" tabloided for vaudeville by the Orpheum production department.

Vaude version will be captioned, "Paris Is Divine." Title change was mandatory.

K-A in Flushing With Opposition

After talking about it for 10 years, Keith-Albee is finally building a house in Flushing, L. I. The independent Prospect theatre playing Pantages vaudeville, has been getting itself "in" with the Long Islanders.

The matter of film supply is considered important in the opposition that will be created. Prospect seemingly has Paramount and M-G-M to buck the new one's films.

Carroll's Unit Routed

Harry Carroll's vaude unit has been resigned by Keith-Albee for a full year's route which starts next September.

This makes the third successive year Carroll has been so signed. Charlie Morrison has handled the bookings.

MARION SUNSHINE

WILTON CRAWLEY ANNOUNCES

That he plays a wicked clarinet, with a contortion dance that he calls the "Upside Down Charleston." Places a lamp on his head and takes same off with his feet while he is doing this dance.

He does a pantomime number that is titled "THE DRUNKEN MAN AT THE WRONG DOOR."

For an encore Crawley does a lightning head-spin while playing his clarinet, and he plays one of his own selections that he has lately written, "Love Will Drive Me Crazy."

Just finished a short season on the Junior Orpheum Circuit.

INSIDE STUFF

ON VAUDE

In the death of Abe Jacobs, long stage manager of the Majestic, Chicago, vaudeville, lost one of its quaintest characters. Those who knew Abe well were familiar with the way he ruled the roost back stage years ago.

Acts playing the house feared, yet they respected him. Woe betide the performer who tried to steal bows and stay on when the time was flashed for the succeeding turn. Many an act tainly begged Abe to let them take a little more time.

Abe was a character in more ways than one; he had his own ideas about religion, as pronounced in his politics. Anybody worth while in Chi politics knew Abe. He also wielded a strong sports influence, and his "pull" was the talk among Chicago stage people.

The story goes that, prior to his stage career, Abe Jacobs was operating a makeup manufacturing concern in the Windy City, and that when the late George Castle started in the show business he needed some quick cash. Abe pulled some wires and got Castle $2,500. That was something Castle never forgot, it is said, and he made Abe czar back stage of the theatres with which he had any financial connection.

When Mr. Castle died he made provision in his will that Abe Jacobs receive the equivalent in stocks of $25,000. For many years Abe was an active member of the Chicago stagehands' union, and in all things pertaining to Chicago, Abe Jacobs was not backward in voicing his opinion.

While on the surface Abe Jacobs appeared hardshelled, he had a sympathetic heart, and with those he liked was always showing some little favors.

of the Rube Denarest act on desertion charges.

Joe Cohan, also of vaude, has filed suit against his non-pro wife, claiming he has letters written to an alleged sweetheart of hers, besides having her written confession that she was living with another man. Cohan was married in Erie, Pa., in 1916. He says the Mrs. left him nine months later. Benj Ehrlich represents Cohan.

Suit against Harry Abbott, actor, has been filed by Phil R. Davis for Nellie Abbott, night club girl. Lucille Cowie, vaude, secured a divorce from Lloyd Cowie on cruelty charges. Attorney Davis also filed suit for Agnes Bessen of the Frolics cafe against Herman Bessen, charging desertion.

The divorce action of Ada Hemme against Henry "Hemme (Dolly and Harry LaMore) is to be tried in Fairfield county. Hemme protested trial in Connecticut on the grounds that he was not a resident, but the protest was overruled on declaration by Mrs. Hemme that both her husband and herself had an established residence in Fairfield.

Mrs. Mabel Washburn, 3d, entered suit against Bryant Washburn in Los Angeles, alleging cruelty and desertion. Married in Chicago in 1914. Two children.

Adolph B. Wagner, wealthy Detroiter, obtained a divorce decree in that city from Gertrude (Fritzie) Wagner, former "Follies" girl, on charges of cruelty and desertion. He named "Bud" Hamilton, swimming instructor as co-respondent.

MISS McNEECE'S FRIGHT

Safety Cord Prevents Dancer from Going Into Audience

Thursday night during the last show of the presentation at the Roxy, Margaret McNeece, of Mulroy, McNeece and Ridge, roller skaters, was almost catapulted into the audience as a result of her hold slipping in an iron-jaw, neck-swing feat. Only the invisible safety cord prevented her hurtling into the audience or into the orchestra floor. She was knocked to the ground, fainting.

The act was the last on the show and the final curtain was rung down only a few seconds before schedule. Miss McNeece was more frightened than hurt, soon recovering and continuing the next day.

ILL AND INJURED

Nell Kelly, dancer with Fanchon and Marco, injured her knee while working on stage at the West Coast theatre in Long Beach, Cal. She could not finish the date and was replaced by England Ong, Chinese songstress.

FOX

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Business here this week capacity, and Paul Whiteman at the Stanley only a couple of blocks away. Instead of lying down under powerful competitive fire the director of this house put on a couple of extra acts, routined his vaudeville to run as a presentation and cut the acts down to climaxers. Result was a speedy nine-act bill moving with all the precision of a Broadway picture house stage production and resulting favorably, not only at the box office, but as entertainment.

Harry Hines delivers as master of ceremonies in high hat. During the first six or seven acts Hines limits himself to brief, snappy introductions in light comedy vein. In next to closing Hines got the front to do his own stuff after an introduction by Fred Berrens.

Although slow in getting started, Hines soon began to get across. Some of the business is a little blue, but the customers didn't seem to get those bits anyhow, and laughs on legitimate material were sufficient to warrant the spotting.

A comedy mandolin effort by a single labeled Paige in clown makeup, mixed with vocal lyrics, was particularly entertaining. Comedy failed to detract attention from Paige's skillful handling of his instrument. Returns were strong.

Fred Berrens and his 10-piece jazz band served as a background for the whole unit. After accompanying a chorus of eight and four acts following, the boys play a couple of numbers, giving Berrens time to do his old violin number with the Ampico piano for the finish. Attempt at straight comedy is unsatisfactory, but the musical number with the Ampico gets laughs as well as attention.

Kirby and Smith, acrobats, preceded the finale. Low comedy acrobats, both boys working silently, drew a steady stream of laughs.

Gus Mulcahy soloed on a mouth-organ and encored with a few splits. Followed by Roy Shogan, specialty dancer, with difficult buck and winging. Business, in addition, is flashy enough to register.

Screen feature, "The Gateway to the Moon" (Fox), not so heavy.
Mort.

CAPITOL
(NEW YORK)

New York, Jan. 29.

House is currently playing around with "The Student Prince" (M-G-M) and a Mort Harris presentation, titled "Dream Garden." Principal value in the latter item centers on production. If it hasn't too much punch in the running order, still it's not hard to look at.

Full-stage set is a terraced garden effect lighted in violet, green and purple, with the opening having 24 girls sprinkled above and in front of the stage band doing what the Revolutionary boys and girls might have termed a "hoy" gavotte. It isn't strictly according to Strauss or Gershwin, just one of those in-betweeen routines that threatens to break against rhythm but never quite makes it. All, even the band, are in Colonial costume, some of the instrumentalists being inflicted with queer-fitting wigs, a grating note in an otherwise attractive set.

Specialists list John Maxwell, Lloyd and Brice, Billy Taylor and Fain and Dunn. Last-named team came up from the pit playing two decorated baby grands as they were lifted on the elevators, got rid of two songs and finished more quietly than is their wont. Lloyd and Brice are a couple of comedy acrobats who theoretically didn't fit the surroundings but offset that diagnosis by making 'em laugh and getting some applause. Walt Roesner and Billy Taylor teamed to harmonize a pop number and then go into a soft-shoe routine plus top hats, canes and tuxedos. Taylor is a holdover and very much under wraps this week. A pip dancer, Taylor is doing nothing much more than decorating, and according to that should lighten a heavy facial smokeup. Roesner also contributes a descriptive comedy recitation, the band helping, which ends in a wedding between two of the musicians in meter with Roesner as the parson. Built up nicely, but the finish let it down.

Maxwell and his dual dressing and dual voice won heavy approval and turns loose a falsetto register that is liable to fool most of any of the boys on a picture house stage. He's so far from the audience that were he to do a straight femme it would be tough to define the impersonation. He is currently dressed as man and woman, turning his profile to the house as he interprets the lyrics. Chester Hale Girls, 16, do a nice cane routine in which the possibilities do not seem to have been fully probed.

The stage band of 25 continues a standout. Especially the drummer. This boy could easily be strengthened into a feature. Salvoing more after beats than a boat has back swells and tickling a cymbal until it laughs itself to death, this particular member also hops to a megaphone to warble more than averagely. Little doubt this youth is the best drummer along the street as to ability and showmanship, and that includes the dance orchestra currently around.

Finale had an electric display to bolster, 14 girls coming down from the flies on perches, the supports strung with lights and the center trio having a pinwheel effect chasing around them. Presentation ran 31 minutes.

House orchestra plays "La Gioconda" for the overture, and the newsreel mostly consists of M-G shots.

Business light at two p. m. Sunday.

GRAUMAN'S CHINESE
(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.

Sid Grauman has put this particular stage attraction on because of "The Circus," with Charlie Chaplin, running but 70 minutes. So he spent a bit of dough to put on an atmospheric entertainment in the interior of an old-fashioned one-ring circus. On the outside of this theatre are the menagerie cages, freaks, etc. They were right in the foyer and welcoming the incoming guests the opening night. Then, too, Sid gave away a lot of pink lemonade and hot dogs at the intermission in the forecourt of the theatre. That's all for $1.65 top.

Sid has an orchestra around 60 in the pit. Will Prior is conductor. Prior had one of those old-time overtures, with songs of the days when you were a boy, which served as a prelude to the opening scene. That scene was the outside of the side show with the boys doing the ballyhoo, just as they do on the big lot. Sid trotted out all of his side show freaks, from the contortionist to the tall guy and the fat girl and the midget. He did not miss a detail. That scene was not long either, about eight minutes.

The drapes were then flown, and one saw the interior of the circus tent. The big top was up and the patrons were in the bleachers. Those patrons were wax figures, too. There is many a near-sighted booker in vaude who would have thought they were allve.

First to take the big announcement from the guy with the walrus mustache were Samaroff and Sonia with their acrobatic dogs. Great to get a show under wal as the turn is fast and a flash. Pepito, musical clown, next with a short specialty, and then worked during the interludes. While they were waiting between the first and second scenes there was a pretty good male singer, who gave them "Pagliacci" in clown costume. Just atmospheric.

After Pepito the Rooneys—Ed and Jenny—in aerial trapeze work. They sure supplied plenty of thrills with their stunts. Then Jenny came back alone and gave the cash buyers a few more thrills on her own. Three Freehands, boys, did their gymnastic and perch work, which went over smashingly. Slayman All and his Blue Devils, eight, trotted out for their whirlwind stuff. Then Pallenberg's Bears, which always clicks.

After this was the piece de resistance—Poodles Hanneford and his family. Out-and-out show toppers as well as house fillers.

Not a bad show all around, and none too expensive.

GRANADA
(SAN FRANCISCO)

San Francisco, Jan. 25.

Fanchon and Marco's Crinoline Idea serves as a background for the Market street debut of Owen Sweeten, new orchestra director and master of ceremonies, at the Granada this week. A thorough musician, striking personality and with showmanship combined to make the new leader a strong asset for the local West Coast Theatres' circuit house.

The "Crinoline Idea" has been reviewed in Variety. Jan Rubini, concert violinist; Miss Maxine, eccentric dancer; Dullin and Draper, dancers; Jimmy Ray, soft shoe dancer; Helen Warner, comedienne, and Shirley and Layton, steppers, are in it. First number by the band, under Sweeten, was a classical, with the new leader soloing on the cornet. Regulars voiced approval.

Following dance by Miss Maxine the band went into a hot jazz number featuring several of the band boys in novelty stuff that caught the fancy. Sweeten and three of the band boys constituted themselves a male quartet. On next was Helen Warner, hefty comic, who sings in deep mannish voice off stage before entrance. Miss Warner clowns with the Crinoline girls and then pulled a skit with one of the band boys that drew plenty of laughs. She was forced to encore.

Screen feature, "Wife Savers."

GRAND RIVIERA
(DETROIT)

Detroit, Jan. 28.

One of the two outlying theatres of its kind in Detroit, in quite a lively section, seating over 2,600, using stage band presentations of good grade and first-rate films on first neighborhood run. Sounds good, and the Riv is nearly as good as it looks and sounds.

It is C. W. Munz-operated and derives its stage material from the Chicago Keith office (Lonny Burt). That should be the best brief tip-off on the quality of the theatre's stage shows.

By that booking method the Riv is, of course, playing pure vaude talent, but playing it in such a way as to make it appear the same talent was born in a picture house. Acts that K-A utilize in vaude houses simultaneously with an alibi for want of something better but not available, are, on this stage, top-billed, prolonged and forced all over the place, and not in vain. On the film house stage and in front of the band the so-sos of vaude are far more desirable. Their turns, if slim and impressive on a bare stage, are here made doubly so by sheer force of the musical backing and presentation surroundings. When preceded by that atmosphere they are virtually "in" before opening.

To set off its vaude talent in the intended manner, the Rix employs a permanent producer, Lew Kane, formerly road man and booker for the Loew western office (Johnny Jones). Where Kane gathered his productional knowledge is better known by himself, but it is nevertheless obvious he possesses it.

His current presentment, called "Carnival of Fun," has wealth of flash and mounting, offers them what they appear to want and entertains creditably. In other words, it is basically along the lines of usual film house production, also holding a new idea that might bear watching and trying elsewhere. The twist is breaking the show in the middle that work an act in "one," with the turn's personal drop used.

A gratifying relief in that it changes the pace and is a suggestion for other presentation producers to do likewise in cases where the act's scenery is up to the standard of the house property. For turns featuring talk the "one" arrangement seems handy and for musical accompaniment the band can be held in readiness in back of the drop. As in this show music played by an unseen medium held a surprising kick.

In the absence of the theatre's regular band conductor and master of ceremonies, the m. c. mantle fell this week on the shoulders of Coleman Goetz, outside act, while Bernie Chalk, ordinarily a bandsman, led the stage band, Keystone Serenaders.

Goetz, throwing in a lot more than his usual routine for the occasion, made an excellent announcer and send-in man, also going over in his own attempts. He is a smart talking, flip comic in any surroundings and will probably make good use of last week's blister gag after seeing the machinery.

Lewis and LaVarr, intermediate vaude standard, were the pair favored with the "one" exception. They clicked with their regular talk as never seen before and they worked as though knowing it. And then that offstage music sold them.

The standout turn on returns was that composed of two youngsters, Madie and Ray. They open on a dancing act, the girl niftily executing a toe and eccentric number and the boy whamming with taps, then into reverse for a series of rope tossing stunts in cowboy garb. Boy is especially adept with the lariat, featuring a trick in which he twirls eight short ropes simultaneously. This is made possible by five suspended by sticks attached to a belt around his waist. A very bright turn, interesting and talented, and high, low, jack on youth.

Besides including the "one" set, Kane's show opened in "two" to go full stage, with the finale later revealing an upper platform for flash effect.

All production work was excellent, this department also including an eight-girl ballet, permanent, in the opening, a special number and the finale.

About the first thought after witnessing this stage show is one of wonder as to how this same lineup of acts would go if on a bare stage, announced only by the side cards, accompanied by a listless pit band and confronted by the dead pans of an unexpectant vaude audience.

The Riv goes right down the line for picture house classification in having a solo organist, Merle Clark, lead the mob in song. Clark was formerly at the Michigan, this city. He had 'em singing when caught.

"Valley of the Giants" (F. N.) on the screen in first neighborhood showing. Severe cold held attendance down to three-quarters.

MAINSTREET
(KANSAS CITY)

Kansas City, Jan. 27.

That "The Shepherd of the Hills" was written in this town and the scenes of the tale, the Ozarks, are familiar to many here gave the screen feature a dandy local angle. Sunday opening was capacity, with long lines held out most of the time.

The stage show is a lively affair, with three comedians working hard and honors going to Harlan Christie. With the Louisville Loons he has been entertaining the Mainstreeters for the past 32 weeks. Opening number by the Loons was a descriptive overture, a distinct change from the hot stuff the band has been doing. Freddie Stritt, m. c. when the house adopted the stage band policy, was introduced as guest m. c. and started his familiar clowning. Red Norvo & Co. were first in a novelty musical and dancing number. Red's xylophone playing featured. The Haines Sisters, blondes, are harmonizers and guitar players of merit. Band's weekly feature was Walter Davidson's impression of an Ozark orchestra, and the boys hit it up with some old tunes.

George Shreck and Co. next with dance routines. Shreck consumed a lot of time clowning before getting started, and came near flopping. However, he left 'em wanting more dancing. Stritt followed with his singing specialty, and a fast number by the band, with Stritt still on, closed.

ROXY
(NEW YORK)

New York, Jan. 29.

Colorful show typical of the Roxy, strong on production prodigality, sumptuous stage picture and mass effects. Specialty stars are somehow smothered in the mass and you come away conscious of all the magnificence, but without the recollection of any particular detail.

Production splash this week is called "La Russie Ancienne." An explanatory program note is appended that the scenes depict the traditional entertainment held by the Russian nobles. Here was a subject the house could spread itself on. And did. A regal banquet hall done in the riot of colors familiar from the Balieff productions is the setting for ensemble costume compositions that are stunning.

To the rainbow hues of the banquet guests there are added the shimmering dresses of dancing girls, and finally the delirious color comes of peasant girls summoned to entertain the gathering, not to speak of Mme. Gambarelli as a Russian bride, dancing with Nicholas Daks as a sublimated Cossack and backed by the Roxy ballet ensemble. Through the 15 minutes or so of spectacle there is swift succession of solo and choral singing and dancing, both solo and in groups. Veronica's toe dance solo was as sightly as anything else in the pageant.

The presentation interlude also comprised an agreeable bit of song by Forbes Randolph's Kentucky Jubilee Choir in three negro spirituals, a setting of a plantation cabin being the background. Coming immediately on top of the orchestra's overture from "La Boheme," the contrast was excellent. Nine minutes.

The 16 Roxyettes put a vast amount of fascinating unison dancing into four minutes, being dressed in cloth of gold frocks against a drop of royal purple for a striking effect. These girls match anything on Broadway for perfection of drill and flawless timing in rhythmic motion.

A pretty setting went with the silhouettes. Three gigantic table lamps occupied the stage. Dresden figures decorated the china bases, while the costume figures silhouetted on the lamp shades became animated and performed their steps, one a pierette in legmania, one a bit of minuet by three figures and the third a comedy contortion dance by a dancer in Chinese costume.

News-reel intervened between this and the Russian scenes, showing interesting Movietone bits besides a wide range of Patlie, Kinogram and International clips. Movietone had in full Grover Whalen's welcome to Lindbergh down the line as well as the Irish leader's reply; Chinatown (New York) New Year's celebration; Charles E. Hughes' address in Havana at the Pan-American conferences. International's shots had the impressive funeral services for Gen. Goethals at West Point.

Rush.

GRANADA
(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Jan. 27.

Benny Meroff's "Congo Carnival" registers. Scenic effects are an African jungle, with many stockade, painted natives, grass skirted girls and plenty of atmosphere. The ballet, featuring Ann Shadkowa, go through some African gyrations that are a credit to the ballet producer, Ainslee Lambert.

Mero, himself, was next up with a sax solo, and Carl Byal, male soloist, came through with some nice vocal work. Byal has his share of personality and sings well. Broomfield and Greeley (colored) do some song and dance stuff that is creditable. Jack Strouse, blackface, made his entrance on the horns of a prop bull, keeping them laughing.

Rigoletto Brothers, billed as Broadway revue stars, presented some easy magic, a laughable dog with miraculous tail-control, and an improvised one-man band. Swanson Sisters, one of the niftiest blonde sister twosomes in presentations, worked with the Rigoletto boys, sister-teaming it generally.

Meroff and his men were doiled in white, the m. c. making effective entrance seated in a chair carried by four blacks. Meroff closed the bill with an arduous soft shoe dance, a la adagio. Edward House, billed as the singing organist, is a fav., but he should sing louder. It's a good idea. "Silk Legs" (Fox) the feature picture. Vitaphone subjects: Harrington Sisters and Richard Carle. Great audiences like Vitaphone. Busines good.

METROPOLITAN
(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.

The Met celebrated its fifth birthday last week and Cliff Edwards helped to do it. Edwards made his bow to coast picture houses with a decided flourish. His disk reputation meant something. As early as the first show Thursday they were standing 'em up in the corridors.

Al Lyons, newly installed band leader, was in the pit conducting "Orpheus" for the first musical number. The house orchestra has recently been augmented by six men, giving the combination 24 men. The boys are first-rate musicians and several are qualified to double in song and dance. Lyons is of the conservative type, more concerned with putting over band numbers than clowning around. With the assistance of three of the boys he put on a comedy quartet which scored. Among other things Lyons dubbles with the accordion and is no chump at it.

Fanchon and Marco's "Birthday Idea" was a flash layout, 24 nifty dolls who can do things looking great. These girls are a standard bunch and are always up to snuff in their work. Group routines by the gang of 24 were nearly excellently executed while Lyons was introducing a new pop number aided by Elmer Herling, band vocalist with a nice voice and an interesting xylophone solo by the drummer. Customers went strong for Harry White and Alice Manning, dance team who just closed in the prolog at Grauman's Chinese. They used their comedy routine here and walked off with a band. Their type of stuff has not been overdone around these parts.

Cliff Edwards followed everything on the bill. If at first the customers couldn't catch on to him it wasn't long before they did. He spilled a gag for every number he used and made them like it. After doing more than six numbers Edwards made it difficult for the finale to go on. He had to beg off. The windup was a huge cake with the girls for plums.

Norma Shearer in "The Latest from Paris" (M-G) was the feature. Pumount newsreel found items of interest. At the organ Ann Leaf presided in straight style while dispensing some tuneful notes.

CHALONER
(NEW YORK)

New York, Jan. 27.

Friday nights and only 10 minutes walk from Times square, two blocks off Broadway, two bits entitles the holder of a ticket to 11 vaudeville acts, a full length feature picture, a comedy, an episode of "The Trail of the Tiger," a newsreel and sundry other scenes—children in arms admitted.

For the thrifty housewife it's a good buy, and for the Chaloner with its 1,600 seats it's evidently a profitable policy judging from the capacity attendance.

Friday night usually brings the younger element out in force. It's opportunity night, too, and local talent, mostly furnished by Solly Shaw, booker, at from six bits to $3 a throw, makes its fervent bid for favor with the populace east of Ninth avenue.

Success is here measured by the number and volume of gallery whistlers. Failure invariably results in raucous criticism, in most cases a little severe. The audience, somewhat untutored as to correct personal conduct in the presence of apostles of the muses, insists on giving voice to displeasure.

Joey Ryan opened. Attired in a shiny blue serge, Joey set out to win the long distance mouth organ record by playing continuously, though unharmoniously, for a great length of time. After the first couple of minutes members of the audience began to comment on the boy's prowess, loudly debating amongst themselves as to his merits. When Joey concluded the audience seemed to be taking a vote which evidently resulted in favor of Joey. For an encore Joey hoofed. This effort tended to show that Joey's career on the stage is in his mouth organ.

Christine Reilly, in pink bloomers, came next. The bloomers are the best part of the act because they're new. Miss Reilly's frantic interpretation of the black bottom created mixed sentiment. The ayes won after a brief but hectic battle and Miss Reilly continued. Her next effort was in the vocal department. The young lady addressed herself to the left side of the house, sounding a kinder note in that section and gave vent to a ditty entitled "Is Your Heart Filled With Pain?" Whereupon a wag cried, "No, but my ears are." Failing to create an impression Miss Reilly switched to hoofing again, this time with her own version of the Charleston. She passed on meekly.

Miss Williams, colored entertainer, sang twice but no one heard her on account of the vigor with which the boys in the house orchestra rattled their instruments.

In the next act Miss Bekin was the central figure in a lamentable piece of business which might well be called "The Tragedy of the Broken Chord." Miss Bekin received a warm welcome—maybe because some of the girls in the audience liked her yellow dress. She sang a tuneful pop number with the passion of a soul in torment. She carefully treaded the difficult paths of musical passages with trick notes in every bar. And just as she came to the triumphant climax her voice broke and the result was a long drawn out wail that resulted in a burst of cruel, unfeeling laughter from the house. After that Miss Bekin danced an Irish jig and sang again, but without avail. However, she won a prize.

Dick Hurl, Irish tenor, died. He tried to sing, but the vast majority decided it was a waste of time, and since they all told him so within 30 seconds of his appearance, Hurl decided that maybe they were right. He cut it short.

There were others, too. Georgie Moser, who should be in a regular act on account of the climaxer in his three-minute hoofing number: Dapper Dan, who got the customers so excited some of them applauded with blocks of wood rapping on the railings; Jackie McCarthur, acrobat, whose sole piece of property is a chair, and who should develop with training, and a colored male songster who left them unconcerned.

The feature picture was "Swim, Girl, Swim" (Par.). As an answer to those critics who said Gertrude Ederle didn't mean anything it is noteworthy that the audience applauded when Miss Ederle's name was flashed on the screen. Mori.

CAPITOL

(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Jan. 27.

Broadway may be the street of chumps, but why overlook these Chicago neighborhoods?

One inefficient stage band leader was in a neighborhood theatre for several months, disliked by a majority of patrons, but was retained because business wasn't terrible. Rather than blow into another neighborhood or into the loop for their entertainment, the families continued handing out shekels to the theatre, probably just because it was in the neighborhood. These neighborhood chumps who swallow poor programs without protest are twice as dumb as the Broadway babies who buy tin watches and expect 'em to tick.

Al Short returns to the Capitol after leaving as stage band leader a year ago. He is a legitimate attraction. The presentation built around Short is rather mild stuff. Short appeared first to direct the pit orchestra in a classic and pop medley overture, and did it well. He belongs in the pit, but in all probability will be dragged back onto the stage by demand.

Following a newsreel insert, Short again appeared in the pit to direct accompaniment for a presentation titled "Hello, Al." Grayce Mitchell, of operatic tendencies, took the first solo spot with as sweet a pair of pipes as you could want for 60 cents, finishing with a pretty number employing 20 undecided choristers for ballet and tableau background. The chorines muffed things considerably, but may get together as the days roll on.

Petino and Carthe had a short interval with ballroom dancing, displaying fair footwork. This is none Hamilton, who sings spooky songs with palms forward and elbows out. Grace crawled into the pit to vamp Al as she sang, and a few tittered.

Buddy Talcott proved the most entertaining act. He appeared in baggy clothes for eccentric dancing, and later he eats his shirt front and a box of matches. This is none other than Chaz Chase using a new name following a personal episode. This boy is a cinch comedy act for all classes of picture houses.

The 20 chorines were more impressive doing a hand and leg routine while sitting down. They worked in fair unison this time. As a finale they sang a little ditty to Al Short as the maestro came on stage and pulled off a good trumpet solo.

Harry Waiman and his Debutantes was the Vitaphone offering. The house acoustics are not attuned to give the talking pictures more than a moderate break. Syd Chaplin in "The Fortune Hunter" (W. B.) feature.

Because of Short's return there have been many lines at 7:30. The house hasn't had this for some time.

PARAMOUNT

(NEW YORK)

New York, Jan 29.

No outstanders on the stage in J. Murray Anderson's scenic entitled "Milady's Fan," though two teams of hoofers, Bernice and Emily and Ojeda and Imbert rate highly. Draw evidently entrusted to the screen feature, "Old Ironsides."

Sigmund Krumgold, who has Jesse Crawford's spot, is the guest organist and delivers in an extremely entertaining manner with comedy lyrics on slides. A high hat version of "Sundown," replete with seven-syllable words, created a heavy response. Light material on the organ, but only if as well done as in this instance is a change from the usual for the mezzanine.

The Ada Kaufman girls, 10, are attractively costumed, but flop on formations and other business attempted. Returns slow and light. Rae Eleanor Ball, in bright yellow evening gown, failed to convince the customers as a violinist. She recovered slightly by taking Al Mitchell's spot as leader of the stage orchestra for a number.

Bernice and Emily, sister team with an acrobatic dancing routine, clinch with twin somersaults clear across the stage. Hardly more than an inchin space showed between the two when they landed. The girls also stand on their heads for a couple of minutes, doing splits at the same time and in unison. They double into next to closing for about two minutes of smart footwork.

Dorothy Neville, in broad-brimmed hat and hoops, sang Cold, but held the last high note for applause. Ojeda and Imbert scored in a Spanish fan number dance. The man is the feature of this act, with his tambourine interpretation.

LOEW'S MIDLAND

(KANSAS CITY)

Kansas City, Jan. 27.

"Syncopation" is the name of this stage show, and how the boys and girls tied into it! Selections from "Vagabond King" was the happy pick of Carbonari for his Midlanders, and the airs were heavily applauded. A short M-G newsreel followed, and then the stage show.

Band was seated in two tiers, with plenty of room in front for the Rockets. Opening number brought the girls out as nurses for a dance. A short musical bit by one of the band, playing a one-string fiddle, was next, and then Al and Alnssie Bloom, in their rag doll dance. Team has been seen here before, but hit with the Midland crowd. Jack Sidney, m. c., then sang a ballad.

A band novelty, with the gang playing well-known tunes relating to different parts of the country, was sure fire. A huge map of the U. S. was shown, with an airplane marker following the musical tour from Los Angeles to Baltimore. The Rockets were introduced during the number and stepped about.

Rome and Dunn, vocalists, had the next spot, and offered pops and some burlesque grand opera stuff. Great singers and entertainers, and the customers couldn't get enough.

Finale was one of the best flashes seen here. A huge piano, covered with brilliants, had a dainty toe daneer pirouetting on the keys. A set of electric chimes were also used with nice effect. For the finish the Rockets were out again and, with the sparkling piano as a backing, the band in front and the daneers doing a snappy Tiller routine, made a smash closing number. Screen feature, "The Student Prince" (M-G). Hughes.

WARFIELD

(SAN FRANCISCO)

San Francisco, Jan. 27.

Big stage show at the Warfield this week—67 minutes the opening show. Of necessity it had to be trimmed for subsequent performances.

Funny thing, this audience viewpoint. Lots of professional talent and along comes little Maxine Doyle, just a step removed from the Fanchon and Marco chorus, of which she is still an integral part, warbles a few song numbers, dances and clowns a bit with Wolf and another of the band boys, and a wallop. Second week in succession that this Gae Foster protege has come under the category of a "show-stopper." She should be in fast company before long.

Opening was a special arrangement by the band of "Souvenirs" which put the mob (and it sure enough was a capacity gang) in fine fettle. Then Johnny Dove, in some intricate roller skating, after which the San Francisco Beauties with Lucille Page, dancer, and Bo-Peep, interpreted a waltz dance that drew favorable comment.

Another hot number by the band with Rube getting everything possible out of the boys, and then Maxine on for her opening song. Some nifty stepping with the leader and Maxine requisitioned Joe Palange, one of the saxophone players, cavorting with him. Joe surprised in friends out front by his steppins. The turn got over sureiire and Rube had to beg off for Maxine.

Girls on again for a novel version of the "Varsity Drag," with Miss Page doing an eccentric dance that clicked nicely. The Four Cheer Leaders, and four of the orchestra boys, teamed up with the girls for some snappy stepping, revealing Vic Smith of the band as a no mean comic.

Doakes and Doakes were next with a new act which they originated here on the coast. Garbed as a couple of hicks they put over some parodies and special comedy song numbers that can't go wrong with any crowd. Their stuff was unique, to say the least, and they put it across with plenty of showmanship. Headed east soon, these two boys ought to knock 'em.

Harry Vernon, after a long stay at Loew's State, Los Angeles, made his local debut in a cycle of song numbers that also stamped him with the badge of showmanship. Vernon radiates personality and scored handily.

For the finale Wolf had a number of the band boys play soloes that brought out individual talent. Paul Morgan, played a cornet solo. Joe Palange clicked handily with his sax. Vic Smith followed with a piccolo number. Then Friday Smith on the tuba, Julius Shamis on the oboe, Eddie O'Mally on the xylophone, and Joe LaRocca on the harp. For the windup Rube performed on the cornet in a fast hot number that started the hands going long before the curtain started.

From authentic sources it is understood that the picture industry as a whole will not dare commit itself either way. Hays may be able to dress up two or three newsreels, but stands little chance with the others for more than an equal break on political propaganda.

Hays' Limits

As far as exhibition is concerned Hays' power seems to lie mainly with about 400 or 500 chain houses, if that many, and it is doubtful if these will be allowed to run an excessive load of political material.

The independents have control of the political situation as far as plugging is concerned. With over 90 per cent. of the independent exhibitors working for the passage of the Brookhart Bill and demanding a readjustment of business conditions in the motion picture industry it is estimated that over 7,000 houses can be mobilized for support of either or both parties.

Not having committed themselves the independents can command attention from state political leaders of both factions, supporting only those candidates pledging themselves to support the Brookhart bill. An analysis of possibilities through independent film theatres, which has evidently already been brought to the attention of various political leaders, may swing the scale in favor of Brookhart at Washington.

Hoover and Hays

Of the close contact between Hoover and Hays there is concrete evidence in the picture section of the Department of Commerce and in the instance when Hays brought Hoover to New York to address the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Hays is the logical man as director of the Hoover campaign, not only from the screen angle, but from general political phases. But it is doubtful if the Hays contract with the picture producers can be broken.

Meanwhile, the Democrats are on the alert. They remember the newsreel plug for the Mellon plan and do not propose to be caught in a similar way again.

Radio

The radio situation is always being studied. It is expected that the time on air will be evenly divided between candidates, when named. Senator C. C. Dill, Democrat, father of the radio bill, is on the lookout to prevent the Republicans from putting anything over through the air.

Bordoni's Special Songs

Louise Crosser Hall is engaged for it.

VAUDEVILLE REVIEWS

PALACE

(St. Vaude)

Of the nine acts on the current Palace bill four are featured and foreign. Of the nine acts on the current Palace bill there is no man or woman American single who might have comedy or talk, there is no mixed two-act and there is no comedy two-act.

Last week the Palace had an All-English bill. Three of those turns are held over among the four featured foreign turns.

Which leaves the Palace program this week music hall and without enough comedy.

Attendance Monday night must have informed the management the city is onto it. The show. Great stretches of vacancy on the sides, all sides and taking in the boxes. To the artist on the stage the orchestra's population must have looked like a triangle with the broad side nearest the stage. It was the smallest attendance ever noted at the Palace on a Monday evening since the house went through its first discouraging period, while trying to put Hammerstein's Victoria out of business.

That was some years ago, even while Charles "Chic" Aldrich still held hopes of playing the Palace.

To the old-timers Chas. T. Aldrich is the most important act on the Palace program, the most important in years in fact.

The newest turn on the bill is Moss and Fontana, a class ballroom dance act with a nite club, orchestra of 6 and neither meaning a thing, nor even the catch 'em encore music of "Hallelujah." Moss and Fantana might see "Excess Baggage" to find out how best to steal bows. The turn is under New Acts and probably in for one week only. Palace depended upon Moss and Fontana to draw, since the hold over objects couldn't be expected to, although every one got a reception Monday night. With all of the claques or friends present the house should have been fuller.

Sessue Hayakawa was the only foreigner not a holdover. He appeared in an Edgar Allan Woolf sketch (new Acts), one of those Edgar might have written while cooking spaghetti or mixing a highball—highball preferred. Still, not so bad, but easy writing and the Japanese is a good actor. But as an example of poor support casting, it's superb.

Aldrich was No. 3, and did very well. It's a question of how much real comedy there is in the whiskers bit for the time consumed, but with his fast changes Aldrich got them, and plenty. He's a novelty turn and one of the reasons why Keith-Albee can't find out actors could live without them.

Mills and Goodwin (New Acts), No. 2, a couple of young women with voices in popular vintage songs, nearly ruined the show. They were over on a nice appearance, and the house warmed right up to them. They had a house besides, as the vaude did not start until 8.30 and it ended before 11.

Among the holdovers from England, Ella Shields and Will Morris were a tie. Miss Shields did a new number for an encore, and not so fancy. But she has two bears in "Bertie" and the sap song.

Miss Morris, next to closing, hurts herself by the waits. It's a dangerous spot, and they started to work not because she did not please, but the waits were too long. A suggestion by the reviewer of the Palace of last week that she use a slide of the "Celina" song to cover up was an excellent idea.

Scott Sanders, Scotch single of the usual character song and talk thing, had a soft position, No. 4. He went right in his way, but there have been so many Scotch singles with the character song and talk thing, besides the English singles of the same type. But with Sanders at the Palace and Sir Harry Lauder at the Knickerbocker at $2.20 top, no one will regret if a devout wish is expressed for the speedy recovery of Will Fyffe.

The Flemings closed the show and the De Valery Girls opened it. The girls are 12, with a boy dancer (Albert) who unwises as the ballerino. He's a George Hale, and okay. For an ensemble turn, importance for this act was not indicated. If the producer cares to improve the act he'd better lower the lights on the gals. They look no better than they to dance and their costumes go with both.

AMERICAN ROOF

(Vaude-Pots)

Good show for the money the first half and plenty watching it Monday night. Hall and Dexter with band, No. 4, and Margie Coate, singing single, No. 7, tied for show stop honors.

Low Ida Co. opened with the man featuring his contortion and manipulation of furniture with tooth grip. Burt and Hazel Skatelle next, offered a fast routine of dancing on skates that also got over heavy. Hall and Dexter, mixed team, mopped up as usual with their regular two act, chatter and songs, remaining on for follow up. Turn billed as Julian Hall and Band. With the double combination, the team are splitting their regular act between the two sections with Hall's surefire Chaplin impression reversed for the band section and Miss Hall Dexter sewing them up completely with a black bottom finish. The band, nine pieces, offer instrumentation in several ensembles and for the succeeding Hall-Dexter vocals. Combo an out and out panic with Hall clever enough showman not to give them an overdose.

Perone and Oliver, mixed team, were pleasing in a conventional harmonizing contribution of a mixture of classic and semi-pop stuff. Both have splendid voices and contribute a routine that should hit. It did here. Shone and Rich, also mixed, went over neatly in a hotel lobby act Shone has used with divers partners, Miss Rich being his latest. Shone carries the comedy through wisecrack conversation over phone with Miss Rich, an eye-filling blonde, later engaging for some repartee, a vocal and much flash of revealing costumes. Had them all the way through, but winded in the final minutes, although getting over.

Margie Coate, next, sent over a song repertoire with her usual dynamic delivery and stopped every thing after her fourth number, a ballad. A beg-off speech named a cold. Marietta Trio, girls, closed with a pleasing combine of dancing and gymnastics prefaced by a vocal ensemble and registering with all. "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) screen feature. Eddo.

Harry Lauder Show

The recurring, unending and intensifying miracle of the world stage. Enough panegyries have been written about Harry Lauder. Nothing can be added. Except the afterglow of progressing time. And plenty of water has flowed under the bridges since Harry was here last. And, in fact, since he appeared before an audience last before this New York premiere at the Knick. Every time he comes here is something new. He was the only single comedy star to ever play the Metropolitan Opera house a full week. Now it is the first time he plays a four weeks' engagement in New York.

Not since last May, when the second and final tragedy of his romantic and unique life came to him with the death of his adored wife, had he faced footlights. Monday night, to a sold-out theatre, he was the rollicking comic, the comedian extraordinary. The Pagliacci in the flesh. He was the same laugh, he wrung them dry after he had doused them with laughter. Then he drenched them again—with tears. A few well-chosen words, no reference by name or direct implication to his loss, and a song of courage—and he had a thousand people weeping.

And he, too, wept. No glycerine. The honest tears twinkled in his eyes as the lights played on them. He filled up and cut his customary curtain speech of jollity and philosophy brief. Just then he wasn't the great artist he was but the big man. Maybe only a big boy.

In his program he practically duplicated the first routine he did in New York, which set the nation aflame with his name. In succession he sang the old timers—"Tobermory," "She's My Lassie," "I Love to be a Sailor," "Saftest of the Family" and "I Love a Lassie." And for encores, "The End of the Road" (the song that broke their hearts) and "Sing a Song," which touched and prepared them for the punch post-climax of the bleeding heart of a genius of comedy, singing a song and going on to the end of the road.

Other details are repetitions. Same inspired clown and character star, same meticulous costumes, same method of operation. The comparatively intimate Knickerbocker a big house, but one of the smallest he has ever played in this town, gave him summary advantages. He was in superb voice, and sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" without accompaniment in as rich and true a baritone as has ever been heard outside grand opera.

From the looks of the opening, the attendance, the enthusiasm, the genuine and unabashed affection bestowed on him, he is more popular than ever, and even the four weeks' experiment should turn out a money success as well as a completely satisfying entertainment. He stands alone, and will as long as he can stand at all. He makes any and every other Scotch comedian—at least—look like milky water against pure wine.

The first part vaudeville will be the most interesting with which William Morris has ever supported his luminary.

Nellie and Sara Kouns closed intermission with a brilliant array of duets and solos, still a neat duo-harmony of two sopranos, a remarkable combination. They scored tremendously, especially since most Lauder patrons rarely go to theatre and all acts with him are therefore revelations and first meetings.

Novello Brothers, cousins of and authorized copy of the Arnaut Brothers, did the famous "Two Loving Birds" material of the Arnauts, who used to tour with Sir Harry, also. They aren't Arnauts, but they will do very well for those who have never seen the Arnauts. Very well, indeed.

Great Maurice, sleight-of-hand manipulator, adding a Bulloff dialect that helped, or at least drew added laughs, ran a swift and baffling succession of good if usually conventional stunts. The Takewas, three Japs, two men and a woman, turned difficult twirls and balances on high perches supported on one shoulder of the understander, and the woman executed some of the daintiest Risley ever revealed, with a light parasol. Margaret McKee, excellent whistler, opened intermission, looking creamy and letting loose some exceptional melody, though the bedrock of her work is bird imitations.

In all, even for those who look down on vaudeville in any of its manifestations, one of the most thrilling and soul-stirring entertainments in all this burg of some 50 and more legit theatres. Should run its four weeks easily on its own power—meaning Lauder, than whom no man who ever trod the boards through all the dusty, musty span of civilization, had more power.

RIVERSIDE

(St. Vaude)

A nice, neat, compact bill leading up to and climaxed by Elsie Janis is a bargain for six bits. Monday had a light audience of nothing-else-to-do drop-ins as is usually present at the Riverside in these latter days of poor morale and poor biz.

Richard Vintour and Co. followed the customary cartoon pain in the neck. A pleaser all the way with grace and strength. The act closed by pulling a gasp in sheer brawn and muscle.

Joyner and Foster, burnt cork comics, romped in easily. These vaudevillians have their onions well digested. Their darkyisms are sure-click and they have a well lubricated manner of sliding across their stuff.

Richard Kean prefixed by "Mr." brings the rarity of Shakespearean diction and swank. He looked like he might be a strain on the nervous system when starting with an announcement that he was about to do a series of characterizations and opening with a sentimental homily in verse on an old bachelor. However, he won his case and his reward by unloading a bag of clever histrionic tricks. Kean has a classic Greek profile and a Barrymore coiffure. Probably the stars destined him for the stage, for never was there an actor who looked the part of actor better.

The concluding bit of Peter the Miser gave Kean a chance to splash around in the gravy, and he took a thorough immersion. By this time the audience had gotten over its early attitude of resignation and was interested in his personality and professional equipment. Kean, while distinctly a visitor in vaudeville, has been remarkably successful in adapting himself to it. Would that some of the legit immigrants were as adjustable to their environment.

Moore and Powell doing the major part of the "crooning and ballooning" routine which Moore formerly did with Carl Freed (now the maestro of a jazz band) found it easy. While dressing and acting like Freed, comparison necessarily is spontaneous in watching Powell. Although not the pantomimist, Freed in his talents in other directions equalize matters and the act is, all things considered, as good as the old one.

J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sales were in fine form. Their gags, new and accumulated, plus their infectious manner of kibbitzing, scored them a bulls-eye hit. Their present routine has more body and continuity than previously.

Miss Janis offered an assortment of her standard imitations. It would be trite to add that she was liked.

The dance act headed by Mlle. Andree falls somewhere shy of real class. John Walsh, vigorous tenor who has not yet learned when to gesture and when to refrain from gesture, was admired for his voice. Mlle. Andree and her dancing partner, Jaimie Del Val, try and fail to contribute something new to the w. k. Apache, their final number and, despite pretentiousness, their weakest.

ACADEMY

(Vaude-Pcts)

Things are running with more smoothness at the Academy. Still giving plenty of entertainment for four bits, but the bill enables the folks to see both the show and the film before midnight.

The knot was tied by Brady and Wells. This pair scored one of the biggest hits of the new Academy season and were entitled to it. Bigness of the house didn't feaze them a bit, and they were doing an encore when it was high time for the succeeding act to be on.

The headliner was Fatty Arbuckle. Roscoe proved himself no flop as an entertainer in his patter with Franklin Batie. Applause was legitimate and the laughs spontaneous. The Honey Troupe gave the show a great start. Here is one of the neatest, cleanest, most effective acts of its kind in vaude. Scores appearance and routine, with the work of the boy standing out all the way. A flash class acrobatic turn. Has improved noticeably since last seen around these parts.

"Brevities of 1928" is a Low Cantor revue, and still retains the doll dance as the finish. Depends mainly on dancing, with the boy showing to advantage in his specialty. Brady and Wells cleaned up, and then Arbuckle, who was followed by Roscoe Ails, Katie Pulman and band.

Since Ails first produced this turn he has shaved it considerably, and the results are quick and satisfying. Ails doesn't depend so much on character as formerly. Turn has a lot of dancing talent and give the stage a dressier atmosphere with its setting, scenic effects and the sailor costuming. Finale is a dead certainty for patriotic response, with an American flag hurrah. Ails aims to please, and does. He is ably supported by Miss Pullman, a chap doing Russian and a contortionistic femme dancer.

STATE

(Vaude-Pcts)

Quantity, quality and class at the State this week, and plenty of each. Numerically, beaucoup dressing rooms in use this week, with the 4 Karreys, 5 Freshmen, three-act, single, and Anatole Friedland's troupe of 18.

The first three frolics come under New Acts, although Barr, Mayo and Renn may have been around before and somehow missed in the files. Zelaya, in the fourth groove, is the chubby South American pianoplayer.

Friedland presents his nite club revue neatly, although contributing little personally. Friedland knows how to frame stuff for best effect, and if plugging a song consistently means anything, "Night Club Rose," the new Friedland theme song, oughta click.

The bill proper built up to a climax from opening to closing, also featuring a bit of international flavor.

"We're in the Air" film feature.

(Vaude-Pcts)

Good thing for the 81st Street that Eddie Nelson was in the line-up. Down next to closing, he was about all the natives had to laugh at. Norwood and Hall, No. 4, were indistinct from the back of the half-filled lower floor, besides which they had to overcome Abbott's hoke in the Abbott and Bisland act. Bad spot for the Norwoods and their quiet delivery.

Recktor, Chandon and Girlie started, with the man endangering any bridge work by letting the two girls perform as they hung on straps from his teeth. A foot-catch kept the male member suspended upside down throughout the act. Girls also tore off a couple of high kicks. It all didn't mean too much. Fair enough opener, but in need of a better climax to make it stand in relief.

Joe Roberts deuced it with his banjo strumming, mostly minus orchestra accompaniment. No reason for all of 16 minutes. Until he perfects Gershwin's "Rhapsody" he'd do better to leave it alone. The usual mimicking of two banjos and everything else as usual. You've got to like a banjo an awful lot.

Abbott and Bisland put some action into the show with their full-stage comedy act. However, the former needs to get away from the burlesque material currently used. Table scene and date stuff with girl before the drop has been wheeled to death, and, as a matter of fact, is still wheeling. So is that squares Abbott, it still won't raise him above being just a fair funny man. His fiddling sounds good, and he might stretch this bit.

Nelson kidded his way through. When he came to asking for selections and instruments to be played, he found out the 81st has probably lost much of its former refined clientele. The boys' evidence of boisterous tendencies upstairs led unto Nelson remarking, "What is this, the Greenpoint?" Lots of applause, though.

Maryon Vadie's "Dance Etchings," an all-girl ensemble, closed with "Cheating Cheaters" (U) the picture.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Murphy at their home at Meadville, Pa., Jan. 22, daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cane at their home in Philadelphia, Jan. 20, son. Father is the theatre manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Worthington Butts, at the Lying-In Hospital, Los Angeles, Jan. 21, son. Mother was professionally known as Rosalie Ceballos.

Marion MILLS and Marie GOODWIN
Memory Songs
12 Mins.; One
Palace (St. V.)

Memory Songs describe this singing turn by a couple of very pleasant appearing young women in Colonial wigs and crinoline gowns. The latter are rather modern through a split in front on the skirts.

At the Palace No. 2 the girls could have stopped the show. For some reason they preferred five bows to an encore. At one time it looked as though this No. 2 turn would panic the bill through that non-encore. And five bows are supposed to be over the Palace limits. But the Misses Mills and Goodwin are very nice girls and there may be a nice stage manager there, too.

Cultured voices that are unusual in vaudeville's harmonizing singers. Probably explained by the songs the girls sing, the old melodious and popular numbers that demand voices. Which makes this harmonizing couple all the more marked.

One is a soprano and the other a mezzo, though possibly more properly light contralto with the latter of some dramatic quality.

Selections have been made by a vaudeville expert, whoever did it, and the girls are in from the outset.

A big score for No. 2. This turn is almost in a class by itself for popularizing the long since grade vintage numbers of the pop variety.

Quite an idea and good for any theatre.

MOORE and LEWIS (2)
Singing and Dancing
8 Mins.; One
Oriental, Chicago.

This new partnership has a routine well suited to picture houses, and also adaptable for vaudeville. Patti Moore returns to the boards after several months absence. Her partner, Sammy Lewis, is locally well known as a hoofer.

The pair open with a special little ditty, then swing into some comic ballroom hoofing. At the Oriental Miss Moore pulled a few minutes of dialog with Paul Ash, the band leader, but in other houses Lewis probably will straight for her. The gags are good enough to be retained.

Act's forte is a duo version of the stair dance commonly credited to Bill Robinson. It's a tough dance for a team to do, but this pair handled it without a miss for a strong closer.

RICHARD and GRAY
Song and Comedy
12 Mins.; One (Special)
Broadway (V-P)

Richard is a ventriloquist with a flair for warbling. A little weak on comedy at the beginning, material strengthens towards the close while rapid delivery and ability to put vocal numbers over through the dummy keeps the act running at a smooth pace all the way through.

The dummy is costumed as a bell hop and Richard as the room clerk. Miss Gray plays straight as the hotel guest, carrying most of the bell hop's verbal artillery.

Okey in the deuce spot.

Mori.

SMITHLY'S JUNGLE LIONS (1)
Lion Act
7 Mins.; Full (Special)
81st St. (V-P)

Capt. Smithly is a good looking chap, billed as the youngest lion tamer in the world. He has replaced the Delmar lion act in Kelso Bros.' "Outside the Circus" unit, now playing Keith houses.

Smithly uses three maneless lions, one of them pretty tough and the other two fairly quiet. His routine is regulation cage stuff, including head-in-the-mouth and lying down with one of the M-G-M trademarks.

ALICE LAWLOR
Songs
14 Mins.; One
American Roof (V-P)

A lady of the night clubs who has done vaudeville before brings back a personality that is quite unusual. Red hair that is more than just a tint, a hotsy-totsy manner, blue eyes. She'll be remembered in the houses she plays.

Voice is not over plus on volume but melodious and pleasant, especially for night club. She manages to make unimportant lyrics seem smart. Works with man piano player addressed as Mr. Wright.

GUS C. EDWARDS' BAND (14)
22 Mins.; Full,
Palace, Chicago (St. V).

Gus C. Edwards' Edgewater Beach Hotel orchestra had their opening vaude engagement at the Palace. The boys have evolved a satisfactory mode of presentation that makes their's one of those stage bands that is not just so much music.

Working in front of a special drop, supposedly the Marine dinning room of the Edgewater Beach hotel, they achieve unique effects, utilizing colored spots to pick out various duos and trios of players doing their specialties. Tuxedos are worn throughout.

Comedy is injected by boys donning outlandish baby costumes. In one number the stage is a black-out and the banjoist, with an illuminated banjo, plays a solo. Another black-out follows and the lights up finds the aggregation wearing huge baby heads and dresses.

Gus has perfected a stage band that should go well and improve with age. A trio handles some songs nicely. Method of presentation is at variance with most stage bands, and a good bet for vaude or picture houses.

Loop.

MOSS and FONTANA and Co. 9 (6)
Ballroom Dancers
13 Mins.; Full Stage (Spec. Set)
Palace (St. V)

Marjorie Moss and Georges Fontana must draw at the box office to make good for their vaudeville salary. That's what ballroom dancing long since came to for first class vaudeville.

Dancing in nite clubs charging $3 or $4 couvert does not make popular "names" among vaudeville goers. It neither goes for 5th or 10th avenue; there's no in-betweens and little chance of 10th avenue falling.

From the Monday night attendance at the Palace, 5th avenue didn't fall either, nor Park nor the 50's, east of 6th avenue.

Which leaves Moss and Fontana, though of established rep in certain circles, not for vaude as drawing cards nor for picture houses, over here, nor for anything commencing to approach sensationalism or even enthusiasm in their stage work. The latter is merely ballroom dancing, giving Miss Moss credit for her graceful flights and letting it go at that, unless Mr. Fontana wants a little for handling.

And the Ernie Hecht Club Mirador Band of six pieces is a total loss, made so by the entirely senseless bit of dance stuff done by three of the musicians in the "Florodora" bit. If that kind of low comedy goes with the class dance team Moss and Fontana have been, and as a Palace featured act, then Moss and Fontana and the band should move into a Broadway musical needing laughs. There are several which do. But they won't move with this outfit.

THE OLD GANG (7)
Songs and Gags
20 Mins.; One and Full (Special)
5th Ave. (V-P)

Ethel Pastor is the only woman with this new act that has six men uniformed as doughboys. Miss Pastor possesses a beautiful voice which she knows how to use. With the masculine background her voice is an extra standout.

"Old Gang" idea is simply a setting whereby the boys are shown in front of a Y. M. C. A. hut overseas doing harmony. Opening has boys boarding ship. Finale has them on the boat en route home. Men apparently selected for voice with Al Fontaine taking care of a little comedy. Several special songs accredited to Gitz Rice and which serve to keep the singing away from the usual topical songs. As a whole the "Old Gang" idea serves its purpose.

In addition to Miss Pastor and Fontaine, the line-up includes John Wheeple, Frank Irwin, Bradley Lane and Emile Stetz.

Mark.

BARR, MAYO and RENN
Skit
15 Mins.; One
State (V-P)

Mixed three-act, with one of the men doing sap to the egotistic fop who complains of the women annoying him. Girl illustrates this and the conceited straight builds it up well to the point where the "mug" of the trio is smitten with a desire to commit mayhem.

After that the act goes straight with the sap adjusting his appearance and finishing neatly with pop song harmony.

Abel.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA and CO. (3)
"The Man Who Laughed" (Dramatic)
18 Mins.; Four (Interior)
Palace (St. V.)

Sessue Hayakawa tries out so many playlets for vaudeville he's entitled to sooner or later, if he and vaudeville stick, to locate one that will last a while. "The Man Who Laughed" can carry him around the better grade houses left, for this Japanese actor, who started in pictures over here, seems to command attention.

If his native country is going into the picture producing business, Hayakawa should go right back there. There's no reason why he shouldn't be the Dick Barthelmess of Japan.

Edgar Allan Woolf authored this sketch, and with no great effort. It runs off as though made to order. It's about a Jap poet or artist crossed by an American girl a year before in the Orient, or he thought he was when a sea captain grabbed his dame by force and took a sail in his canoe, finally reaching the Barbary Coast in San Francisco with the gal. And the Jap came there, saw the Cap, probably dodged the bullet fired at him, and found the girl, all within six minutes after the curtain went up.

Then it was simple to do a knife-throwing trick against the Cap, who had a gun, which the Jap thought he hadn't. Not nice of Mr. Woolf to make the Jap want the advantage of the knife against no gun, and it robs a bit of Hayakawa's sympathy. That portion should go out. Let the star say he can take care of himself against any gun, which he does anyway. It's more heroic, and this piece may play the Orpheum.

Hayakawa does neatly and with much restraint. He looks like a good actor if given a good acting chance: Support, you know. Lucille Lortel plays the girl. It isn't certain when she emotes whether she's sobbing or laughing. Her voice says sob and her face says laugh. With Omar Glover as the big, bulky sea captain somehow not fitting and no medal for the direction.

5 FRESHMEN
11 Mins.; One
State (V-P)

Youthful male quintet that may have been around before under another billing. Mention California nativity and the University of Southern California is carried in the billing.

It's one of those peppy vo-do-de-o combos doing jazz pops in futuristic arrangements, with a touch of hoofing, comedy and heated cymbal tapping a la Harry Barris of the Paul Whiteman Boys.

Ridiculously small upright piano is the sole prop, all grouped around it and cutting up in broad fashion after a manner which the masses have been educated to believe that collegiates make whoopee.

Satisfactory deucer, fast and snappy.

Abel.

VARIETY FOUR Male Quartet
12 Mins.; One (Special)
58th St. (V-P)

Four colored boys standing in considerable and urgent need of a revision, deletion and rearrangement of their material. Efforts at comedy are especially weak.

They dress in striped satin overalls and work in front of a drop representing cotton fields and a river boat in the distance. Incidentally the drop is nobody's masterpiece as art.

Act will have to improve to progress but can probably find plenty of employment deucing around as is.

BROSIUS and BARTON
Comedy Cycling
10 Mins.; Full
American Roof (V-P)

Brosius, probably of Brosius and Brown, teamed with Joe Barton, who has been doing a bike single. Barton is a harelip comic and okay at it, the wrinkle of a bicycle rider doing talk being new, or at least unusual. Brosius is a crack rider, daring and sure in his work. This was apparent even on the American roof where the smallness of the stage was a handicap.

With speed and class and some first rate laugh stuff the act should have no difficulty.

Canton-Gr. Rapids New United Week Stands

Two new full week stands have been added to the Mutual-Columbia combined circuit, Lyceum, Canton, O., beginning Feb. 13, and Orpheum, Grand Rapids, Feb. 6. Manny Rosenthal has been appointed manager of the G. R. house for the circuit.

The Canton affiliation replaces the time assigned to Albany, formerly a half week engagement with the other half a layoff. The show will hereafter go from Cleveland to Canton and thence to Akron. "Bare Facts" will be the first show to play Canton under the new provision.

Grand Rapids fills in an open week. The first show in there will be "Moonlight Maids." The shows will go from Empress, Chicago, to Grand Rapids to Cadillac, Detroit.

Schenectady's Censoring

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 31.

Police censorship over all shows here will be in effect as the result of a petition by the Woman's Club and the Schenectady and Vicinity Ministerial Association to close burlesque as presented at the Wedgeway theatre.

Burlesque has been unusually successful here this year, playing four days.

From Wheel to Stock

Cleo, Oriental dancer who has been a feature with Mutual shows this season, opened a four-week engagement as added attraction at Minsky's Apollo, Harlem, New York (stock).

BAND BOX REVUE

Comedian ..... Jack Erickson
Comedian ..... Al Flatico
Straight ..... Clyde Schafer
Prima donna ..... Anna Propp
Soubrette ..... Ruth Sunny Darling
Ingenue ..... Sheikee

Looking over this one at the Columbia on a Friday night indicated that outside of the three featured players no one on the stage cared very much what was going on. A pretty good sized house caught the morale and wouldn't budge except for the 12 runway girls and Harry Webb's orchestra in the second half.

Frank Cummings' show and on production not so bad. But it needs a marionette manipulator to make some of the cast move around. Ruth Sunny Darling contributed her share of wiggles without zest and seemed just as well pleased that there wasn't even excuse enough for those like-it-or-not-you-get-it-just-the-same encores. Miss Darling, a blonde, seems a pretty fair soubret, but kept it a secret this night.

Diminutive Anna Propp gets top billing to lead numbers, a saxophone octette and dance a little. Fair display of energy by this girl but at no time threatening to smother the other players.

Sheikee is the brunet coocher who stages the body weaving in an early unveiling number but never gave the boys high blood pressure after it.

Jack Erickson and Al Flatico worked hard for what they got, the former doing Dutch and the latter wop. Flatico started from the audience as a plant making a bum out of a stage announcer by having all the answers. Neither comic has an outstanding individual comedy scene, the top laugh episode being a combination of the two in a kid on "The Hairy Ape" during which the catch line was "To hell with 'em." This had the boys stoking a ship to finally wind up in a mutiny against the mate whom they toss into the boiler.

A satire on "White Cargo" was as weakly played as written, although the comics got something out of a carnival liquor stand during which the pitcher of water changes color to fool the sheriff. This was handicapped by Erickson previously selling booze at a wheel chair. The love potion thing and a prison bit by the two comics clicked moderately.

Productionally the show is using a forest set for the first act finish and repeating it for the 10:45 finale. Incidentally, the saxophone thing also got a double showing. Isabelle Van got some action from the out fronters by nicely leading the runway numbers.

But the smash of the evening was Harry Webb's band of 11. A lyric by a girl drifted into a memory thing which darkened the lights and then brought them up with the musicians as a hick village outfit. An applause building finish, plus a whirlwind Charleston by a lean and lanky youth had them whistling from up top, but Webb begged off.

It made it tough for the show to follow although the unit undoubtedly needed this added feature.

Romo Falk gets program credit for the music in the show and Teddy Russell the dances. Maybe it's too late in the season for the troupe to be overboard on ambition. At least that's an alibi. "Band Box Revue" didn't look like much of a show the night it was viewed but probably is better than it played at this performance. Somebody is entitled to a couple of squawks if it isn't. Sid.

Loses Back Salary Suit; Test Case for 2 Casts

Milwaukee, Jan. 31.

Members of the "Snippy Doodle" and "Crackerjack Revue," who held hopes of collecting back salaries, claimed due as a result of the shows going bust on tour through the tank towns last summer, had those hopes squelched in civil court here.

W. H. Bender, cast member, had brought suit against Joseph and Elsie Prusckha, owners of the two tabs, claiming that while on tour he was told by Prusckha that he must sign a waiver, accepting $2 a day instead of the $25 he had contracted for. If he didn't sign, Bender told the court, Prushka informed him he could walk back to Milwaukee. Bender claimed $104 in back salary. The court held that since Bender had signed, he could not now ask for back salary.

Other members of the troupes lined the courtroom. Had Bender won they would have filed similar suits. Pruschka is now running a tab in a neighborhood house.

June Rhodes Out

June Rhodes, featured fem of "High Life," was compelled to withdraw for the second time last week because of illness. She may not return. An understudy is now handling her assignment.

Dramatic Stock, Cleveland?

Cleveland, Jan. 31.

Columbia here, former major wheel burlesque house, may try dramatic stock under S. W. Mannheim's direction.

BATHING BEAUTIES

Knot So Good ..... Charles Taye
Comedian ..... Murray Welch
Jap Flip ..... Tommy Moran
Jack Wise ..... Mack White
Miss Hollywood ..... Evelyn Murray
Miss Manhattan ..... Anna Lang
Miss Atlantic City ..... Erin Jackson

Rube Bernstein's organization seems to have been under some sort of revision lately, for show is spotty, as though it had not yet been worked in by playing. Costumes have seen service, but settings are brand new from appearance.

Speed is the principal feature. The performance is an unbroken succession of incidents and the average for the class of offering is fair to very good. Fair goes for the chorus and for the comedy, while "good" scarcely does justice to Erin Jackson, a trouper of intelligence with a shape made to order for burlesque and abundant knowledge of how to use it. At the Columbia they are still fairly discreet in their hip waving and sex appeal, but this prima measured out her portions of undress and hotsy-totsy maneuvers with a generous hand.

In the sex appeal direction she is emphatically there, and in addition can handle talking bits and ballads. She had a dressing room scene with Anna Lang and Tommy Moran that had some nice laughs built on double meanings in her gags, and later on did extremely well with a specialty mainly of ballads with semi-dramatic reciting tion. Usually this interlude would be a blank by a prima donna, but she makes it count.

A capable assistant is Evelyn Murray, peppy girl of good figure and jaunty manner. She also can sing, and where the show is permitted to spice things up she looks like a winner. The runway girls remain under the leadership of Miss Van, an asset to the house and the visiting show.

Charles Taye, principal comic, does "Dutch" to the Hebe of his assistant, Murray Welch, a combination that is almost fool-proof. Here it works out well enough. The book is a compromise between the old "number-and-bit" scheme and the newer technique of blackouts. Taye falls into the common error is handling his blackouts. They're the same as everybody else is doing. If burlesque is going to go in heavily for these bits, why not make some new ones? Taye does the "So that's baby" thing with a lot of elaboration, making about the eighth on the wheel with that idea.

Welch is a first-rate feeder and handles a dance specialty capably, getting more out of the second comic assignment than usually happens. For this perhaps his dialect may account in part.

Tommy Moran is a big and good-looking straight, an ideal type for building up comedy for dialect workers, while Mack White is a singing utility man who makes his presence count in several solo singing bits, besides doing those building-up parts.

Production has a number of good ideas. Finale of the first part is a straight-away dancing ensemble that gets a world of action into the stage picture in spite of indifferent work by the chorus—as careless a lot as has been seen lately. The show finale is an arrangement a little out of the ordinary. It shows a bathing beach and boardwalk with a line of bathing houses in the background.

Second Detroit Stock For Irons & Clamage

Detroit, Jan. 31.

The Irons-Clamage-Rothstein Operating Co. has leased the Palace from C. W. Munz, to install stock burlesque. This will give the Chicago combination two such theatres in Detroit, with the Avenue already in the fold.

Art Moeller, formerly part operator of the Star and Garter, Chicago, and more recently franchise holder on the Columbia wheel with "Mutt and Jeff," will manage the Palace and represent Irons & Clamage here. The new lessees will begin operation Feb. 5.

Company will include 11 principals and 24 girls. Principals engaged are Charles Country, Jack Montague, Mat Ellison, Jimmy Walters, Sid Gold, William Greenman, Mildred Franklyn, Buddy LaVorce, Viola Spacth, Mary Todd and Dolly Davies. Ray Midgley will produce.

Palace is installing a runway.

STRAND, TORONTO, SOLD

Toronto, Jan. 31.

The Strand, former home of Mutual burlesque, was sold for $460,000 Feb. 2. It will likely be torn down to make way for an office building. It seats 1,900 and has been lark more than a year. S. Z. Poli started his wax works on this site. It was owned by Holy Trinity Church.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31.

Promoters of horse racing at county fairs would be permitted to issue shares in profit certificates, or premiums on racing contests, under the terms of a bill to be considered by the Legislature. The measure is patterned largely on the laws now governing races in Maryland, Kentucky and other states.

Its sponsors say that the bill would encourage a revival in interest in the breeding and training of harness horses by farmers and others, and would be of financial assistance to fair associations which have been losing money since trotting events lost popularity. For this reason they say the legislation will receive the support of many fair organizations.

The bill only affects racing at tracks owned by agricultural societies or associations operating under the membership laws. It is understood that the Jockey Club, whose members are influential in both the Republican and Democratic parties, will oppose the bill, believing it to be the opening wedge in a movement to introduce the profit sharing plan at all the tracks in the state.

Dramatic Stock in Casino

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

Casino, for years the home of burlesque here and lately devoted to the Columbia wheel, last night became a dramatic stock house.

Opening was "Rain."

The company operates.

Cast Changes

Burlesque engagements listed via the I. N. Weber offices send Raymond Midgley as stage director of the Palace, Detroit; Mary Todd joins the same company as prima donna Feb. 6; Harry Kelly, character straight, with the Haymarket company, Chicago; Carmen Guitry, Oriental and acrobatic dancer, at the State Congress theatre, Chicago, opening Feb. 6; Monfred and Lang, specialty team, with Al Singer's "Merry Whirl" (Mutual).

MARRIAGES

Madge Bellamy to Logan Metcalf, Los Angeles bond broker, in Tia Juana.

Doris Cooper Cliffe and Jerome H. Wallace, both of "Vagabond King," in Washington, D. C., Jan. 26. Bride is the daughter of H. Cooper Cliffe, English actor.

Eddie Frooman (actor), and Margaret Goodlad (non-pro.), both of New York city, have made application for a marriage license at Greenwich, Conn.

BOBBY JONES' "CRACK"

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 31.

Bobby Jones turned this loose the other day:

He had just been elected to the board of directors of a big local bank and was given the $10 which all directors are paid for attending a meeting of the board. In accepting Bob cracked:

"Wonder how this will affect my amatuer standing.

FLOWERS GETS DRAW WITH LOPE TENORIO

Brown Skinned Boys Battle Fiercely—Joey Sangor Beats Dorfman

By JACK PULASKI

The Garden hung up an excellent boxing card of little men last Friday with the top at $7.70. Three of the 10-rounders were all real battles and worth watching.

Interest centered in the debut of Lope Tenorio, highly touted Philippino, who was sent against Bruce Flowers, fast colored boy from New Rochelle. At times the fans were buzzing with excitement for this Manilla person can sock. The odds were seven to five on Flowers but the price was backed down to evens. The decision of a draw won no little share of raspberries. Plenty at ringside and gallery though Bruce won the fight.

Flowers was better at infighting, hit faster, more accurately and more often. During the later rounds he hit Lope with everything and shook up the man from far away. There were times, however, that it looked danger us for Bruce. In the fourth round he caught one on the button, spun half way around and touched his gloves to the resin. It counted as a knockdown. A left hook did the damage more than once.

Tenorio tried his best to land with his right, with which he won a rep. But nearly always it went around Bruce's neck. Clever lightweight this Flowers, and too smart to be caught with such roundhouse blows. Lope has had eight fights since coming to this land. He won all except last week's encounter and that counts as a win really, because it looked as though he left the match. He beat Joe Glick and he copped from Loyaza, the fight being stopped, meaning a technical knock-out. But Tenorio is wild and has plenty to learn. Anyone he hits will know it nevertheless. Title material, both boys.

Sangor Convinces

The semi-final introduced Joey Sangor, socking featherweight from Milwaukee, who beat Sammy Dorfman of the East Side. Sangor is the kid who twice is credited with defeating Bud Taylor, the sensational Chicago boy. After watching him pop Dorfman around the ring there could be no doubt about his prowess. Joey can hit with both mits and does. Sammy's dancing tactics meant nothing to him and it looked for a time as though the New Yorker was going to go out.

The coolness with which this Sangor boy fights seemed a revelation. The pace was very fast most of the way. Yet, in his corner Joey sat there as cool as ice. He never puffed and at the finish was as fresh as at the start. That's condition.

The other fast bout was fought by Archie Bell, winner, over Vic Burrone, rugged blonde from Greenwich Village. It was an uphill battle for Bell who was dropped for a count in the first round. His exhibition of nerve was admirable. Not only did Archie take it but he gave, and plenty. He had Burrone groggied up more than once and won the fans by his courage display. It was a case of the fighting heart outsocking a mauler. The boys fought clean and broke by themselves, the referee never having to part them.

Vic McLaughlin Cleared

Vic McLaughlin, former middleweight pugilist, 301 West 55th street, appearing in "Spring 3100," was exonerated on a charge of homicide when arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan in Homicide Court.

McLaughlin was arrested following the death of Michael Dunphy, 35, 50 West 93rd street, bartender at 302 West 53rd street. It was charged the fighter had struck Dunphy over the head with a bottle.

Chief Medical Examiner Norris testified that the autopsy indicated Dunphy had died of ethel poisoning. McLaughlin admitted he had had a quarrel with the bartender and said he struck him with his fist.

After Magistrate Corrigan heard all the facts he dismissed the case.

Helen Storey and Virginia Morena have dissolved as a vaude team. Miss Storey will resume her former single.

GRAY MATTER

By MOLLIE GRAY

(TOMMY GRAY'S SISTER)

At the Palace

It's time the women got in on this "Good Will" wave. If Lily Morris, at the Palace, doesn't accomplish something in that line for England, it can't be done. She would make even an Irishman think more kindly of the step-mother country. Christmas has just arrived for the Palace patrons and probably the circuit. Her white crepe frock with its crystal fringe in long points on bodice and skirt was most becoming to her, but was probably forgotten in the laughs that kept following it.

Ella Shields was as perfectly at home Monday in her various tuxedos and frock coats as she was in her delivery. She is polished and appreciated as such.

Moss and Fontana were the eye-fillers which included the set with its gold and black hangings decorated with black and silver crests. Miss Moss' white curled ostrich gown was received with applause by the audience. The previous costume of gold color net with silk flowers in deep shades of blue and orange appliqued and white beaded flowers between and finished with a hem of the net was a novelty in this ostrich age.

Mills and Goodwin, whose fine voices blend soothingly, made an artistic pair with their black velvet robes de style trimmed and lined with silver, a large bowknot in the center having rhinestones added to it. Their stockings were black with the silver slippers. Remarkable voices deserved more of an audience than they had in the early spot.

Naturally, for a nationally famed house, billing like "Dancing Colleens" wouldn't be aristocratic enough, so they have become "The Tarasof-De Valery Girls, and removing the green patch completes the disguise. Costumes of ruffles alternating purple and rose were also a concession to the honor of opening the Palace.

The sketch, "The Man Who Laughed," played by Sessue Hayakawa, was the only one who could be said to get any pleasure or entertainment out of it. Lucille Lortel as the girl, in green velvet and colored fringe, aroused no feeling except impatience.

At the State

Club Anatole Revue didn't create much excitement at the State Monday, but not due to any lack of effort by the girls. Their first costumes were white—once. Later ones for a song revival that found most of the customers with poor memories were pretty, especially a rose-petaled one with ropes of roses carried and a green taffeta trimmed with tiny rosebuds. Miss Hayes in gold lace and gold curls managed some difficult toe dancing gracefully.

Barbara Stanwyck Spurns Picture Offer

Barbara Stanwyck, in "Burlesque," Arthur Hopkins' current hit on Broadway, informed Harry Rapf she did not care to venture into picturedom.

Mr. Rapf was in New York the past two weeks. He is an influential producing executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. After seeing Miss Stanwyck on the stage he sent for the young woman and largely surprised upon hearing her flat refusal to consider a camera proposition.

Miss Stanwyck is reported swearing only by Mr. Hopkins. She is undergoing several courses of study, from accounts, laid out for her by the producer of "Burlesque," as a prelude to her future stage career.

Before going on the legitimate stage, Miss Stanwyck was Rubye Stevens of the cabarets. Her first show role was in "The Noose" last season.

New Zealand Girl, 17, Comes Over to Act

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Dale Austen, 17, of Dunnedin, New Zealand, winner of a film star contest of that country, has arrived here to fulfill a contract at the M-G-M studios in Culver City.

Special greetings were accorded her upon arrival.

ALONG THE LINE

Lya de Putti—and Griffith

Some girls just won't learn. There's little Lya de Putti. Lya made a wallop of an impression when she first hit Broadway in "Variety." Highbrows pronounced her beauty "sinister." She acted. Everybody thought of Pola Negri.

They're still thinking of Pola, seeing Lya in the current "Buck Privates," at the Colony. Lya has turned ingenue. She has as much menace as Mack Sennett used to give his slapstick girls. She does nothing but cast arch looks at the hero and dress up in boys' clothes to get in a motorcycle chase. It's about as bad a case of miscasting as has been shown in years. For Lya.

But all of this isn't fair to Lya. Despite whatever inside stuff there may be, that girl has not had a break. Perhaps she needs a Jannings or a Dupont. But what they did might have been done by others.

Not D. W. Griffith, however, who smothered this foreign girl in "Sorrows of Satan." What Griffith did to Lya in that picture was a pity. D. W. must have known or knows it, and the least he could do to retrieve himself with Lya is to take her in hand for another picture. She must be there and should have her chance.

This girl with Jannings would be heard from all of the time. And if you don't think so, see Evelyn Brent in "The Last Command" or think of Lya de Putti in "Variety." She has had everything since over here but Dupont-direction and what she has had otherwise she had before coming over.

But there are so few Jannings!

And Griffith came pretty near puttin, on the finishing touch for de Putti, as far as Hollywood was concerned, in his "Sorrows of Satan" that also had Carol Dempster as its leading woman.

Press Stuff for Tabs

Few of the picture press agents in town consider the tabloid requirements in getting out their press stuff. They send out minor stories two pages long and with the news buried in the last paragraph. A full-size sheet sometimes has room for such fan-fare, and they get in.

One paragraph is a lot of space on a tab. There's seldom time to read all the tripe, let along tinker with it. Press stuff is good and useful if it's gotten up from the angle of what the paper can use, instead of in yards.

Hottest Thing in Town

The stills of "The Wedding March" are the hottest things to hit town since the Atlantic fleet. One shows an officer biting a dancing-girl's arm. One has a gal with padlocks on her tin step-ins. With all the cutting on the picture, such spots might go the way of all adenoids. But Eric must have had them in the original hundred reels.

And the story is supposed to prove that women should marry for love.

Desiree Tabor in Pa.

Desiree Tabor, prima of the "Circus Princess," is vacationing in the Pennsylvania mountains near a hideaway burg known to the postal authorities as Freeland.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

This department contains rewritten theatrical news items as published during the week in the daily papers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and London. Variety takes no credit for these news items; each has been rewritten from a daily paper.

NEW YORK

Semi-official British film production, "Battles of Coronel and Falkland," arrived in New York, one of first pictures to make new bid for American market. Private showing Wurlitzer Hall Feb. 8; booked for Cameo Feb. 11.

Publicity for "A Free Soul" was kept alive by a neat play on the possibility of trouble with Equity when William A. Brady stepped into Lester Lonergan's role. When that was exhausted Brady applied for membership in the organization, giving a new angle.

Tabloids jumped to a story about Jack Osterman's tempestuous episode from the Casa Lopez, when, as master of ceremonies, he is alleged to have become involved with a rich woman patron, starting with table banter and ending with angry argument.

Lucille Pryor, "Follies" girl, paid fine in Traffic Court for running past stop signs, and the tabs built it up for a rave about "Beauty's mind on her boy friend."

More infringement suits over "The Spider." Philip Hurn and Percy Morgan, Jr., allege in Federal court action that their play, "The Evil Hour," filed with the Authors' League July, 1924. Plaintiffs swear their work was submitted to Albert Lewis and Sam H. Harris, producers of "The Spider." Suit is for $250,000 and an injunction and accounting.

Harry Lauder's memoirs, by the Scotch comedian himself, began to appear in the "Saturday Evening Post" Jan. 20, perfectly timed for the beginning of his fifth American tour. He arrived on the Aquitania last Thursday.

Eddie Foy's autobiography, "Clowning Through Life" (E. P. Dutton & Co.), written by the comic in collaboration with Alvin Harlow, got a break on publication. The "Times" picked it an incident for new display, detailing how Eddie's Lizzie was once stalled at Broadway and 54th street and Henry Ford himself came out of the Ford agency at that point and cranked it for him.

George M. Cohan, whom Springfield claims as a home towner, was toastmaster at the dinner of the Rhode Island society where he was joshed to a fare-ye-well by Mayor Dunne and other speakers.

Pictures of Maxine Brown, dancer, were broadcast by the syndicates with article saying she might never dance again owing to injury to her spine.

Annual conference of National Board of Review at the Waldorf gave a great variety of people in and out of industry opportunity to tell what they thought was the matter with the screen. Some of 'em got editorial attention; more didn't.

Stella De Costa, in the cast of Valentino's film, "The Sainted Devil," among others, got a verdict for $500 in her $50,000 suit against a New York motorist who ran into her on the street.

J. C. Williamson bought Australian rights to "The Five O'Clock Girl," current at the 44th Street.

Anne Meredith, former American actress, became Lady Sackville-West, when her husband, Major-Gen. Sir Charles Sackville-West, succeded to the barony upon the death of his brother, Lord Sackville. She was Anne Meredith Bigelow, of Boston.

Lillian Walker was sued for month's rent of her former New York apartment. She said her husband, from whom she has been separated for 10 years, agred to pay the rent and she moved without aware of the arrears.

How do they get those dog stories started in the back woods and aimed at Broadway? Even the "Times" fell for the Lexington, Ky., yarn about a police dog condemned by the court for sheep killing, whose owner proposes to take on vaudeville to raise money to appeal the conviction.

New York papers carried S. Z. Poli's statement that the Max Schoolman deal had not fallen through. Hartford "Courant" printed the statement first and correspondents wired it to the metropolitan dailies. Poli is quoted as saying "negotiations are expected to be successfully completed on or before Wednesday" (Feb. 1), when the Schoolman option on the Poli circuit expires.

Richard Bennett compromised the alimony suit of his former wife, Adrienne Morrison, now the wife of Eric Pinker, dramatic critic. Actor was up on an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed to take charge of his holdings.

Statistics from Equity: Thirty disputes arbitrated from April 1, 1927, to Jan. 1, 1928. Awards given to actors in 20 cases, to managers in nine, and one was compromised. Highest award was $26,000 in favor of an actor.

Theatrical scenery and properties belonging to A. H. Woods were destroyed in a $75,000 fire at 537-539 West 24th street, used as a storehouse by the producer.

Walter Damrosch was 66 Monday. He was feted in Indianapolis where he was appearing in a concert.

Hunter College, New York, has inaugurated the first college course in dramatic criticism, beginning Feb. 6 and continuing Monday and Wednesday evenings. Joseph T. Shipley is in charge.

City police raided the Oxford Club, 72 West 51st street, Monday night. Four men and three women were arrested.

One of the best publicity tricks turned lately was the emotional test by a Columbia professor of three blonde and three brunette girls from Ziegfeld shows in their reactions to love scenes from Greta Garbo-John Gilbert films at the Embassy theatre. The "Times" used an even column of humorous comment. The Prof. recorded the girls' blood pressure while the films were running on an instrument called a "sphygmonometer."

Illness of Eddie Cantor with pleurisy prevented the Philadelphia opening of "The Follies," and the show was disbanded. The comedian was near collapse during the performance in Newark Saturday evening. He will go south to recuperate.

The estate of Victor Herbert's widow amounts to $290,734, according to an appraisal filed this week. Witmark & Sons, publishers, filed an affidavit declaring royalties have shrunk to $10,000 a year on the composer's works.

LOS ANGELES

Dorothy Maekaye, actress, under sentence of one to three years in prison in connection with concealing facts in the death of her husband, Ray Raymond, has filed her appeal before the California supreme court. Action on the appeal is expected to be taken by Feb. 11.

Mary Miles Minter is back in Los Angeles doing a hidcaway. She rented an apartment in the Westlake district and is shying clear of publicity and friends.

Dale Budlong, 30, former jockey, was sentenced to Folsom prison for life by Superior Court Judge Charles W. Fricke after a jury fuond him guilty of committing burglary in Norwalk last October. He was declared an habitual criminal, having served terms in three penitentiarics for felonies.

Adamae Vaughn, Wampas baby star of 1927 and sister of Alberta Vaughn, screen actress, will remarry her former husband, Albert Hindman, from whom she was divorced about a year ago. No date for the ceremony has been set. Another to take the marriage chance is Ruth Emily Corbin, sister of Virginia Lee Corbin, picture actress. She will marry Richard Scott Thornton, insurance man, next June 27.

Marion Davies must appear before Presiding Judge Victor McLucas, in superior court, Feb. 11, to give her deposition in a suit for $21,500 brought against her by Henri Dumont, San Francisco shop keeper. Change of venue was taken to this county. Dumont took action to recover an unpaid linen bill Miss Davies is alleged to have incurred.

Frank Schumann-Heink, son of Ernestine Schumann-Heink, opera singer, is being sued in municipal court by Edward L. Conroy, representing the Screen Library Service, for $116.

Conroy alleges the sum due for services.

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, a number of years ago star reporter of the New York "Evening World" and for three years doing scenarios out here, is writing a daily feature story on the William Edward Hickman murder trial for the "Evening World."

The next western Ken Maynard will make for First National is "The Upland Rider." It's from an original by Marion Jackson.

Dr. William D. Duane, scientist and writer, near death in the General hospital here, was offered aid from Colleen Moore when she learned of his condition. Dr. Duane has been ill for several weeks. Doctors hold out little hope for him. Among his scientific works is a brand of perfume that bears Colleen Moore's name.

Maurice Kussell, who staged "A Connecticut Yankee," at the Mayan, is also playing the leading role in it. Before going in for production Kussell was in vaude and musical comedy. He is a dancer and comedian.

William Nigh, picture director, is facing charges in Los Angeles of attacking a former football star, while in Riverside, Cal., there is a $25,000 damage suit brought against him by Harold Benedict, employee of Soboda, Hot Springs, Co.

In both cases Jean Jarvis, Hollywood dancer, figures. Nigh, it is alleged by Benedict, wrecked the latter's car when he couldn't tell him where to find Miss Jarvis. Then, when police failed to find a registration card in the machine, Benedict was forced to spend a night in jail. This prompted him to start the damage action against Nigh.

Roy Guisti, known on the screen as Roy D'Arcy, will appear before Superior Court Judge Beecher Feb. 3 to answer his wife's alimony plea. She asks $1,500 a month alimony and $2,500 attorney fees. D'Arcy sued for divorce about a month ago, charging cruelty.

Myrtle Valsted, 17, "Miss Chicago" in the annual Atlantic City pageant, arrived in Hollywood with an eye for the kleigs. Accompanied by mother.

Two suspects in the recent holdup of Jack Dempscy's Barbaro Hotel Cafe have been picked up by police. One, giving his name as Richard D. Dalton, was arrested in Dayton, O., and confessed to the robbery. Another, Andrew Johns, is in custody here. The job was done by three men, who obtained $175 from the cash register in the cafe.

Prolonged litigation in the divorce suit against Earl L. Fraser, millionaire amusement man of Ocean Park, ended with Superior Court Judge Montgomery granting Mrs. Lillian Fraser an interlocutory decree. Grounds were mental and physical cruelty.

James Ponia Spencer, Hawaiian screen actor and stunt swimmer, has not been regular in his alimony allowances according to Mrs. Ernia R. Spencer, from whom he was divorced in 1926. She brought the matter up for adjustment before Superior Court Judge Bowron, who continued the case for further evidence.

Mrs. Mildred E. Williams obtained an interloeutory decree of divorce from Frank D. Williams, motion picture appliances inventor. She was given custody of their child and half interest in community property, estimated at $500,000.

The Kerrick case, in which Tom Kerrick, picture cowboy, was shot to death, went to trial for the second time, with Mrs. Sarah Kerrick, widow, the only one of five now charged with manslaughter. Iris Burns, Anita Davis, Henry Isabell and Joe Hunt, all at the party ending in Kerrick's death, were cleared of the manslaughter charges by the District Attorney. Her former defendants are testifying as witnesses.

J. Stuart Blackton, former picture producer, got a suspended sentence in a San Diego court after being fined $100 or 50 days in jail for an unpaid wage claim filed against him by a former employee. Blackton promised to pay.

Henry Schumann-Heink, son of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, was indicted by a grand jury in San Diego, Cal., charged with six counts of grand theft and two counts of violating the corporate securities act. Bail was set at $10,000.

F. H. Duncan, father of the Duncan Sisters, filed suit in superior court for $7,188 against Lucille Calvin, family friend. Duncan claims the amount is due him for managing her property and handling her affairs.

Mrs. Maybelle Eaves Kent has been granted an interlocutory divorce from Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Paramount studios, by Judge Bowron in superior court. Decree was given on a charge of desertion which Mrs. Kent said occurred in 1925. Kent agreed to settle $140,000 on his wife and establish a $40,000 trust fund for their daughter Peggy. Mrs. Kent receives the custody of the child. Action was not contested.

"Round by Round" will be the final release title of Hal Roach's latest Max Davidson comedy for M-G-M distribution. Former title was "Laugh That Off."

Donald Davis, son of Owen Davis, playwright has admitted separation from his wife, the former Marjorie Durr. She returned to her home in New York. Davis said he hopes for a reconciliation.

Ralph Ceder, director at Paramount, is charged with cruelty in a divorce suit filed by his wife, Elizabeth Ceder. She also claims he staged drunken parties at home and beat her up. Mr. Ceder claims the director earns $350 a week, and asks for alimony of $175 weekly. Ceder is paying alimony to a previous wife.

Irving Thalberg, M-G-M executive, and his wife, Norma Shearer, screen actress, sail from New York on the "Mauretania" Feb. 21 for a three-month honeymoon trip to Europe.

Olive Day, film actress, was denied application for alimony by Judge Bowron. She sued George E. Day for divorce claiming he was too friendly with the former wife of Billy Sunday, Jr.

C. C. Pyle has a scheme of a foot race from Los Angeles to New York, with entries to pay $25 each, and a first cash prize of $25,000. The trip to be made within 65 days with Pyle to get his through publicity stunts, etc.

CHICAGO

Acting Chairman Sykes of the Federal Radio Commission has declared that there are too many radio stations in Chicago.

Entire personnel of the Chicago Opera left Chicago Sunday for Boston.

David Rosenthal and Earl Campbell, ticket scalpers, were arrested on the second day of an anti-scalping campaign. Six specs were arrested Jan. 26, opening day of drive.

Mayor Thompson will head a party of more than 400 Chiengoans on a trip to New Orleans Jan. 31. The party will attend a four-day flood control conference and the incidental horse races, ja-alai matches and festivals.

Guarantors of the Chicago Opera held the bag this year to the tune of $450,000.

Peace has been declared between Irene Castle McLaughlin, former dancer, and Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, city health officer. The two notables were waging a war over Kegel's recent edict sentencing all stray dogs to death. Kegel has just approved an arrangement by Mrs. McLaughlin whereby dogs will be turned over to the Chicago Humane Society.

Federal Judge Carpenter issued temporary injunctions against 37 places charged with violation of the booze act. Orders restrain owners from further violations of the act until permanent injunctions of one year's duration may be granted.

Good looks and driving ability are the prime requisites for a job with the Blue Bird Cab Company, newly organized Chicago taxi firm. All of the drivers are to be girls, wear knickers and three are on the job with prospects of 200 in the early future. Girls will work only during the day. Five new cabs and drivers are promised each week until a total of 200 cabs are on duty.

Arrangements have been completed by Samuel Insull for the financing of the Twenty-Wacker Drive building, erected as a permanent home for the Chicago Opera. The $20,000,000 required was obtained at less than 6 per cent interest. Preferred stock in the venture will be sold to Chicago people with an eye to making it a purely civic enterprise.

Bell boys of the Hotel Sherman have stated that they will not join the Bell Boys' Protective Association, newly organized local union, unless they are certain "that there is someone responsible behind it." Same attitude in other hotels. C. R. Heffernan, the "organizer," is planning two big meetings for the "hops" in the near future.

Thousands of dollars' worth of unclaimed merchandise, shipped to Chicago via parcel post, and including everything from grape juice to insect powder, was auctioned off in the United States Appraisers' stores building last week. Several picture reels went under the hammer at $2 each.

Albert Smith, 64, of the White House Tavern at Niles Center, was shot and killed by three youthful bandits Jan. 22. His brother, Maurice, owner of the establishment, was knocked unconscious. The men made their getaway without stopping to rifle the cash register.

Crossed wires are believed to have caused the blaze which completely razed the historic Niles Tavern at Niles, Ill., Jan. 23. It was owned by Mike O'Boyle. Loss estimated at $50,000.

Samuel Crowder, negro spirit "medium," was found dead in his rooms at 3645 Indiana avenue with his throat slit from ear to ear. Tenants told police that he had been showing rooms for rent to a man who is believed to have robbed and then murdered him.

Andreas Pavley, head of the Pavley-Oukransky ballet at the Chicago Opera, has become a naturalized American. Pavley is a native of Holland, in this country 10 years.

SAN FRANCISCO

Dr. F. L. R. Silvey of Universal City, fiance of Mrs. Genevieve Paddleford, former wife of Ben Teal, stage director and producer, requested Warden Holohan of San Quentin, where the woman is now doing a term for larceny, that he be permitted to marry Mrs. Paddleford and take up his residence within the prison walls. Dr. Silvey is said to be quite wealthy. He recently proposed to Mrs. Paddleford by telegram, with his offer accepted. Her sentence of from one to 10 years will preclude any possibility of marriage for some time.

Superior Court Judge Graham issued letters of administration to the widow of "Spider" Kelly, whose death occurred recently, thus putting a temporary stop to a contest started by Thomas D. Curtin, son of the former fighter.

Holy City, a religious colony about 75 miles south of here in the Santa Cruz mountains, is in financial difficulty. The entire estate was attached by Mrs. Evelyn Rosencrantz of Los Angeles. She alleges breach of promise to wed, made by William E. Riker, head of the colony.

Another blow that hit the colony was word from the Federal Radio Commission that it will not renew its broadcast station license when it expires March 15, due to necessity of eliminating about 300 stations throughout the country.

LONDON

Billy Merson is the star, supported by Stephanie Stephens, Alice O'Day, Hermione Baddeley, Charles Garry, A. H. Mayne, Bert Edwards, Francis Ross-Campbell, Lawrence Anderson.

Olga Lindo, a discovery of Reandean, Ltd., who has made her name chiefly in "bad girl" parts, is going into management on her own, having turned herself into a company.

Next vehicle for Sybil Thorndike will be "Judith of Israel," biblical play by the American, Dr. de Murray Baruch. Lewis Casson will play Holofernes in the play, which is due at the Strand Feb. 15.

After achieving an unlooked-for run at four theatres, "Dracula" closes at the Garrick Jan. 28. It will be followed by "In Gods," a new play by E. C. Middleton, author of "Potiphar's Wife."

Eva Moore will play the leading role supported by Ive de Voeux, Robert Horton, Walter Sondes.

A new policy is being introduced at the Everyman theatre, where cheaper prices will prevail and all seats are bookable in advance. John Galsworthy's "The Eldest Son" is the next production, succeeding "A Night in June."

Clayton and Waller are bringing "Sauce for the Gander" ("The Cradle Snatchers") to the Lyric Jan. 30 in its considerably altered form, to pass the censor. The three wives are played by Iris Hoey, Helen Haye, Nancy Price, and their spouses by Spencer Trevor, Hilton Allen, Robert English.

Amerique and Neville, vaude dancers, are temporarily out of vaude, fulfilling a four-week engagement at the Club Lido, Boston, booked in by John Daley of the Alf T. Wilton agency.

PALM BEACH

Palm Beach, Jan. 28.

Arthur Hammerstein has consented to postpone his trip to Berlin, where he is planning to produce "Rose-Marie," to act as chairman of the managers' committee arranging the annual Kiwanis Club benefit at the Paramount theatre, Feb. 18. Hammerstein ran the show last year and turned over more than $12,000 to the Kiwanians for underprivileged children.

Joe Leblang is Hammerstein's chief aide on the committee and has gotten behind the show with a determination to double the amount raised last season. Any charitable affair in which Leblang is interested is bound to be a success and he is out lining up talent a month ahead of the show.

It is likely that Al Jolson will serve as master of ceremonies. Weber and Fields, expected here shortly, may be among the acts on the bill. All acts and orchestras working night clubs here have agreed to appear.

Tunney's Ignorant Milk

Gene Tunney, Tex Rickard, Rube Goldberg, Ring Lardner and Grantland Rice were lunching at the Palm Beach Country Club Monday. Tunney ordered a ham sandwich and a glass of milk.

When waiter brought the chow, Tunney asked:

"Say, waiter, is this cultured milk?"

"No, Gene," piped Rube, "that's ignorant milk from a stupid cow."

"I don't think much of your humor, Rube," retorted Tunney, carrying the torch.

Joe Leblang got into the third flight semi-finals of the annual Lake Worth golf tournament this week, shooting the course in the early nineties, but was eliminated Thursday by W. M. Kelly of Atlantic City.

Al Jolson got into the Artists' and Writers' tournament and broke through to the second round of the second flight matches. He lost his third round pasture battle when he agreed to toss a coin instead of playing an extra hole when it was all even after the 18th hole was played. He called "head." Clowning even in defeat, Al said: "I lost the match by a tail."

Phil Dunning and George Abbott, collaborating playwrights and still pals, came down with John Golden and the artists and writers. Dunning, who never took a golf lesson in his life, got into the semi-finals, drawing a couple of byes. The writers of "Broadway" and "Coquette" plan to stay here a couple of weeks.

Jolson's Repartee

Three newspaper boys tried to interview Al Jolson while he was playing tournament golf and grabbed themselves a couple of laughs. The interview:

First newspaper man: "Say, Al, what did you ever write to get in this so-called tournament?"

Al: "I wrote the Shuberts I was coming to Palm Beach."

Second scribe: "Who's gonna win the tournament, Al?"

Al: "I am, brother, but I don't know what I'm going to do with the mahogany zither when I get it."

Third reporter: "You're not such a terrible golfer, are you, Al?"

Al: "That reminds me of a story. I was playing with Walter Hagen out in Hollywood last spring and Walter drove his first shot about 350 yards straight to the pin. A mug standing beside me cracked: 'Don't you wish you could do that, Al?' And I answered: 'Ask Hagen to sing "Mammy."' It all evens up in the long run."

Jack Hobby, Frier and round-the-world traveler, is serving his fifth year as assistant manager of the Royal Poinciana, class hotel of the resort. Jack has supervision over the Coconut Grove, the Danse de la Mer and the weekly cakewalk contests put on by colored help of the hostelry.

The newspaper artists' and writers' dinner Friday night, following their golf tournament, was turned into one of those "burn up" parties, one of the hottest ever seen here. Grantland Rice called it "the greatest golf tourney ever poured."

During the after dinner speech-making Rube Goldberg razzed Clare Briggs while Briggs applied the torch to John Golden. Canards were hurled back and forth across the table, canards being polite in Florida for damn lies.

Goldberg and Briggs grabbed off publicity honors, but it is charged they violated all ethics by buying lunch for the lady reporters most of the week. These charges are raised by a number of writers and sketchers, who are also widely known but are less liberal in their entertainment budget.

The association was invited to return next year, but they left the gathering place open. The gang left plenty of jack here, several of them having to borrow after their first day or two. The party was organized on a basis of $215 for the trip, including American plan hotels, but some of them paid that much in taxi fares.

Anyhow it was a great party, promoted by Ray McCarthy, sports exploitation man for the Florida East Coast hotels.

Lucky Stiffs

Recent arrivals here are Louise Groody, Billie Burke and daughter, Patricia, Harry Frazee, Gloria Swanson and husband, and Walter Reade. Joe Weber is due in from Havana today (Tuesday).

Chez Bouche announces the opening on Thursday of "The Masked Countess," exploited as a Russian noblewoman in this country incognito.

FEDERAL AGENT POSER

Bartender in O'Leary's Makes Accusation—Two Others Fade

Charged with posing as an internal revenue agent and grand larceny, James Harrington, 32, 145 West 47th street, was held in $1,000 bail before Magistrate McQuade in West Side Court. The case was adjourned until Feb. 4.

According to William O'Leary, bartender in Billy's Refreshment Bar, 117 West 54th street, Harrington and two unidentified men entered the 54th street place about 3 a. m., announcing they were revenue men. The two unidentified told O'Leary to put on his hat and coat and accompany them to the station house.

Harrington, O'Leary said, remained behind, opening the cash register and taking $52. When the two men who had O'Leary reached 7th avenue and 54th street they apparently lost their nerve. When O'Leary looked for a cop, they disappeared.

O'Leary rushed back to the place just in time, he said, to see Harrington running away. Policeman Thomas Harges, West 47th street station, took up the chase and after firing a couple of shots, got Harrington. When searched a bogus badge was found in his possession.

Harrington denied that he had posed as a federal officer and also denied that he had taken any money from the cash register. He said he did not know anything about the two men who are supposed to have taken O'Leary out of the place.

Repulsed by Hairdresser, Girls Are Beaten Up

Robert Moore, 38, 462 West 22nd street, several years ago a lightweight pugilist fighting as Bobby Moore, was before Magistrate Earl Smith in West Side Court on a charge of disorderly conduct. After pleading guilty he was fined $10.

Moore was arrested by policeman Bob Rush, West 47th street station, on complaint of Muriel Montgomery, 201 West 54th street, hairdresser. The girl, accompanied by her sister, said they met Moore in a restaurant and he offered to accompany them home in a taxi.

When reaching the apartment house, the sisters said, Moore insisted on following them in. They objected and he began to assault them, they alleged. Muriel's right eye was swollen and discolored. The other sister was hurt when she tried to interfere.

Rush heard the disturbance and arrested Moore on Miss Montgomery's complaint. Moore declined to discuss it. He paid the fine.

SEIZE TAB. ADVS?

Danbury, Conn., Jan. 31.

Placards alluding to a feature news story in one of the New York tabloids were seized by the New Britain police last week on the grounds they violated a statute against immoral literature.

The notices referred to the eugenic baby case.

Girls as Come-Ons

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.

A new stunt is being employed at local jewelry store auctions to pull in male customers. The stores employ pretty chorus girls and actresses out of work to hang around as come-ons and bidders.

As a result the places always are crowded and prosperous.

Negro Porter Fought Cop; Nightstick Did the Rest

Edward Steele, 22, Negro porter in the Lyric theatre where "Rio Rita" is playing, fought a uniformed patrolman of the West 47th street station for fully 15 minutes in the lounge room. After effective work with his baton, the patrolman, Walter Doebele, of the West 47th street station, subdued the Senegambian.

Steele, gin crazed, was taken to the police station. Doctor Bloch of Bellevue Hospital attended his hurts. The patrolman, a rookie, came very near being throttled by the colored man who fought like a demon.

The porter was arraigned in West Side Court the following morning before Magistrate Francis X. McQuade. He pleaded not guilty. The court praised the "rookie's" work and fined the negro $25 or five days in prison. The negro started to do his "bit."

Doebele was summoned to the theatre by an employee who told him the negro was bolsterous. As the bluecoat stepped into the lounge room while the crowds of men and women were emerging, the negro leaped on the cop, seizing him by the throat.

The officer sought to free himself and in doing so slipped on a cuspidor. The negro fell on top of the bluecoat. The two began to battle. No one attempted to help the officer, who was handicapped with his heavy coat, gun and night stick.

The negro gave his address as 339 West 59th street. He told Magistrate McQuade that he had been drinking and didn't recall the battle.

Monkeyed on Phone Lock Capitol's Usher's Charge

Joseph Levine, 23, bookbinder, 17 West 114th street, was held in $1,500 bail for further hearing when he was arraigned before Magistrate Earl Smith in West Side Court on a charge of malicious mischief.

Levine was arrested after a chase in Broadway. According to Thomas Roseth, chief usher in the Capitol theatre, he said he saw Levine tampering with the lock plate of a coinbox phone on the mezzanine of the theatre.

He watched him several minutes and said that when he started over towards him Levine ran down the stairs and into the street. Policeman Kelly, Traffic B, at 51st street, heard the shouts of the usher and saw Levine running. Kelly caught Levine a block away.

When taken to the station house Levine denied that he had been tampering with the telephone. Levine was held.

MANICURE'S ADMISSION

Kept Company with Married Undertaker—Scrap in Apartment

Violet Cunningham, Pasadena Hotel, and Tessie Phillips, 851 West End avenue, manicurists in a Broadway barber shop, appeared before Magistrate McQuade in West Side Court to complain against Vincenzo Pantossi, undertaker, of 2242 1st avenue.

The girls said the undertaker and a friend came to visit them at the West End avenue address. When Miss Cunningham wanted to leave to go to a drug store both men resented it and beat them with their fists, discoloring their faces, the young women alleged.

Miss Cunningham admitted she knew Pantossi was married and had two children and despite that, continued to go out several times a week with him. When the magistrate heard this he dismissed the proceedings.

Erna Carise, Parisian songstress, is coming to America as a cafe attraction. Lou Irwin is importing her.

JOYS AND GLOOMS OF BROADWAY

By N. T. G.

Had the pleasure of assisting Harry Rapf, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer assemble a group of New York beauties for camera tests as a part of Harry's search for a new movie star. M-G-M is willing to spend something to find another Joan Crawford, our discovery, incidentally, and Rapf believes he has at least two girls who can be built up into star material, out of the group we brought him.

One is Doree Leslie, dancer, with "Manhattan Mary," whom we have frequently discussed in these columns. Doree is only 17, and has been working around New York in the Silver Slipper, appearing at openings of Loew theatres and Palisade Park, for four years. She's pretty, and the film test made her more so.

Another girl, who prefers to remain nameless, beauty of a local night club, also has a splendid chance. Doree Leslie will go to California when "Scandals" closes, and will get her chance, definitely. The other one will probably be sent for when western executives have seen her test.

The film tests showed how exacting is the camera. During the past four years we have brought a score of girls to the attention of M-G-M producers, including the most famous beauties in New York, and only a few developed into star material.

We have a theory that almost any pretty girl who photographs well and has film appeal, can be made into a star if the proper interest is taken in her and a powerful company is determined to make her a star.

Admitting our lack of knowledge of intimate details of film producing, we point to the fact that we brought several of the present-day stars to the attention of film executives.

There are at least four girls now in New York, who, if given the same chance, would develop into stars. If producers would devote time and attention to them, give them a chance, almost any pretty girl can develop a tremendous screen ability.

Couldn't Guess Racket

A rather good-looking brunet girl appeared at the Texas Guinan club and asked Tex for a job. Tex said there was none. Girl said she'd work for nothing. Nothing doing. Then she offered to work as cigaret girl, also for nothing.

Finally she confessed to Texas that she is a newspaper writer from Cincinnati, and had a chance to get a job on the "American" if she could get a job in Tex's place and write her personal experiences. Tex promptly phoned a friend on the sheet and was told by the very man the girl mentioned as offering her the work that she was an imposter.

Tex is wondering what her racket is.

Good Gags Travel

Funny how good gags drift around. We heard Shaw and Lee in a night club a few days ago using the gag in which one says to the other:

"What's that on your neck?"

"A mole," is the answer.

"It's walking," is the reply.

Looking at a vaudeville show in Brooklyn two colored boys stepped out and killed 'em with the same gag.

An Indian came into our radio station to broadcast real Indian music, if there's such a thing. He wore street clothes. Just before he went before the microphone he pulled a beaded head band and eagle feather out of his pocket and put it on.

That's like the tenor who, in the old days of radio, came in the studio with a suitcase containing his evening clothes and asked for the dressing room.

Funny, Anyway

We were talking about our farm to a chorus kid and happened to mention that our hens were now laying 400 eggs a day.

"Do they lay on Sunday, too?" asked the kid, innocently.

(Jersey is a 6-day week).

Discovering Talent

News about an unusual performer works around. A few hours after the opening of Earl Lindsay's new show at the Everglades everyone on the Big Street was talking about some strange, new little dancer, who wowed 'em. Hard-boiled Broadwayites raved over this little acrobatic dancer. Chorus girls came to us and told us she was marvellous.

The next the place was invested with agents and managers trying to sign her up.

Which reminds us of the New York debut of a little comedy toe dancer at the Rivoli theatre. The day after her opening five managers tried to get her, and Ziegfeld landed her.

Same way with another star you know. Some years ago we drifted into the Back Stage Club and were flabbergasted at the marvelous beauty, singing and personality of a tall, gorgeous slim brunet, who crooned sad love songs with half-closed eyes. We thought her the greatest stage personality we had seen in years, and told her so.

The next night she came over to sing at our radio station. While she was in the inner studio one of the important members of the firm of Jones & Green came in to try to sign her up for the "Greenwich Village Follies." But she had just signed a contract. The slim beauty's name was Helen Morgan.

Qualifications

Any girl who has good looks, figure and personality can make good on the stage today, if they have the proper ambition and is willing to go to school, singing and dancing, a few hours every day, plus intelligence.

For instance, Myrtle Allen was a chorus girl in the Winter Garden. She went into the Silver Slipper chorus. Studied constantly and became so good she was taken out of the chorus and did nothing but specialties. She went to the Frivolity Club. Became a sensation. Attracted attention of managers. Played vaudeville. Has just joined a big act for $175 a week and is offered $300 a week to go to Australia as star of a musical show. And a year ago she was a chorus girl.

Nite Clubs as Cradles Right

Which reminds us that night clubs are the cradles of future stars of the stage. They offer more opportunity to ambitious young girls than does the stage. We could cite innumerable instances, but let us just point to Lina Basquette, whom we once placed with Texas Guinan in the Beaux Arts; Feon Vanmar, a sensation in "Merry Malones; Irene Delroy, who was a star, however, before she went into the El Fey; Frances Upton, and her successor, Helen Stephen, both of whom were placed in night clubs by us; Alice Bolden, Rubye Keeler, Madelyn Killeen, and scores of others.

Night clubs encourage girls doing specialties, and the stage offers scant opportunity for individual work.

Paul Block Copping, Too

That Paul Block derives some benefit for his theatrical affiliations is indicated by the brilliance of an editorial regarding Heflin, which appeared in his Pittsburgh Post Gazette, Newark Star Eagle, and the Toledo Blade. Concluding scathing denunciation of the Senator, he says:

"— an empty taxi cab will drive up to the Senate and Heflin will get out."

We remember Jack Donahue pulling that one some four years ago in some little show he was in with Queenie Smith at the Harris Theatre, in which Norma Terriss was a young and struggling ingenue. Since that time it has been used, 1,267,856 times in every corner of America.

GREENWICH VILLAGE AS IZ

By LEW NEY
(Self-Designated Mayor of G. V.)

The church and the theatre have much in common that is proper. Once in a blue moon they get together on the same ground. Near religion and old thought in new clothes occupy theatres on Sundays. Little theatre groups sometimes use churches for productions.

Since the lamented passing of Percy Stickney Grant of the Church of the Ascension, for years the Village's church and rector, our liberals have made themselves at home at St. Marks-in-the Bouwerie, that magnificent old church standing among the synagogues and the Russian restaurants on 2d avenue. For all of 10 years now its rector, William Norman Guthrie, has made his rendezvous popular with people who think.

Last Sunday Doctor Guthrie put out the SRO sign again by giving over the afternoon and evening to a symposium on the drama. It was an opportunity many missed by coming late to hear Butler Davenport discuss the theatre and its relationship to life, Mme. Angelo Sikelianos describe the production of the Delphic Festival last May, Jimmie Light in startling revelations about the Provincetown Players, and Daniel Frohman intimately telling his impressions, hopes and memories of the American stage.

Later on this same Sunday an ex-president's daughter, Margaret Wilson, danced in Highland costume with Isobel White to the priceless, literally, piping of Angus Fraser.

Later still, a mystical playlet, "The Dog and the Wolf," was given under the direction of Dr. Guthrie.

Thus does old St. Marks serve New York in general and our Village in particular.

Harry Kemp's Punch

"Do you want a good punch?" queried Harry Kemp as he embraced me midnight on Sheridan square. "Just as a joke, you know, Lew."

"Harry," I parried meekly, "a punch from you wouldn't be a joke. How about a punchino instead?"

But the popular poet-novelist-dramatist was not in a mood, and our meeting was the beginning of an hour of wandering around looking for lost books and other things Villagers look for when they wander around on a wet night. This season Harry Kemp is living on Cornelia street, that one-block alley that shuttles between Fourth and Bleecker. His number is unpreferred by paranoiacs and other superstitious persons.

It's convenient sometimes for a celebrity to live on a short street like that, served on both sides from Chinese laundry to livery stable by the same postman. You need not have the world know in just which one of the 50 entrances you are hiding.

Harry Kemp is working within earshot of the "L" these coolish days on a novel that has been ordered and may be out in the spring. Perhaps you have seen him striding always bareheadedly over to Louis Urdang's for paper and ink or down to Romany Marie's for Turkish coffee or up to Tony's for spaghetti. Or, if you take your exercise more regularly than Frank Sullivan, at O'Brien's Harry may be taking his next to you.

Terry Carlin's Back

Terry Carlin is back visiting the Village on his way to Bermuda; Terry who made the old Hell Hole famous, Terry who doesn't believe in birth or work. For years he has lived with Eugene O'Neill in that old life-saving station beyond the sand dunes near Provincetown. If Sadakichi Hartmann, Hippolyte Havel, Benjamin DeCassares, the late Gig Cook and Slim Martin could only meet Terry again in a number of pleasant places along Macdougal street! That would be a party worth listening in on.

Nancy's restaurant rendezvous at 182 West 4th street, opened just before the holidays has already closed. The rent of this store has risen in 10 years from $15 to $200.

Plebians Who Talk

It always amuses me to hear the plans of plebians who would further commercialize our well-advertised community. All manner of means are used to get publicity, and it a a sure-fire hit with city desks to announce a reform.

But it is stupid to worry about wiping out the color of our Bohemia, its queer streets and squares and courts, its old and stable buildings, its remodelled-into-studios stables, its arty atmosphere, its Italian restaurants, its little theatres, its Londonish lanes and Parisian cafes.

Some cherub is always chiding me or perhaps it is a newspaper man from Utica who grates me with the wornout bromide that the Village isn't taken seriously any more, that all our writers and artists have moved away and that the Village is a joke and the laughing stock of the world, the playground of loose livers and what not.

Of course, none of this is true, not even in part. Most of us are too serious to manifest concern about wondering visitors and disillusioned climbers. Most of us came here to be close to our market and to live in quarters we could afford. Many of us are quite comfortable in abandoned lofts and remodelled mansions where the rent is low and the atmosphere high.

And Things

Until Feb. 15 the 15th Annual Art Exhibition of the Association for Culture is open free till 10 p. m. at the Municipal Art Gallery, Washington Irving High School Building, 40 Irving place.

Dean Dowell has cut 70 linoleum blocks the past 10 days for a new book of jingles on the circus. And still there are many folks who think artists never work. It is much nicer to make pictures out of linoleum than to walk on it.

Nat Marer of the Laboratory theatre and Elsie Kelly of the Vanguard Press have added four and one-half pounds of girl, Mary Jane, to their otherwise exclusive family.

A Christian Science Church has replaced the old paper box factory at the tail end of Macdougal street, adjoining the Hotel Gonfarone and opposite the entrance to the blind Macdougal alley.

Lise Fulda of the American Museum of Natural History is entertaining a group of young artists in her studio at 17 East 14th street Monday evenings. The dollar-an-hour fee for the model is pro-rated.

Judge Swan, our popular building owner, has leased a home at 1 Fifth avenue, while Werner Marchand, who merely sketches buildings, has moved to the Bradford.

Susanne Strouvelle, with daughters, Chick and Charm, has moved into the two wee rooms on the second floor of the Tiniest Little House, closer to her business there. It is a rendezvous for rare and exploring souls, this tiny tea room, and 100 years ago it was, as now, one of the most unique buildings in all New York. It has a history, too, but that's too long to tell.

Square's Biggest Sign

The largest Times square electrical advertising sign, Dodge Brothers' tungsten display, which carries a load of 880,855 watts, goes on the books of the Edison Co. starting tonight (Wednesday) at 7.30.

The sign, on the roof of the Strand, measures 5,500 square feet, is a half-block long, five stories high, and will use the largest current consumption of any Broadway sign.

It is said a new principle of moving message, or motograph, at the base of the sign is incorporated in the Dodge Bros. display, which the General Outdoor Advertising Co. constructed.

SHOPLIFTERS

Alfred La Mar, 18, who claims to be a picture actor, and Mrs. Catherine Randall, 45, both of 629 West 170th street, pleaded guilty in Special Sessions of petty larceny.

La Mar was given 10 days in the Workhouse and the woman was fined $25.

Both had been arrested two weeks ago by detectives of the Stores Mutual Protective Association after they had taken a quantity of articles from counters in Arnold Constables valued at $15, for which they neglected to pay.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Railway transportation between Los Angeles and Chicago and points east will be reduced about two hours in time starting March 4.

Heretofore the three transcontinental railways, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, have been running crack trains on a 63-hour schedule.

With the new timetable these trains will make the eastbound run in 61 hours and 15 minutes.

Westbound schedules will remain the same.

CURFEW LAW FAN

"As long as I am sitting in this court I am going to see that Mayor Walker's Curfew Law is observed," declared Magistrate Francis X. McQuade when Hyman (Feet) Edson, Hotel Harding, was arraigned on a charge of keeping the Florence Club, 117 West 48th street, open after 3 a. m.

Edson was charged by policeman Patrick Walsh, West 47th street station, with having the club open at 4 a. m. The copper said he heard there was trouble in the Florence Club and, accompanied by a sergeant, entered the place, finding about a dozen couples.

Edson explained that there had been some argument about a patron's fur coat and the reason the place remained open was that they were trying to locate it. He said the music had been stopped and all the entertainers had left. He stated the persons at the tables were friends of the woman whose coat had been lost.

Magistrate McQuade accepted the explanation and then issued his ultimatum about the clubs obeying the law. Complaint was dismissed.

Terry Harvey Promoted

Detective Terry Harvey, nemesis of the degenerate element that make their headquarters in the film theatres of Broadway, will be promoted to the rank of sergeant. Terry made the high showing of number eight on the new sergeant's list. Over 4,000 cops took the examination.

Harvey, young and full of energy, has done excellent work on Broadway and in theatres where this disorderly element congregate. He has been attached to Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan's staff for some time.

"When Harvey brings them in, he has them right," is the concensus of almost all the magistrates. Harvey has been teamed up with Joe Toomey. The latter is a good man, but Harvey's services will be missed.

When Harvey receives his chevrons his friends hope that he will be assigned to West 47th street, under Captain Edward Lennon.

BROADWAY GUIDE

(Changes Weekly)

For show people, as well as laymen, this Guide to general amusements in New York will be published weekly in response to repeated requests. It may serve the out-of-towner as a time-saver in selection. Variety lends the judgment of its expert guidance in the various entertainments denoted.

No slight or blight is intended for those unmentioned. The lists are of Variety's compilation only as a handy reference.

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

Current Broadway legitimate attractions are completely listed and commented upon weekly in Variety under the heading: "Shows in New York and Comment."

In that department, both in the comment and the actual amount of the gross receipts of each show, will be found the necessary information as to the most successful plays, also the scale of admission charged.

NEW FEATURE PICTURES OF WEEK

Capitol—"The Student Prince."
Colony—"Buck Pirates" and Cherniavsky's torrid jazz.
Paramount—"Old Ironsides."
Rialto—"The Last Command" (Jannings) (run).
Rivoli—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (okay flicker in last week).
Strand—Charles Chaplin's "Circus" (run).
Roxy—"13 Washington Square" and strong stage show.

NEW SPECIAL FEATURES WORTH SEEING

"Sunrise" "Simba" "Wings" "Jazz Singer" (Al Jolson)
"Love" (Gilbert-Garbo) "Drums of Love"

NIGHT LIFE

The Parady, with the inimitable Clayton, Jackson and Durante as the features, is recommended at all times. Parody also has a girlie show to augment "those three boys."

Vincent Lopez's Casa Lopez must be "made," if only for the Lopez dance music. New Revue. For a change of pace and a Bohemian atmosphere, don't miss the Club Barney, in Greenwich Village.

The hotels like the Roosevelt (Ben Bernie) and Pennsylvania (Johnny Johnson) should not be overlooked for relief purposes for straight dining and dancing purposes, before or after theatre.

The Little Club has a fast show. Ambassadeurs, former Le Perroquet, is a roomy cafe, with ritzy black-an-tan show.

George Olsen at the Club Richman is the sensation of the night clubs, with turnaway business. Ben Bernie is doubling from the Roosevelt into the Club Intime.

The class spots are the Montmartre and Lido, the latter with the unique Fowler and Tamara as the dance features.

Van and Schenck are strong at the Silver Slipper, with an excellent supporting show. The Everglades is faring mildly; the Frivolity is continuing its usual healthy trade, and the inimitable Benny Davis at the 54th St. Club always produces a fast entertainment.

Up in Harlem the Cotton Club has a whale of a hotsy-totsy brown-skin revue.

Helen Morgan has reopened her new Chez Helen Morgan at the old 300 Club.

RECOMMENDED DISK RECORDS

Victor No. 2116—Get a load of Marion Harris cooing a couple of torch songs. "Did You Mean It?" which she did with Phil Baker in "A Night in Spain," and "The Man I Love," from the flop "Strike Up the Band," is the couplet, and done with a technique not to be encountered on every other disk.

Columbia No. 1161—Hurtado Bros. Marimba Orchestra from vaude feature two popular waltzes, "Diane," theme song of "7th Heaven," and "Beneath Venetian Skies." A great record for the cocktail hour. Doesn't drive you to drink, inspires it.

Victor No. 2110—Ever hear "Nola" vocalized? Here 'tis by the Revelers. The popular piano solo has some trick lyrics set to it, and under the Revelers' treatment it is just as fetching with words as instrumentally. "Among My Souvenirs," which, like "My Blue Heaven," is a disease of the music business, is "canned" for the 'steenth time, this time as a vocal quartet by the same aggregation.

Edison No. 52155—"Among My Souvenirs" again, fox-trotted by B. A. Rolfe's Palais d'Or Orchestra, and "Rain," another popular piece, by Al Friedman's Orchestra from Yoeng's, also a Chinese-American eatery.

Columbia No. 1222—Cass Hagan and his former Park Central Orchestra and Al Lentz with his comedy jazzists are backed up with "Dear, On a Night Like This," a fox-trot ballad, and "I'll Think of You." In the first Lewis James vocalizes, and Lentz himself officiates in the latter. Both are working dance selections and well done.

RECOMMENDED SHEET MUSIC

"My Ohio Home" "Little Log Cabin of Dreams"
"Night Club Rose" "Horse Feathers"
"Dear, On a Night Like This" "The Man I Love"

COLUMBIA PROF. DISCOVERS BRUNETTES

Peggy Udell's Reaction to "Love"—Dietz' Reaction to "Nerve"

The brunettes have it. From now on, gents, grab the dark ones.

No less an academic authority than Dr. William M. Marston of the Department of Psychology of Columbia University doped that out.

Howard Dietz, that demon publicist for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, determined for posterity or Louie Mayer to find whether the peroxides or the brunettes react the most emotionally to amorous scenes.

It was a coincidence that on Monday afternoon this all-important and eminently scientific experiment was held at the Loew's Embassy theatre. Equally a coincidence that "Love" is current at the Embassy, and that "Love" is Louie's feature.

Howard and Bernie Sobel, fellow-conspirators, i. e., publicity man, who Boswells for Zieg, rounded up the choice beauts from "Show Boat" and "Rosalie" and "Rio Rita." Bernie submitted them as subjects per se to Dr. Marston's professorial research.

Prof Looked 'Em Over

The professor looked all business Monday afternoon, and also looked 'em over, gels are gels. Those rheostats, voltage registers, ammeters, B batteries, spare tires, spark plugs and bar-rails (another experiment) seemed very up-and-up. It's not so far from a 116th street campus to Times square's wicked wiles, publicity stunts, wise cracks and dames.

With much serious intent Dr. Marston rigged up the props on a series of eight beauts, evenly divided as to pigment shading, and registered their respiration, blood pressure, nervous reaction and stock market quotations on the electrical apparatus.

After it was all added up and subtracted, the blondes had it. Peggy Udell was adjudged the one who most violently reacted to John Gilbert's necking with Greta Garbo on the screen in the clinches. The film "Love" was limited only to the s. a. biz. And Peggy did that in the theatre in front of the invites.

Dr. Marston's props are labeled a Pneumograph and a Symograph. And Peggy's a Bearograph.

The experiments took three hours, 14 news photographers and three newsreel cameras.

The blonde subjects were Beryl Halley, Jeanne Andree, Rose Gallagher and Claudia Dell.

Miss Gallagher and Miss O'Day opened the frolic.

"Lord" Help Him Now

Robert Whitman, alias "Lord Beaverbrook," alias a dozen other names, was convicted by a jury before Judge William Allen in General Sessions of grand larceny in the first degree. He will be sentenced on Feb. 8. He can receive ten years on this charge and must serve an additional five years which he owes the state on a previous conviction.

Whitman was convicted of stealing about $90,000 worth of jewelry and other articles from Mrs. Rose Burken, of Freeport, L. I., after he had made love to her in May, 1925. Mrs. Burken said "Beaverbrook" had accosted her on the street, addressing her as "Nora Bayes." The woman said she fell in love with his glib tongue and that he was a fast worker was evident by the fact that within two weeks time he had induced her to turn over her jewelry to have "it insured for her." Instead he pawned most of it and the rest he gave to Mrs. Virginia Cameron Martin, Washington society woman, whom he married and deserted on the same day, less than a month after he had dropped Mrs. Burken.

In giving his pedigree following his conviction Whitman gave his occupation as "moving pictures." He did not say in what capacity he worked or for what concern.

ON THE SQUARE

Hopeful Near Celebs

Couple of years ago, Alex Gard was just one of the many artists trying to pick up a living selling his drawings to the dramatic sections of the papers.

Last year, when the new Sardi's was opened, Alex was given the commission to decorate the side walls with caricatures of the celebrities. Of course after Harry Hershfield, Kelcey Allen and the standards had been done in color (Kelcey calls his a "portrait"), there was plenty of room for selection, this being left to Gard.

Consequence is he became a pretty much wooed man. Fellows who complained of his broken English began playing up to him. With his meals set for a year—his pay for the job—Gard kept on working and showed plenty of common sense by laying off of those who were too anxious to get their mugs hung in public.

Some of the boys are still making Sardi's for lunch every day just in the hope of being mistaken for a celeb.

Jack Osterman's Explanation

Jack Osterman's explanation about the printed report of his nite club jam with Betty Randolph, with the latter unknown to show business, is that he knows nothing of it. It's a press agent's frame, young Osterman says, he had no part. The story didn't break, according to Osterman, until three days after he had left Casa Lopez, where Osterman had been the floor m. c.

Miss Randolph is said to be a society woman. If so, there are more than one of that same name.

From the account Osterman bumped into her when leaving the cafe. The story later said she had lost a costly gem, also charging Osterman with having struck her. It's the latter Osterman wants to deny, saying he's had enough of that stuff.

Osterman claims to have given in his notice to Gene Geiger, of Lopez's Casa two days before the incident.

Young Hoffman Was There

Max Hoffmann, Jr.'s, busted ankle, forcing him out of hte Detroit company of "Good News" for several weeks, was not the result of a stage accident as first reported. Max got his injury in honorable battle with an obstreperous undergraduate in a Detroit cafe, who recognized him as the hero of the college show, and made insulting remarks about musical comedy actors having a nerve to impersonate football stars.

What the young collegiate didn't know was that Max used to play football himself in prep school days, and that he hadn't forgotten how to tackle. He soon found that out. Max came out with a broken ankle, but the college lad was smeared almost beyond recognition.

Hoffmann will rejoin the show when it opens in Chicago. Stanley Ridges is playing his role in Detroit.

Beaux Arts Ball Over at 8 a. m.

In fancy costumes much or less, 4,000 people swarmed all over Mrs. Astor's Inn on the highway Friday evening, the same night the Old Guard held its annual ball at the Commodore.

It was eight in the morning before the heavily dressed males and lightly-clad women left the Inn to itself and regular occupants. The Beaux Art's top was $15 per, with the Astor taking a good share from each for furnishing the place and fodder.

Stengel's Suicide

Squarelles received a shock by the Sunday "Enquirer's" screaming scare-head, "Hearst cartoonist commits suicide," referring to Hans Stengel. Incidentally, the hooey about Stengel's ex-wife, whom he divorced, is sauce of apple, as is the reported info that he regretted being deposed as the New York "Journal's" dramatic critic, which post John Anderson now holds.

The inside is girl trouble.

Jane Cowl Walked Off at Benefit

The audience at the Shakespeare benefit at the Metropolitan Sunday night were puzzled by the strange behavior of Jane Cowl, who walked out on the stage to play a scene from "Romeo and Juliet," and walked right off again without saying a word.

It seems the electrician bungled things and failed to pick her up with the spot on her entrance.

Rollo Peters, playing Romeo, gave her the cue. When she did not respond, he gave it again. Miss Cowl still did not reply but walked gracefully across the stage and off on the other side, to the bewilderment of Mr. Peters and those out front.

On a Sunday Nite and Two

Sunday night. Broadwayite dines with his cutie. They dine late. Still too early to go "home." About time to take in a night club. They order the driver to Ben Bernie's. No doorman in sight. They open downstairs door, lights on in hallway up the stairs. They get to upper iron door, it opens easily to the twist of a knob.

They enter. Everything except a corridor light, dark. Apparent the place doesn't deal Sundays. But it looks like a lark. They stay up there, just a loving twosome, romp all over the room, enjoy themselves like a couple of kids, own the whole shebang.

After a whole lot of high-power amusement, decide to go to a hangout, where they can have music besides the sweet nothings they've whispered to one another. There they meet Bernie, taking a night out in a night club. They tell Ben. He says he'll "look into it." They say he can, but he'll never find out the half of it.

Monocled Girl at Nite Club

A shingled girl with her escort, also in evening dress, was noticed parked at the ringside of one of Broadway's best saw-dust night places the other night. She attracted attention because of a monocle. It remained in place, but not without some effort as the dame couldn't laugh without losing it. The idea of girls sporting monocles is said to be a Parisian idea.

When Talkers Split the Gross

Saturday night, at Carnegie, Dr. Stephen S. Wise went up against Judge Ben Lindsay, verbally, for about $16,000 gross, the split going evenly between the b. o. cards, win or lose.

The debate was on companionate marriage, at $7.70 top, and not worth it. Postcards were given the listeners who fell with a request that they turn in a written vote for their choice of spielers. Most of the capacity audience are said to have thrown away the cards.

Mr. Wise, who is a Rabbi otherwise, was thought to lead in the $7.70 talkfest. Judge Lindsay seemed some what vague, especially to those who had not read his book on the same subject.

Neither of the speakers evidently had had much experience in the New York's midtown section, where companionate marriage is even too common for landlords.

Jessie Reed in Loop

Jessie Reed, another of those former "Follies" girls and mostly entitled to notice through having been in her stage day the highest salaried chorus girl anywhere, is now bumping around in Chicago. Jess looks to have aired No. 2, who lived somewhere in Indiana and on a farm. Her first was a bird from Cleveland and who had a name but not the dough that should have gone with it.

Carlotta Monterey is reported due for the altar pretty soon, in the marriage way, with the $2 license getter unannounced. He is reputed of some profesh standing in the writing way.

B'way in Yiddish

A "Broadway column" has been proposed for one of the Yiddish dailies on New York's East Side.

While the matter of translation is annoying at present to the promoters, they think they have an out inasmuch as Yiddish reads backwards anyway.

WORTHINGTON BUTTS SON

Child Arrived Jan. 21 in Los Angeles —Parents Known On Broadway

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Withington Butts here Jan. 21, at the Lying-In Hospital.

Mrs. Butts was professionally known as Rosalie Ceballos. She is a sister of Larry Ceballos.

Both the parents are known on Broadway. Mr. Butts has been around Times Square for a long time.

The Butts have been married for some years. They came out here to live about two years ago.

GOLDEN'S OWN CLUB

Orchestra Leader Taking Possession of Knickerbocker Grill

After a number of years as the band feature of the Hotel McAlpin, New York, Ernie Golden resigns this week to open at his own nite club, Knickerbock Grill, on West 42d street, Feb. 6. Associated with Golden will be H. Z. Pokress, formerly head of the Mineralava beautifier; Harry Feinberg and Mike Friedman, with Golden in general charge.

The WMCA radio artist is installing a WOR wire for the broadcasting of the Golden orchestra's dance music. The grill, under its new management, will endeavor to re-establish what was at one time a foremost metropolitan institution.

Golden's orchestra will officiate for lunch from 12-2 as well as dinner and supper, with Golden coming onto the scene at dinner time. Dorothy Braun, Embassy Boys and Madeleine Soisson will be in the show.

Golden rebelled at the McAlpin's lack of publicity and other reasons. He also found it difficult to double into the outlying picture houses. These bookings were valuable to the leader, who was in demand because of his radio rep.

Restaurant Mgr. Brought Back on Theft Charge

John Compton, 55, formerly night manager of Thompson's restaurant, 747 6th avenue, was brought back from Binghamton, N. Y., by detective James (Judge) Fitzpatrick of the West 47th street station. Compton, Fitzpatrick stated, decamped with the restaurant receipts, $160 on the night of Oct. 3.

Compton was arraigned in West Side Court. He pleaded not guilty. Waiving examination he was held in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

Fitzpatrick learned that Compton's home city was Binghamton. He wired the chief of police there and Compton was arrested. He told Fitzpatrick that he hadn't robbed the restaurant owners. "Bandits stuck me up in the restaurant and I feared to notify my superiors," averred Compton. The latter lives at 62 Main street, Binghamton.

The Perfect Husband

A label of The Perfect Husband, according to Times Square standards, has been mantled on the following fellow under these circumstances:

Seated on a chair in the parlor with his wife in the adjoining bedroom, in bed, she asked him for a glass of water.

"No ice or water here," he replied.

"Please give me a cigarette, then, dear," she requested.

"Not a cigarette in the house," he replied, without moving from the chair either time.

In the morning the wife found plenty of ice, with several boxes of cigarettes on the table.

LOOPING THE LOOP

(IN CHICAGO)

A girl now playing legit in Chicago and just divorced from her artist husband on desertion charges, didn't reveal in court her vain efforts to keep the marriage off the rocks.

After happily married for five years, the girl was knocked dizzy when her husband came home one night and told her he had just met another dame he loved twice as much.

Sacrificing her pride, the wife suggested he live with the new girl a while and if it was just a flash affair he could come back home. Hubby oked the idea, but later returned to say he thought he should marry the other woman. The wife was grief-stricken, but suggested that her husband blow out of town and she'd fix him-up with a divorce on desertion charges so he could marry the girl.

He did. And she did. But she had hoped he would come back.

Picture Worth 10c Extra

A south side picture house band leader is trying the boloney, mingling with the lobby crowd after the show to help on with coats and exchanging greetings.

"How'd you like the show, sir?" he asked one customer as he adjusted his coat for him.

"The picture was okay," replied the stranger, slipping the maestro a dime.

Before transferred from the Oriental to the Chicago theatre, Milton Charles, solo organist, put Paul Ash's hangout in its place with the following hot rhyme on the screen:

"I am go-ing to the big Chi-ca-go
Where your ma and pa go."

(Some time ago a Variety reviewer mentioned the Oriental's trade was almost exclusively juvenile and in return got a chilling social rebuke.)

Billy DeBeck's Offsprings

Billy goats, nanny goats, horsefeathers, OKMNX! The Billy DeBeck offsprings are taking Chicago by storm. Grand Angoras, Deputy Angoras and Exhalted Chapters are springing up every where. Poets and bards are penning inspired creations to the nation's latest fraternal order which sprang to greatness overnight. Abe Ohlman of the Forster music publishers, in collaboration with Charlie Newman and Buddy Fields was seized with inspiration, result—"Horsefeathers," the fraternal song. Billy DeBeck, the creator of Barney Google, Exhalted Angora of the order, is of Chicago and during his Chicago days organized the "Bulla Bulla" club.

Joe Lewis' Snapping Suspenders

Joe Lewis' accident was a tough affair but since then the night club star has been getting proper recognition. Joe now has a night club and a cigar named after him, besides the crowning glory of having his monicker emblazoned on a snapping brand of suspenders.

Sam Insull's Easy Pay-Off

Samuel Insull, capitalist of capitalists, patron of the arts and good business man, who frequently indulges the theatrical whims of Mrs. Insull, some time ago permitted her to take over the Studebaker theatre. Mrs. Insull had her fun playing with it, the dramatic arts, and stagecraft.

Recently Mrs. Insull tired of playing high-brow angel and Mr. Insull let the play move out, despite "The Play's the Thing" and an annual loss of between one and two hundred thousand dollars, preferring to pay the $100,000 per annum rental for a vacant house until the lease expires.

But the Insulls are friends of show business. The capitalist's latest hobby is the erection of a new home for Chicago's Opera, occupying an entire city block and costing $20,000,000.

Newest local band sensation is Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, brought here several weeks ago from Cleveland by Al Quodbach for his Granada cafe. Quodbach's south side night club is doing the best business in town with the band proving an ether plug and attraction over WBBM.

The Loop's Great Loss

The Loop lost a great little guy when Abe Jacobs, the best known and liked man that ever ran the works back stage, was laid away for eternity. Abe was internationally popular, but in the Loop, a fixture. Abe was there before the fire that destroyed Chicago in 1870 and he stuck in the Loop until a few days before his noble heart stopped. More than 60 years is Abe's record as a loophound. His mother opened the first grocery after the big flames.

Hardly an acquaintance of Abe's will not affirm that Abe was the soul of honor. Yes, he was gruff and hard and had many a battle, but he was usually right. If Marc Antony had been among the loyal friends and kin who followed Abe to the soil the other day, he would surely repeat "This was a man." He walked with kings and mobs and always retained his virtues. No man known by the common phrase "square guy" ever deserved the title more than Abe Jacobs. Nature turns out but few men of rare individuality and personality, but Abe was among that few.

Abe started as property boy at the Olympic about 50 years ago under Kohl & Castle. Later he became stage manager for all Kohl-Castle theatres, remaining with the firm until a few years ago when the Orpheum took over the Majestic to make a grind out of that beautiful theatre. Men with small minds quaked before Abe's dominant personality, so he stepped out to save them embarrassing moments. He retired a couple of years ago, well heeled but lonely. His old pals scattered and passed away, he laid down for the long sleep after sixty-three years of action.

The wife of a m. c. in a downtown picture house has been attending rehearsals for some time, giving her opinions freely and rushing backstage after the first show for distribution of final judgment. The producer in the same house is married, with his b. and c. also taking part in rehearsal supervision. Acts tickled flaming red.

Operator's Lunch Solution

A booth operator scheduled for relief at 6 p. m. waited until 8 for the next operator. With the relief still not in sight, he sent an usher out for sandwiches. Back came the usher with the manager, who explained ushers were for ushing only, not errand boys for operators.

Words appearing futile. Operator stopped the film mid-reel and announced the show wouldn't go on until he ate. And another thing, why couldn't the manager go out and get the sandwiches?

The manager got 'em.

Gangland's Sentence—Exile!

Gangland justice—exists! A few days following the dastardly attack upon Joe Lewis, premiere cabaret entertainer, other "exclusives" of Gang-land's "400" learned who it was who had crushed his skull and slashed his body with knives. Gangland's chieftains called a council. In solemn meeting this inquisitory board weighed the fate that should be meted out to the assailants of cafedom's idol.

Drastic were the suggested punishments but the trial board, warning against new police records, issued its edict.

This edict was not tempered with mercy but with caution. The trio was notified the following day that exile, permanent exclusion, from Chicago and the County of Cook, Illinois, was the sentence.

"And—woe betides you if you ever return" cautioned Gangland.

40 YEARS AGO

(From "Clipper")

Minneapolis apparently wasn't such a hot show town, even back in 1888. Sackett & Wiggins had taken over the new Hennepin and had bent every effort to making it a success with high class attractions. But to support it they had to draw heavily from the profits of their dime museum properties The mortgage upon the Hennepin was foreclosed and it looked as though it would be a receivership for the dime museums.

New York was in the midst of a crusade against theatres. Mayor Hewitt had ordered prosecution against the Palm Gardens for its Sunday entertainment, but this case was thrown out of court. Five Bowery museums paid fines of $250 each for immoral exhibitions.

A law suit arising out of royalties, discloses that the usual playwright contract called for a flat sum ($300 a week in this case) and 20 per cent. on the gross above $3,000.

The Broadway theatre was nearing completion at 41st street and Broadway, and was said to be the last word in theatre design. Fanny Davenport in "La Tosca" was scheduled to open the house in two weeks.

Robert Grau returned from Paris with the announcement that Sarah Bernhardt would make another American tour in 1891 with a new play by Alexander Dumas.

James Owen O'Connor was the clown of show business. This time his leading man in "The Marble Heart" walked out on him in Syracuse, and without notice he staged "The Merchant of Venice," playing Shylock himself to the hilarious amusement of his audience.

in a sanitarium on Long Island, it is doubtful if he will return to active duty.

Victor Polacheck, former general manager of circulation for Hearst, has replaced Merrill as general manager of the publisher's morning newspapers.

Irony

In handling the story of Thea Marovsky, the Russian singer who committed suicide after reading the bad press notices following her recital a week ago Sunday, the dailies and the sob columnists played up the pathos heavily, but missed the most ironic point of the yarn.

The girl had an appointment with her manager who was to meet her at her apartment at three o'clock Monday afternoon to discuss plans. The manager was delayed and was also unable to reach her by telephone. When he had not arrived by four o'clock she left the apartment, convinced that the unfavorable notices had caused his desertion, to go to a friend's house in Brooklyn, wrote her farewell note and killed herself. While she was making her suicide preparations in Brooklyn, the manager arrived at her apartment with a sheaf of contracts for further recitals.

"New Yorker" Laid Off

A recent drawing of Pete Arno's got side-tracked when submitted to "The New Yorker," but not before proofs were run off and privately distributed.

Subject was a harem swimming pool with dames swimming around au naturel. Two eunuchs alongside the pool but facing the other way, seemed to be more interested in conversation, with a caption of one saying to the other:

"Did you hear about my operation?"

BANKERS AND THEIR CONTRACTS

A puzzling question must have arisen among many who may have read in Variety last week of bankers deciding upon executive moves for picture house chains, without consulting the executives of those circuits. First thought is how much power do bankers demand when financing show deals?

It appears to be a matter of contract with some bankers. That is, the contract they enter into with the firms financed. From accounts this agreement often contains a voting trust provision that gives the banking house full authority in movements of importance by or for the chain or show concern.

In some instances the contract must be abnormally binding. In other cases of financing, the bankers, while protected, do not appear to have the throttle hold. But where bankers advance money to promote, expand or purchase it's not unreasonable to expect they will demand protection, for their money and for the properties represented by it.

Whether the show business likes the bankers or not, they appear to be increasingly more required by the showmen. There has been no deal of magnitude of recent times within any division of the show business that has not invited the money men into it. And the more money that pours in from the outside, the stronger the outside influence in the show business becomes.

A late and delayed departure into the banking circles is Keith-Albee. That chain got in mostly with the bankers through its recent merger with the Orpheum Circuit. E. F. Albee for years was one of the most steadfast amongst show people to declaim against the banking influence or dictation in the show world. But he succumbed. Others, who also had to, could not hold out so long.

Just how the bankers see the show field is a semi-secret. Bankers here and there have admitted that the show business (picture particularly) has been the most profitable industry, to them, that they have monkeyed with in years. That is on the bonus, premium and interest end. It doesn't take in the Stock Exchange and manipulation. Bankers as a rule are either bears or bulls, but they are both in handling show business stocks for their ups or downs.

There may be bankers who don't concentrate as heavily as others upon prices or quotations. There may be those, even if they are not known. Others don't sit back so quietly. The latter seem to think first of what may be done in the way of chalk marks or ticker tape, and afterwards of the show people.

As the bankers in part anyway, appear able to manipulate the theatre chains or concerns they are financing, without conference with the circuits' heads first, so they may be able to and with much more ease, maneuver the stock market or quotations with those same chains' or concerns' stocks.

But the bankers are in and they are going to stay in. For the longer they are in the show business, the longer it seems, it will be before they can be paid off. And perhaps the bankers don't want to be paid off. If it's so good in the first place, why not the second, third, and so on?

INSIDE STUFF

ON PICTURES

An enterprising distributor of automobiles on the coast conducted a post card campaign of advertising and used the Los Angeles phone directory for a mailing list. The cards were written to make the impression they were sent by a friend. Harry Wilson, press agent for Inspiration-Carewe Productions, must have received one of these cards, as he is now doing the same thing for advanced exploitation on their forthcoming production of "Ramona."

Wilson plans to send a series of six postal cards six consecutive weeks to 15,000 exhibitors throughout the country, involving an expenditure of about $6,000.

A scenario writer had trouble with one of the independent producing companies on the coast over payment of moneys due her. The writer placed her complaint before the Screen Writers' Guild for action, but was not satisfied with the progress made and turned the case over to the Academy for attention. The producer involved is not a member of the Academy and is said to have informed the conciliation committee of the latter he would have nothing to do with them on this or any other case.

The producer is also declared to have advised the writer to place her complaint against him with the Screen Writers' Guild, and admitted that organization was the only one able to separate him from any cash alleged due writers.

Fatty Arbuckle is not going out in the comedy, "Excess Baggage." He says that an audience for him in a $3.50 top play is too doubtful and he prefers to stick with the pop price field, whether screen or stage. Fatty made an appearance some months ago in a legit revival on Broadway (comedy) that did not fare well.

Arbuckle as an act has been booked until March 10, when he sails for Paris, for four weeks at the Empire, there, then going to Berlin for another four weeks. Franklin Batle, singer, is joining the stage turn.

A New York woman in conversation recently inquired if during the preparation of a story for the screen or while it is in process of making, any woman or women were called in for an opinion from the feminine point of view. No one present could enlighten.

The speaker said she thought if that were to be done regularly there would be more pictures directly appealing to women. As a constant theatregoer she complained of a neglect in that respect in any number of pictures. Many of them, she said, with but a few twists, would have carried a much greater urge for the females.

As far as information amongst her listeners was contained, one said he had heard of some studios calling in a general assembly of lays, including women, to pass upon pictures after they had been completed but the studios found this observation of no practical value. Each of the lays attempted to become a critic and offered no suggestion worth while. Whether the studios have what might be called professionals among women to look over the preparation and watch the picture develop no one could tell, nor did any one know if there are women in the Hollywood section eligible for that purpose.

One of the smaller distributing organizations which has a nominal supervision and jurisdiction on all scripts continually has trouble with its producing units on the coast. They stall until the last minute and then rush into production without an okay on the story. The condition exists through east and west scenario editors of more or less equal authority.

An A. P. despatch in New York dailies with a Berlin date line mentioned "Chang" as having been produced by the King of Siam's brother. Possibly broth is one of the natives in the picture.

Another old-fashioned director who failed to keep abreast of the times was given another chance to direct for one of the large independent operators on the coast. It was a dog story extolling the virtues of "Puppy" love. When the picture was completed the local critics, out of sympathy for his long siege of unemployment, praised the picture highly, and through this the producer fired him. The broken down director is now trying to peddle a story which he has worked eight years to write and will not sell for less than 65 grand.

An exhibitor with a sense of humor features this sign in front of the 55th St. Cinema, "Closed for altercations with builders, contractors and movie moguls. Will open when, as, and if, completed." This is the converted stable art playhouse which Mike Mindlin and Joe Plunkett, operating the 66-5th Avenue Playhouse and the St. George, Brooklyn, both of the art type of theatres, have taken over. Louis Lusty, formerly with Riesenfeld, will have charge uptown. Isadore Cohen is the 5th Avenue Playhouse manager. The 55th St. Cinema will open with "Monell," Hungarian feature, marking its American premiere.

The same gag of free ciggies and beaucoup caffeine still goes in all the little movie theatres.

England's Picture Way Out

England ought to stop complaining about American pictures. Whines, complaints, objections, criticism, sarcasm, threats, quota this, quota that, promoting this, floating that. And not a picture on a screen that means anything. They huff and they puff, but whose house is being blown in?

It is under England's nose to establish its picture industry and help itself, politically, in the movement. Nothing has been done about it. America would probably aid if permitted to.

A series of three pictures to cost around $1,000,000 apiece and each to take a year in the making. On the formula of "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Covered Wagon." Each with love story but historically based on fact. All $2 road-show pictures to be exhibited around the world and eventually reaching points that all the British propaganda ever turned loose couldn't touch.

And the Keynote is the British government. For such an undertaking its cooperation would be imperative. Other principal questions are could England do it alone and could anyone persuade her to forget her Navy for one pig picture? The answer to the first questions is "No, and to the second, probably not.

Put British money behind the venture, import American technicians and prove to the government the value of cooperation for such an enterprise, and England would begin to get off its celluloid treadmill. It would have something to both work and follow up on. If they don't want the Americans, send for the Germans. For England can't put it over alone. The necessary technical skill isn't on home soil.

If England doesn't want to do it, there is probably not one major American producing company which wouldn't leap at the chance, on the grounds of sound business, a big picture and a friendly gesture toward Britain.

"Trade follows the film" is a slogan pictures have brought about and is one of Britain's worries. Politically, then, isn't it reasonable to suppose that a big picture made by England on India would draw the bonds closer between mother and disgruntled child? Likewise, Canada and Australia equally as appreciative?

Politically and financially sound. Financially because there is a world market for good pictures, regardless of country, and each of these subjects is epic, vital and of adventure. Of interest to all nationalities if well made. Also because that while the second two pictures are being made, the first one would be turning in revenue.

Would the Prince of Wales sidestep at least one scene in one of these pictures? Isn't it likely that Kipling would allow his name and perhaps his brilliant mind for the story on India? Possibilities are almost unlimited.

A tremendous undertaking necessitating specialists all the way down the line, from selling the idea to Britain to cutting the picture. America has a number of directors who could do it, Germany a couple and England none. It could even be done with an All-English cast, something United Kingdom pride might insist upon.

It is the obvious thing for England to do, to set an important industry that now is not even established within its own possessions.

Then, with England herself setting the path, let the trade follow or admit her film insufficiency for all time.

ON LEGIT

Through Hearst's New York "Daily Mirror" plugging so strongly for the Ziegfeld attractions, padding its amusement pages with free pictures and type for the several Ziegfeld musicals, several of the dramatic plays along Broadway are reported to have withdrawn their advertising from the Hearst tab.

Chamberlain Brown's so-called "repertory" company, which opens at the Cosmopolitan next week, is the same stunt which another casting agent, Murray Phillips, originated and tried around Times Square with little luck last summer. Phillips lined up good players then idle and presented a flock of them in revivals of old pieces.

Brown is doing the same thing. His first piece is "Mrs. Dane's Defence," which has Helen Menken, Alison Skipworth and others in it. Inasmuch as it is all being handled out of the Shubert office, it is figured that the thing is in reality a Shubert enterprise with Brown as another of their producing blinds.

Brown is using a $2 top, which can gross a fair sum in the sizeable Cosmopolitan.

On the New York "Journal" Anderson is just writing reviews and sending them down to the plant. Same sort of stuff, too, that he used to write in the "Post."

CHI COPS NIP LOBBY SELLING

Make 6 Arrests—Specs' High Pressure Methods

Chicago, Jan. 31.

It has apparently occurred to Frank Peska, city prosecutor, that a municipal code prohibits the street sale of amusement tickets in Chicago, for on Friday evening (Jan. 27) police from the prosecutor's office, garbed in plain clothes, mingled with the theatre crowds on Clark street and made arrests. Six men were taken and charged with ticket scalping.

Prosecutor Peska's activities continued the following night, two more of the racketeers being apprehended. Peska says the plain clothes boys will mingle nightly until the practice has been discontinued. All the men arrested admitted their's was a good "graft," stating they averaged $30 or better on week days and over $50 on Saturdays.

Ticket scalping and its attendant undesirable features is nothing new to Chicago. Florence Couthoul, pioneer Chicago ticket broker with stands in various parts of the city, during last year's newspaper campaign against the scalpers, stated that if theatres would make war on lobby scalping, Chicago patrons would have no grounds for complaint. Chicago's Shubert office, some time ago, threatened to disbar the Couthoul interests, charging that the Couthoul firm favored Erlanger here. Shuberts endeavored to prove the indies were disposing of more tickets than the Couthoul offices. This was proven a physical impossibility unless the indies put their agents in front of the theatres. Couthoul's brokerage is confined solely to hotel stands, clubs and buildings, and no street sales have ever been permitted.

Tendency of the indcpendents to cut-rate tickets in front of local theatres was uncovered here sometime ago. Agents of the independents, working the theatre lobbies, have become nuisances by buttonholing prospective buyers and high-pressuring them. Not infrequently the seats purveyed in this fashion were found to be inferior and playgoers believed themselves victimized.

$12,000 FOR DEBATE

The Judge B. Lindsey vs. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise debate on "Companionate Marriage" at Carnegie Hall, Jan. 28, was attended by 3,300 people to a gross of $12,000. Leigh Emmerich staged the set-to on a $7 top, selling out in advance.

Audience adjudged Judge Lindsey, the "pro" debater, the winner, according to mail ballots.

Customs Take Two Off "Desert Song" Train

Newport, Vt., Jan. 31.

Norman Zelig and Mary Harrison, understudy, both with the "Desert Song" company, were taken from the train here last week as the show was on route from Montreal to Boston by immigration officials.

Zelig was found to be a Russian who had smuggled himself into this country from Canada in 1920. He was returned to the Canadian side of the border, leaving his wife and family in New York City.

Miss Harrison was found to be a Canadian. Later she was allowed to proceed to Boston, when she had satisfied officers she had been legally admitted to this country.

Wilton Lackaye Better

Wilton Lackaye, who suffered a nervous collapse several months ago, is on the mend. He was able to leave his home for the first time last week.

The veteran star was rehearsing with a play when stricken early this season.

Youmans' Theatre

Vincent Youmans' own theatre on Seventh avenue and 55th street will be erected on the site of the Hotel Grenoble.

"Patriot," Flop, Cost $100,000

Gilbert Miller's production of "The Patriot," a widely heralded production, closed Saturday after a week and three days. Two important players, Leslie Faber and Madge Titheradge, were especially brought over from England for it.

Miller's loss is said to be well over $100,000 on the production, partly regained by the sale of the picture rights to Paramount for a sum reported at around $75,000. The show was figured so important that a special souvenir booklet was gotten up, costing plenty and being put on sale with few takers at the theatre.

The play was a great European success, but a good many roles were cut for the American production as too rough. One of these had the Mad Czar in fits of temper which showed him to be much nuttier than the play indicated.

Paramount probably was also interested in the stage play.

Shakespeare Benefit at Met., Society Event

The benefit staged at the Metropolitan Sunday afternoon by and for the American Shakespeare Foundation, brought out an enormous society attendance. It provided an opportunity for nearly all the stage stars to do bits of their favorite Shakespearean roles.

Probably there never has been a larger assemblage of eminent stage stars in one performance. It started with a prolog spoken by Margaret Anglin to a sumptuous tableau of all the characters in Shakespeare-in-one-volume which put a period to the performance in a blaze of glory.

In between George Arliss and associate players did a scene from his production of "The Merchant," Beatrice Lillie played Audrey from "As You Like It," Alice Brady as Ophelia did the mad scene from "Hamlet," Walter Hampden gave Hamlet's advice to the players, Alexander Moissi sang a song from "Twelfth Night" and innumerable others did bits from the Bard's works.

Finally Mrs. August Belmont made a graceful speech, introducing Dr. John H. Finley, who among other things is an editor of "The Times" and a Shakespearean student of note.

Elsie Janis did an imitation of John Barrymore singing "Bananas," that being the nearest she could come to the classic atmosphere, and right next Queena Mario and Armand Tokatyan, of the Metropolitan Opera, sang the duet from "Romeo and Juliet." It was that kind of an afternoon.

Names that shine in the Broadway electrics were programed in minor roles and maybe there were stars among the supers.

In Minor Roles

Sidney Blackmer, Henry Hull, Margalo Gillmore and Estelle Winwood had what amounted to thinking parts in a scene from "Midsummer Night's Dream," which alone made it a memorable occasion. Helen Gahagan appeared in the "Forest of Arden" scene, although she had to take a late train to make a dress rehearsal in Philadelphia.

The feature of the program was a Shakespearean medley, called "In Shakespeare's Garden," a garden setting with the Bard seated at a writing table in silence while his characters appeared in brief scenes. Among these, to mention only a few, were Edith Wynne Matthison, Vivian Tobin, Pedro de Cordoba, Margaret Wycherly, Julia Arthur, Madge Kennedy, Jefferson de Angelis, Clarence Derwent, Ernest Lawford, Peggy Wood, Eva LeGallienne, Minna Gombel, Jane Cowl, Katharine Cornell and Basil Rathbone.

The American Foundation is engaged in a campaign to raise $1,000,000 toward the fund to build and endow a memorial theatre at Stratford-upon-Avon, which, take it from Dr. Finley, may be pronounced with an "A" as in "wait" or as in "avenue."

The Met benefit realized around $34,000.

EDDIE CANTOR ILL; "FOLLIES" CALLED OFF

Ziegfeld Show Not in Philly—2 or 3 Benefits Each Sunday Slip Eddie

Eddie Cantor will not be able to play again this season, according to his physician, Dr. Alex L. Louria, of 149 New York avenue, Brooklyn, who says that as soon as he has sufficiently recovered from the attack of pleurisy now confining him to his home, he will have to go south.

Ziegfeld's "Follies," to have opened in Philadelphia Monday, has been officially disbanded, according to Equity, and paid an extra week's salary in lieu of notice. All further booking for the show has been cancelled.

Cantor has been ailing all fall, laying off several days just before "The Follies" closed at the New Amsterdam in November. He weakened his condition by playing two or three benefits every Sunday night, despite the warning of Dr. Louria that he would break down. Last Friday he played the Actors' Fund benefit while quite ill, with his back strapped up to ward off the pleurisy that threatened him.

Cantor's ailment is described as chronic pleurisy. Saturday in Newark it was expected the Philadelphia engagement might be suspended, the chorus girls being ordered to report at the Ziegfeld offices at four Monday afternoon.

The crew, five 70-foot baggage cars and several principals went on to Philadelphia. They were ordered back late on Monday.

The "Follies" was an expensive organization. The show played to $36,000 last week at $3.30 in Newark without profit. That applied to the Boston engagement which also ran around $35,000 weekly. At Philadelphia bigger takings and a profit was practically assured.

The show was booked to play the new Erlanger there.

Gaige, Book Publisher

Crosby Gaige, show producer, is going into the publishing business in a big way. The producer will soon bring out under his own imprint nine volumes of poetry, fiction and miscellaneous literature, all in limited editions and most of them signed by the authors.

Included in the list are "Letters of Joseph Conrad to Richard Curle," 150 hitherto unpublished letters of the great novelist; a novel by James Joyce called "Anna Livia Pluarabelle"; "At First Sight," a short novel by Walter De la Mare; "Reminiscences of Andrea," by Gorky, translated by Katherine Mansfield. An item of interest locally is a volume of the poems of Helene Mullins. Miss Mullins is a frequent contributor to columnists in the dailies.

The books will range in price from $7.50 to $22.50 a copy. Bennett Cerf and Donald Klupfer, publishers of the Modern Library and the Random House books, will handle the distribution for Gaige.

Gershwin's G.O. Selection Jewish or Black and Tan?

"The Dybbuk" as a grand opera for next year is a possibility.

George Gershwin, it is said, is undecided between the Jewish play and "Porgy" for his first operatic attempt. He may go abroad to study first.

Jessel $25,000 Per Film

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Tiffany-Stahl has George Jessel for two pictures to be made for its '28-'29 program.

First will be an original, "Schlemiel." The deal for Jessel's service was started when M. H. Hoffman was in New York.

Jessel's salary will be around $25,000 per picture.

"Lurie" Now "Geary"

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

The Lurie theatre, often christened and much-managed house, will become the Geary theatre in honor of the street it's on.

Operation of the house passes to Homer Curran (local) and the Shuberts. It is owned by Louis R. Lurie, millionaire realtor.

DALE'S DENIAL DAMPER

The rumor Alan Dale is to retire as dramatic critic of "The American" seems covered with moisture.

Dale is said to have told the anxious ones he isn't.

Cinsy Censored 'Lulu Belle' Cops at All Performances

Cincinnati, Jan. 29.

"Lulu Belle" finished its engagement at the Grand Opera House last week on probation. It scarcely missed being ordered beyond the city limits as an undesirable, so displeased was City Manager Sherrill with the play.

From Wednesday matinee on two policemen, one in plain clothes and the other in uniform, sat in at each performance and observed closely that dialog and situations contained in the "censor sheet" with which they were armed were omitted by Lenore Ulric and her company. Miss Ulric responded graciously to the censorship commands by Sherrill.

Not a word about the municipal pruning appeared in the local press.

The show opened Monday. The next day it suffered severe criticism by the four dailies, and came in for additional panning in the editorial columns.

Among the material cut out was the part in the cabaret scene where the dusky dancers were permitted to carry on freely; also the line following this scene of "This ain't no hotel."

Show grossed very well on the week, thanks to a clever piece of advance work by Milford Unger, manager of the Grand. He pepped up the advance sale considerably by advertising six days before the opening that mail orders were so heavy purchases of seats must be made at the box office.

HARRY MILLER RELEASED

Warrant on Peggy Hope's Complaint Is Withdrawn

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

After making an investigation into the back stage battle at the Mayan between Peggy Hope and Harry Miller, who appeared in "Sunny," Deputy City Prosecutor Concannon released a warrant for Miller's arrest.

Miller appeared before Municipal Judge Bush and pleaded not guilty to an assault and battery charge. He was allowed to go without bail, and trial was set for today (Wednesday).

Three Fight Plays

Laurence Stallings and Herman J. Mankeiwicz, both of Paramount, have turned collaborators. They are working on a prizefight comedy, said to be based on incidents in the life of Stanley Ketchell.

Another pugilistic play is called "The Fight Racket," by Hy Daab and Ted Paramore, Jr., the latter the author of "Set a Thief," last season. Then there is "Knockout," Crane Wilbur's adaptation of a French comedy of the ring, which Al Lewis is holding for next season.

"Diplomacy" in Chi

George Tyler has switched bookings on his all-star revival of "Diplomacy," playing Philadelphia this week. Instead of a flock of week stands, the show will play Brooklyn and Washington and then Chicago for a run, either in the Blackstone or the Illinois.

The Irish Players will follow one week behind "Diplomacy." Through a special arrangement with Equity, the Irish Players are laying off this week.

"WAY OUT" STOPPED

"The Way Out" was scrapped in rehearsal last week with the cast receiving two weeks' salary.

It was to have been the initial production of Ernest Haring, who authored. Haring withdrew the piece from rehearsal upon the claim that it needed revision.

5 AMBITIOUS P. A.'S

Five press agents have declared their intentions of becoming producers. They are, in addition to Bob Wilder, already announced, Tom Weatherly, Alex Yokel, Bela Blau and Joe Phillips.

Some have capital and some have plays.

WAGNER GETS DIVORCE AND ALIMONY REPRIEVE

Detroit, Jan. 31.

The Wagner divorce case, featuring Mrs. Gertrude (Fritzie) Wagner, ex-showgirl and sister of Tot Qualters, once a noted Winter Garden beaut, has been completed in local Circuit court, with Adolph B. Wagner awarded a divorce and relieved of the payment of alimony by Judge Theodore Richter.

The case, on trial for three weeks, received more publicity than any similar litigation here in years. The salacious charges filed by Wagner against his chorus girl-wife and sensational details in testimony, front-paged the story daily.

Wagner, former partner in the local Wagner Baking Co., and Fritzie Qualters were married in 1922. Wagner charged his wife with extreme cruelty and subsequent infidelity. Clarence E. "Bud" Hamilton, of this city, was named corespondent.

6 SHOWS "BLOW"

Whereas "It Is to Laugh" was suddenly reorganized after closing, three new attractions went off the boards last Saturday. Three other recent entrants will depart this weekend, and the Reinhardt German players, slated to close last week, are in their final week at the Cosmopolitan.

"The Patriot," presented by Gilbert Miller at the Majestic, was taken off Saturday after playing one week and three days. A fine production with no popular appeal, its continuation was regarded financially hopeless.

"THE PATRIOT"
Opened Jan. 19. Vocabularies worked plenty on this one, as the critical boys tried to explain that it was good, but not as good as it might be.
Variety (Ibee) said: "highly commendable effort, but popularity doubtful."

"A Distant Drum," presented at the Hudson by William Harris, Jr., was similarly removed, staying only a week and two days. That was apparently enough to convince the manager the show had no chance.

"A DISTANT DRUM"
Opened Jan. 20. No enthusiasm among first stringers.
Variety (Abel) wrote: "sounds a weak clarion call for the box office."

"Carry On," presented by Carl Reed, was another fatality last Saturday. It played at the Masque for the sole week and was recognized as hopeless for the boxoffice.

"CARRY ON"
Opened Jan. 23. Hammond ("Herald Tribune") pegged it "decrepid old graybeard." Osborn ("Eve. World"), "one of the worst."

"The Silver Box," presented by Henry Baron at the Morosco, will close at the end of its third week. Business started around $5,000, thereafter sloughing off.

"White Eagle" presented at the Casino by Russell Janney will close Saturday. The engagement lasted only six weeks. Takings were around $14,000 and less last week. Foor at $5.50 scale.

THE WHITE EAGLE
Opened Dec. 26. A second string assignment.
Variety (Sid) wrote: "Colorful and tuneful enough to make it a success."

"A Night in Ireland," something of a hodge-podge entertainment at Daly's, will go off after two weeks. "The Prisoner," announced to close in the Village last Sunday, holds over this week and is desirous of moving uptown. "Mongolia" will be succeeded at the Mansfield next week by another attraction, but the manager of the former is reputed to be seeking another berth.

HOPKINS' SHOWS IN INDIE HOUSES BACK OF SHUBERTS' CHI MOVE

Lee Shubert's Reported Road Rights to "Excess Baggage" in Reprisal Show of Stage—Beating Hopkins' "Burlesque" to Loop with Other

Last summer, when Arthur Hopkins' lease on the Plymouth expired, he said he would renew it if the Shuberts shared on the expense of taking out the stage boxes, installing new chairs on the lower floor and recarpeting the house. Shubert refused, telling Hopkins he could take it or leave it.

Hopkins took it, but later booked "Paris Bound" and "Salvation," both of which Shubert wanted, into independent Broadway theatres.

Shortly after this Hopkins noted the "Excess Baggage" ad was spotted directly beneath "Burlesque" in the dailies, with the "Sun's" quote, "Better than 'Burlesque'" conspicuously displayed.

Hopkins informed the agency handling his copy that if the two ads were not separated he would withdraw his ad.

Shortly after came the report Lee had bought the road rights to "Excess Baggage" and that the Chicago company would open as quickly as possible.

Shuberts' Sure Hit

Judging by the attendance, Sardi's restaurant is the only hit the Shuberts have in town.

Equity Issues Form of Directors' Contract

A form of contract for stage directors who may be members of Equity has been issued by that organization. It is the first time an attempt has been made to protect those engaged in that work.

Independent producers other than those of the former Producing Managers' Association, are required to post a bond or cash to guarantee two weeks' salary to the actors, but heretofore there has been no provision to protect the directors. In some cases where attractions get into financial difficulties, the actors get paid, but the directors lose altogether, having no other recourse except civil suit.

Under the new contract framed by Equity for directors, there is provision whereby clauses five and six on the Equity minimum contract are made part of the director's contract. These clauses refer to Equity shop and arbitration of differences between managers and directors. A number of actors are also directors, also some former actors now devoted to that work belong to Equity. Other directors may use the new standard form. It does not apply to stage managers who use the regulation Equity contracts.

Agreement made this........ day of..............19........by and between.................. ("manager") and................ (hereinafter called "director.")

1. The manager engages the director to direct the play now called "............................ upon the terms and conditions herein specified and the director agrees to render said services under said conditions.

2. The employment shall begin on or before the.........day of ...., 19.........

3. A minimum of............ weeks' work and compensation is guaranteed by the manager.

4. The weekly compensation shall be $.............., payable on Saturday of each week.

5. This employment shall terminate ....

6. All traveling expenses, including hotel bills when rehearsals or production is outside of Manhattan Borough shall be paid by the manager.

7. The director agrees to perform his services in a competent and painstaking manner and in a case of illness or other cause whereby he shall fail to perform such services as aforesaid the parties agree to abide by the decisions of the Actors' Equity Association, which Association may, however, in its discretion refer any dispute to arbitration as hereinafter provided.

The provisions on the face of the Equity minimum contract, standard form, "to be used by Independent New York Managers," etc., relating to all members of the cast being Equity members, etc., and relating to arbitration contained in the present standard form in clauses 5 and 6 on the face thereof are hereby made a part of this contract.

Manager.
Director.

ALL-AMERICAN REVUE READYING FOR PARIS

Troupe of 40 Due at Ambassadeurs May 1—for Sayag Connelly Staging

"Trans-Atlantic," an intimate revue with an all-American cast, is being readied here for Paris. It is to be presented at the Ambassadeurs by M. Sayag about May 1. The revue, to be along the lines of the former Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic," will be staged by Bobby Connelly, who will sail with the company around the first of April.

There will be a chorus of 25 girls and the principals will number 15 in addition to Waring's Pennsylvanians. Also engaged to date are John and Buster West, Myrio, Desha and Barte. The latter, an adagio trio, are to appear at the Kit Cat, London, and will then join the show.

Edgar Selwyn's 'Blondes'

Palm Beach, Jan. 31.

Edgar Selwyn, here on winter vacation, stated the item of last week, in which it was reported he had bowed out of the London production of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is without basis. The producer added that he had extended his contract with William Gaunt for the English presentation.

John Emerson, co-author of the play with Anita Loos, is shortly leaving for London, there to direct the play. Emerson will also select the cast.

MARION GRANT'S HOME

Providence, Jan 31.

Papers were filed here the past week deeding the expensive home of Albert Sack to his wife, Marion Grant, formerly leading woman of the Modern Stock Company of this city.

About a year ago Miss Grant married Sack, well known sportsman and wealthy mil' owner, and left the stage. He attempted suicide recently in a New York hotel, when Miss Grant went into rehearsal on a new show.

1st Daily's Guarantee

Kansas City, Jan. 31.

For the first time a local daily has guaranteed an incoming road attraction.

It was done here by the "Journal-Post" for the Theatre Guild date.

Actresses as Authors

Gertrude Bryan and Dorothy Day, actresses, have completed the script of a comedy, "Reflected Glory."

WALLACE M'CUTCHEON SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

"Have a Drink" Note Found Under Gin Bottle in Hotel Room

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Wallace McCutcheon, 47, is dead, killed by himself with a shot through the right temple, Jan. 27, in his room at the Warner Kelton hotel here. A note left by him under a half filled gin bottle read, "Have a drink."

McCutcheon had been out of work for a long while. He had been an actor in musicals and pictures. Up to the day before his death, he had lived with Will Morrissey at the latter's home in Santa Monica.

When the police were called in by the hotel's housekeeper, who discovered McCutcheon, dead, two cents were found and several newspaper clippings relating to Pearl White's doings abroad.

McCutcheon married Miss White, then the Pathe film serial star, in 1917, she divorcing him in Providence, R. I., in 1921. Henry McCutcheon, a brother, is said to live in Brooklyn, N. Y. The remains were taken to the morgue.

Wallace McCutcheon's fame as a warrior will be more eternal than his stage, screen or dance floor career. Enlisting as a private in the English army, he left it when the war ended as a major, receiving all promotions for valor on the field. Besides the high rank he emerged with, Major McCutcheon carried a silver plate in his head and several on his body, all caused by wounds while in action.

Following the war and returning to this country where he was born, Mr. McCutcheon disappeared for about three years. He was located in a Buffalo, N. Y., electrical plant and alleged he had no recollection of how he got there or during the period until his memory was restored.

Returning to New York about that time, he later became a member of the Earl Carroll "Vanities," remaining with the show for two seasons and acting as a sort of master of ceremonies in the musical.

Upon going to Hollywood, the deceased did some picture work here and there without prominence.

Before going on the stage, McCutcheon had become known to Broadway as a ballroom dancer, with his most notable floor engagements performed with Vera Maxwell as his partner. Previously he had been a New York man around town and had done some painting.

A very nice fellow with numberless friends, all the misfortunes befalling Wallace McCutcheon, and they were many, were attributed to his great war record, something he never mentioned himself.

2 CASTS PAID OFF

"Paradise" and "Enchanted Isle" Players Collect

Claims of the players in "Paradise," which appeared for one week at the 48th Street (at Christmas), were paid off by Equity last week. A week's salary was due because of the usual two weeks minimum requirement. The play was presented by Robert Milton, who had others interested with him in the venture. Milton claimed the Chanins were responsible. The check in settlement was received by Equity from that source.

The Oppenheimer brothers, who operate the Lyric, have paid off salary claims due "The Enchanted Isle," which played the house last fall. The house stood responsible for salaries after the first week. The claims amounted to around $6,000.

FABER IN LONDON "SPIDER"

Leslie Faber, instead of William Courtney, has been chosen for the lead in the London company of "The Spider." It opens there at the Winter Garden Feb. 27. English rights have been taken over by Gilbert Miller but Albert Lewis will direct the show. Lewis and Faber are sailing from New York Friday on the "Olympic."

Originally it was intended to present "The Spider" in London with an all American cast. Instead English players will be used.

C. K. Gordon's Real Estate

Chas. K. Gordon, former legit producer, has joined B. W. Sangor as a real estate salesman.

DOCTORING COOK SHOW

Detroit, Jan. 31.

Maurice Marks and Rita Wieman (Mrs. Marks) were in town last week to gag up "Rain or Shine," the Joe Cook musical which closed Saturday after three weeks at the Shubert.

The show brodied here but is said to have improved considerably with doctoring. It goes east.

'World' Stops Woollcott

Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the "World," New York, was not permitted by his paper to review the Theatre Guild's production of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," opening at the Golden Monday night. This was figured, among the insiders, as being caused by Woollcott's article in the current issue of "Vanity Fair," called "O'Neill Until It Hurts," in which Alex kidded the playwright and his new play. The article was resented in many quarters as a slur at a serious and then unproduced work; in other words, passing judgment on a play as yet unreleased for publication and unproduced.

Dudley Nichols, star reporter on the "World," attended the play for the "World" and wrote the notice.

Alex attended, but purely as an observer.

The Guild is said to have registered no complaint against the Woollcott article in "Vanity Fair" or against his reviewing the play, the agitation coming from the "World."

Woollcott said he read "Interlude" in script form, writing a story about it for the February issue of "Vanity Fair." He figured the magazine would be on the stands after the show opened. The play was delayed and the monthly was available before its premiere.

In not being assigned to cover the play the critic had no feeling about the matter at all and there is no truth in the report that he had resigned.

"Laugh" Revived With East Side Bankroll

"It Is to Laugh," recently closed at the Eltinge, reopened at the Forrest Monday. Its sudden revival was something of a Broadway surprise. Fresh backing by East Siders is the explanation.

A group of downtowners expressed faith in the Fannie Hurst comedy with its Yiddish background. They raised $20,000 for its resumption, it is reported. It was stated that $5,000 will be spent in newspaper advertising this week, with $3,000 going for space in the Yiddish papers, the balance in the dailies.

At the head of the East Side group now interested in "It Is to Laugh" are Murray Agid and Hyman Bushel, the attorney.

Barbour, Crimmins & Bryant produced the play. They have turned the production over and are to receive 50 per cent of any profit. The trio-firm announced the show's closing several weeks ago. An extra week was added when East Side money first showed up, but the expected additional coin was late and the show was shut.

The cast is reported to have been assembled. Edna Hibbard, featured, cancelled dates to resume with the play.

May-December Bust; 3-Day Divorce Record

Probably a record for speedy divorcing is the marital liberation of Helen Henderson, "Follies" showgirl, as Mrs. Aaron Benesch, the wife of the 60-year-old Baltimore millionaire.

The May-December match was a bust from the start. It attracted national newspaper attention and came to a formal parting of the ways after three months. The legal process required only three days.

Respective counsel took care of the little details such as the financial settlements, etc., although Benesch maintains he still is in love with the former chorine.

Thursday Miss Henderson filed her divorce papers in Chicago, and Saturday Justice Joseph Sabath of Chicago sat in judgment "by arrangement" and awarded her a decree on the ground of cruelty.

A previously fast divorce of theatrical prominence in Chicago was the six-day race for freedom by Ethel Shutta from Walter Batchelor, the agent. Miss Shutta is now Mrs. George Olsen.

In both actions, Julian T. Abeles, New York lawyer, operating through Chicago correspondents, appeared for the wives.

8-WEEK CLAUSE THROWN OUT

Justice Tierney Rules Restrictive Provision Invalid

Justice John M. Tierney's ruling in the case of Chanin Theatres Corp. against Philip Rosenwasser declaring that the eight weeks' restriction clause in a house rental contract is legally unsound, means that a manager, under the present standard form of contract, can remove his attraction from one house into another without fear of legal molestation.

The facts as concerned Rosenwasser were that he took his "Oh, Ernest" production out of the Chanins' Royale into the Carroll after it had played first at the Royale. It lasted four more weeks at the Carroll at better house terms.

The Chanins sued on the ground a clause provided no attraction could reopen at a rival Broadway theatre within eight weeks of having played the house at which it opened. The Chanins asked for an injunction and eight weeks' damages at $3,000 a week, their estimated house rental.

Justice Tierney concurred with Terence J. McManus of McManus, Ernst & Ernst that the clause was invalid and inadequately worded. As interpreted it technically covers the picture rights, but as far as the opposition legit house is concerned, does not bind.

Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr., is of the opinion this standard contract has been a trade custom dating back to a legal document the late David Gerber of Dittenhoefer, Gerber & Fishel first formulated in 1910. No showman has since tested its legality until the Chanin-Rosenwasser litigation.

JAP ACTORS IN JAP PLAYS; 1ST TIME HERE?

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

Believed to have been the first performances by a Japanese troupe of actors before an Occidental audience in this country was the presentation by Ickikawa Utaji and his company of players.

On the stage of the miniature theatre at the Hotel Fairmont two plays were given each evening for two succeeding nights, both drawing largely from the Occidental public.

The acting of the Japanese performers is strikingly similar to that by Chinese professionals, recently reviewed in Variety, excepting that the actors invariably sit or squat about the stage. There is little or no gesturing, with a so-called musical accompaniment constantly given.

On the opening night the visiting Oriental actors gave "Two Pines" and "Chikara," the former a two-act drama; the second a single act dramatic sketch. On the second evening the plays given were "Ten-Ichi-Bo" and "The Village School."

Burgess' Dispute

The claim of Dorothy Burgess against Schwab and Mandel is to be arbitrated. Miss Burgess was cast for the Chicago company of "Good News" and given a run of the play contract calling for a salary of $500 weekly.

After the show opened in Detroit she was replaced. Miss Burgess, after reporting daily, was advised by Equity that she need no longer report, since the managers admitted liability.

No salary was received by her, and after filing claim with Equity arbitration was agreed on.

DUFFY-BELASCO PIECE

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

Henry Duffy, coast stock operator, in association with David Belasco, will [illegible] production of "The [illegible]," new play by Olga Printzlau, scenario writer.

SHOWS IN N. Y. AND COMMENT

Figures estimated and comment point to some attractions being successful, while the same gross accredited to others might suggest mediocrity or loss. The variance is explained in the difference in house capacities with the varying overhead. Also the size of cast, with consequent difference in necessary gross of profit. Variance in business necessary for musical attraction as against dramatic play is also considered.

"A Connecticut Yankee," Vanderbilt (14th week) (M-882-$5.50). Good things are getting money and others only crumbs, as usual; some of newer productions already closed; "Yankee" big; over $24,000 last week was biggest normal week since opening; capacity.

"A Distant Drum," Hudson (D-957-$3.30). Taken off Saturday, lasting week and a half; showed nothing at box-office.

"A Free Soul," Klaw (4th week) (C-830-$3.30). Moderate business; with cut-rate aid, around $8,500 last week; satisfactory both ways; figures to make moderate-run distance.

"And So to Bed," Bijou (14th week) (C-605-$3.30). Always moderate money attraction, but profitable; with cut-rate aid, estimated around $7,000 recently.

"Artists and Models," Winter Garden (12th week) (R-1,492-$5.50). Expectation for new "Greenwich Village Follies"; present revue not rated among leaders; around $24,000.

"Behold the Bridegroom," Cort (6th week) (CD-1,043-$3.85). Costs more to operate than average dramatic attraction; slipped off last week, approximating $10,000.

"Broadway," Century (72nd week) (CD-2,890-$2.20). With two-for-ones, cigar coupons and plain cut rates, last season's smash now parked in big house; $18,000 last week.

"Burlesque," Plymouth (23d week) (CD-1,041-$3.85). Several of newer hits ahead of this early smash, but still doing great business; last week, nearly $21,000.

"Carry On," Masque (C-700-$3.30). Passed out Saturday, but one week; house dark.

"Cock Robin," 48th Street (4th week) (CD-960-$3.30). Doing better than estimated and figures to make grade to some profit; quoted over $9,000.

"Coquette," Maxine Elliott's (13th week) (D-942-$3.85). Always sells out and figured among current hits that will run into or beyond summer; $19,000 and more.

"Diversion," 49th Street (4th week) (C-704-$3.30). Picking up; another recent entrant that started weakly and now indicated aimed for measure of success; about $8,000 last week.

"Dracula," Fulton (18th week) (D-914-$3.30). More than holding own and looks set for balance of season; takings past two weeks of $14,000, as good as early weeks.

"Escape," Booth (15th week) (D-704-$3.30). Picked up again; after strong start, eased off, but last two weeks got around $12,000; very good money in this house.

"Excess Baggage," Ritz (6th week) (C-945-$3.30). Riding along to real business and ought to easily round out season; last week business improved again, with takings jumping $8,000 and quoted over $16,500.

"Five o'Clock Girl," 45th Street (17th week) (M-1,490-$5.50). In big money; business holding up well, with estimated takings not far from $40,000.

"Funny Face," Alvin (11th week) (M-1,400-$5.50). Also big grosser; smart show, with smart draw; virtual capacity after Tuesday; estimated close to $38,000.

"57 Bowery," Wallack's (2d week) (D-770-$3.30). Opened late last week (Jan. 26); not agency show and indications hardly favorable; more definite line this week.

"Good News," Chanin's, 46th Street (22d week) (M-1,413-$5.50). Never plays to empty seat; musical smash should play year desnite road companies; nearly $40,000.

"Hit the Deck," Belasco (41st week) (M-1,000-$5.50). Last four weeks, but doing excellent business; last week gross around $21,000; capacity about $25,000; "The Bachelor Father" next attraction.

"Interference," Fayeeum (16th week) (D-957-$4.40). Moved here from Empire Monday and figures to last into spring; $14,000 lately, indicates neat profit.

"It Is to Laugh," Forrest (5th week) (C-1,015-$3.30). After closed week opened Monday; originally played Elting to small money; fresh backing; calling resumption.

"Jimmie's Women," Frolic (19th week) (C-602-$3.30). Climbing; not big money but profitable at more than $6,000; using cut rates and so forth; rental arrangement for roof house.

"Lovely Lady," Sam H. Harris (6th week) (M-1,051-$5.50). Among moderately successful musicals; business bettering $20,000; fair gross at scale.

"Manhattan Mary," Apollo (19th week) (M-1,145-$5.50). Ought to last into warm weather; newer musicals out in front, but trade here still okay; $38,000.

"Marco Millions," Guild (C-914-$3.85). "The Doctor's Dilemma" (9th week) current, alternating with "Marco," which got around $18,000 last week.

"Mongolia," Mansfield (6th week) (D-1,050-$3.30). "Atlas and Eva," formerly called "Six Feet Under" opens here next week; current attraction playing to small trade; $3,000; looking for another house.

"My Maryland," Jolson's (21st week) (O-1,777-$5.50). Figures to go into spring; although never up in big money profitable and favorite for theatre parties; estimated around $18,000.

"Paris Bound," Music Box (6th week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Solid hit; sellout trade; last week $23,000; scale lowered from $4.40 as matter of policy; extra matinee Fridays, starting this week.

"Porgy," Republic (17th week) (C-896-$3.30). Thinking of running colored cast show into summer and perhaps longer; standing up to excellent trade, with takings consistently around $13,500.

"Revels," Shubert's (10th week) (R-1,395-$4.40). Isn't making much money but drawing; business lately around $19,000 weekly; even break.

"Rio Rita," Lyric (53d week) (M-1,-395-$4.40). Booking here when moved down from Ziegfeld for eight weeks; business better than anticipated, but due out late this month; last week $32,000.

"Rosalie," New Amsterdam (4th week) (M-1,702-$6.60). One of leaders; demand exceptional in agencies and capacity for all performances; rated over $48,000.

"Salvation," Lyceum (1st week) (D-957-$3.85). Presented by Arthur Hopkins, giving him three attractions on Broadway (others are "Paris Bound" and "Burlesque"); Pauline Lord starred; opened Tuesday.

"She's My Baby," (Globe (5th week) M-1,416-$5.50. Getting business thought not rated in smash class; around $27,000, important money; capacity about $37,000.

"Show Boat," Ziegfeld (6th week) (M-1,750-$5.50). Leader; few attractions have had equal agency demand and none bettered normal grosses of nearly $49,000.

"So Am I," Comedy (2d week) (C-632-$3.30). Opened late last week (Jan. 27); critics and first-nighters doubted chance of landing; more definite line this week.

"Strange Interlude," John Golden (1st week) (D-900-$3.30). Eugene O'Neill's long distance drama; opened Monday at 5 p. m. with hour's intermission supper (not free) at 7; presented by the Theatre Guild.

"Take the Air," Waldorf (11th week) (M-1,111-$4.40). House location may be handicap; doing fairly well, but not what show of equal merit might do in another house; around $21,000.

"The Baby Cyclone," Henry Miller's (21st week) (F-946-$3.30). While not big, has been profitable; reported due out in three weeks; $9,000.

"The Command to Love," Longacre (20th week) (C-1,019-$4.40). Neat money maker; off from earlier pace, but still commands class draw, principally lower floor; rated around $14,000.

"The Golden Dawn," Hammerstein's (11th week) (O-1,265-$6.60). Made the grade among season's important musicals; not capacity, but consistently over $30,000.

"The Ladder," Belmont (69th week) (D-517). Million - dollar - flivver; wealthy backer still giving all tickets away; no one else would.

"The Madcap," Royale (1st week) (M-1,117; $4.40). Presented by Shubert; Mitzi starred; on tour for some weeks; opened Tuesday.

"The Merry Malones," Erlanger's (19th week) (M-1,500; $5.50). George M. Cohan's most ambitious presentation and most costly; getting strong support, although not capacity; last week about $27,000.

"The Mystery Man," Bayes (2d week) (D-860; $3.30). Opened late last week (Jan. 26); indications point to in-between attraction, native to roof house.

"The Optimists," Century Roof (1st week) (R-422; $5.50). Ten-person revue patterned after London's "The Co-Optimists"; co-operative; opened Monday.

"The Patriot," Majestic (D-1,700; $3.85). Taken off Saturday, playing but one week and half; foreign stuff as possessed no appeal for this side.

'B'way' Catches $19,000; Barrymore Makes Talk

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

Legits continue to hold strong with hardly a weak spot in the list. Marx Brothers' "Cocoanuts," in their second week of a three weeks' stay at the Columbia, again led the town. This despite diversity of opinion as to merits of attraction. Answer is at the box office, where a stiff $3.50 scale is in effect.

"Broadway" has apparently caught on. Second week was close to $20,-000, and everybody in town is talking about it. Looks like an easy eight weeks, maybe a few more. Lionel Barrymore finished his third week in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," at the Lurie with business firm. Indications are fourth and final week will show an upward movement. Barrymore's acting lavishly praised hereabouts.

Henry Duffy attractions continue to pile up nice profits. At the Alcazar "New Brooms" was almost as strong in its sixth week as on the opener. At the President business is also building. Indications are "The Nightstick" is good for at least three or four more weeks.

Sid Goldtree closed "The Married Virgin" at his Green Street, moving the production virtually intact to the Egan, Los Angeles. Goldtree followed the spicy comedy Jan. 27 with another French adaptation titled "The Bridal Bed."

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia—"The Cocoanuts." Biggest business this house has enjoyed this season; second week, $23,000.

Curran—"Broadway"; is sitting pretty; scaled at $2.50, the meller is appealing to a class that won't stand for the higher tariff; second week around $19,000; great.

Lurie—"Laugh, Clown, Laugh." A long time since this town has enjoyed a performance such as Lionel Barrymore is giving; third week $11,000 and profitable; one week to go.

Alcazar—"New Brooms." No stopping this one; playing to repeat and big matinee biz; sixth week close to $6,000.

President—"The Night Stick." Another Henry Duffy hit; building every day; second week bettered $5,500; looks like sure winner for another month.

Green Street—"The Married Virgin." Wound up 15 weeks to around $1,500; big, considering small overhead.

"The Queen's Husband," Playhouse (2d week) (C-879; $3.85). Opened Jan. 25 after premiere agency demand appeared limited to front rows; better line this week.

"The Racket," Ambassador (11th week) (C-1,067; $3.30). Holding to profit consistently; weekly grosses aboye estimates with average intake between $10,000 and $11,000.

"The Royal Family," Selwyn (6th week) (C-1,067; $3.85). Went into lead of non-musicals last week; got $24,500, slightly topped "Paris Bound" and "Mary Dugan."

"The Shannons of Broadway," Martin Beck (19th week) (C-1,198; $3.30). Picked up last week at around $11,000 mark; looks set into spring, maybe longer.

"The Silver Box," Morosco (3d week) (C-893; $3.30). Final week; revival attracted little attention and business; "The Silent House" due here next week.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan," National (20th week) (D-1,167; $3.85). Dramatic smash; virtual capacity trade since start and possibility for holding over into next season; $22,000.

"We Never Learn," Eltinge (2d week) (C-892; $3.30). First week's business gave small indication of show having chance; estimated hit over $3,000.

"White Eagle," Casino (6th week) (1,477; $5.50). Final week; under expectations from start; $13,000 last week.

L. A. GROSSES

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

"Chauve Souris" minus the personal presence of Morris Gest was nevertheless the town's smash last week. Belasco reported the munificent total of $26,000, heaps of jack for this frontier settlement.

More musicals in town than the realtors have seen in many a subdivision. "The Desert Song" was at the Mason and okay at $13,000. "Sunny" at the Mayan still galloping in its 14th week copped $14,000. Shrine Auditorium held "Naughty Marietta," and with the aid of its 6,300 divans grossed $15,000.

Morosco, long under the management of the Oliver Morosco receivership, began its new regime under Gerhold Davis' management with $5,000 for "Ol' Man." House is scaled at $1.25, and when taking around $6,000 on the week is well on the right side.

"Kongo" did $5,000 for its fourth week at the Orange Grove. Henry Duffy finally called it quits for "Pigs" after 12 weeks with it at the El Capitan. Final week reported $5,000.

The Music Box with "The Vortex" was down to $3,200 for its fifth and exit week.

12 CHI SHOWS DOMINATED BY MUSICALS

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Chicago's 12 legits are rolling along in a fairly steady groove. Indications are that business will remain steady for the remainder of the season.

Two new musicals, "Peggy Ann" at the Selwyn and the "Vanities" at the Illinois, are included in the count and have no kick coming. Two other newcomers are due in February, the "Silver Cord" is scheduled for the Studebaker Feb. 5, and "Good News" comes into the Four Cohans Feb. 19.

Stiff competition among the musicals, seven of 'em here now, is the order of the day. The seven furnish Chicago with a new record.

"Two Girls Wanted," which has been consistent at the Cort, will move into the Princess within a week. Its reputation, now established, may bring biz.

Estimates for Last Week

"Criss Cross" (Erlanger, 6th week). Carried by Fred Stone, has done okay business for a limited stay; with skillful exploitation might have been good for additional receipts; $34,000.

"The Squall" (Adelphi, 6th week). Moving out to make room for the "Cardboard Lover"; did well enough for a sex play, with closing gross of $10,500.

"Kongo" (Central, 4th week). Noticeable increase, but not remarkable; with sufficient plugging should ride along at present total of around $5,000.

"Hit the Deck" (Woods, 13th week). Holding up remarkably well despite six competitors; average has been $25,000.

"Peggy Ann" (Selwyn, 2d week). Should do fairly decent business for four or five weeks; Bill Roach can keep almost anything in the Selwyn or Harris for this period, what with club parties and other specials; $14,000.

"Two Girls Wanted" (Cort, 6th week). One week more and then to the Princess; got $9,000 at the Cort.

"Vanities" (Illinois, 2d week). Drawing plenty of out-of-towners and most of the convention men; $30,500.

"Constant Wife" (Harris, 6th week). Picked up a couple of "grand"; enjoys good advance sale and should hold for a fair run; around $20,000.

"Just Fancy" (Olympic, 4th week). Holding on and making money; bettered last week by $3,000; doing very well at $26,000.

"Behold This Dreamer" (Blackstone, 6th week). Glenn Hunter's show problematical; grossing around $10,500.

"A Night in Spain" (4 Columns, 10th week). Dependable and still giving real competition; "Good News" taking this house over Feb. 19; "Spain" may move to another house if business warrants; $35,000.

"Desert Song" (Great Northern, 22d week). Has been a good draw and still is; still good at $26,000.

GREENFIELD, YID UNION PRES.

Jean Greenfield, manager of the National theatre, New York, was elected president of the Hebrew Actors' Union. He succeeded Louis Goldstein.

"MIKADO" TOPS PHILLY SHOWS

Erroll Quits Early, $15,-000; 'Spider' $18,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.

A heavy downpour Thursday night, just as attendance showed definite signs of picking up to real strength, and a howling snowstorm that started Saturday noon, combined to put a dent in grosses that might otherwise have been highly satisfactory. Result was a promising week virtually ruined.

Once again the Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan revivals were the real feature of the week. Despite the storms, "The Mikado" was within a couple of hundred dollars of $22,000, a gain of almost $4,000 over the second week. This week, with all three operas being given, "The Mikado," "Iolanthe" three times, and "The Pirates" twice, there is every indication that the gross will go to nearly $25,000. A lot of the boys said it couldn't be done in Philly, but if the tour is at all comparable to the local engagement, Broadway can count on Ames reviving all the rest of the series next winter on Broadway.

The Gilbert and Sullivan company actually led the town. The most serious rivals: "The Love Call" and "Honeymoon Lane" both suffered from weather and eased off. Eddie Dowling's musical claimed to graze $20,000 at the Erlanger, a drop of $2,500 or $3,000. But all things considered, that's exceptionally good for the fifth week of a return engagement spotted at this new and by no means central house. "The Love Call" reported around $18,500, and still looks strong enough to establish an indefinite run if the weather betters.

The fourth musical offering, "Yours Truly," was reported down to $15,000 or under in its second week at the Shubert. Advance looked so weak it was decided to cancel the fourth week and bring the "Greenwich Village Follies" in a week earlier than planned, Feb. 6 to be exact.

The four non-musical attractions were, collectively, not so hot. "The Spider" easily led. In its opening week at the Lyric, this mystery-novelty claimed between $17,000 and $18,000, remarkable trade in view of the drop of the window buy, due to the storms. "Satan's Children," in its second and final week at the Adelphi, resisted the weather-handicap better than many, probably because word just began to get around on its merits. While comedy only grossed about $12,000 or a little over, it picked up, storms and all, beginning Thursday.

"Tenth Avenue," in the first of two weeks at the Broad, claimed about $9,500, and is rumored as closing after the local engagement. "The Silent House" was about $8,000 at the Garrick, its fifth week in Philly and its third house. This British melodramatic try-out did finely at the start, but appears to have out-lived its welcome.

The muddle of immediate legit bookings is becoming more complicated. The answer, of course, is the scarcity of road attractions. It is getting increasingly difficult to fill

"Vagabond's" $20,000

Washington, Jan. 31.

Rather hectic week for Janney's "Vagabond King," playing a return, with the pickings mighty slim until Thursday matinee. Things picked up from then on until about $20,-000 was rung up.

"Chicago," at the Belasco, though dropping about $4,000 below "Shanghai Gesture," the preceding week, had nice stay at around $14,-000. Meanwhile, the new "La Gringo" at the National was getting practically nothing.

"MERRY WIVES'" $27,000

Kansas City, Jan. 31.

The Skinner-Fiske-Crosman Co., in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," at the Shubert last week, are estimated to have done around $27,-000.

Cast Changes

Hal Skelly with "Burlesque" at the Plymouth was forced out of the cast last week. Robert Gore has been substituting since Friday. Skelly, with a heavy cold, is expected to rejoin this week.

BUT 5 OF 18 B'WAY MUSICALS IN CUT RATES—OTHERS DOING BIG

"Royal Family" Goes to Lead of Dramas—"Show Boat," Musical Topper, at Near $50,000—Several Other Large Grosses

Broadway's musical shows' strength stands out in this winter season. Not only are half a dozen such attractions holding to great grosses but others are drawing important money. Out of 18 musicals but five are in cut rates.

Dramatic strength is lacking so far as most of the January entrants are concerned. Few have any chance. Most of the new ones have closed. Several non-musicals on the holiday card did click and are now leading the division.

In the past 10 days out of seven new dramas three are closed and the others are apt to shortly follow. Only "The Queen's Husband" seems to have a chance for moderate money. It is not rated hot in a ticket way.

"The Patriot" was withdrawn from the Majestic after a week and three days; "A Distant Drum" closed at the Hudson, playing a week and two days; "Carry On" was taken off at the Masque, after one week; "We Never Learn" has gotten little to date at the Eltinge, about $3,000; "57 Bowery" is regarded as having little chance at Wallack's; "So Am I" doesn't look any better at the Comedy, and "The Mystery Man" seems in doubt at the Bayes.

$6.60 for "Show Boat"

"Show Boat" continues to top the field, with last week's gross close to $50,000. Scale for this attraction will be lifted to $6.60 after next week, and weekly takings of $55,000 are anticipated; "Rosalie" is an easy second, over $48,000 again last week; rated next are "Good News" and "Five O'Clock Girl," around $40,000; "Funny Face" over $38,000; close to capacity; "Manhattan Mary" the same; "Rio Rita," $32,000; "Golden Dawn" quoted at the same mark; "She's My Baby" and "Merry Malones," $27,000; "Connecticut Yankee" over $24,000, the best gross for a normal week since opening; "Artists and Models," $24,000; "Take the Air," $21,000; "Hit the Deck," same, but slated to leave soon; "Revels," $19,500; "My Maryland," $18,000; "White Eagle," $13,000, closing.

"Family" Non-Drama Lead

"The Royal Family" took the lead among the non-musicals last week, grossing $24,500; "Paris Bound," with the scale lowered, got $23,000, but may again go out in front this week, with an added matinee Fridays; "Trial of Mary Dugan" very strong at $22,000; "Burlesque," with scale also lowered from $4.40 to $3.85 and buy over also big at $21,000; "Coquette," $19,000; Marco Millions," $18,000; "Broadway" under cut rate drive the same; "Interference," "Porgy" and "Command to Love, $14,000; "Excess Baggage, now rated among the hits, jumped to $16,500; "Dracula," $14,000; "Escape," $12,000; "Behold the Bridegroom" shipped to around $10,000; "The Racket," up to $10,000; "Shannons of Broadway," same; "Baby Cyclone," $9,000; "Cock Robin," over $8,000; "A Free Soul," over $8,000; "And So to Bed," $7,000; "Jimmie's Women," over $6,000.

Closings

Additional closings from those mentioned above are "White Eagle," Casino; "The Silver Box," which will be replaced at the Morosco by "The Silent House"; "A Night in Ireland," Daly's; Reinhardt's German players who held over an extra week at the Cosmopolitan which will offer a new stock organization. "The Prisoner" may close in the Village although seeking an uptown house and "Mongolia" is also looking for another berth. It will be replaced at the Mansfield by "Allas and Eva," first called "Six Feet Under"; "Rain or Shine" will relight the Cohan; "Sunny Days" will relight the Imperial; "Meek Mose" is slated for the dark Princess. Also mentioned to arrive next week are "Quicksand" and "Marriage on Approval."

22 Agency Buys

Several earlier successes were dropped from the agency buys, but three new attractions were added and the total remains at 22. Those added to the list are Sir Harry Lauder, "Salvation" and "The Queen's Husband." The list: "Funny Face" (Alvin), "Manhattan Mary" (Apollo), "Hit the Deck" (Belasco), "Good News" (Chanin's 46th St.), "Salvation" (Empire), "The Merry Malones" (Erlanger), "The Five O'Clock Girl" (44th St.), "She's My Baby" (Globe), "Golden Dawn" (Hammerstein's), Harry Lauder (Knickerbocker), "Interference" (Lyceum), "Coquette" (Maxine Elliott), "Paris Bound" (Music Box), "The Trial of Mary Dugan" (National), "Rosalie" (New Amsterdam), "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse), "Excess Baggage" (Ritz), "Lovely Lady" (Sam H. Harris), "The Royal Family" (Selwyn), "A Connecticut Yankee" (Vanderbilt), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "Show Boat" (Ziegfeld).

Cut Rates

There were 25 attractions offered at bargain prices in the cut rates up to Tuesday. They were: "My Maryland" (Jolson); "Harry Delmar's Revels" (Shubert); "White Eagle" (Casino); "Take the Air" (Waldorf); "Lovely Lady" (Harris); "Baby Cyclone" (Henry Miller); "Jimmie's Women" (Frolic); "The Shannons of Broadway" (Martin Beck); "The Ivory Door" (Hopkins); "Taming of the Shrew" (Garrick); "And So to Bed" (Hijou); "Command to Love" (Longacre); "It Is to Laugh" (Forrest); "We Never Learn" (Eltinge); "Behold the Bridegroom" (Cort); "The Racket" (Ambassador); "Interference" (Lyceum); "Magnolia" (Mansfield); "Cock Robin" (48th Street); "Broadway" (Century); "A Free Soul" (Klaw); "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" (Davenport); "Diversion" (49th Street); "The Mystery Man" (Bayes); "57 Bowery" (Wallack's).

Gil Miller Sailed

Gilbert Miller sailed for Europe on the "Aquitania" last Friday, the sailing date being made to conform with the approximate closing date of Max Reinhardt's German season here. At the same moment it was decided to hold over the foreigners for another week at the Century, with the attraction now slated to close at the Cosmopolitan on Saturday.

Business during the past three weeks took a jump, with a profit reported. Miller pointed out an error in the report that he discontinued his interest in the Reinhardt venture recently. The Germans are appearing under his direction, with no change in the original status.

Methot Divorce Fails

Globe's Pro Mat

What is claimed to be the real McCoy in the way of professional matinees is to be given Friday afternoon at the Globe, where Beatrice Lillie will perform "She's My Baby" for fellow professionals.

Admission is by invitation and no tickets will be sold, 'tis said. As other special mats of the kind sometickets have been sold, but in this instance crashing is by card only. According to the announcement every seat will be occupied by a star. It is understood some will decline the gallery, even though that is nearer milky way.

Werba Buys "Nightstick"

Crosby Gaige has sold the road rights of "Nightstick" to Louis E. Werba.

The crook play closed at the Cohan last Saturday. Under Werba's management it will tour, starting February 13 at the Riveria.

Boston, Jan. 31.

Big week for Boston and no maybe about it. Bless the weather for it. First snow of season fell Saturday, blizzard for a few hours then held off for matinee and evening business. Snow again Sunday, but who cared?

Shubert theatre took the lead away from the Colonial with the "Greenwich Village Follies" and played to a gate that passed $32,000. "Sidewalks of New York," at the Colonial, had second rating with better than $23,000, almost capacity at the scale.

"Road to Rome," at the Wilbur, was within $400 of a sell-out and the first week of "The Desert Song" at the Majestic brought the S. R. O. out of the moth balls for a four-day sell out at $19,500. "Play's the Thing," at the Plymouth, turned in $16,500, keeping up the pace set by "Broadway" and Jeanne Eagels. The Plymouth, off the subway stem, but in the midst of the garages, has been the consistently strong Shubert house this season.

"The 19th Hole," at the Hollis, had a weak start, but closed strong with sellouts for the last days of the week. "Wings," on the screen, still usurps the place of legit at the Tremont, and is doing well.

Estimates for Last Week

"Greenwich Village Follies," Shubert. Topped for the week; high gate for house in first week of two weeks' engagement; $32,500.

"Play's the Thing," Plymouth. Holbrook Blinn ran strong in first of two weeks' engagement; $16,500.

"Road to Rome," Wilbur. Within $400 of capacity first week; business second only to that of Ethel Barrymore earlier in season at same house; $19,500.

"19th Hole," Hollis. Opened weak and closed strong; almost sell out at end of week; $12,000.

"Desert Song," Majestic. Capacity almost reached, and sell out on the books for the second and last week; first week, $19,500.

"Sidewalks of New York," Colonial. Dowling shows seem to hit an average over $20,000 in Boston; $23,000.

"Wings" (Par.), Tremont. Film okay at $16,300.

In the offing: Chicago Civic Opera at the Boston Opera House for two weeks, Jan. 30 through Feb. 11; "Yours Truly" for the Majestic, Feb. 6; William Hodge in "Straight Thru the Door," Plymouth, Feb. 6; "Scandals" for the Shubert Feb. 6.

Bill Brady Now Equity Member; Still Uses Script

William A. Brady became a member of Equity Last week. The manager, who is a former actor, stepped into the lead role of "A Free Soul" when Lester Lonergon was forced out through illness.

Brady was a member of the defunct Producing Managers' Association which fought Equity during the actors' strike of 1919. He later joined the Managers' Protective Association, which split away from the P. M. A., and signed the present Minimum Basic Agreement. In returning to the stage, Equity called on him to establish his status. As a member of the old P. M. A. he had the privilege of expressing his conscientious objection to Equity. He preferred to join the association. In either case he would be required to pay dues. There are a few other better-known actor-managers who belong to Equity. Among the smaller touring companies that is generally true, since the managers also appear in the casts.

Brady jumped in on a moment's notice. Late last week he was still using a script while playing. Business improved when the show moved to the Klaw last week. Takings there were quoted over $8,000.

Six settings—four interiors, one on yacht and one, garden.

Ever since the Theatre Guild announced that it was going to do a nine-act play by Eugene O'Neill and that the audience would have to go out for supper between sections, the gagsters have been working overtime. Very funny, they thought to have a play that would begin at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, allow an hour's intermission for supper and run until after 11.

Maybe it did sound funny.

There were some 20 curtain calls at the conclusion of the show—cheers and calls for the author, director and about everybody else. In other words, this long, long play with a small cast held its audience tight and didn't lose a customer.

Nor will it. It is one of the season's clinches and certainly the best thing by far O'Neill has ever written. The praise seems to have been universal on the opening night except for one old woman who swore she was going to write 'The Times'—as if 'The Times' doesn't get enough letters without hers—and kick against the plain language. For it is plain, but never indecent or offensive.

O'Neill has the soul of a woman to lay bare, and act by act he does it, turning her around like a many-sided diamond until all of the facets have been examined and appraised. In bringing out some of the heroine's qualities there is some warm, warm descriptive matter handed over the foots. Okeh for b. o. biz, but the biz won't depend on that.

It is this play in which the characters speak their mind in addition to those regular speeches always put in the mouths of characters. In reality an adaptation of the soliloquy form, O'Neill has his people make a normal speech and then speak what they think. Much of this, of course, is in the manner of the fellow who greets a pest coming in on a party:

"Hello there, old timer—glad you came along."

And then, thinking:

"What the devil did this guy want to butt in on a party for—he makes as much noise as Pulaski—I hope he blows soon."

In this play the woman, Nina, is taken from early womanhood to middelaged widowhood. She grieves, when the curtain goes up, over a lost lover, Gordon Shaw. He was killed in the war and she hadn't given herself to him. This irked Nina right smart.

So she went into an army hospital and gave herself right and left to the boys until two friends, Charlie Marsden and Ned Darrell, advised her to marry Sam Evans, an up and coming young fellow. She does, and Sam's mother tells her that the Evanses are cursed with insanity and that she mustn't bear her child.

Ergo abortion, and then the mother suggests that inasmuch as Sam would love a baby, she'd better have one, but get another father for it without Sam knowing. Sam is the sort of a guy who wouldn't know, anyway.

Ned Darrell is the father. From this point on there is the conflict in Nina's love for her husband as a provider; Darrell as a lover; the boy as a son and Marsden as a father, for a figurative father he was, always hanging around and getting his sex thrills out of pats on the head.

Nina is a selfish, selfish woman who grows more selfish as time goes on, until the last act, when her attempts to keep her son by her side are thwarted by the boy's true father, Darrell. Sam has died meantime while Nina and Darrell decide that the ghosts of their past are a bar to their marriage and Charlie Marsden, still hanging around, gets her at last.

The plainness over the reactions of these people to their complicated and intertwined life is what makes the play. And it is a relentless, cruel play in its way, never mincing words and never trying to create sympathy, but always trying to explain. It does explain—and so much that every woman in town will hear about it and there'll be enough to see it before its run at the Golden is over to entitle it to listing as one of the season's major successes.

Guild has $4.40 top on this show, the highest for that organization, usually $3.30, no matter what the attraction, has ever charged. The $4.40 top is on for several reasons, the length of the show precludes matinees, leaving but six performances weekly. While the b. o. fec has been lifted, the subscribers still get tickets at the same rate, about $2.50 per orchestra seat. This, plus the fact that the matinee business will have to be recommenced for certain evening performances, holds the gross down to around $10,000 weekly until the subscription period goes off in about six weeks, after which the show will be able to gross neatly.

In cast the Guild has given the show plenty. Lynn Fontanne as the many-sided Nina has a long role which she plays to the niche of perfection; ditto Tom Powers, who grows older and older so well; Glenn Anders and Earl Larimore round out the main quartet of players.

Philip Leigh, Helen Westley and her daughter Ethel Westley, Charlie Walters (youngster) and John J. Burns in smaller roles, fill in their roles nicely. Mr. Leigh and both the Westleys got away especially well.

Settings are by Jo Mielziner, six, and quietly rich. Not cheap but so simply constructed they shift easily.

Moeller's direction is fine, for he figured out that technique by which the natural and mental speeches are differentiated without causing a break in the play's continuity. For this alone he rates a medal and for the rest of his work he proves that he's as good a director as there is in town.

Dinner hour intermission idea worked perfectly and the house didn't lose a customer. Not an act of the nine bores and the mental speeches, instead of distracting attention, seem to serve to bring the audience into a greater intimacy with the problems of the O'Neill characters.

No doubt about it—O'Neill has achieved something great in this, and by so doing has thrown buckets of discouragingly cold water on his disparagers.

This makes the Guild's fourth success this season.

And this will outlast, both in fame and length of run, any of the others.

It makes one wonder—who is the Guild's chief playwright—Mr. Shaw or Mr. O'Neill?

QUEEN'S HUSBAND

Comedy in three acts by Robert Emmet Sherwood. Produced at the Playhouse Jan. 25 by William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman. Roland Young featured. Staged by John Cromwell.

Frederick Granton.....Glyes Isham
Phipps.....Edward Rigby
Lord Birten.....Wallace Widdecombe
Petley.....James H. Morrison
Princess Anne.....Katherine Alexander
Queen Martha.....Gladys Hanson
Lady-in-Waiting.....Marguerite Taylor
Another Lady-in-Waiting.....Helen Cromwell
Gen. Northrup.....Reginald Barlow
King Eric VIII.....Roland Young
Major Blent.....William Boren
Sergeant.....John M. James
Dr. Tollman.....Arthur Hughes
Prince William.....Dwight Frye
Laker.....Benedict MacQuarrie

Robert Emmet Sherwood, editor of "Life," and playwright and columnist on the side, authored "The Queen's Husband," opening at the Playhouse Jan. 26, the same theatre that offered the same author's highly successful comedy, "The Road to Rome." That the new play will approach the record of "Rome" is decidedly doubtful.

Events in the satirical comedy, "The Queen's Husband," occur in the palace of a mythical kingdom somewhere in the North Sea. King Eric, lackadaisical monarch with a refined sense of humor, rules by grace of his wife. The queen is dominant and imperious. She does and says the things the king should do and say until a crisis arises. Then it is that Eric becomes the king, quietly righting the affairs of his land—and the queen likes it.

"The Queen's Husband" has a fair first act, a bit long and somewhat slow, but lit with quiet comedy. The second act is not amusing, too serious, but the last act appears to be a lifesaver.

Of course things happen which seem strange as applied to a regal household. As, for instance, Princess Anne, betrothed to a Teutonic crown prince, is given an out by her father and she departs on a steamer for South America with the boy of her heart, the king's secretary. That rarely happens in well-regulated monarchies, but there is the case of Mrs. Leeds and her son versus Grecian royalty.

"The Queen's Husband" is accurately titled, for that is just what the play's about. Roland Young, whom many associate with the younger featured players, is the father of a marriageable daughter, his hair grayed with platinum dust. But he acts admirably, having a flair for satire.

Eric is for playing checkers with his footman, much to the disgust of the queen. He'd much rather be beaten at the game than attend affairs of state, such as signing execution orders for a group of reds. He has a fondness for the zoo, too.

At the opening the queen is about to depart for America, a barbarous place, she's sure. The author distinctly refers to the visit of Queen Marie to these shores a year back. When returning and showing the king her scrap books there is some good fun over the pictures, with her posed with Charlie Chaplin, Marion Davies and very often with Grover Whalen (New York's official welcomer).

Gladys Hanson as Queen Martha makes some semblance to Marie in her manner of dressing and good looks. Also an imperious manner about Miss Hanson, although her underpining is anything but regal. She should wear all her frocks to the ankle.

Katherine Alexander looked more the young Princess Anne, inheriting her mother's strong-mindedness and her father's sense of humor, so to speak. Edward Rigby was a good choice as the checker-playing flunky.

Reginald Barlow did his job as dictator very well, while Dwight Frye made his Crown Prince a corking character bit. Frye was only on for a few moments. His sallow make-up, little mustache, Teutonic dialect, all went to make Prince William a real person.

In the cast is Marguerite Taylor, daughter of Laurette. It was her debut in just a bit, but she attracted some attention through her appearance.

They claim "The Queen's Husband" grossed $10,000 in Providence, the tryout spot. That is no small feat for that town. Yet the show appears to be a class draw. If it cannot develop a real demand it cannot make the grade. Indications are that it will not tarry more than three months. Ibee.

57 BOWERY

C. William Morganstern presents Edward Locke's 3-act comedy (two sets) at Wallack's New York, Jan. 26. Edward Elsner staged; Eddy Eddy did the settings.

David Schiller.....Hyman Adler
Mandy Schiller.....John D. Seymour
Martha Schiller.....Joan Blair
Olga Petrokoff.....Renee Rush
Jake Rosenberg.....Saul Z. Martell
Edward Rafferty.....Harold Healy
Edward Van Clive.....Robert Brister
John Southwood.....Wilbur DeRouge
Mary Chesterton.....Ann Reader
Mrs. Tewksbury Saint John.....Eda Von Buelow
Terry.....Jonathan Hole
Mangold.....Charles Lamlon
McNally.....Robert Blake
Pearson.....Alfred L. Regali

If it weren't for the possible film rights, offers for which have been made, according to information, "57 Bowery" would be reposing in Cain's asylum for indigent plays by Saturday. With the cinemoguls flirting for the flicker privileges it behooves Morganstern and his Moadru Productions, Inc., to force the issue for a spell. Moadru, the holding corporation, derives its name from two letters each of the surnames of Morganstern, Hyman Adler and Renee Rush, producer and principal players, who, while not featured on the program, are given tungsten prominence outside the theatre.

The unkind suspicious which always attend the information that performers are asked to invest their own money in a production in which they are seen seems justified with this play. While Adler, as the mellow pawnbroker, gives a halfway satisfactory performance, Miss Rush, as the Gentile protege of the kindly Jewish Simpson, is badly miscast, as is most of the supporting troupe.

Morganstern, a former Sunday night concert vaude booker, who edified Main street with such operas as "Sex," "The Drag," "Padlocks of 1927" and "The Reckless Age," seems to be without his element as an entrepreneur of disinfected dramaturgy.

It was difficult to believe that Edward Locke, whose "The Climax" of a score of years ago was somewhat of a sensation, could have been responsible for the hodgepodge on view at Wallack's. Years and years behind the times, it is familiar clap-trap that could be almost entertaining were it played a bit broader. One has but to sample such choice lines as "your pearls hav lost their luster" and "you mean——" with the significant pause as the betrayed girl casts down her optics, to get the drift.

Some other addenda that "this is terrible," with the retort "this could be worse" and "but how could it be worse?" caused some shoking in the immediate vicinity from those who sensed their mental reactions were being voiced.

The plot is as transparent as a night club hostess' good-fellowship. One knows pronto that the hi-hat friend of the pawnbroker's university-educated son is a no-good and that he will bring dirt on the house of David Schiller.

From the Bowery establishment Schiller migrates to midtown Fifth avenue, where Edward Van Clive (addressed as Bob in the play) pledges precious baubles with the Schillers on behalf of temporarily embarrassed society ladies who find they can meet their bridge debts and the like in this manner without the necessity of visiting pawn shops and ghetto neighborhoods.

The social rounder Van Clive is

Green Room Moving; Lambs' Club Sticks

The Green Room club, which removed to its present quarters on West 48th street several years ago, must find new quarters within six months. It is said a faulty lease is the reason. For a long time the club was quartered in a special building on 47th street, but vacated after the property was sold by the Actors Order of Friendship, which owned it.

The lease on the present home was termed for three and a half years. It was thought there was an optional clause permitting an extension of the rental for 21 years. It appears that provision was voided. The building at 19 West 48th street is owned by Columbia University. A Columbia fraternity was spotted next door, but moved recently.

The Green Roomers contemplate securing quarters in a hotel, a committee reporting that suggestion Tuesday.

On the same afternoon the building committee of the Lambs reported to a special meeting on the proposal to sell the 44th street building and build elsewhere. The committee is understood to have advised against the move and suggested the present club be retained as is. A realty operater had offered an attractive price for the property. A new site on 45th street west of the Beek theatre had been considered earlier.

Choir Strands; Frisco Art Patrons Offer Aid

San Francisco, Jan. 31.

Members of the Florentine Choir, stranded here, appeared in court yesterday (Monday) to press wage claims of $3,200 against Frank W. Healy, local concert manager. Representatives of Herbert Fleishacker and Wallace Alexander, wealthy patrons of the arts, told Police Judge Lazarus no formal claims had been filed, but the Otto Kahns of Friseo were ready to dig down. The case will come up again later this week.

Meanv hile, some of the 16 choir singers have been given work by West Coast Theatres.

THE ARNOS' MUSICAL

Peter Arno, "New Yorker" cartoonist, and his wife, Lois Long (Lipstick), on the same publication, are completing a musical comedy. Arno is doing the music and Miss Long the book and lyrics in collaboration with Billy Griffith.

Arno is a musician and at one time had his own jazz band, playing in the night clubs. He is also doing some songs with Clarence Knapp, former mayor of Saratoga, known as a column contributor under the name of Ambroze Glutz.

MACHUGH, FREE LANCE P. A.

Arthur E. MacHugh has joined the ranks of free lance press agents, which field has attracted a number of advance agents this season.

Lighters as Disturbers

Since the automatic (so-called) cigaret lighter has become common theatre patrons have fallen into the habit of striking a light to read programs while the house is dark.

the chief means of contact with his society friends. He is supposedly performing a courteous deed for the Mesdames Van-This and Van-That, who are in need of a little ready cash. The tony monickers are reeled off like so many Smiths and Joneses. Actually, after two acts of obviousness it is disclosed that each bauble has been filched by the social Raffles, who collects the pledge money and leaves his security in the name of the woman from whom he stole them.

The kindly dick, Ed Rafferty, is ultimately instrumental in forcing a confession from Kid Raffles, who uses a poison cigaret as a suicidal means to escape the pen.

Pretty thick meller that seems to have been prepared especially for the unsophisticated Yid trade. The presence of the kosher publicity experts who had much to do with "The Jazz Singer" exploitation downtown evidenced Morganstern's knowledge that he would have to rely on the Jewish fans for whatever support "57 Bowery" gets.

The miscasting of it all is more against the play than the elements supplied by its author, who wasn't given as full an opportunity as he might.

Miss Rush, who is said to be a wealthy divorcee, is financially interested, and Adler, along with Morganstern, Earl Carroll and a couple of others, also have a piece.

Even with the Carroll in at his own house, "57 Bowery" cannot hope to flourish on 42d street.

PLAYS OUT OF TOWN

THE BRIDAL BED

San Francisco, Jan. 27.

Sid Goldtree presents a four-act drama by Charles Mere. Adapted from the French by L. G. Blockman. Directed by Edward Redmond. Presented at the Green Street, Jan. 27.

Paul Morton.....J. Anthony Smythe
Ellen Morton.....Ellnore Jackson
"Captain" Harry Loring.Edward Redmond
Edith Chandler.....Anette Andre
Olek Chandler.....Victor Rodman

It's doubtful if the police will permit "The Bridal Bed" to continue many days unless there is some drastic cutting of lines. For pure, unadulterated profanity, nothing like it has ever been produced.

The play itself does not come under the term of "objectionable," although it deals with a delicate subject; but the cursing at the climax of the third act is just about as rough and raw as could be imagined as the husband drives his wife from the house.

The capacity mob greeted the lines with consternation, gasps and outright belly laughs—depending on the viewpoint. There were other frank speeches, but mild in comparison.

"The Bridal Bed" falls woefully short of stacking up alongside "The Carried Virgin," which preceded the attraction at the intimate little playhouse down in the Italian colony.

Originally a French drama, with the locale in Paris and a French watering resort, Blockman adapted it to an American version with the opening scene in a hotel bedroom in San Francisco, and the other acts near the beach at Santa Barbara, Cal.

The story is of a pair of newlyweds, the Mortons, who are about to start on their honeymoon.

Arriving in their hotel suite, the wife repulses all advances of her husband, and finally confesses earlier indiscretions. She tells her husband everything excepting the man's name. The man spurns her, but finally agrees to make the best of what he considers a bad situation.

A year later they have returned from abroad and are locating at Santa Barbara for the summer, when Ellen (wife) meets old friends, among them Dick Chandler (former lover) and his wife.

Morton finally traps his wife into admission that Chandler is "the other man." And it is then that the tirade of oaths sends the wife out. In the final scene there is a reconciliation between the Mortons, after Ellen has told Mrs. Chandler of her affair with Dick. Refused forgiveness by her friend, Ellen craves a final wish, that Dick be told that she (Ellen) "saved him with all her love and that she went away." Keeping up the lie to the hitter end, as it were.

Though intended as straight drama, the first night crowd at the little Green Street was inclined to accept it more as farce. Hardly had the curtain raised before ruffaws greeted a situation where Paul asks his wife to gaze at the pretty scene from the window—a window painted dull white and plainly a solid wood backing.

Despite the attitude of the pay mob, Smythe, in the lead role, stuck to his part religiously, giving a finished interpretation that really saved the play. Miss Jackson was palpably nervous, though giving an excellent performance. Rodman was a total loss as Chandler, while Anette Andre satisfied in the injured wife role.

Not much attempt at staging. A rearrangement of furniture and drapes served to answer for the hotel suite and the Morton summer cottage.

In addition to the five principals there are four minor parts that have little direct bearing on the action. If permitted to continue, "The Bridal Bed" probably can hold out through draw from the curious and the "intellectuals" for three or four weeks. But it's problematical.

Edwards.

"MIKADO" TOPS PHILLY

the eight local legit houses, and to make matters worse, announcement was made Monday that the "Follies" at the Erlanger, scheduled to open for three weeks, had to be cancelled because of the illness of Eddie Cantor. At present writing, nothing has been booked to substitute. "Three musketeers" is mentioned, but not booked officially. Following "Greenwich Follies" the next booking for the Shubert is "The Desert Song," March 19. "The Love Call" is announced as indefinite at the Chestnut, although a special company of "Good News" has been repeatedly mentioned for about Feb. 20 at that house. "Spider's" tenure of the Lyric, despite fine trade, is said to be limited, with "My Maryland" reported coming in about Feb. 20. "The Silent House" is at the Adelphi this week, its fourth local house, but the booking is for one week only. Next week, from all indications, the theatre will be dark, with Irene Bordoni's "Paris" apparently set for Feb. 13. Elsie Ferguson's "Careers" was mentioned for Feb. 27, but has presumably been cancelled.

Next Monday, George Tyler brings the Irish Players into the Broad for two weeks, and on Feb. 20 "Tommy" opens at the same house. The Garrick has the all-star revival of "Diplomacy" this week, and next Monday will offer "The 19th Hole" for three weeks. After that will come a second local visit for "Abie's Irish Rose," a surprise booking and one which shows the scarcity of shows on the road. It will open Feb. 27, with length of stay not announced. The Walnut has "Chicago" for two weeks after the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, and after that nothing mentioned.

It all points to a very early season here this year. One prediction is that two or three houses will be closed by May 1 and all but a couple by June 1.

Estimates for Last Week

"Tenth Avenue" (Broad, 2d week). Melodrama got rather kindly notices and fair business; about $9,500 claimed, which may be a little high. Irish Players next.

"Yours Truly" (Shubert, 3d week). Leon Errol's musical more or less of a flop here, fourth week cancelled, with "Greenwich Village Follies" coming in week earlier than expected. "Truly," $15,000.

"Diplomacy" (Garrick, one week only). George Tyler's all-star revival virtually sold out before opening; two extra matinees inserted; has good chance to beat record of "Trelawny" last season: "Silent House" around $8,000 last week.

Gilbert and Sullivan Repertoire (Walnut, 4th week). Indications are for a $25,000 week this week, weather permitting; last week, despite storms, "Mikado" got within a few hundred dollars of $22,000 and led the town.

"The Love Call" (Chestnut, 4th week). Operetta reviewed New York conditions and is a real hit; last week off to $18,500, due to bad weather; stay indefinite.

"The Spider" (Lyric, 2d week). Easily led non-musicals, with not far from $14,000 claimed; caught to be good for eight to 10 weeks, but apparently limited to four or five.

"The Silent House" (Adelphi, one week only). British melodrama now in sixth local week and fourth theatre; "Saturday's Children" beat $12,000 and showed signs of picking up into real hit class when it left.

Erlanger. Dark this week, due to cancellation of "Follies." "Honeymoon Lane" claimed around $20,000 last week.

Mod to

The more I roam a-bout, The more I dream a-bout a rain-bow,
I've been so blue a lot, I've had an aw-ful lot of bad luck

Just hop-ing that a rain-bow might soon ap-pear
An aw-ful lot of bad luck has come my way

I'd walk a mil-lion miles, To find the kind of smiles that I know, Would bring a gold-en
Although I sit and mope, I try to smile and hope that Good Luck, A lit-tle bit of rain-bow, and skies so clear Although I try I real-ly get good-luck, will come some day Just like the skies, my eyes are so to - where, Some time I'm hop-ing that I'll get some - where!

cloud-y Some day Miss La-dy Luck might say "How dy?"

CHORUS

There must be a sil-ver lin-ing That's shin-ing for me,

There must be a way of find-ing a mes-sage of sym-pa-

BROADCASTING STILL PHOTO IN 90 SECS. AS DEMONSTRATION

Dr. Alexanderson Process Shown by N. B. C.—Commercial Possibilities—Must Be Developed at Receiving Point—Mayor Walker First

Broadcasting of still photographs which the National Broadcasting Co. demonstrated to an invited audience of radio engineers and newspapermen is a direct step toward the transmission via ether of motion pictures.

Already Television has been successfully demonstrated to laboratory executives in the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady, N. Y., plant, but the process of transmitting photographs and diagrams over the air made possible by apparatus developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Co., is more in line with the current practice of transmitting news photographs by land wire by what is commonly known as the Telephoto process.

The Dr. Alexanderson invention utilizes the ordinary broadcasting station, sending the likeness through the ether, and receiving it through an attachment hooked up with the ordinary radio receiving set.

Instead of a loud speaker on a radio receiver, the photographic reception box is hooked up to the set and the likeness comes through within 90 seconds of its broadcasting. That is the length of time required for the sending of a picture 4½ inches by 8 inches, such as Mayor James J. Walker's, reproduced herein.

Listeners for this experiment tuned to WEAF. A wavering note or high frequency squeal, sustained for 90 seconds, was all necessary to send the photo. It takes about five minutes to be developed like any other photograph.

Positive Transmitted

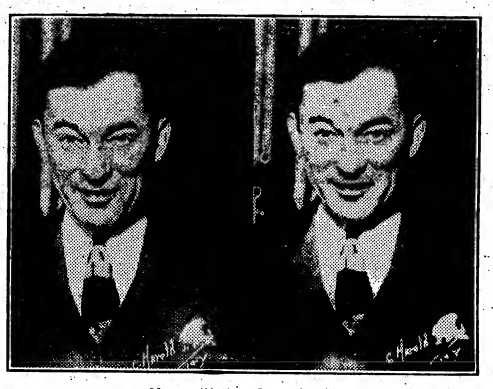
Unlike Telephoto, the negative is not transmitted, but the positive print. From the print a negative is developed, this requiring a developing outfit, dark room and usual properties.

The commercial possibilities of this for news photography transmission at first thought seems best. What its household possibilities are are speculative.

The NBC test covered a 25-mile range. Mayor James J. Walker's picture was broadcast from the NBC'S studios at 711 5th avenue at 55th street to its high-powered Bellmore, L. I., studios and received back in the N. B. C. studios. Another experiment had Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith's home on West End avenue and 82d street, situated 25 miles from Bellmore, L. I., as the receiving laboratory.

Reception is governed by the ordinary radio reception of the broadcasting station. WEAF conservatively has a range of 150-mile radius from New York. A network system of relayed broadcasting is also possible with the apparatus. This experiment will be publicly demonstrated to an invited group within a fortnight.

Dr. Alexanderson, who thrilled the world with his Television, is responsible for the new transmitter. No technical identification name has been given this means of photographic radio reproduction.



Mayor Walker Over the Air

Two likenesses of New York's chief executive. To the left as he was taken when speaking at WEAF, New York. Right view as developed after 90 seconds in going through the ether and received at the home of Dr. Goldsmith on West End avenue.

While the air transmission reveals some distortions, though not unfavorably, of features, particularly, measurements of the two photos are precise.

Air Chest Fund Quarrel Brings Up Slander Bill

Providence, Jan. 31.

Senator Robinson, of Providence, introduced a bill in the Rhode Island legislature last week providing a penalty of a $500 fine for slander over the microphones of broadcasting stations of the state. Neither of the two local leading stations knew of any particular reason for the bill. Rumor is that the author of the measure is directing his fire at a station attached to a local theatre.

During a recent Community Chest drive one of the prominent sponsors was attacked on the "mike" by the owner of a broadcast outfit. Sincerity of the Chest Fund worker was challenged and in the midst of the air tirade was told "to go ahead and sue the speaker for libel or anything else." The only outcome of the affair to date is this proposed legislation.

HENDERSON MUST PAY

Jury Gives Agent Verdict for $2,400, Weekly "Salary" for the Booking

A jury in the New York City Court brought in a verdict for $2,400, the full amount sued for by Al Herman, the agent, against Fletcher Henderson, the colored band leader at Roseland ballroom. Herman proceeded on a contract calling for a weekly salary of $30 a week from Henderson for securing the Roseland engagement. Herman was also entitled to 10 per cent. commission on all outside engagements.

Henderson's contention was that when he left Roseland for a road tour after nine weeks at the Broadway dance hall it abrogated Herman's claim. The jury thought otherwise, since Henderson returned to Roseland after a brief absence on the road. The decision gives Herman his salary interest in the life of Henderson's contract at Roseland.

MAY TAX RADIO AD REVENUE; SENATE PROBE

Dodge Bros. Hour Prompts Inquiries as Substitute for Theatre Admissions

Washington, Jan. 31.

Senate leaders, quoted as having pledged their support to repeal the entire admission tax, are now said to be looking to the revenue derived by the broadcasters from advertising accounts.

Printed reports of the large amounts paid for these hours has caused considerable discussion with it now expected that when the tax bill comes up for discussion in the Senate, a proposal will be made to place a tax on these returns as a substitute for the theatre tax. It now being considered necessary to have the revenue to balance the loss of the automobile tax.

Stalling on the consideration of the bill is creating much conjecture as to just what will be done. Many predict that the automobile tax will go back to the rates as recommended by the Ways and Means committee of the House, but that the admission tax will go. As to how far the new proposal on radio will get is said to be dependent upon the manner in which it is brought out. It is said to be a Republican idea.

Dodge Brothers' $60,000 hour brought the idea to the surface.

N. W. Ayer & Son, the internationally famous advertising agency, has engaged Gordon Whyte, a showman of long standing, to take charge of that advertising firm's radio accounts.

Whyte will work with Douglas Coulter on the Eveready Hour and the Victor Hour, which are the Ayer Co.'s two current radio advertisers. Ayer also handles Armand, beauty preparations, through the National Broadcasting Co.'s midwest network, a separate circuit working out of Chicago.

Whyte has been an actor, stage writer and newspaperman for many years and was specially engaged by Ayer for his showmanly qualifications, with the proviso of a free hand in everything.

The Ayer agency is the biggest of its kind in the world, handling Ford, Rolls-Royce, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, Kellogg's Corn Flakes and other cereal products, Armour & Co., American Telegraph & Telephone Co., among scores of others.

There has been talk of Ford going on the air, but that is not definite. The competitive trend and competition from General Motors and the Dodge Brothers, regular ether features, may soon force that issue.

The Whyte appointment is unique in that an advertising agency utilizing radio has taken the initiative where the N. B. C. refuses to commit itself. The latter stands on its theory that from within its own ranks will blossom forth a supershowman.

Isolated Station Quits

Washington, Jan. 31.

EAG, situated at La Laguna, has discontinued. This leaves no broadcasting in the West Canary Islands.

RADIO RAMBLES

By Abel

Ben Bernie, working under wraps and without the usual Bernie flippancy, which in a measure almost gave him a new ether personality, was in charge of the General Motors hour (Oldsmobile). Bernie's program was all to the musical comedy, with the choicest production song hits canned for vocal and instrumental rendition.

The curb on Bernie is in line with the N. B. C.'s general ruling against all ad lib announcements. The Jolson and Rogers misinterpreted comedy on the Dodge Bros. Victory hour prompted this.

Strict Editing

Advertising buyers inspired the N. B. C. to edit and censor everything in the future excepting the announcements of their own staff announcers.

In these rambles from time to time will forget the stereotyped radio review idea in line with other suggestions there is enough of that already in the daily press. The premise is well founded. Unlike a play or other stage or screen amusement which is prolonged, the nature of radio entertainment is so ephemeral and restricted to but a few minutes up to an hour that any serious critical analysis is wasted, unless it is for general suggestion for a permanent hour.

Criticising Critics

Donald Flamm, managing director and president of stations WMCA and WPCH (Hotel McAlpin and Park Central Hotel), has prepared a lengthy criticism of professional critics of the radio. Flamm has much of interest to expound, and says it was prepared chiefly with a view for Variety analysis and consideration. Promise to dissect Flamm's stuff with much pleasure.

Bernays' Bull

Edward L. Bernays, public relations counsel extraordinary, who did such great work on behalf of the Dodge Bros.' Victory hour, is another who alleges that the contemporary radio press regards Variety as a beacon light in this problem of radio showmanship. Any suggestions fr... the showman's a..le are avidly devoured by all concerned, so Eddie says. That goes for the radio broadcasters who self-admittedly have been won around to the showman's slant on radio.

In the past the propaganda for paid talent was anarchistically regarded as a pipe dream of a trade paper, Variety trying to put performers on the pay rolls of broadcasting stations which insisted and persisted they had not the source of income from which to pay off.

The advertisers and good-will exploiters paved the way for that in short order.

What Is Any Showmanship?

Radio showmanship. What is it? How can it be accomplished? It has no parallel in the theatre, being as new as radio itself is.

PICK-UP BAND CANNED ON 2D DAY IN ALBANY

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31.

The entire band sent to the Rainbo room of the New Kenmore hotel with Ted Fiorito, composer of a number of song hits, was fired the second night it was in Albany. The band was such a flop in the eyes of the three Murphy brothers, owners of the hotel, that they ordered the withdrawal immediately.

The nine men sent to the Kenmore were stranded in Albany for a few days until given carfare to return to their homes. These men, it is said, were a pickup band, some coming from Mexico City, and not members of Fiorito's own orchestra, which the Murphys said the M. C. A. agents had promised to send to Albany.

When without a band, Bob Murphy immediately called upon Romano, who had been at the Kenmore for several seasons, to accommodate him for a couple of nights. Phil sent him as many men as available.

Kenneth Casey has been installed as manager of the band and orchestra department of the Alf T. Wilton agency.

Am. Society's Election

The annual election of officers of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers practically re-elected the entire ballot, with few changes.

Gene Buck continues as president; John Philip Sousa and Louis Bernstein, vice-presidents; Charles K. Harris and Silvio Hein, secretary and assistant secretary; Jay Witmark and Joe Young, treasurer and assistant.

Director-publishers are Louis Bernstein, Edgar F. Bitner, Saul H. Bornstein, Max Dreyfus, Rodman W. Fay (Schirmer Co.), Walter Fischer (Carl Fischer, Inc.), Charles K. Harris, Jerome Kelt, Jack Mills, George Maxwell, Will Von Tilzer, Jay Witmark.

Writer-directors are J. Keirn Brenna, Gene Buck, Bud DeSylva, Silvio Hein, Raymond Hubbell, Gus Kahn, Jerome Kern, Frederick H. Martens, Joe McCarthy, Oley Speakers, John Philip Sousa and Joe Young.

Geo. Piantadosi's "Eagle"

Jack Glogau and Ray Turk helped George—a lot.

During the height of the Lindbergh enthusiasm last summer about 30 songs were published by various concerns. Apparently this is the first ditty celebrating the Mexican hop.

Universal has a picture current under the title "Lone Eagle." No hook-up.

ARTHUR FIELDS' WIFE ASKS FOR SEPARATION

Mrs. Fields Alleged to Have Stripped Home—Husband May Counter

After stripping Arthur Fields' household in Larchmont, N. Y., of most of its belongings and alleged to have deserted her husband's child who was in a critical condition in a hospital, Selma Adler Fields has taken the initiative with a separation action, according to papers filed in the New York Supreme Court. She alleges the songster earns $15,000 a year as vocalist for the phonograph records.

Fields for a time this fall was frantic as a result of an automobile accident to his son by a former marriage, which almost permanently crippled the lad. Only the most expert and high-priced surgical treatment by specialists, which depicted the Fields' fortune in short order, saved the boy's life and resulted in the present favorable condition.

It was at this time that his wife left the Fields home, taking with her many of the household possessions. It prompted Fields to advertise a warning against further indebtedness incurred by his wife.

Kendler & Goldstein, acting for Fields, state they will counter-sue for an annulment of the marriage on the ground the wife was divorced in Chicago at a time when she was not a resident of Illinois.

Malotte Must Pay, or Else

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.

Albert Hay Malotte, former picture house organist at present conducting an organ school, must pay alimony to his estranged wife, Mary Jane Malotte, vaudeville and cabaret actress, or else. Superior Court Judge Beecher made this provision to Malotte when he was held in contempt of court for refusing to pay separate maintenance awarded his wife last October.

Varvara Clicks, Re-signs

Leon Varvara's click as the stage band leader and m. c. at the Stanley, Baltimore, has prompted Edward L. Hyman, the Brooklyn Strand's managing director, supervising executive of four Stanley theatres, to re-sign him. At the Earle, Washington, Whitey Kaufman and band go in as the stage band feature succeeding Russ Morgan, opening Feb. 4.

Owing to the Chaplin "Circus" feature being booked for a run at the Brooklyn Strand, a reversal of sequence for the unit presentations becomes necessary. Hyman's new show opens at the Earle, Washington, Feb. 4, and returns to the Brooklyn Strand; thence to the Mosque, Richmond, and next Baltimore. The usual sequence is Brooklyn, Washington, Baltimore and Richmond, but the pencilled-in two and three-week stands for Chaplin and F-N's own "Patent Leather Kid" (Barthelmess) brought about the temporary change.

ART KAHN ENDS RUN

Art Kahn closed a four weeks' stay at the Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday. He was the m. c. coming from Chicago after eight years with Lubliner & Trintz. Kahn has other New York offers, including a radio proposition, which may keep him east.

The Brooklyn Strand gets Chaplin's "Circus" for two weeks starting this week, and does not require a stage band leader. When resuming with its units, Jerry Seers, the house arranger, will wield the baton.

Silver Slipper, N. O., Is Blown Up, Destroyed

New Orleans, Jan. 31.

Early yesterday morning the Silver Slipper, nite club, was blown up and completely destroyed by the fire that followed.

It occurred one hour after the place had closed.

A. Trambino, owner and manager of the club, asserts that the destruction of his place was the work of enemies.

The Silver Slipper has been New Orleans' principal point in the better night life of the town.

It was the scene two weeks ago of Teddy Morse, 19-year-old dancer in the place, rushing onto the club's floor, ablaze, her dress having caught fire in the dressing room from an electric heater. Miss Morse died a few days later.

FEDERAL MEN TESTIFY FOR NITE CLUB OWNER

Le Paradis "Ice and Water" Prosecution Brigns Out Contradictory Statements

Washington, Jan. 31.

Attempt to padlock Meyer Davis' Le Paradis because of the sale of gingerale and cracked ice, which the government alleges is used by patrons to drink their own liquor, brought out much contradictory testimony during the past week.

A policewoman testified that she saw 40 patrons, young and old, drunk in one night at the cafe. Two prohibition agents testified that they were in the place on the same night and saw nothing of the kind.

Government brought in a surprise witness who claims he saw "white liquor poured out of gin bottles" within two tables of where Meyer Davis himself was sitting. Davis' attorneys countered by putting Herbert H. White, prohibition department field supervisor on the stand. He told the court of a conversation with Davis wherein it was brought out that the immunity granted diplomats, many of whom are regulars at the cafe, made enforcement a difficult task. Maj. White added that Davis' contention in this regard was right. He also stated that Davis had asked for co-operation in enforcing the no-drink laws.

Case is expected to be brought to a close this week, with decision from the bench looked upon here as important from a national angle.

Davis' position has been strengthened due to Prohibition Commissioner Doran's ruling that his agents should not attempt to serve padlocks with no other evidence than that cracked ice and gingerale were being served.

GREEN MILL REOPENS

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Chicago's Green Mill Gardens (cafe) re-opened Jan. 25. The cafe, formerly owned and operated by Danny Cohen, was closed following the attack on Joe Lewis, now of the Joe Lewis Night Club (the old Rendezvous).

Green Mill is now under the ownership and management of Ralph Burke. Henri Gendron's orchestra furnishes the music.

Mlle. Fifi's Successor Is Foreign Performer

The smart numbers on Broadway don't know what they're seeing. Budapest's star soubret, a girl with a general continental reputation, is doing a Mlle. Fifi for Clayton, Jackson and Durante. And standing for the razzing.

She is Lily de Lys, comic opera star of the "Vigsinhaus," Budapest. Six months ago Mlle. de Lys came to this country with the Hungarian light opera company for a tour of the towns having a strong Hungarian population. The tour was mildly successful.

The company got as far west as Milwaukee, then came back to New York and disbanded. The troupe went back to Hungary.

Mlle. de Lys, with her mother, also a member of the company, remained in New York, hoping for a chance at the local musical comedy stage.

The game little soubret says that conditions are desperate for the show people in Budapest anyway. Hundreds of artistes have been driven to the capital by the closing of the provincial houses. Only one musical comedy theatre in Budapest to take care of them. Conditions must be better in New York, she thought.

Davidow Did It

Mlle. and mother took lodgings in Yorkville and she made the rounds. But she couldn't get a job. And she needed one. Broadway never had heard of the vivacious girl who had played the Mitzi roles out in Hungary. Finally, the Shubert offices shunted her to Davidow, and it was he who thought those three boys might use her to replace the unforgettable Mlle. Fifi of Club Dover days.

Mlle. de Lys' father was French. She had an authentic accent to play, and, ironically, she really is Jimmy's "great international star!" The three boys recognized her as a trouper who had command of the art of straighting. They put her to work the day after she tried out for them.

The salary is nothing but it keeps her and her mother off the rocks. And every night she goes through her razzing with the hope that some manager is in the Parody.

Reduced Rye at $95

Rye, subject to analysis, at $95 a case is frankly conceded by a bootlegger to be heavily cut. Yet the legger claims the analysis will be okay and report say it's so.

Another bit of info from the same source is that the liquor handler is paying $140 a case for pure rye, from which the $95 stuff is reduced.

About the only point the legger refuses to talk upon is how much he cuts and how it's done.

NITE CLUB WRECKED AS "SPITE WORK"

Wintergreen Club on 46th St. Wholly Demolished Early Sunday Morning

A few hours after the management of the Wintergreen Night Club, 52 West 46th street, on the fourth floor, had closed Sunday morning, malicious wreckers entered the club and with several fire axes did a better job than the prohibition forces did to Helen Morgan's club recently.

The club is not far from 5th avenue. It has a nice clientele. Michael G. Winters, of the Stanley Hotel, is said to be the owner and Harry Green, the manager, according to the police of the West 47th street station. Winters and Green had left about an hour before the "club wreckers" entered.

In the street below was Patrolman Richard Gunnip of the West 47th street station. He was trying doors shortly after 8 a. m. when he heard sounds of destruction upstairs. Gunnip hurried into the building with drawn gun. As he reached the club floor he heard the elevator descend.

He raced downstairs after the lift and saw a man run out on the ground floor. Gunnip ran after him yelling for the man to halt. Instead the fugitive fled faster. Gunnip fired two shots over the man's head as he disappeared into 5th avenue, thronged with persons on their way to Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Gunnip returned to the club with Detectives Clarence Gilroy and Charles Dugan. Entry had been gained by a key, the police figured. The rear door of the club was found opened and it is believed that one of the wreckers escaped that way.

Chopped Piano

Gunnip with the sleuths began an inventory. They found two fire axes that belonged in the place near the door. Not one article remained intact in the club. The wreckers tore down the tapestry hangings, chopping up the piano and cash register. They kicked in the large bass drum. Chairs, mirrors, settees and virtually everything in the club was destroyed. Winters and Green were notified. They were asked to make an estimate. Both held their hands to the head and said at least $5,000.

Winters and Green offered the theory that it was spite work.

NEWARK DOUBLING

A cabaret show from the Club Monterey opens Feb. 18 at the Branford, Newark, N. J., and will play over the Stanley-Fabian houses, doubling with the night club.

Harry Pearl is behind.

Piccadillys on Brunswick

Melville Morris and his Piccadilly Players are signed by Brunswick to exclusively record two discs a month. The Piccadilly dance band has built a rep as a society dance combination, playing parties, hops, etc.

Morris is Paul Whiteman's United Orchestras' booking manager. Whiteman is an exclusive Victor artist while the Piccadilly Players, a first string sub-combination, is Brunswick's.

Savino Returns from Annual

Domenico Savino, arranger, is back in New York with Robbins Music Corp. of which he is an executive, after a four months' stay in Italy.

Savino makes the continental trip annually.

COLORED GIRL'S SENTENCE

Viola Fowler Given 1 to 10 Years For Stealing

Viola Fowler, 22, former New York cabaret girl and vaudevillian, recently arrested in Chicago on a charge of grand larceny, pleaded guilty before Judge William V. Brothers. She was sentenced to serve from 1 to 10 years in the Illinois pen.

Miss Fowler is a colored girl. Her accusers were white women for whom she worked in Chicago as a maid.

The only reason given for her action was that false pride had prompted her to wear pretty clothes and jewelry.

OBITUARY

EARL METCALF

Earl Metcalf, 39, one of the oldest actors in the picture business, was instantly killed at Burbank, Cal., when he dropped from an airplane 2,000 feet.

Mr. Metcalf was taking a course in flying from the Wilson Aero Service of Glendale, Cal., of which Roy Wilson is proprietor. The latter, a well known pilot, was in charge of the plane at the time the accident occurred. He was cleared of blame after taken into custody by Burbank police.

According to his story, Mr. Metcalf was seated in the rear pit when the plane swerved to the ground and the actor must have fallen out.

Police at first were led to believe in a suicide theory on account of disappointing events in Metcalf's life. He was a pioneer picture actor, dating back to the old Vitagraph days. Of recent years he did little work in pictures and it is understood he was dabbling with real estate for a while. The last time he appeared for the screen was in a picture for First National with Ken Maynard.

In Fondest Memory

According to friends, Mr. Metcalf had been very morose of late. He was married for the fourth time and lived with his wife and three children at 11547 Hortense avenue, North Hollywood. From what is known, he had no domestic difficulties.

The deceased was born in Newport, Ky. He started his theatrical career in early life with a stock company.

HANS STENGEL

Hans Stengel, 34, artist and writer and former dramatic editor of the New York "Evening Journal," committed suicide at one a. m. Jan. 29 by hanging himself in a closet at his studio apartment, 134 W. Fourth street, New York.

Stengel, more as an artist than

In Remembrance of

by his theatrical writings, was well known to stage people.

It appears that Stengel was informed Jan. 1 that the dramatic editorship of the "Journal" would be taken over by another man and this is understood to have thrown him into a state of despondency which caused him to hang himself. At the time, however, it was said Stengel was still on the Hearst payroll.

Stengel invited a party of friends to spend Saturday evening at his apartment and while they were in another room he remarked he was going out and left the room. A friend discovered his lifeless body some minutes later.

Stengel had been married to Madeline Richards, actress, from whom he was divorced two years ago.

Remains were cremated at Fresh Pond, L. I., and will be sent to the artist's parents in Luebeck, Germany, where his father, Wilhelm Stengel, is managing director of the municipal theatre.

ABE JACOBS

Abe Jacobs, at one time regarded as the best-known stage manager in vaudeville and for many years managing the stage of the Majestic, Chicago, died Jan. 25 of cirrhosis of the liver. While this was given as the immediate cause of his demise, effects of injuries received in an automobile accident four years ago and the death of his wife at about the same time affected his health.

In the old days of the Olympic, Chicago, George Castle operated it and Abe Jacobs was his stage manager. At that time there was also another Abe Jacobs connected with the front of the house, but they were not related.

From the old Olympic Mr. Jacobs shifted to the Chicago opera house when it was continuous vaude. Upon the Majestic, Chicago, opening Abe Jacobs was installed as stage manager. As stage manager Abe Jacobs was given absolute power to do as he liked by Mr. Castle. When Mr. Castle died he left Mr. Jacobs $25,000.

About four years ago Abe Jacobs resigned and retired to his Chicago home. He is survived by two sons, William Jacobs, the Chicago vaude agent; Frank Jacobs, and two daughters, Salde, with the Keough Agency, Chicago, and Gladys Jacobs.

Interment in Chicago.

JOHN W. EARLY

John W. Early, veteran singer, formerly with numerous minstrel outfits and for the past 24 years in vaudeville with his wife, as Early and Laight, and also a trio with their daughter for seven years of that time, died in Chicago, Jan. 7.

Mr. Early had been very ill of heart trouble and he and Mrs. Early were on their way to their home in Los Angeles. He was a singer of national reputation and at one time with Haverly's American and European minstrels, Ward and Vokes and Lew Dockstader.

His voice resulted in minstrel managers having songs written especially for him and in this category came "Asleep in the Deep," "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," etc.

Mr. Early is said to be the first man to put a song on a record with a band. At request of the deceased his remains were cremated, Mrs. Early taking the ashes to Los Angeles.

Mr. Early was a Mason and a member of the 233 Club of Los Angeles.

JOHN E. McGREGOR

John E. McGregor, veteran Shakespearean actor, died Jan. 25 in West Hampton, Long Island.

Born in Scotland Mr. McGregor took up the stage when a young man and had spent 40 years on it in this country.

His first appearance was in the old Woods Museum. In later years he appeared in support of Edwin Booth, E. L. Davenport, Wilson Barrett, Edwin Forrest and Charlotte Cushman. Mr. McGregor's last New York role was in "Bunty Pulls the Strings."

His daughter, Helen McGregor, was once leading woman for E. H. Sothern. She died when 23. Five sons and three daughters survive. One of the sons, Edgar McGregor, is the stage director.

PAUL MADDERNS

Paul Madderns, 30, vaudevillian, died Jan. 25 at Saranac Lake, N. Y., of tuberculosis.

Young Madderns went overseas during the war and was gassed in action. Upon his return he went into vaudeville. His last engagement was as a member of "The Overseas Revue." He worked until his condition became such that he was forced to go to Saranac Lake in the hope of benefiting his health.

Body brought to Brooklyn for burial in Cypress Hills Cemetery, with funeral services conducted by the Jewish Theatrical Guild, which had contributed to his support at the Lake.

WALLACE McCUTCHEON

Wallace McCutcheon, 47, actor, shot himself to death Jan. 27 in Los Angeles. A further account appears in the legitimate news section of this issue.

PHILIP CUNINGHAM

Philip Cuningham, 62, actor and manager, died in London Jan. 10. After two years of poor health, the immediate cause of death was cerebral hemorrhage. The deceased, whose real name was Booscy, was a son of the famous music publisher.

For many years Cunningham played Wilson Barrett's part, Marcus, in "The Sign of the Cross," and also appeared in stock and with the Kendals in America. Ten years ago he retired from the stage and went into joint managing directorship with F. W. Tibbetts of the Lyric, London, of which company his brother was chairman.

R. J. MacLEAN

R. J. MacLean, brother of Ted MacLean, died Jan. 13 in the MacLean hotel, San Antonio, Tex. He was associated with his brother, Ted, in the operation of stock companies throughout the middle west.

About 10 years ago MacLean quit show business and took up a business career. At the time of his death he was the owner of the MacLean and Texas hotels, San Antonio, and had just started another hotel.

HARRY COLEMAN

Harry Coleman, 44, musical comedy comedian and vaudevillian, died Monday night (Jan. 30) in the French Hospital, New York, of pneumonia.

Coleman had been appearing in vaude with his wife, known professionally as Gladys Hart, who survives.

Coleman worked the Franklin, N. Y., week of Jan. 9 and was booked for Proctor's 58th St. Jan. 23. The week before the 58th St. date he became ill and was placed in the hospital. Coleman, at one time, worked in Shubert productions.

FRANK BRUEN

Frank Bruen, 58, on the road with the Honeyboy Evans Minstrels and the Gordon and Bennett Dramatic Shows, but in late years a stage employee in Springfield, Ill., theatres, was stricken on the Gaiety stage here Jan. 23 and died a few hours later in Mercy hospital.

He began his career in the Springfield theatres in the days of the old Central Music Hall and for many years was in the Chatterton theatre.

Mrs. Rose C. Douras, wife of New York City Magistrate Bernard J. Douras and mother of Reine, Ethel, Marion and Rose Davies, died at her home in Beverly Hills, Cal., Jan. 25, of heart disease.

Mrs. Davies had been in poor health for several years and spent most of her time at the home of her daughter, Marion.

Judge Douras arrived on the Coast several days before his wife passed away.

Funeral services were held Sunday from the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills with burial in Los Angeles.

William Hamby, 52, novelist and short story writer, died Jan. 26 at San Diego, Cal., following illness of several months. He was born and educated in Missouri.

Amalio Fernandez, 67, for the past six years employed in the art department at Paramount studios, died Jan. 25, in the Queen of the Angels hospital, at Los Angeles. Deceased was for many years associated with the Royal Opera, Madrid.

Mrs. Hilda Merkle, 40, sister of Olga Kane (Mrs. Lew Kane) died Jan. 23 in Milwaukee.

Harry E. McCandrew, musician, formerly of the Boston and Rochester Symphonies, died in Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 30.

Mrs. William Clark, wife of the stage manager of the Broadway theatre, New York, died Jan. 30.

Mrs. Jacob Simons, 64, mother of Abe Lyman, bandsman; Mike Lyman, cabaret owner, and Will Simon, husband of Fanchon Wolf (Fanchon and Marco), died Jan. 30 in Los Angeles.

James Rosenfeld, 74, father of Arthur Rosenfeld, of the Stanley Frame Co., died in New York last week.

The age of the late Tony Farrell was reported at his demise as 80. Mrs. Farrell says her husband was 71.

Charles H. Frisbie, 81, manager, Frisbie & Sawyer opera house in Holley, N. Y., died Jan. 18 of pneumonia.

The mother of Gladys (Clark) Bergman died last week in a sanitarium at Hempstead, L. I. She had been an invalid during the past few years.

DEATHS ABROAD

Paris, Jan. 22.

Shoolman's Lost Deposit

eral large circuits. There seemed to be a general understanding among those circuits' heads to side step any proposed deal.

The New England promoter was in New York last week in the hope of interesting a Wall Street banking firm to underwrite a $25,000,000 stock issue for the venture, from accounts. Nothing came of it, report said. Shoolman's option, which expired Jan. 3, was renewed until today (Feb 1).

It involves $22,500,000 for the Poli houses. Of this $18,000,000 was to remain on first mortgage, with around $4,000,000 yet to be paid over in cash.

Hartford, Jan. 31.

Sale of the Poli circuit will not go through tomorrow to Max Shoolman, from word coming out from members of the Shoolman buying family, prospective purchasers of the theatrical holdings of S. Z. Poli.

They are said to have told their friends they did not intend to go through with the deal, totaling $23,000,000, giving the difficulties of clearing the titles as the reason. At the same time they declared that they intend to sue for the return of their deposit of $400,000 on the option to Poli and the commission paid their brokers as well.

That the deal had not yet been consummated was admitted at the general offices of the Poli circuit in New Haven.

"If there is anything done it will be done Feb. 1, said Louis Sagal, general manager Poli. At the same time he declared he had not heard anything about a suit being brought by Shoolman and his associates.

Word from the members of the Shoolman family during the past week has put a different aspect on the fact that sale would go through.

Misinformation

"We are willing to go through with the deal," said one member of the family, "but we do not believe that the titles have been properly cleared. We are not all satisfied and we won't do a thing until satisfactory adjustment has been made. We do not intend to lose our deposit and we will sue to recover if we cannot get it any other way."

Those close to the situation in the Poli offices declare that the title situation is not nearly as serious as the Shoolmans would make it appear. Unofficially it is reported that the near-sale was the result of one of those so-called straight tips which are forever in circulation around stock brokers offices and theatre circuits. The Shoolman syndicate is said to have been told any one who could buy the Poli circuit would immediately resell to the Keith-Albee circuit. The latter upset the surmise by announcing it had secured options on land in the various Poli cities and intended to build its own theatres in opposition.

Not So Easy

It has been reported that there were 12 members in the "Shoolman buying family," with each contributing toward the deposit.

Expectation was that a quick re-sale would result with at least $1,000,000 paid Shoolman for his Poli option, by some other theatre chain. Or in the event of a sale not quickly going through, Shoolman could dispose of his option under a rental agreement for the entire Poli Circuit that would net the Shoolman syndicate a considerable yearly profit for a long term.

With an underground "request" reported sent about the big chain offices "to lay off the Shoolman-Poli deal," Shoolman found himself without channels to manipulate his option other than in banking circles. Bankers are said to have shied away when learning of the $18,000,000 first mortgage intended as partial payment to Poli. They claimed that left too small a margin in equity for the remainder of $4,500,000 or so in cash that would have to be advanced.

Chain directors also took into account that the Poli Circuit had been individually operated and had become practically a one-man circuit, with the circuit peculiar to itself and calling for its continuous operation by the same man, S. Z. Poli, if successfully operated for a profit commensurate with the purchase price agreed upon by Shoolman.

Max Shoolman is a Bostonian with some theatre construction and promotion experience gained in that town. He was not especially known in the show business before tackling the Poli proposition.

Fairs Pass Up W.V.M.A. In Michigan Convention

Detroit, Jan. 31.

Michigan Fair Association held its annual meeting at the Barium hotel last week. Fred Chapman of Ionia was re-elected president and Chet Howell, Saginaw, retained as secretary. It was decided to convene in Detroit again next year.

Notable was the first invasion into this territory of Earl Taylor, Chicago agent. Other booth holders here were Ethel Robinson, Barnes-Carruthers (formerly World Amusement), Gus Sun and the W. V. M. A.

The latter's fair department, which showed a loss last season, duplicated its Chicago flop of two months ago. In contrast to its former importance, the W. V. M. A. failed to get a single large date out of last week's convention.

Canadian Fairs Set

Chicago, Jan. 31.

At the Canadian Fair meeting held in Toronto last week the Johnny Jones shows were awarded the A circuit of fairs for next season, and Conklin & Garrett the B circuit.

Acts on both circuits will be booked by Barnes & Carruthers.

PARK DISPUTES ARBITRATED

The National Association of Parks will hereafter settle disputes of its members through the American Arbitration Society of New York.

Morris-Castle in Dakota

Chicago, Jan. 31.

Morris & Castle shows have been contracted to play the Dakota circuit of fairs next season.

Detroit Shriners' Show

Detroit, Jan. 31.

Shrine Circus, one of this city's largest annual events, will open Feb. 5 at Fairground Coliseum.

STRANDED EXTRAS

pecting to find immediate employment.

During 1927 most of the out of town seekers of film fame arrived on the ground with sufficient funds to care for their needs until jobs were forthcoming, an official of the club stated. Of those who came to the coast with movie aspirations, less than five per cent. succeeded in getting inside a studio. The other 95 per cent., it is estimated, secured work in other fields or returned home.

'Telegraph's' Prize Play

his play was never produced. Attorney Rubien does not want to sue for damages, since there would be no way of gauging the commercial possibilities of an unproduced play. He may therefore insist that the "Telegraph" be ordered by court to carry out its contractual obligation by producing the play.

The Majestic bill this week is typically Association. Several of the acts are built for comedy, and have it to a certain extent. The feature picture is what you find at the Hipp in New York. Customers are the same hard-boiled lot that patronized the house before it took on pictures.

Among the seven acts here Allan and Norman made the most headway against a cold crowd. Coming from the audience, the comic gags for a time with his male partner and then assists in some humorous magic as the doubting chump.

Morgan and Sheldon, holding the strong comedy spot, failed to assort a punch. Miss Morgan is an eccentric comedienne with a good voice.

The team's talk is moderately funny. Dixon and Hoier Co., six, in a sketch, have numerous good situations. Much deadwood in the early moments, however. Hoier plays an ambitious fellow and Dixon is an actor brought in to pose as several big business men. The three girls in the sketch are capable.

Walton and Byron Co., four people, wasted about half their kick in haphazard presentation. Idea is to show how two small town gossips mistake the meaning of things that occur around them. Wilton Crawley, colored clarinetist who contorts as he plays (New Acts), was spotted second for fairly strong returns. He has played picture houses here recently and is better in that line of work. Blomberg's Alaskan dogs, opening, a fair canine act, with novelty. Closing were Pickard's Syncopators, Chinese string pop orchestra which has repeated continuously in Chicago both in vaude and picture houses. Okay.

Business just fair at the Palace Sunday. No particularly great name acts, but an aggregation of near-greats. Felovis, European juggler, and Gus C. Edwards' orchestra drew the greatest applause. Felovis, an eccentric, jerky little chap in black, performed truly remarkable bits of the craft for which he is noted, or will be. Opening the show, he proved a genuine success.

Lew Seymour and Jessie Howard carry a neat little revue, most of the stuff embodied in it being ideal for presentation material. With a quantity of props and special scenery they offered a number of comedy sketches that were laugh-getters, interspersing with colorful dance and song specialties. John T. Murray and Vivian Oakland were no sensation, but effective costuming added flash.

Never a bill here without one of those comediennes supposed to appeal to the hoi poloi. This time two of 'em—Venita Gould and Frankie Heath. Miss Gould's impersonations registered well, her last being of Lenore Ulric.

Gus C. Edwards' Edgewater Beach Hotel Orchestra (New Acts) preceded intermission and demonstrated that even a white collar orchestra can achieve effective presentation. Walter Huston, late star of "The Barker" and "Desire Under the Elms," entertained with his customary suavity and ingenuity. An Hawaiian stringed trio accompanied him throughout the act. His version of the old man so critical of youth was a standout.

Frankie Heath pleased. Her material was well chosen and creditably presented. Zelda brothers, acrial aeros, closed. Loop.

Flo Ziegfeld, his wife and daughter arrived here in a private car last week. After spending a day with his mother the producer had his car coupled to the Century and proceeded back to New York. Mrs. Ziegfeld and her daughter left for Miami.

The Free Employment Bureau of the Illinois State Labor Board, securing placements for men in all industries free of charge, includes theatres and amusements in its classification of industries.

In 1927 there were no applications for placements in show business, with this the only classification holding such a distinction.

Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe's short subjects department, spent several days at the Pathe Chicago exchange last week.

In an attempt to convince the outside world that Chicago is not ruled by machine guns, a series of good will visits to this city by people of nearby towns has been arranged. Half fare railroad rates will prevail during the visits. Several Chicago theatres have offered gut rate prices for the visiting throngs.

Chicago's Paramount exchange has instituted a policy of giving free showings of Paramount pictures to all its Chicago office employees every other Monday.

Bill Hamm, booking manager at the Chicago office of Paramount, has recovered from an illness of several weeks.

Henry Spitsberg, owner and manager of the Monarch Theatre Supply company, has sold that firm to the National Theatre Supply company. He will devote his time to his three vaudeville Tuesdays and Fridays. The feature was initiated last year.

The Portland theatre has started stage presentations with its regular pictures. This week the Cosmopolitan Quartet is featured.

Billy Shone and Betty Rich are appearing under equal billing in Variety's Bills Next Week the billing has been as submitted. Billy Schone and Co.

Upon his release he was immediately re-arrested on a larceny charge forwarded here from Boston, arising out of an alleged rubber check transaction there in the amount of $140. Boehm's address is given as 3150 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

BEAUTS AND TESTS

producers to scour New York's revues, department stores, night clubs and streets for film types.

Despite Hollywood's reputation for being glutted with beautiful girls, it looks as if the sidewalks of New York have the edge.

Archie Mayo, for Warner Bros., has taken about 40 screen tests of feminine types. Universal also has been scouting for new faces, while Tiffany is on the outlook.

It is understood that when and where a decision is made on the basis of screen tests girls will be sent to Hollywood for three-month try-outs at $75 a week.

Producers apparently are insisting upon personality as well as looks.

Many girls approached by the movie men never appear for the screen test, either because they don't care or think it's a gag.

Thus far none of the companies has displayed any particular interest in new masculine talent.

Rapf's Selection

H. Rapf, associate producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who left for the Coast Sunday night conducted a series of screen tests at the Cosmopolitan studios last week to locate new faces for M-G-M. Rapf assembled 25 of New York's reputed most beautiful girls, and of the batch only got around to 16.

The screen tests eliminated all but three. Doree Leslie, formerly of the nite clubs and now of "Manhattan Mary," was signed up by Rapf. Miss Leslie will take a two months' leave of absence, for a Hollywood production.

The runners-up to Miss Leslie are Jean Murray, of the Frivolity Club, and Beatrice Blynn, last of "Romancin' 'Round."

The Cosmopolitan studio was the scene of considerable hysteria when Rapf couldn't get around to more than 16 of the 25 beauts.

SAN FRANCISCO

Ruth Elder crashed the front page of every local afternoon paper on her arrival here to open at Pantages. Due to a tieup with the Call's radio station KFRC, the aviatrix, copied a bottom streamer and a five column picture layout with story. A parade from the Ferry building to Pantages preceded the flier's opening.

Herb Rosener, treasurer Columbia, has worked out the details whereby regular patrons, whose credit has been established, may now obtain theatre tickets "on the cuff." The racket is to be worked similar to the way tickets are disposed of to the brokers, only with a monthly settlement. The house figures it can afford to carry the accounts of regulars on its books for 30 days or less. Credit, however, will only be given to patrons whose paying ability is unquestioned.

J. R. Saul, theatre broker, has left for a European tour. Saul has been identified with the development of the Golden State Theatre circuit and the T. & D. Junior Enterprises.

Sidney Goldtree produced "The Bridal Bed," a French farce by Charles Mere, at his Green Street Jan. 27. Elenore Jackson and J. Anthony Symthe were leads.

T. & D. Junior reopened the Royal, straight pictures, neighborhood houses at Polk and California streets. Frank Siegrist heads the house orchestra.

Sherman, Clay & Co. has bought outright the music house of Wiley B. Allen Co., with its five branches in Central and Northern California.

During the interim between departure of Georgie Stoll for the Egyptian, Hollywood, and arrival of Max Bradfield from Long Beach, to replace him, T and D, Oakland, was without the services of a regular orchestra leader and master of ceremonies for two weeks. For the first seven days the management pressed into service Joe Sinai, house drummer, and brother-in-law of Paul Ash, with whom he formerly played. Sinai did a regular "Paul Ash" and seored as a leader. He was for 10 years drummer with the San Francisco Symphony orchestra and is a finished musician.

Though Alexander Pantages has first call on all Fox features for San Francisco, indications are "Sunrise," Fox special, will first be road-showed here. Negotiations to that end are now pending, though there is a possibility Pantages may be able to persuade Fox that a two or three weeks' run at his local house here will gross more than if the picture would be exhibited at advanced prices.

West Coast Theatres (northern division) is considering changing the hour of its weekly program broadcast over Radio KYA from 10:45 p. m. to midnight, to an earlier hour.

T & D Junior's Royal, closed for overhauling, reopened as a de luxe neighborhood Jan. 25, with continuous show from 1 to 11 p. m. Straight picture policy and concert prevail. Opening night was a gala event. Of chief interest on the opening bill was Frank Siegrist and orchestra of 10, and vocal numbers by the San Francisco Elks' Glee Club of 30 voices. "Two Arabian Knights" led screen fare. Royal is about a 1,500 seater.

Sally Whiteomb, whose charges against three local youths that they plied her with drink and assaulted her in a downtown hotel, led to a sensational preliminary trial, received several offers for stage appearance, but has turned them down. Sally was at one time a burlesque tab.

Henry Duffy will present Olga Printzlau's "The Show-Down" at his President, Seattle. This is the play Duffy will do in the east in conjunction with David Belasco. Following the Seattle premiere, Duffy will bring the new piece into San Francisco.

Police, acting under instruction from Chief Dan O'Brien, ordered W. C. Cullen, lessee of the Capitol, and St. S. Millard, who is presenting his sex picture, "Is Your Daughter Safe," with medical lecture and slides, to remove a number of objectionable lobby displays. Millard will follow the present picture with another sex cinema, "Scarlet Youth." Corliss Palmer is featured.

Frank Brown has been appointed manager of the Peninsula (pictures) Burlingame, succeeding Ray Kelso, resigned.

Walter Chenoweth has returned to the Henry Duffy office after a six months' absence.

Louis Golden, for many years one of the ace West Coast Theatres house managers in Los Angeles, who recently resigned, has been appointed manager of the new West Coast house now in course of erection at Fresno. It will house Vita and pictures.

Charging the contents of Blaise Cendras' book, "Sutter's Gold," is a mass of fabrication, Philip B. Bekeart, San Francisco historical authority, voiced a strong protest against the proposed filming of the story.

"Laugh, Clown, Laugh," starring Lionel Barrymore, ends its four weeks' stay at the Lurie February 4 and then plays two weeks in Central and Southern California before going to the storehouse.

Capitol—Musical tabs-pictures.
Gayety—Burlesque (Mutual).

S. Bernard Joffee, house manager Liberty for several years, has been appointed treasurer and assistant manager for the new Uptown.

The Isis (suburban), taken over from Universal by the Midland circuit of theatres, was badly damaged by fire Wednesday during the early evening show, but the 700 patrons filed out without injury to any one. The house will be closed a month for repairs.

The furniture, pictures, decorations, silver and effects in Oak Hall, residence of the late William Nelson, owner and editor Kansas City Star, were sold this week to Loew's, Inc., for $90,000. According to the will the effects had to be sold to some one residing at least 250 miles from Kansas City. Any of the articles that can be used in Loew theatres will be retained by the company and the balance resold, but the purchasers must make their homes the required 250 miles away, according to the deceased's wishes.

The Capitol, which has been struggling along with pop vaudeville and pictures the first of the season, after changing to the Herr-Smith Revue and pictures at popular prices, folded up after the Sunday night performance. For the last 15 years this house, under the name "Garden," has been a flop, and the change of name to Capitol failed to help. The house is outside the theatrical district and it seems impossible to get 'em to it. Dan McCoy has been manager for the last two seasons.

Strand—"Red Kimono."

After a long career from old-time melos to burlesque, the Strand, which closed with Mutual burlesque a week ago, comes back with a "men only" film, "The Red Kimono," on grind.

Fred Hamlin, loaned by First National to do publicity for the new policy at the Earle, has returned to Los Angeles.

Leonard Hall, now d. e. of the New York "Telegram," is forwarding "piece" on the theatre every once in awhile to the "News" here, where he was formerly functioning also as d. e.

Annual automobile show got a tough break on its opening Saturday—a record snowstorm.

Maxim P. Lowe, long a vaudeville booker, now with Meyer Davis here, is to have an operation next week at the Garfield hospital.

Night clubs are having their ups and downs. St. Marks is reported to have given up the night idea entirely.

In his expansion of things at the Le Paradis, Meyer Davis has added Hal Thornton, last with Al Moore's stage band, as pianist and m. of c. Incidentally, Thornton revealed a secret marriage 6 months ago. The bride was Jeanne St. Laurent in George's White's "Scandals" chorus.

Palace (Publix)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"; stage, Art Landry.
Majestic (Interstate)—"Affair the Long Wall" stage, Henry Santry.
Melba (Publix)—"The Circus"; Julia Dawn at organ.
Circle (stock)—"Know Your Onions" (Miller Players).
Old Mill (Saenger)—"Sailors' Wives."
Capitol—"One-Round Hogan."
Arcadia (Dent)—Vita.
Pantages—Buddy Morgan Revue (tab).

Frank J. Harting, connected with the Melba here as publicity director, has joined the Palace (Publix) staff.

"Abie's Irish Rose" was here last week for a three-day stand at $2.20 top. It is the third time that the show has been staged at the Fair Park Auditorium.

The Little Theatre's production of "Young Woodley" in the four days it was shown at the Circle registered one of the biggest box-office grosses that any Little Theatre has done on a single play in this State. They did $3,000, playing four performances and one matinee at $1 top.

Nickleodeons up and down Elm street have diminished with the passing of the Rex and the Washington, both 10c. second-run picture houses. This leaves all of the second picture biz solely to the Queen (10c.).

TORONTO

Tivoli—"Ben-Hur" (2d week).
Loew's—"Serenade" and vaude.
Pantages—"The Love Mart" and vaude.
Hip—"The Main Event" and vaude.
Uptown—"The Noose" and vaude.
Palace—"Helen of Troy."

If the censors permit, Toronto will see "An American Tragedy" in stock at the Empire. House Baker Jamieson, with the original, is a member in this company.

Marion Talley, much advertised prima donna, got good business but razzing notices from Toronto critics.

Seymour Hicks has started his trans-Canada tour with sell-out biz at Halifax. He plays "The Man In Dress Clothes" and "Mr. What's His Name" in Toronto, starting February 13.

A memorial reproduction of "The Doctor's Dilemma" will be given by the Hart House Players (University of Toronto) in memory of Bertram Forsyth, first director of the little theatre, February 13. After explaining in a note that he had always been of a tragic disposition, Forsyth took poison in New York last February.

"Good News," "Desert Song" and "Vagabond King" are slated for Shubert's Royal Alexandra. "Vagabond King" played to $30,000 earlier this season.

The Empire, owned by Mrs. D. M. Stair, was reported under option two months ago but was not taken up and the building is being enlarged to take care of crowds at the Keppie stock shows. Mrs. Stair is financially behind the company and making money.

The Melba (neighborhood) was sold for $18,000.

Miller—"Tea for Three."
Strand—Love and Learn."
Palace—"Wreck of the Hesperus"-vaude.
Wisconsin—"The Noose."

The Gayety has adopted a midnight show policy for Saturdays, calling the affair "Midnight Shambles." The incoming and outgoing shows take part.

The new Schroeder, Milwaukee's first skyscraper hotel, opened Jan. 25. Cost, $7,000,000. Twenty-five stories.

Reported John Freuler selling his Butterly to Publix, to be razed and a new 4,000-seater built, is denied.

Jackie ("Hoo") Ray, former "Our Gang" boy, played to capacity at the Majestic last week through a movie tie-up with the "News." Kids were used to compete for parts in a local movie in which the kid actor was featured.

WSOE, School of Engineering, radio station has been taken over by the "Wisconsin News" here and the call letters changed to WISN.

A half-million dollar movie house, financed by Milwaukee capital, is to be erected in Marinette, Wis., in spring, the Badger Building Co. announces. Marinette is now controlled by Midwesco, which has three houses there. It is understood the new house will be connected to a new Milwaukee chain for United Artists and Warner releases.

SEATTLE

By DAVE TREPP

President—"The Show Down" (stock).
Orpheum—"The Leopard Woman" and vaude.
Pantages—"Topsy and Eva" and vaude.
Fifth Avenue—"A Texas Steer."
United Artists—"Sadie Thompson."
Columbia—"Beau Sabreur" (second week).
Blue Mouse—"The Jazz Singer" (5th week).

Sign on Liberty says: "Closed for few days, will open under new policy." There has been delay in ironing out details of lease and music end of show.

Opening of the Seattle put off one week, to Feb. 24, and checking up on the Portland, at Portland, found to be three weeks later than the Seattle. Thus Herschel Stuart had to give up the idea of bringing out a Publix unit show for opening weeks at both houses.

L. J. Sehlaiffer, former head of Universal Chain Theatres here, has gone to New York. The chain has Winter Garden, downtown, and ten suburban houses, with an 11th, the Queen Anne, closed down. Mr. Felker is new manager for the string and also for the "chain" houses in Eugene and Corvallis, Ore., while R. W. (Bob) Hender is continuing as manager of the Columbia. This is classed as one of the dozen or so "exploitation houses" of Universal Film Company, and still a separate unite from the "chain" houses.

Business in the neighborhoods has been off in Seattle, although signs now point to slight pickup in trade. Probably too many suburbans and too many seats.

MONTREAL

A second effort to put over a Montreal symphonic orchestra started Sunday with a fair house at the Princess. Wealthy local men are behind the venture, which was considered to have commenced well enough to warrant running a concert once a week instead of once a fortnight as intended.

Princess hit a high mark of nearly $60,000 for the two weeks of "The Desert Song" and "Oh, Kay," with the concert sandwiched between.

Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss made good at His Majesty's with an all-English company in adapted-from-the-Freneh comedy. They will stay over another week with a double bill.

City is crowded with tourists and hotels report turning away around 200 guests a day. This is exceptional here for this time of year.

Despite threats of Sunday closing and barring infants under 16, Quebec City showed its faith in moving pictures by opening another house, the Cartier, this week. Moisan and Tanguay, owners of the Victoria, are behind the new house, which seats about 700 and will show second run film.

The audience at the Orpheum Monday night could easily have been accommodated in any fair-sized parlor. Sometimes even the acts forget they are playing in a theatre and put on a show for personal amusement. Which brings forth Hal Jerome, extemporaneous wise cracker, always on the lookout for an opening. Jerome and Gloria Gray were on fourth on this bill, following two fast turns. As the outlook in front was more like a home gathering Jerome figured it was okay to have a little fun and let the pit boys in on it too. Laughs were divided between the latter and Jerome. Side remarks about vaudeville in particular had the orchestra boys laughing. All this left little for Miss Gray to do, but her personality and looks are enough.

Then came Theodore Roberts in his sketch, 'The Man Higher Up." Roberts, always the brilliant character actor, was standard. He has played the act around here for several years and it is always good for a repeat. Roberts still on crutches, looks great, but expects to throw them away soon.

Con Colleano, opened after intermish. Colleano attempted some apparently impossible feats on the tight wire and made good. Most sensational was a front somersault. Back flips were easy for him. Zeneta (Spanish) with Colleano did some preliminary dancing on the floor.

Next to closing was well taken care of by White and Tierney, standard comedy team. Marjorie White was all over the stage and was a solid hit. Ed Tierney worked hard and scored individually. Their "runaway" bit for a finish was effective. Nitza Vernille in a flash dance act closed the bill. Miss Vernille is a versatile artiste, capable in more than one department. Arnaldo's Gypsy String Quartet enhances the turn with some excellent selections. Charles Collins does some fast footwork alone and with Miss Vernille.

Four Readings opened the show and stopped everything for a while with sensational gymnastic feats. The eldest is one of the original Four Bards and despite his age is a corker of a catcher. A daring chute slide from the beams climaxed for a ringing finish. No. 2 were Chilton and Thomas, high brown boy and girl, fast steppers. They scored.

Billy Fitrell & Co., with old man Farrell in the act, had the trey. Dad Farrell can still step despite his age and came near showing his son up more than once. Young Farrell is likable. Nancy Reed is the girl with him in song and dance specialties. Lida Gardner scored in the mother part.

Not a bad show in toto, but who is going to know it.

Pantages did five shows Monday, opening day, with the Duncan Sisters. First time in months extras have been taxed on here, but business warranted it. As early as the first show they climbed the rafters for a peep at the girls, and the SRO sign was out before they went on.

Alexander Pantages, always on the scene for this sort of emergency, found himself seating people left and right and he didn't mind it, either. Pantages is stepping out this year with a list of "names." They don't seem to come any too big, and although not all of them have clicked, it's a long shot Pan is still ahead.

A well laid out bill prefaced the Duncans. Vivian and Roseta, with a brand new line of stuff, stopped themselves cold several times, and could have continued all afternoon. Time-table had to be adjusted with the usual short subjects eliminated. Four pianos, something out of the ordinary, were on the stage when the sisters trotted forth. But two of the pianos were in action for the most time with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kisco giving a brilliant exhibition. The girls were in great shape and did about anything and everything to please.

Openers were two male acrobats and a girl dancer billed as the Spirit of Winter; purely atmospheric. Toe routine by the girl for an introduction was deceiving. Next was Elsia Clark with a male pianist accompanying in a cycle of songs, syncopated. Miss Clark's voice didn't reach, though her delivery was okay. Comedy talk can be eliminated.

One of the best flash acts seen here in a spell was White Way Galetics, song, dance and instrumental turn, comprising eight people. Night club set is effective and the Andy Potter Trio has the boys doubling on several instruments. Louise Elya and Melvin Flegel, stand out with some whirlwind dancing. Reiss Brothers, nifty hoofers, also double in song with Laura Sweet as the objective. Clever kid, the latter, and personifies her name with as much warbling. Preceding the Duncans were Winifred and Mills, male comedy team with the mirth perpetrated by Mills in blackface to his partner's Chink makeup. Material more or less antiquated, but good enough to provoke laughs. Yodel number sent them out strong.

Screen attraction was "Coney Island," FBO.

Leo Forbstein, musical director at the Million Dollar, directing the music at the Wampas Frolics for the past three years, will again be in charge of the orchestra at the Wampas ball at the Ambassador Auditorium Feb. 25. He is assembling two orchestras for this frolic. One combination will supply the dance music, while the other will serve for the general program entertainment planned by the Wampas.

"Who?" mystery play produced by John P. and M. H. Riewarts of San Francisco, went into the Hollywood Music Box this week. The booking was last minute with the house slated to go dark with the closing of "The Vortex." John P. Riewarts is the author of the piece, and it had a short run in San Francisco before coming here. In the cast are Ruth Saville, Herbert Hayes, John De Vecese, George Rand, George Cleveland and Howard Macy. Bond covering two weeks' salary was posted with Equity.

Pasadena Community Players are currently presenting "Miss Lulu Bett," Pulitzer prize play of 1921. Lenore Shanewise, George Reis, Samuel S. Hinds, Virginia Lykins and Helenita Lieberg are in the cast.

Robert Kane is negotiating with Carl Ed, creator of "Harold Teen," comic strip, to act as supervisor on the "Harold Teen" picture now being produced by Kane for First National.

Paramount is negotiating with Jim Tully to purchase the screen rights for "Beggars of Life," Tully's latest novel. Tully will work on the adaptation with a company staff writer if the deal is closed.

United Artist exercised option on contract of Don Alvarado, actor, for six more months.

"The Little Yellow House" started production at the F. B. O. studios with Lucy Beaumont, William Orlamond, Edward Peil, Jr., Martha Sleeper, Freeman Wood and Orville Caldwell in the cast. J. Leo Meehan directing.

Production on "Dog Jesters" was started at F. B. O. studios, with Jerome Storm directing. Cast includes Eddie Hearn, Nita Martan, James Welch and Alan Smith.

Eugene O'Neill will direct his play, "Lazarus Laughed," for its premiere at the Paradena Community Playhouse, April 9. The playwright will shortly arrive on the coast.

After trying several years to become an American citizen, Theodore Michaelovich Kosloff was granted naturalization papers by Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick. Kosloff was denied citizenship in 1925 because he asked exemption from military service during the World War.

West Coast Theatres circuit will celebrate "Thomas A. Edison Week" starting Feb. 10. Every West Coast house from San Diego to Seattle will arrange special programs. One of the features will be the showing of old time pictures.

Arthur Smith reopened the L. A. Playhouse with "The Triumphant Bachelor." Cast includes Kenneth Harlan, Charlotte Stevens, Eve Nansen, Phil Tead, Grace Travers, Grandon Rhodes, Mabel Forrest, Ruth Gaylord, Howard Lorenz, Myra McKinney, Marie Gordon and Maurice Hyde-Chick.

William Eugene, Marion Aye and Gene Gowing have the leading roles in "The Married Virgin," opening this week at the Egan.

Charles E. Kurtzman, manager of the Million Dollar, has gotten out a weekly house organ for the patrons of the theatre, which he calls "The Million Dollar Chronicle." It is a four-page affair. One column is devoted to personalities of people around the town.

The Civic Repertory Theatre of Los Angeles has been organized with Mrs. M. B. Gillette president and Denis D'Auburn director.

Professional talent is to be used.

The theatre location has not yet been chosen, nor the date for the first production.

Maurice Henle, one of the aids Jeff Lazarus has in the West Coast Theatres circuit's home office publicity department, has turned playwright and scenarist.

He recently wrote a story entitled "The Army of Silent Women." Screen rights were disposed of to Charles R. Rogers, who produced for First National. Stage rights are still available.

Henle was formerly in the Paramount, New York, publicity department.

Cast of "A Connecticut Yankee" at the Mayan Feb. 3 has Pearl Regay, Paisley Noon, Marie Wells, Leo White, Nell Jewell, Herbert Evans, Thelma Hubbard, Barney Gilmore and Richard Lancaster.

Maurice L. Kusell is staging.

Graham Baker under contract to Warner Brothers has completed scenario of "Honor Bound" for Fox, and will do another for the latter company before returning to Warners. His new one for Fox will be a mystery melodrama, directed by Al Ray.

Fred Stanley, free lance scenarist, has been engaged by Warner Brothers to write originals. His first will be for Louise Fazenda.

Dr. Herbert S. Dickey has returned from his South America expedition with enough film to make a series of one reel travel pictures to be released through Fox.

Julia Faye, under contract to De Mille, has returned from two-month trip abroad.

"The Prince of Pilsen" is the operetta current this week at the Shrine auditorium, presented by Al Malaikah temple.

Pasadena Community Playhouse will close their spring season with "Lazarus Laughed," Eugene O'Neill opus, April 9.

"The Showdown," by Olga Printzlau, is slated for the Henry Duffy players at the El Capitan following "Two Girls Wanted."

Sam Wood will direct William Haines in his next for M-G-M, titled "Iron Mike." Haines will play a newspaper reporter.

Larry Ceballos will stage an atmospheric program at the Metropolitan next week, when they have "Rose Marie" as a screen feature. He is to use 32 girls in this program, with the feature of the stage setting being "The Dance of the Totem Pole." This number of girls is the largest that Fanchon and Marco have used for any of their stage presentations at one time.

Henry Duffy, coast stock producer, returned here from New York with five plays he will put in production: "The Shannons," by James Gleason; George M. Cohan's "Baby Cyclone"; "Tommy," by Howard Lindsay; "Take My Advice," and "The Nightstick," by John Cecil and Elliott Nugent.

Garrick Club will produce Elmer Rice's "Platinum Handcuffs" in February. Clark is rehearsing it.

Hal Horne has succeeded Robert Newman as house press agent at the United Artist theatre. Horne at one time was manager of the Criterion and also staged prologs in that house.

Ludwig G. B. Erb, New York picture producer, will build a home on Lake Hollywood drive, Hollywood Knoll. He paid $20,000 for an acre of land there.

Doris Anderson is writing the next Esther Ralston story for Paramount.

NEW ENGLAND

After a lapse of 10 years Sunday vaude has returned to Springfield. It reappears in the form of presentation acts at the Broadway. Sunday acts slid away from Springfield when they were toned down to hymn singing or church number musicals.

Hartford is to decide soon whether it will support a resident theatre such as proposed by Robert Milton of New York. Formation of a company is nearing completion.

Dances will be held in Lynn, Mass., by friends of William Solomans, once secretary of former Mayor Newhall, to raise money to enable Solomans to make restitution of $1,211 which he pleaded guilty of having stolen.

Daniel Harrington, vaude singer, formerly of Holyoke, Mass., walked offstage in Chicopee house when officers took him on warrant charging non-support. Wife said he had been absent from her and two children for a year. Court ordered him to pay $12 weekly.

Riverside Park, containing 90 acres with many concessions and one of the finest dance halls in Massachusetts, will be sold at auction on the Springfield Courthouse steps Feb. 16. The only explanation given was that it is to satisfy claims of the Henry J. Perkins Company, due to breach of mortgage conditions."

Peanuts at the movies in Hooker Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke College, are taboo this year because of last year's experience cleaning up shells. Refreshments this year are limited to Eskimo pies.

The Palace's new policy got off to a good start, having a crowd waiting for the h.o. to open Saturday noon. The house offers stock burlesque, plus feature picture on a grind policy.

Manager Howard D. Kingsmore introduced a new idea at the Valencia last week. Lifting a short subject from the 3 p.m. show, he had Mischa Guterson, orchestra conductor, play a group of classical and semi-classical request numbers. The idea went over well and will be retained.

"Gay Paree" had the biggest opening of any attraction this season at the Auditorium, but later ran into a blizzard. Finished around $28,000.

Sam Tumin has recovered from a recent operation.

Frederick Arnold Kummer, novelist and playwright, is bringing suit against newspapers in Norfolk and Newark which, he alleges, printed false announcements of his demise.

Bernard Simon, in advance of Gilda Gray ("The Devil Dancer"), headlining the current olio at the Rochester theatre, pulled one over on this no-Sunday vaude town, by arranging a midnight show starting at midnight Sunday and running till 1 a. m. Monday. Just enough to pull the performance from under the legal barrier.

Mary Garden heads the Chicago Civic Opera Co. in its first appearance here at the Eastman theatre Feb. 13 in her newest success, "Resurrection."

Isadore Alpert, manager Chill theatre, saw two boys take $25 from the house office. He chased them, took the money away from them and let them go.

Fred H. Caldwell, veteran vaudeville acrobat, has retired from the stage. Recently his wife, with whom he toured many seasons on Keith's circuit as Caldwell and Wentworth, underwent a serious operation, and both decided to retire.

The Palace, Andover, was sold last week by Harry Williams, Hornell, to W. S. Calhoun and R. O. Snyder, Andover.

Ivan Cone has discontinued movie shows in Rushville, due to lack of patronage.

DETROIT

By JOE BIGELOW

Cass (Shubert) — "Good News" (6th week). Doing best biz in town; will stay eight weeks, two over original limit.

Lafayette (Shubert) — "The Squall" (1st week). Opened Sunday, replacing "The Spider"; latter stuck four weeks.

New Detroit (Whitney) — "Lulu Belle" (1st week). Followed "Potemkin" (film) Monday for limited two weeks' run; Lenore Ulric in cast.

Shubert Detroit (Shubert) — House dark; Joe Cooks' "Rain or Shine" completed three weeks Saturday night; "Countess Maritza" Feb. 5.

Bonstelle Playhouse — "Take My Advice" (stock).

Majestic—"Laff That Off" (Woodward Players stock).

Adams (Kunsky)—"Love" (M-G) (2d week).

Capitol (Kunsky)—"Quality Street" M-G) and stage band presentation.

Fox Washington (Fox)—"Come to My House" (Fox) and Movietone.

Madison (Kunsky)—"The Jazz Singer" (Warner) and Vitaphone (6th week).

Michigan (Kunsky)—"Shepherd of the Hills" (P. N.) and "Treasure Ships." Publix unit.

United Artists (U. A.)—"Sadie Thomason" (U. A.). New house will open Friday (Feb. 3).

Oriental (Miles)—"Ragtime" and Pantages vaude, six acts.

State (Kunsky)—"The Four Flushers" and Loew vaude, six acts.

Temple (K-A)—"Let 'Er Go, Gallagher" and K-A vaude, five acts.

Cadillac—"Follies of Pleasure" (Mutual burlesque).

Jake Smith, trade-paper editor and formerly Variety's correspondent in Detroit, returned to his home last week after an operation for appendicitis.

Cream of Michigan Cafe, frequently raided gambling and drinking resort, was slapped double last week with a temporary injunction by Judge Marschner and a petition for padlock by Assistant Prosecutor Walling. Cream of Michigan derives its name from a brand of contraband beer popular in Chicago.

Charley Mack, head of the Michigan Vaudeville Managers' Association, entered the Shrine Jan. 27.

It was a case of mistaken identity when police detained Eva Sherrard, organist at the Hillsdale theatre, because of her close resemblance to Frances St. John Smith, the missing college student. A clerk in a Jackson hotel noticed the resemblance and called the police.

Police of Windsor, the chief Canadian oasis for parched Detroitites, are investigating the validity of establishing residences by the purchase of memberships in Windsor social organizations.

The large increase in the number of the lodges and athletic clubs and the speed with which they have been springing up is said to be the cause for governmental inquiry.

With the necessary $2 liquor permit (good for 30 days) in hand a club membership card a thirsty one may hop the ferry to Windsor, purchase his refreshment from a government distributing station, wheel the whistle and cache the remaining contents, if any, in his club locker. The catch is this: all Windsor clubs feature the spaciousness of their lockers above other facilities. Another tip-off point is that memberships sell for next to nothing.

The ferry rides, permit purchases and brotherhood cards are not altogether necessary, for it is whispered it is possible to procure a drink or two right in Detroit, but most of the local stuff is either cut, needled or hopped up.

Since the shooting last week of Patrolman Glenn Hunter in the Log Cabin inn, East Adams street cabaret, 2 a. m. curfew has been imposed on all-night life in Detroit. The closing order includes everything.

As a result of the early closing several night places using floor shows have added a supper or early show.

New United Artists theatre, 2,000, opens Feb. 3 after an invitational premiere Thursday evening. "Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) is the opening film.

Almost immediately upon opening, the new house will run into some self-made opposition of two-ply dimensions. Through a case of bad break on one hand and a case of questionable booking on the other, Chaplin's "The Circus" (also U. A.) will soon open at the Adams, and Gilda Gray, making personal appearances with her "Devil Dancer" (U. A.), goes into the Capitol week of Feb. 18.

Both the Adams and Capitol are Kunsky houses and regarded as strict opposish.

The Chaplin conflict is unavoidable, as the picture was sold in Detroit almost two years ago. At that time there was little talk of a U. A.-operated theatre here.

Miss Gray stops at the Capitol as part of her picture house tour. Though the local U. A. management contends she will not dig into the new house, it is apparent the local date was arranged without the U. A. theatre opening in mind.

The U. A. policy includes, besides pictures, 20-piece pit orchestra, as at the new U. A. house in Chicago, with nothing on the stage. Fred Stahlberg will conduct, although Hugo Riesenfeld is scheduled to break the ice Friday night.

Charley Hammerslaugh, formerly with Orpheum and Publix, will be general manager for U. A. in Detroit.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

By JO AERAMSON

Majestic—"The Shanghai Gesture."

Werba's Brooklyn—"Abie's Irish Rose."

Teller's Shubert—"Four Walls."

Cort (Jamaica)—"Taza."

Werba's Rivera—"Out of the Night."

Strand—"The Circus" (film).

E. F. Albee—"A Texas Steer" and vaude.

Loew's Metropolitan—"Now We're in the Air" and vaude.

St. George Playhouse—"London After Midnight" (film).

Momart—"Phantom of the Opera" (film).

Fulton (stock)—"One Man's Woman."

"Abie's Irish Rose" is sticking in Brooklyn for a second week at Werba's. The house is offering the best seats at $1.50, with four matinees during the week.

With the local and annual auto show over, theatre managers seem happier.

The Cort theatre houses a new musical comedy this week called "Taza," presented by Charles H. Abramson. Desiree Ellinger and Greek Evans in the cast.

George M. Cohan's new farce-comedy, "Whispering Friends," is due at Werba's next week. The week following, "Diplomacy," with an all star cast, comes in. Top price for "Diplomacy" will be $3.30.

"The Letter" scheduled for the Majestic next week and "The Play's the Thing" at the Cort.

This week is the 17th anniversary of Keith's Bushwick.

BRONX, N. Y. C.

Work on the picture house which Julius Joelson is erecting at 167th street and River avenue, has been again stopped, due to conflict over the building permit. Completion of the house is now long overdue.

John F. Lamp, formerly company manager for Shuberts, has succeeded the late Maurice Silverstein as manager of the Bronx Opera House.

J. J. White is out as manager of the America, formerly Mince's Bronx, now playing dramatic stock. White came in three weeks ago with the Blaney Players.

Though the Yiddish theatre business is pretty well shot, it is bearing up surprisingly well in the Bronx. Both the Prospect and McKinley Square, playing Yiddish legit, are doing well, and now Abe Cohen and Louis Hirschhorn, who had the Prospect for Yiddish vaude and pictures last season, have acquired the Benenson picture house, for the same policy. It opens Friday under the new policy. Cogut will manage and his brother, Yehuda, will be in the company.

Apollo—"Chicago."

Stanley—"Chinese Parrot."

Virginia—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Earle—"American Beauty" and vaude.

Colonial—"The City Gone Wild."

Strand—"Good Time Charley."

Capitol—"The Big Parade."

City Square—"The Claw."

For the first time since the Thanksgiving holidays, a musical comedy will be at the Apollo next week, Irene Bordoni in the premiere of "Paris." Commanders are in the cast.

Tom Hughes, doorman at the Earle, had a narrow escape from death by burning last week. Hughes had fallen into a deep sleep at his home which shortly after caught fire. But for his daughter Hughes would have been trapped in his room. He was severely burned about the face.

Mrs. Malcolm Thompson, wife of one of the Stanley Theatre organists, died of paralysis caused by rheumatism at her home here Jan. 25. Thompson had been married for only 11 months.

After a brief lay-off, Tony La Rosa has again opened his Follies Bergere and will continue most likely until Washington's Birthday. New floor show with Jimmy Albino's orchestra.

Regent—"Quarantined Rivals."

Harvard—"Firemen, Save My Child."

Swan—"The Cat and the Canary."

The city administration has created a new post, "inspector of public assemblies." It will be filled by Charles Wilkes, fireman, heretofore assigned to the theatres.

Will Rogers, scheduled for the Mizpah Feb. 14, has postponed his appearance until April 17.

Hazel Bowman, prima donna, and Edna White's Girl Orchestra are attractions at the Syracuse auto show next week.

On the ground the ordinance permitting Sunday movies was class legislation, favoring the theatres while other lines of commerce were forbidden to traffic on the Sabbath. Mayor Norman A. Boyd vetoed the common council measure which had been passed after a year's wait on the table for the necessary votes to pass. It was the first veto by a Binghamton mayor in many years.

The Cortland (N. Y.) "Standard" will sponsor the making of a two-reel home talent film, "Cortland's Hero." Don O. Newland will direct.

Attempting to awaken a patron who apparently was violating the house rule against sleeping, Manager Fred Perry, Binghamton theatre, discovered that Le Grand Winston, 72, Tunnell, had died from a heart attack while watching the picture.

The Avon, Utica, Albert P. Kaufman, local Schine manager, Saturday inaugurated a semi-presentation policy, installing Emile Chaquette and his Playboys as an added attraction. To build up school children patronage, Kaufman is distributing special tickets cutting the 40c price to 15c, Saturday matinees.

The State, Utica, following its sale to a company headed by J. J. Raymond, is changing policy, playing double feature films plus four acts of vaudeville.

"My Maryland" playing the Wieting here last week, came in for criticism through numerical misrepresentation of the company. The advertising called for a male chorus of 60 and a company of 150. Actually there was a male chorus of 31 and a company of 80, the latter including 13 local boys used in the finale as Jackson's army. The show's opening was disappointing, drawing about half a house.

Dewitt Newing, who split with his stock partner, Frank Wilcox, last summer and who will oppose Wilcox with a Temple company here this year, states when he signed for the Temple he understood Wilcox would be missing from the local field. Newing also believed William Harder would have the Wieting, but that Harder withdrew and changed his plans when he found he would have Temple opposition. The Shuberts then signed Wilcox for a fifth Wieting season.

Her recent marriage here led to a reunion of Lena Lederfine, otherwise Virginia Louise Reynolds, of the Savoy burlesque stock, and her father, Samuel Lederfine, New York. Lena disappeared from home in April, 1926, and her family conducted a fruitless search for her. Recently the young actress was married to Ira Leslie Flippo and confessed her real identity to her husband. He communicated with the father, advising that Lena might be reached via general delivery. Lederfine notified search for her. Recently the young actress was married to Ira Leslie Flippo and confessed her real identity to her husband. He communicated with the father, advising that Lena might be reached via general delivery. Lederfine notified the authorities and came on. When Flippo called for mail, the father and officers were waiting. The reunion followed.

NEW HOTELS

ties west of 8th avenue as theatre sites, especially after the completion of the subway on that thoroughfare.

6,700-Room Hotel

An addition is the plan of the building Chanins to erect at 6,700-room hotel not far from Times square. It will be the largest hostelry in the world. At present a hotel of 3,000 rooms is the largest.—Stevens Hotel, Chicago.

The Lincoln takes rank as the biggest hotel in New York west of Broadway and the tallest residential structure in Times square. It has 30 stores, employs 1,000 persons, whose aggregate payroll amounts to $100,000 monthly. The servidor system is used and because of that, the valet privilege has been leased for $60,000 annually. No one has figured out how many pair of pants to be pressed the big fee represents.

James T. Clyde is the managing director of the Lincoln. Clyde, one time college man, is a former showman and soldier of fortune. He was assistant to the Mueschenhelms when the Hotel Astor opened, that hostelry then being regarded as the last word in hotels. Some of its 500 rooms had an attached bath.

As a youth Clyde was with Havely's Minstrels, traveling with the troupe to Australia. He was connected with the Barnum-Bailey Circus, then entered the carnival field.

"Big Jim," as he was known, built "The World at Home Shows," the largest carnival of its time, a 30-car show, and he was the first man in that field to strike the note for clean carnivals.

Impresario Coppicus Suggests She Retire for Further Study—Wrote K. C. "Star"—Girl Incensed and Answers—Met's and Discs' Income Additionally

Kansas City, Feb. 7.

When F. C. Coppicus, New York concert impresario, who has been managing Marion Talley's concert engagements since the spring of 1926, wrote to the Kansas City "Star," giving the net earnings of the young diva, under his stewardship, as $334,892, and stating he had suggested that she retire for a year or so to study, he stirred things up.

Miss Talley, in reply, wired the same paper she was much incensed with Coppicus' action and that the

Ushers' Union in N. Y.; To Protect Feet

An ushers' union is being whispered of in New York. Promoters are keeping their activities an absolute secret. Many theatres employ boys and girls too young to know much other than ushering and not expert at that.

One of the most stringent rules, if the union comes off, will be that no customer can step on a union usher's feet.

That's How Bad

"Business bad last week," says one feller.

"How bad," said the other.

"Grosses on the tablecloths at the Astor fell off forty millions."

UNION STAGE HANDS WITH AUTO SHOWS

A new wrinkle among stagehands and m. p. operators in New York is employing union stagehands and operators for the automobile displays being made by some of the manufacturers.

The makers of Chevrolets have two units, each to ballyhoo the new Chev cars, and with each goes a three-man crew, carpenter, property man, and electrician. Each is an I. A. man and carries a yellow union traveling card.

Use of the spotlights and flood are in greater demand than ever with the automotive interests, also strong for all sorts of special, fancy and ballyhooish illumination.

Town's Stageless Stigma; Local Men Plan Building

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 7.

Dissatisfied over the inability of the city to obtain amusements has prompted organization of a local syndicate which will build a combined theatre and office building. Negotiations are under way with prospective lessees of the theatre.

Some weeks ago the town was left without a stage and felt that such a reputation was too damaging to be maintained. Local business men will underwrite the cost of the new building.

"LIVING TRAILER"

"Living Trailers" are being used to herald future engagements of "The Jazz Singer."

The new trailer is in the nature of talking announcements and comment, instead of the printed matter. Scenes from the feature are cut in to accentuate the spoken word.

It is a part of Vitaphone.

16m. Size on Home Projectors—110,000 of Latter in Country Now—Mastbaum Company Running Behind on Orders — Attendance Average 30 People in the Home Per Showing

ON U. S. LINERS, TOO

Taking commercial advertising into the home via film and free of charge is developing to important proportions.

It's being done on 16m. stock and the Stanley Advertising Co., belonging to the Jules Mastbaum Estate, is after it strong. A feature of the service to the advertiser is that besides the home the film, on standard stock, has been crashing the ocean liners of the U. S. Lines.

The basic idea is that the subject cannot be too strongly saturated with laudatory adjectives concerning the product. Film is made to run off as an inside glimpse on big industrial concerns and is offered to the home through a mailing list and dealers handling 16m. product throughout the country.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

With Chicago neighborhoods independent of the Loop for amusements, legit excepted, the current no-parking law has proven the severest blow ever dealt Loop theatres. In effect until 6.30 p. m., this law has knocked daytime business flat.

Matinee trade, always weak, could ill afford the additional burden. Proof of the law's heavy toll in Loop business is additionally shown in that the city's largest mercantile houses have pleaded

DEMAND EXPECTED FOR ILL. "TALKING" SONGS

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Song writers will have to develop a new technique in writing songs if they want to cash in on the fabulous screen rights to the new talking pictures.

Many of the producers now producing short sketches of 10-minute periods synchronizing sound with action, may soon find the public demanding illustrated songs to be made in the same fashion.

"Captive" in Balto. Stock

Baltimore, Feb. 7.

Broadcast in billing as "first time outside of New York," Baltimore gets a look at "The Captive" this week at the Auditorium. This play from the French, which was stopped in New York last season, was staged by the Edwin H. Knopf repertory company, in the house on an indefinite date.

The organization started slowly but has built until last week, when Knopf brought Ann Davis from New York for "The Outsider," in which she had scored here before, and business took a spurt.

House is sealed at $1.50 top. Last week it grossed over $6,000, big for capacity and scale.

It's the first time a "talker" has carried its tone clearly in the open. The 200-yard radius is about the distance of three ordinary New York city avenue-front blocks.

LONDON AS IT LOOKS

By HANNEN SWAFFER

London, Jan. 20.

Gertie Lawrence's marriage, divorce and re-engagement is one of the most striking curiosities of my journalistic experience.

For years, scores of people knew that her husband, a man she had married years before, was still an obscure stage manager on tour, while she bathed in the light of—well, you know how, when, on a stage, you make noises with your mouth and grimaces with your eyes, you are more talked of than Madame Curie or the Pope of Rome.

The Great and the Obscure

In America, particularly, Gertie blazed in a sea of glory. Yet, time after time, I have known city editors try to find her husband in some unknown revue, in some obscure town, to ask if the divorce was coming off. Usually, they could not find him.

Then, one day, there appeared in the evening papers a mysterious divorce case—the sordid story of a young actress who had married a man in a position of authority over her in the theatre, a man by whom she had a child, but who had failed to support her.

It was obvious to anyone who knew the theatre that it was Gertie Lawrence, for, although the husband's surname was given as "Francis Xavier Howley, known as Gordon," this was obviously a clever way of using the words "Francis Xavier Gordon-Howley," as the husband's name was given in "Who's Who in the Theatre." It was said in court that the woman asking for a divorce was an actress, but her stage name was not mentioned.

The Clean-the-Papers Campaign

Now, in order to clean up the divorce reports of the "News of the World" and the "Empire News," two newspapers given to frankness concerning judicial proceedings which have shocked every stage visitor to London—"You talk about our Yellow Press," they have said, "but what about yours?"—a law was passed last year restricting the evidence published in divorce cases.

What its exact meaning is still puzzles Fleet Street. Newspaper editors wondered whether they would offend the court or not if Gertie Lawrence's name was mentioned, so they all left it out, although it seemed to me obvious that no English judge would insist on the suppression of a stage name, the publication of which might be essential to the administration of justice.

London News From New York

Then, three days ago, the London representative of a famous New York paper called me up and said, "Do you know Bertrand Taylor, who is said to be marrying Gertie Lawrence?"

"Yes," I replied, "she introduced me to him. But you understand she cannot very well be engaged to him because she will not be free from her previous marriage for five months. We should not publish such a story over here. There is a rumor that Marie Lohr is going to marry Edmund Gwenn, but her divorce is not through either. However, if you publish the Gertie Lawrence story in New York, it will be cabled over here, and then the London papers will publish it."

How the Divorce Became Known

Exactly what I prophesied happened—and more than that. Under the story of the engagement, as cabled from New York, both the "Daily Mail" and the "Daily News" published an abbreviated version of the divorce case, the real meaning of which they had both suppressed exactly a month before!

Now the extraordinary thing is that both Bertrand Taylor and Gertie Lawrence were in London, not in New York and that the story told by Taylor about his engagement was cabled from London to New York, and then from New York to London, before a fact which I had known for weeks could see the light of day.

When They Hate Publicity

Then, the next morning, in interviews with the London evening's newspapers, Miss Lawrence was indignant that people were enquiring into her private affairs!

Stage stars do not understand that they cannot be private people one minute and public people—if there are such people—the next. If they like it to be known that they were at Ciro's Club last night, they cannot very well mind if a reporter says who they were with.

Frankly, why all this fuss is made about revue actresses, I cannot understand. Most of them are quite plain, when you see them in the street. Nearly all of them possess little more than the rudiments of conversation. Personally, except for one or two, I always keep out of their way.

Lonsdale's Abandoned Play

Well, Freddie Lonsdale has done it again. Alfred Butt has abandoned his scheme to produce "Foreigners," the new Lonsdale play, because "Foreigners," the new Lonsdale play, is not ready. Tallulah was to have been in it, and all that sort of thing—you know, hectic women screeching on the first night, and "Dear me, how wonderful she is!"

I met Freddie and Tallulah last Friday, when he was going off to finish the end, where I suppose a man said, "I love you," and Tallulah replied, "I shall love you always." But Freddie could not do it.

"Foreigners" will not be staged.

Butt's Second Disappointment

The last time I had a long talk with Alfred Butt, he was just recovering from the fact that Freddie Lonsdale, after promising to write for him a musical play to follow "Rose-Marie," at Drury Lane, could not find the end. Alfred was very angry.

"I cannot sue him," he said, "because the jury would take the author's side." Freddie's reply, of course, was "If an author cannot finish a play to please himself, what is the good of it to a manager?"

This is true, but why do managers contract to produce plays that are not written?

It saved Al Woods Money.

Al Woods was quite cynical, when I spoke to him about it.

"Lonsdale once promised me 'On Approval'," he said. "As he could not finish it, I did not get the play. Then, when he finished it, Charles Dillingham got it. So I saved $50,000.

Perhaps Alfred Butt has saved $50,000 again this time. Perhaps not.

The New Kine-Variety Boom

When I had lunch with Sir Walter Gibbons yesterday, he was full of his new scheme, which is nearly completed, by which, in a few months, he will control 100 kine-variety theatres, stretching from Edinburgh to Paris. Sixty have already been bought and a vast invasion of American dollars has been forestalled.

Walter always amazes me. He is a quiet slow-thinking man, at whom many people laugh behind his back. Yet every now and then he comes out with some extraordinary scheme, which he was thought out for months, and then completes in a few days.

He started life humbly. Now, he dines with the King of Spain.

Two More Critics Barred

Robert Loraine barred both James Agate and Hubert Griffith from the first night of "The Dance of Death," Strindberg's gloomy play.

"Why didn't he bar me instead of you?" I asked Griffith yesterday. "Oh, he'd be afraid to bar you," said Griffith. "No, he wouldn't," I said. "I slated 'Cyrano' more than you did. Perhaps I deserved it. Two to one bar one." "Oh, but you praised his acting and slated the play," replied Griffith. "I praised the play and slated his acting. That's different."

Of course, if I were Robert Loraine, I would bar everybody, especially myself.

Now Robert is one of our finest actors, but, like me, he loses his temper when other people are fools. I like him.

POLITICS IN FIRST RAID ON PALM BEACH CLUB

Palm Beach, Feb. 7.

Venetian Gardens, the only night club in Palm Beach that is making money, was raided Saturday evening while it was holding a capacity crowd, all spending freely. Sixteen employees were arrested on prohibition charges. All the liquor found on the premises was in possession of patrons who were not disturbed except that their drinks were inspected.

This is the first time a night club has been raided here. There is a political angle to the pinch since local and county elections are being bitterly contested.

John and Christo operate the place.

After the raid Murry Smith's musicians were pressed into service as waiters and continued to serve water to the crowd after the regular waiters were lodged in jail awaiting bail. The Gardens has announced its intention to go right on operating for the remainder of the season.

Americans Apply for English Naturalization

London, Feb. 7.

Layton and Johnstone, vaude act, have applied for naturalization papers, which necessitates a residence of five years here.

The report that the act would be on the Royal Command program is erroneous, as they are not yet British subjects.

Some Paris Bookings

Paris, Feb. 7.

A group of bookings just reported includes Haram and Jyrtil, dancers, now at the Casino, for the Piccadilly, London, for the summer.

Glenn Ellyn, dancer at the Perroquet, Paris, goes to the Ambassadeurs, Cannes, with Budapest to follow.

Quinault and Iris Rowe have resumed their partnership and are booked as a team for German dates starting in April.

Beth Beri of "Follies" fame has been engaged to sing the role of Wanda in the French production of "Rose-Marie."

Palladium Only Affected

London, Feb. 7.

Palladium is the only Gulliver house to feel the effect of the change in management, the Sir Walter Gibbons' group having taken over the circuit.

Chris Marner, house manager, and Horace Sheldon, musical director, have received notice that they withdraw Feb. 11.

SAILINGS

Feb. 11 (New York to London), Ronald Colman (Berengaria).

Feb. 11 (New York to London) Robert Keane and Claire Whitney (Mrs. Keane); Cecil Lear and Cleo Mayfield (Mrs. Lean) (Berengaria).

Feb. 11 (New York to London) Castleton and Mack (Leviathan).

Feb. 11 (New York to London), Jack Connolly (Leviathan).

Feb. 3 (New York to Paris) Edmund Sayag, John T. Adams (Paris).

RITZY

Single Divorcees

Louis Calhern, who is in "Possessed" by Vincent Lawrence, was to have acted in vaudeville with his society bride, Julia Hoyt, but she will go it alone in "Every Half Hour." So far Julia has not impressed the public with her histrionic ability, nor yet with her pulchritude. Perhaps she has been over-exploited! She is better looking, at any rate, than her sister, Mrs. William Lawrence March, who divorced two husbands before acquiring a third. Julia has only divorced Lydig Hoyt, and Calhern has only had one other wife.

Hope Williams' Family

Few recruits from society to the stage have acquitted themselves as creditably as has Hope Williams, who is playing her first professional role in "Paris Bound," with Madge Kennedy. As a daughter of the late Waldron Williams and the late Mrs. W. Eugene Kimball, she is of the elect, and has two fashionable sisters, Mrs. William Ross Proctor, Jr., and Mrs. John T. Terry, Jr. Her husband, R. Bartow Read, is a son of the exclusive Mrs. William A. Reed, but it is edifying to note that Hope Williams is not at all up-stage or high-hat!

Mary Hone's Ancestors

No name in the Social Register is more esteemed than that of Hone, the family having been socially prominent for many generations. In the early days of "Little Old New York," Philip Hone was not only a mayor, he was a leader of fashion, and his "Diary" is a work of reference. He is an ancestor of Mary Hone, now on tour with "The Cradle Song." This daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus C. Hone went on the stage with the entire approval of her parents.

In Palm Beach

Palm Beach has been diverted by the presence of Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Thomas, who have sojourned with her mother, Mrs. George A. Dobyne, at her villa. The singer, who gained his first notice in musical comedy, is now a concert artist and takes himself very seriously. In observing this really fine vocalist, who is decidedly handsome, one instinctively recalls the amusing imitation of Mr. Thomas, announced as such, by Frank Fay.

Another member of the Palm Beach colony is Arthur Somers Roche, the novelist, and he also, though in a different way, takes himself seriously. Each winter he and his wife figure in the society columns and apparently enjoy it.

Still another ritzing it at Palm Beach is Eric Zardo, known in vaudeville and in concert as a pianist. He is spending six weeks with the fashionable Mr. and Mrs. Philip Corbin.

Another Social Recruit

This winter Mrs. Henry E. Coe, who was Eva Johnston, daughter of the ultra-fashionable late Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Johnston, made her professional debut in a costume recital, along the lines of those rendered famous by her teacher, Yvette Guilbert. A sister of Mrs. Robert W. de Forest, whose husband is president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and of Mrs. Pierre Mali, widow of the Belgian consul in New York, she is yet one more of the recruits from society to the stage. Mrs. Coe is the mother of a grown-up family.

PARIS

By ED G. KENDREW

Paris, Jan. 29.

Anita de Caro, under the name of Eleanor Pond, American comedienne, is appearing with the English Players in "A Woman of No Importance" at the Theatre Albert I.

Company playing Henry Bernstein's "Venin" at the Gymnase, headed by Gaby Morlay, Yolande Laffon, Yvonne de Bray, Chas. Boyer and Marcel Andre, is scheduled to open in Berlin during the winter.

It is the first time since the war an important theatrical troupe has toured Germany.

A revue signed by Saint-Granier, A. Willemetz and Jean le Seyeux and, perhaps, Jacques Bousquet, will follow the forthcoming revival of "Venise" at the Marigny. Raimu, Dranem, Nina Myral and Jane Marnac (latter not certain) will head the cast of the new Marigny revue.

AUSTRALIA

By ERIC H. GORRICK

Sydney, Jan. 20.

Several new shows opened last week, but until business settles down to normal again, hard to get a line on staying power of any.

Williamson-Tait presented "The Girl Friends" at Her Majesty's, with Annie Croft featured. English actress scored nicely despite poor voice. Production lavish, with comedy falling on Leo Franklin. Cast includes Gus Bluett, Lorna Helms, Rowena Ronald, Marie Le Varre, Reg. Sharland and a corking ballet. Ted Clifford scored nicely in dance numbers.

"Archie" is at the St. James for the Fu rs. Muriel Starr playing in "Cornered" at the Palace.

"Cuckoo in the Nest" at the Criterion for Williamson-Tait, with English cast successfully playing the comedy.

Maulce Moscovitch finishing good run at the Royal in "The Terror."

"Film Girl" Not Strong

Rufe Naylor presented "The Film Girl" at the Empire last week. Cast features Bobby Jarvis and Van Lowe. Jarvis has not much of a role, the comedy being weak, likewise the book.

Van Lowe did nicely in a speaking role, scoring mainly with his dancing. Audrey Lewis is a pert little actress, pleasing in everything she does.

Show is a flash production and looks well. Naylor has spent a lot and maybe he will get it back. Edna Dare did nicely in a s all bit. Harry Hall staged the production and did a good job.

Pantomime at the Opera House and also at the Fuller's drawing in big business. Frank Neil is at the former house, with Jim Gerald at the latter.

Tivoli people presenting vaudeville and condensed panto on the one bill. Big business being done at this house. Panto playing under title of "Babes in the Wood" has Crissie and Daly, Rupert Hazell, Elsie Day, Stella Lamond, Frank Graham and a host of clever kiddies. Kwong Sing Wah featured vaudeville act.

"What Price Glory" extended run at the Prince Edward.

"Resurrection" came into the Crystal Palace last week for a run. Screened four times daily.

"Ben-Hur" is having second long run at the Piccadilly.

Lyceum is playing "Hills of Kentucky" and "The Life of Riley." Big Four featured act.

Haymarket playing "Soft Cushions," "The Lost Limited." Children's panto featured stage attraction this week.

Empress featuring "Alias the Deacon," "Pals in Paradise" and "Soft Cushions."

Hoyt's and Strand running "East Sides, West Side" and "The Bugle Call."

MELBOURNE

"The Student Prince" still big hit at His Majesty's.

"Queen High" successful at the Royal. Josephine Head, Hugo and Ramona added to show by W-T.

Dion Boucicault in "All the King's Horses" at the King's for W-T.

"Apples and Pairs" at Palace on run.

Carrolls are presenting "The Alarm Clock" at the Athenaeum. Tivoli playing Max, Moritz, and Akka, Cavanaghs, Mario, Cooke and Vernon, Di Gatino revue.

Fullers have Stiffy and Mo revue taking up the entire show.

Pictures

Capitol—"7th Heaven."

Auditorium—"Resurrection."

Paramount—"Soft Cushions" and "The Bugle Call."

Notes

"Cradle Snatchers" will play return season at the Royal, Sydney, after doing well in New Zealand.

Hans Shistel's Wonderettes engaged for Tivoli circuit this year.

Margaret Bannerman will open Australian tour in March at the Little theatre, Melbourne, in 'Our Betters. "W-T.

W-T. will probably revive "The Merry Widow" in Melbourne with James Liddy and Bonnie de Vyes. These artists have scored in "The Student Prince."

Reports have it that "Twelve" (Gingham Girl) lost quite a bunch of coin for Rufe Nalor. It was figured that the show would run about 20 weeks, but it ran only a little over 10 after starting off well. Cast changes mentioned as one of many causes for failure. Lorning Smith and the Carlons (dancers) will return to America shortly, appearing

LONDON'S WEST END HOLDING FEW SHOWS TO BIG GROSSES

"Clowns in Clover," Musical, and "Good Morning, Bill" Are Two Leaders—"Crooked Bitlet" Terrific Flop—Resume of Current Legit Plays

London, Feb. 7.

Few attractions are doing big business and the post-holiday slump continues.

London's present top musical smash is "Clowns In Clover." This show will run until July.

The biggest non-musical hit, possessing a library sale as good as the musical, is "Good Morning, Bill," with Ernest Truex (American).

"Oh, Kay," with Gertrude Lawrence, is slipping and will shortly close. The ticket agency guarantee on this one is $7,500 weekly. Weekly grosses have been around $15,000.

Although loudly acclaimed and doing business, "The Second Man" has no library deal or real demand and will probably have but a limited run.

"Vagabond King" got new life when moving from the Winter Garden to the Gaiety, but "The Desert Song" has about run its course.

"Snatchers" Not so Good

A distinct surprise is "Sauce for the Gander" ("Cradle Snatchers"). Despite splendid reviews and optimistic predictions by the wise bunch, it is not doing so well and is unlikely to remain any great length of time.

"The Silent House" carries on to good business in its small theatre, and "The Ark" is getting some action although here a year.

"Two White Arms" started but slowly, but library agreement will keep it going and indications are that the show will pick up. Robert Loraine, in Strindberg's "Dance of Death," is faring poorly, while "March Hares" is okay but not big.

"Lilac" Revival, Good

Revival of "Lilac Time" saw the stalls weak at the start, but the situation has bettered and business for this one has been good as a whole. Lonsdale's "On Approval" is doing exceedingly well, and "Marigold" is going along comfortably.

"The Wrecker" started well but has fallen off a bit, with "The Girl Friend" about as ever through turning in steady and profitable grosses.

George Robey's "Bits and Pieces" is another show that rates with the leaders.

A terrific flop after a good start has been registered by "Crooked Bitlet."

"The Black Spider" ("The Spider") isn't doing anything, but "The High Road" holds up nicely.

Ann Suter's Big Hit in Australia

London, Feb. 7.

Tommy Holt confirms an Australian cable from Ann Suter in Melbourne, claiming she is the biggest hit there in 20 years.

Following Miss Suter's success in London, Keith-Albee discovered it had her under a three years' contract and demanded that she return to America to fulfill same. Whereupon Miss Suter promptly booked Australia.

Barrie Oliver's Chance

London, Feb. 7.

Barrie Oliver, appearing as a single at the Alhambra (vaudeville) scored nightly yesterday (Monday), his opening. He was handicapped by an orchestra that went wrong and was following a stage band sprinkled with hoofers.

Oliver fares better in a musical show, but might become a vaude headliner if teamed with a competent feminine partner.

"Tin Gods," Silly Meller

London, Feb. 7.

"Tin Gods," opening at the Garrick, is a ridiculous melodrama, concerning Chinese pirates who capture a British vessel.

The piece was politely received by a remarkably tolerant audience, whereupon the author made a speech, coyly admitting his play was successful.

American Act's First Vaude Show in London

London, Feb. 7.

Despite the late hour and it being their first vaudeville appearance in any country, the Three New Yorkers held the house in at the Holborn Empire for six numbers.

Little Chance of Princes' Becoming Picture House

London, Feb. 7.

Among the properties being sold or converted into huge cinemas, the name of Princes' Hotel and restaurant has cropped up. But there is no foundation for the rumor. The position of Princes' is as follows:

The freehold belongs to St. James' Church, which adjourns, and the Princes restaurant people pay a rental of $50,000 per annum on a lease which has about 35 years to run. The owners want $3,750,000 for the freehold, but, as an ecclesiastical body, they would be averse to a cinema or theatre adjoining the church. Even if these difficulties could be overcome, which is unlikely, the Princes people would want at least $625,000 for their lease. This means that before building operations could be commenced nearly $4,500,000 would have to be paid, which makes the idea rather impractical.

Jack Smith's Show

London, Feb. 7.

Clifford Whitley and Archie de Bear show, in which Jack Smith is being featured, is named "Will o' the Whispers." Cast is practically complete and includes Elsa Macfarlane, Mimi Crawford, Mabel Constanduros, Billy Bennett, Billy Milton and Percival McKey and band.

Show opens out of town in March and comes here early in April. Authors are Archie de Bear and Donovan Parsons.

Parsons, who wrote "Clowns in Clover" with Ronald Jeans, has been exclusively signed by Campbell, Connelly & Co., music publishers, as a lyric writer.

GERMAN "ROSE-MARIE"

Paris, Feb. 7.

Arthur Hammerstein and Herbert Stothart have left Paris bound for Berlin, where they will supervise the German production of "Rose-Marie." It has been estimated that the author's rights in the French production will have a value alone of $40,000 (basis of franc at 4 cents).

KIMBERLY AND PAGE'S LOSS

London, Feb. 7.

Kimberly and Page, whose house was robbed some weeks ago, were compelled to settle the burglary insurance claim of $7,500 for $2,000, owing to a defective policy.

COMMAND SHOW'S S. R. O.

London, Feb. 7.

Royal Command Performance, due at the Coliseum (vaudeville) March 1, has been sold out.

New Yorkers Held Over

London, Feb. 7.

The Three New Yorkers, booked for the Cafe de Paris for four weeks with an option, were notified the second day of the engagement the option would be exercised for an additional eight weeks.

Rich's Return to London

London, Feb. 7.

After a fortnight at the Coliseum (vaudeville), Freddy Rich and his band go to Berlin for a month.

The outfit returns to the Coliseum for March.

Chevalier Recovering

Paris, Feb. 7.

Maurice Chevalier, who has been seriously ill, is reported progressing so speedily that his return to Casino de Paris Revue will be possible within a week or so.

NEW PARIS FARCE KEEN SATIRE ON POLITICIANS

Garbage Man Impersonates Prime Minister and Does Him Credit

Paris, Feb. 7.

"Le Pere Lampion" was revealed at the Ambigu as a diverting but at times bitter satire in farcical form, of French politics and society. The piece by Jean Kolb and Belieres is highly disrespectful toward some cherished French institutions, such as official position which commands vast deference from the middle class. The plot:

Political rivals kidnap Prime Minister Desnoyaux and substitute Lampion, the garbage man, who is the eminent premier's absolute double. The scavanger gets away with his pose creditably, having a good time with a senator's wife, attending banquets, distributing honors with jovial good will. He has several amorous adventures, but he amuses everybody. When he quietly fades out of the picture and Desnoyaux returns to his proper estate, he is amazed to find how he has grown in popularity and friendly esteem during his absence.

Tramel (who rather flopped recently in the Moulin Rouge revue) and Mme. Cassive are genuinely amusing in the leading roles.

"Dibbouk" Well Done

"Le Dibbouk," Yiddish drama of mystic import, was successfully presented at the studio, adjoining the Theatre Champs des Elysees. The Anski play has been translated by Marie Therese Kroerner. Story has to do with the return to earth of a Jewish youth to seek out the love of his childhood, lost to him in life by his ambitious father. The girl dies to join her lover in the beyond.

Report Music for Cafe Royal After 80 Years

London, Feb. 7.

Cafe Royal, in Regent street, the Bohemian rendezvous of such personalities as Sir Augustus Johns, Epstein, Nevinson and others, has succumbed to the lure of modern entertainment. For nearly 80 years music and other civilized kinds of recreations have been taboo at this unconventional resort.

They have engaged Hal Swain, late of the Prince's Restaurant, with a band of 10, which will play for tea, dinner and supper dansants. It is even whispered that they will run a cabaret. An Esty organ has been imported from America, with an American to manipulate it.

To avoid the wringing of hands the management has retained the famous Bohemian Cafe, and there the old Chelsea-ites can still carry on their babbling noises and sleep till closing time.

Hylton's Continental Biz

London, Feb. 7.

Jack Hylton and his band are back after two weeks in Paris on percentage, and one week in Berlin on straight salary.

Hylton's share for his first Paris week was $5,850 and the second week he bettered $6,000. In Berlin he gave three concerts besides his regular stage performances.

Eddie Dolly's Nite Club

London, Feb. 7.

Eddie Dolly, brother of the Dolly Sisters, has opened a new night club here naming it The Stage Door.

The place specializes in serving steaks from an open grill.

George Bass Dies

London, Feb. 7.

George Bass, Lancashire comedian, died in Burnley Hospital Feb. 5 following an operation.

Fyffe's Slowly Improving

Will Fyffe, Scotch comic, in the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, 321 East 42d street, New York, where he was operated upon for neurosis of the ankle, shows slow improvement.

WILL MAHONEY

The New York "Post," in reviewing "Take the Air," said: "This Mahoney chap can vary his moods from a pleasing Irish hoofer to a German acrobat, to a gentleman actor, and to a dancing zanie with a genius for falling as not even Rome could fall. Such mad cavorting, such riotous insanity and miraculously teetering dancing as this Mr. Mahoney provides is sufficient to guide 'Take the Air' through any storm that may lie in its course."

TOMMY DAWE DIES SUDDENLY AT 46

London, Feb. 7.

Tommy Dawe, 46, died suddenly Feb. 4 of internal hemorrhage. He had been ill for two weeks.

Ella Retford, his wife, was at the bedside when her husband passed away. Miss Retford is one of England's favorite artistes. The couple had been married for years and were fondly attached.

Tommy Dawe had been a theatrical producer, manager and agent at one time or another during a career that about started in the British show business. His death may have been superinduced through lessened resistance arising from the shock of the tragic suicide of his close friend and business associate, James V. White, in London a few months ago.

That saddening event on theatrical London occurred following White's belief that he was financially ruined through inability to raise a large amount of money to tide over an oil field promotion in which White had invested his entire fortune of millions.

Mr. Dawe had worked industriously on the same deal. While Dawe was attempting to find the necessary money and White was in despair at home, Dawe secured it, but as he was trying to get White on the phone, the latter committed suicide.

Mr. Dawe and his wife, Miss Retford, are favorably known in New York and among the show people of this country. Both often have been over here, with Miss Retford a recognized vaudeville headliner in America.

MRS. A. J. CLARKE DIES

Mrs. A. J. Clarke died Feb. 5 at the Knickerbocker Hospital, New York, following the birth of a son about two weeks previously.

Service will be held today (Wednesday) at Campbell's funeral church at Broadway and 68th street. Interment will be in a vault at Woodlawn, until the remains are returned to London for their final resting place.

Mrs. Clarke was married about a year ago. She was formerly Rose DeCorbett, a professional and on the English stage. Her husband is the international theatrical agent.

Their child survives.

Cochran's Opinion

London, Feb. 7.

It has been announced here that Tex Rickard will duplicate Madison Square Garden for London on a site already secured.

C. B. Cochran says he knows nothing of the scheme but thinks it's a good idea.

FRENCH EXHIBS PROTEST QUOTA

Charge Favoritism and Threaten Closing

Paris, Feb. 7.

French exhibitors filed heated protest against the proposed regulation of imported pictures by government decree, at a well attended meeting. They particularly oppose the plan of import control through the censors. This is the plan which is up in place of the original quota proposals. It is believed the bill is doomed if it is brought to a vote in Parliament at this time.

Such decrees as are applicable temporarily are enforcible without a formal poll of the legislative branch.

Exhibitors charge that the new measures are inspired by certain interests in the producing field, and make plain their determination to use only pictures made by other concerns, specifically those companies which are known not to be in favor of the censors.

The showmen declare they have a right to a voice in regulation of the picture business and declare that if a measure which is inimical to their interests is put in force, or any measure is adopted without regard to their views, they will close their houses April 1.

Exhibitor position is that the government is willing to benefit a part of the industry by legislation that will prove detrimental to the majority interests.

GILLESPIE ON SHOWMEN AND MOSS' DIVIDENDS

But Moss' Went Off 10% on Issuance of Yearly Statement —Profit of $50,000 More

London, Feb. 7.

Commenting on several American managers' opinion that there is no showman in this country, R. H. Gillespie, managing director for Moss Empires, says his circuit pays its stockholders over 15 per cent. annually and asks what American management can show such figures.

Gillespie adds that if this isn't showmanship, then he doesn't want to learn the "racket."

Moss Empires shares dropped nearly 10 percent yesterday (Monday) upon issuance of last year's reports. This happened despite that the reports show a profit of $50,000 above the previous year.

MODERN "MACBETH" SO-SO

London, Feb. 7.

Putting modern clothes on "Macbeth" attracted a highbrow audience to the Court theatre last night.

They were politely tolerant.

New Classes Now Forming

IF TITLER CAN PASS SUPER, SAYS CON, THERE'S A CHANCE—IF NOT!

Explaining Something About Writing Captions for Pictures in Hollywood, When Not a Big Leaguer

By Jack Conway
(CON)

Los Angeles, Feb. 4.

Dear Chick:

There's a lot of funny ways of getting the hot meat and this title writing racket is as comical as any you can think of. But it ain't any tougher than standing out in right field and hollering, "I got it." And the pennies are much more plentiful.

But don't let anybody tell you it's as soft as it looks. It's oak for a peasant to sit out front, look at a deaf and dumb opera and tell himself that any guy with a back file of joke books and a copia of "College Humors" can nit those titles and make them funny; but the answer is that many a smart mug has had at it and did a pratt fall.

And the reasons back of the failure of a lot of bright eggs, to level at title weaving are a few of the things the peasants don't know. My motto is never smart up a chump, but I know this is strictly sub rosa and that you will never beef to anyone who might peddle it.

A title writer don't write titles for the public. He writes them for a sap called a supervisor. This mug sits at his elbow and tells him whether they'll be laughed at or not. The supervisor can't title a medicine bottle and nine times out of ten wouldn't recognize a good gag if it jumped up and bit him; but there he is—try and get rid of him.

After the titler has sweated out a set of under-pressure cracks that have passed the supervisor and his entire family, they are dropped into the picture and previewed. If the gilyagos laugh, everything is jake; but if they don't, the supervisor either calls in another title writer or orders the first batch rewritten. But he sits in all over again, which starts the titler off with another two strikes on him.

Taking Bows

If the titles click the supervisor will take all the bows in sight. If they don't, he will lean over and tip off one of the execs that the titler is slipping. For every unfunny title in the picture the writer may have five others that they might laugh at, but they have been ruled off by the supervisor because he didn't like them. Now it's up to the title writer to try and debate them back into the opera.

The first thing for an ambitious title writer to do is to take a course in oratory, because titles are elocutioned into pictures, not written in. Then he better begin pickling himself in brine, like the old-time pugs used to do with their dukes. For

The two Roscoe's turned the trick at Fox's Audubon, New York, last week. Roscoe Arbuckle and Roscoe Ails combined their talents. Aside from their individual acts, they framed a flock of impromptu scenes that were a riotous scream. The answer was the natives were hanging on the rafters and fighting for tickets. Just two good men.

"BEN-HUR" PRINTS STOLEN IN INDIA

No Protection Against Film Pirates in That Country—Duping Plant in Bogota

Prints of "Ben-Hur," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, were stolen last week in northern India. Though the exhibiting field for films so acquired is neglible in India, with J. J. Madan controlling almost all of the picture houses, the prints may be smuggled into other parts of Asia and from there to Europe.

In India there is no copyright protection for American pictures. The Indian Government usually offers help and is ready to co-operate with the producers. Even if apprehended, the thieves are not subject to any set legal retribution. Even if ownership is finally proven the picture has meanwhile been played, while the exhibitors can always alibi with receipted bills showing they had bought the picture in good faith.

"Ben-Hur" is in its 10th month in Paris as compared with a 10-week run there for "The Big Parade," also M-G-M.

At Bogota, Colombia, South America, an elaborate picture duping plant is reported continuously dupeing stolen prints, sold all over South and Central America and in some of the Latin countries on the Continent.

3,000 INDIE EXHIBS HAVE CLOSED UP OR SOLD OUT WITHIN 3 YEARS

About Only Hope Left Is National Combine of Exhibs Through Record for N. J., or Sapiro for N. Y. Exhibs.—Buying Combinations Best Plan

Within the last three years more than 3,000 independent exhibitors have closed theatres or sold out to chain operators. In many states less than 50 per cent. of the former independents are in business.

This is mainly the result of the film buying preference given to chain operators, which included long protection terms and, in some cases, keep independent houses without the product they want.

In addition to forcing thousands of independents to close, present conditions have stopped proposed construction plans by independents which would have reached a total of from 1,000 to 1,500 new theatres during this period.

Despite the evident pressure which will eventually force the independents out of business and despite the example set by some groups of exhibitors, the independent theatre owners have not nationally combined for protection.

Buying combinations are the only protection the independents can look forward to with any dgeree of business safety. Exhibitors in buying combinations get pictures and at reasonable prices.

Buffalo Group

An example is the Dibser and Zwimmer group in Buffalo. Because he belongs to this group Schweppe, with one theatre in Elmira, N. Y., gets all the product he wants although an operator of four or five theatres in Elmira, Albany, Dunkirk and Troy, a nephew of Ben Berinstein, president of the M. P. T. O. of California, is unable to get product from the major producing companies. The Buffalo group represents approximately 150 theatres and the buying strength is sufficient to get an operator of one house preference of another with several houses.

In New Jersey the independents are finally making a last effort for a combination under the direction of George L. Record, attorney. In New York the independents are dealing with Aaron Sapiro, attorney and organizer.

If these combinations are firmly established they may reach out and enfold the independent exhibitors throughout the country. If the present plans fall through extinction of the independents may continue on the same fast rate as in the past.

BIG FLOTATIONS AND BRITISH STOCK ISSUES

Ostrers Form Buying Concern—P. D. C.'s Issue—Dominions and Others

London, Feb. 7.

Ostrer Brothers, bankers, have formed the Denman Trust to buy picture theatres as an outlet for British-Gaumont product against Provincial Cinematograph Theatres.

Charles M. Woolfe, of W. & F. Films, Ltd., and E. Lyon are interested in the new company, which has bought around 70 houses, including the five Hyams theatres, Collins Circuit of five houses in the north, cinemas at Newcastle and Blue Halls, two of which are in London and one in Brighton.

All are big and modern theatres, with which a new flotation is to be shortly made for the public.

Millions in Stocks

New stock issues pending include Provincial Cinematograph Theatres' $4,000,000 further capital to buy sites and build more theatres on existing sites held by that concern.

British Dominion Films will also float during the week-end its $2,500,000 issue asking for $1,500,000 in 200,000 deferred 20-cent shares and 200,000 10 per cent $5 preferred shares. Preferred is to get one-third of the profits after payment of the 10 per cent. preferred getting the balance.

The company is putting in its own distributing organization after completion of its current production, "Woman in White," with executives including Herbert Wilcox and Nelson Keys, with Charles Wilcox in charge of distribution.

Studios are to be built at Harrow, and the first production will be Sir Hall Caine's "The Bondman."

Blattner's Promotion

Blattner's $2,500,000 flotation for British International Pictures will be launched Feb. 15.

His Elstree studios are to turn out three films for British International and three for Gaumont-British and United Artists' quota films are also to be made by Blattner for world release through U. A.

Szarvasy-Gibbons

London, Feb. 7.

A strong rumor here is that Szarvasy-Sir Walter Gibbons are finding an unsuitability in some of the theatres they have been buying for pictures.

Their movement to obtain the Astoria cinema has been completed for $1,350,000. Retiring directors get $75,000 compensation and agents operating the deal get $50,000, with holders of 20 per cent of the deferred stock obtaining $8 per share.

Harold Lipson, announced as appointed to manage the Szarvasy-Gibbons company, is still with P. D. C. All insiders refuse to make any statement as to the theatres which have been bought being used for pictures.

WEATHER REPORT FOR WEEK (FEB. 8) TO COME

Washington, Feb. 7.

Information obtained at the Weather Bureau gives the following outlook for the coming week commencing tomorrow (Wednesday) of the country east of the Mississippi River:

Rain in Atlantic States and Eastern Lower Lakes region, with probability that it may continue into Thursday.

Over the Western Lower Lake region, the Ohio Valley and greater portion of the East Gulf states the weather will be partly cloudy, with temperatures rising slowly during Wednesday and Thursday (8-9).

End of the week in the Atlantic States looks like mostly fair weather, with temperatures near or slightly below the seasonal normal.

Western (Wash., Ore., Calif., Idaho, Nev. and Utah). Week opened with rain and snow in northwest down into Southern California. Cleared, except on coast, by Wednesday morning, only to have storms return over entire section by Saturday. Clearing again Sunday. Little temperature change.

Central (Mont., Wyo., Colo., No. and So. Dak., Neb., Kans., Minn., Iowa, Mo., Wis., Ill., Western Mich., Ind. and Western Ky.). Snows in Michigan and other northern states, though entirely cleared late Monday (Jan. 30). Except for one bad day, with snows again, week clear until Sunday, when lower half was under rain. End of week marked by exceptional temperature rise just south of Great Lakes.

Southern (Ariz., New Mex., Okla., Texas, Ark., La., Miss., Tenn., Ala., No. and So. Car., Ga. and Fla.). Opened clear though rain later occurred Monday, the 30th, in Tennessee, North and South Carolina and Mississippi. This cleared for balance of week except in scattered sections, particularly on Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana. Temperature rose in eastern half at opening of week only to drop and to again rise before week was over.

Eastern (Eastern Mich., Ohio, Eastern Ky., W. Va., N. Y., Penn., Va., Md., N. H., Vt., Mass., Conn., Del., N. J., Md. and D. C.). In main clear for entire week with exception of lower portion of section. Wide variance in temperature in New England States. Temperature was dropping at end of week in the entire section.

CAFETERIA'S VITA GAG

Amplifiers Mystify Customers of Stith-ophone Owned Restaurant

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A Vitaphone gag is being used at the B. & M. cafeteria on Grand near 6th street, in connection with a phonograph apparatus which reproduces sound through amplifiers hidden over the place.

Employees of the cafeteria are given to understand that an actual Vita attachment is used with the recording machine. They readily vouchsafe this information upon request of the customers.

In front of the establishment the device is proclaimed on a sheet as the new "Stith-ophone," whatever that may convey to the passing onlooker who is urged to come in and hear it. The title seems to belong to the owner of the cafeteria, whose name is Glover E. Stith.

The gag about the Vita attachment appears to be working out and has the majority of the food grabbers mystified.

G. E. INSTALLING SIGHT AND SOUND IN COAST F. B. O. STUDIOS

Producers' Next Season's Production Cost Will Be Governed by Kinegraphone—Stage of Its Own—30 F. B. O. Pictures Now on '28-'29 List

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

F. B. O.'s production schedule for '28-'29 includes four super-specials, 26 Gold Bond Specials and the usual quota of westerns and short subjects.

The money for these productions will depend upon the needs and possibilities of each in connection with the subsequent development of F. B. O.'s new talking device, Kinegraphone, which will shortly be installed at the studio and used with productions that will fit in with sight and sound.

Work has started on equipping a Kinegraphone stage. General Electric is sending an engineering expert to the coast with the apparatus and work will begin immediately with a production unit especially assigned for this in the studio.

Norma Shearer Will Retire Next Year

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Norma Shearer will spend another year on the screen and then retire to domesticity with her husband, Irving Thalberg, M-G-M producer.

The company has persuaded her to make several more pictures before quitting the studios for good. She wanted to retire immediately after her marriage.

The Thalbergs sail on the "Mauretania" for Europe Feb 21 to visit studios in London and Berlin. They are due back in Hollywood May 15.

Lord Beaverbrook Due

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Lord Beaverbrook, English publisher, is en route to America, where he will confer with Joseph M. Schenck, his new partner, in an English picture company.

It is believed at this time while John Considine is planning a pleasure trip to Europe that he will remain abroad to look after the Schenck interests in the new company. Schenck's interest in the English concern will be advantageous to United Artists in a way, as it will take care of the latter's share in the English films quota law.

Nellie Revell Cops Space in Boston

Boston, Feb. 7.

Ad lib, in transit and in person, Nellie Revell made her first visit to Boston in 10 years last week. In a few short hours she had more space in the Boston dailies than C. Coolidge grabbed with his last speech.

Nellie makes "copy" and is "copy." She didn't come to Boston to make "copy," so the boys and girls of the press made plenty of "copy" of her.

The spine more famous than Kitty Gordon's (Nellie's own words, in fact, most of the interviews for once were the words of the object of the interviews for Nellie talks headlines).

"Right Off the Chest," "Spangles," whatever Nellie mentioned, was emblazoned on the printed page in the news type you can't buy.

CONTROL OF 1ST NATIONAL?

MILTON'S (MASS.) ONLY THEATRE AND NEW, BUT CAN'T PLAY FILMS

Selectmen in Town of 14,000 Refuse License for Pictures—600 Citizens Ask Rehearing—New House Cost $75,000

Milton, Mass., Feb. 7.

Although a $75,000 theatre has just been completed here, it cannot open, as pictures have been barred by the Board of Selectmen of Milton. The theatre was erected by the Market Amusement Co., but the Selectmen have refused a license for the new theatre to show any films.

Citizens seem to have a habit of calling Milton a village, although it has a population of over 14,000. It was founded in 1695 and never has had a theatre or any other kind of place of public amusement.

Frederick A. Gaskins, treasurer of the Milton Savings Bank and a deacon in the Congregational Church here, is standing with the owners of the new theatre and has been granted a rehearing of the movie situation by the Board of Selectmen. The chairman of the Selectmen is Kenneth D. Johnson, local attorney. The other members are Josiah Babcock, feed and hay merchant, and Norton Wiggleworth, banker. As a preliminary to reaching a decision the Selectmen called a public meeting and requested an informal expression of opinion. Twenty-six votes were cast in favor of permitting the theatre to open and 30 were opposed. The younger element of Milton demands that the theatre be granted a license.

Gaskins, acting in behalf of the theatre company, succeeded in obtaining a petition of 600 signatures asking for reconsideration of the ruling that bans the movies. When he presented this petition to the Selectmen he was promised a rehearing would be given.

In a statement Chairman Johnson of the Selectmen said: "In ruling against the application for a license we acted in response to appeals of a large body of Milton citizens. A number of clergymen also joined in opposing the license. Those opposed stated two main reasons—the distraction of both citizens and children from their tasks and their homes and the questionable moral tone of many pictures."

Offer of $54 Cash for W. C. Stock on Exchange

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Hayden, Stone & Co. are offering all holders of West Coast Theatres, Inc., $54 a share in cash.

As an alternate proposition they will transfer two-thirds of a share of Fox A, now quoted at around $80 a share, for every one share of West Coast.

Those accepting the exchange cannot get the Fox stock until after Jan. 31, 1929. Until then the stock and its voting powers remain with Hayden-Stone.

Embassy's U. A. Film

New Ronald Colman-Vilma Banky picture, title of which has been changed from "Leatherface" to "Two Lovers," will follow "Love" into the Embassy, New York, March 22. This is the first outside picture booked into this small M-G house. Booking was made by a personal arrangement between Sam Goldwyn and Nicholas Schenck.

Eugene Zukor with Publix

Eugene Zukor, son of Paramount's president, has become attached to the staff of Publix.

The younger Zukor has been affiliated with practically all branches of Paramount and will now look into the theatre operation end of the business.

Pittsburgh Believes Fox Taking Over Stanley's

Pittsburgh, Feb. 7.

It's believed here that Fox is taking over the new Stanley theatre and other Stanley holdings in town, or that negotiations are on toward that end.

Fox representatives are in town inspecting the Stanley-held houses. They will vouchsafe no information.

In Pittsburgh the Stanley Company of America has the former Davis theatres, with a large capacity picture theatre of its own underway.

Pittsburgh in the variety way is now dominated by Loew's new and big Penn theatre, opened in the early fall.

FILM COMPANIES TIE UP WITH DEPT. STORES

U Makes Deal With Gimbels for 16M. Film—Rental by Coupon

Gimbel's Department Store has established a movie library of 16 m. films for rental to home projectionists. A releasing arrangement has been made with Universal whereby Gimbel will handle Universal pictures exclusively.

The Gimbel-Universal tie-up may be the beginning of extensive trade relations between picture companies and large department stores. Gimbel's is across the street from Willoughby's, probably the largest store in New York devoted entirely to photographic supplies. Willoughby's has maintained a 16 m. rental library for some time.

Coupon Plan

Under the Gimbel plan, launched last week, the rental of films is on a coupon basis. Each coupon is valued at $2.50 and is good for a 24-hour rental of a two-reel subject. Feature-length pictures will take three coupons or $7.50. Books containing 52 coupons sell for $104. Smaller books are priced at $12.50, $25 and $58.50. No rentals for cash will be made.

Home renters must call for the film and return it personally within the 24-hour period. Presently Gimbel's library consists of 40 titles, mostly shorts. Universal will release two additional pictures for 16 mm. distribution each week.

English Support in Canada

Toronto, Feb. 7.

Stock in the new British holding company embracing Standard Film Co., Ltd., United Artists, Loew's, First National-Pathe and Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., will soon be offered in Canada, where much of the financing of the merger has been arranged, according to Andrew P. Holt, deputy chairman. Sir Herbert Holt, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, and estimated as the wealthiest man in the Dominion, is also behind the venture.

CHAIN FIGHT IS CALLED REMOTE

Fox Reported Paying $4,000,000 for F. & R. Circuit—Franklin's Position Other Than West Coast's Boss, Still Undefined—Fox's Over-Night Rise as Big Theatre Director Universally Approved

STANLEY POSSIBILITY

Control of First National is occupying the attention of picture executives nowadays. It follows the acquisition by William Fox of the West Coast Theatres circuit, which is said to hold 28 per cent. of the F. N. stock. Another leading contender for the control is the Stanley Company. The latter is a 26 per cent. holder.

Fox gains through F. & R. and Saxe (additionally to West Coast) but 6½ percent of First National stock. F. & R.'s interest in F. N. is 3 percent, and Saxe about 3½, with Saxe's mostly sectional. It leaves Fox with about 34½ total.

First National was quoted Monday at 106. Schwalbe of the Stanley Company, who holds the highest percentage of Stanley's F. N. holdings, has an open offer to First National shareholders to take all they wish to sell, at the market. This appears to be the first attempted move for First National control since Stanley learned it would not merge with West Coast.

Reports claim there is still a possibility of the Stanley Company becoming an ally of West Coast's, through making a like connection with Fox. No authenticity in the reports, other than the factional differences in the Stanley shareholders and what the control there, if secured, might want, with the Stanley's greatest want at present from accounts a theatre operator capable of handling the entire Stanley chain from one office.

Fox, it is said, may close the F. & R. deal any day now. Papers are reported drawn, with Fox to pay F. & R. $4,000,000 for the circuit. It actually consists of around 100 houses. Finklestein and Ruben, its promoters and directors, will likely remain in charge for a time after the transfer.

It appears pretty definite at present that the chance of a rift between the big chains, with Fox numbered among them, is remote. That is seen in the general attitude about and also in the almost universal approval of Fox's entrance over night as one of the biggest chains.

No Withdrawals

With the remoteness comes the story that neither Publix, Loew's or United Artists will withdraw any of their theatres at present under West Coast operation, from that coast chain, and that the Publix's new northwestern houses shortly to open, will also pass to the West Coast for operation.

Again the reason is advanced that Fox's film buying power right now would preclude any open antagonism by the distributors that also operate theatre chains, while the recent enormous addition of picture theatres to the Fox circuit are a guarantee to Fox of greatly increased earnings for his picture productions in his own houses.

Franklin's Status

In the centre of the entire situation appears to stand Harold B. Franklin, who is credited with having engineered all of Fox's recent theatre deals. It was reported up to yesterday that Franklin had reached no personal understanding with William Fox. Franklin's status under contract is as president of West Coast. His agreement for that post, assumed by him last April, is for five years.

Franklin's amazing record of hav-

PATHE DILEMMA ON FINANCES AND PRODUCT—REORGANIZATION

Elmer Pearson Reported Out—$5,000,000 Required to Proceed With Next Season's Full Program—Everything Laid on Bankers Who Balk

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

It is reliably reported here that Elmer Pearson is leaving Pathe and that the DeMille studios will close about April 1.

The Pearson withdrawal points to a reorganization move by the producing company and the DeMille shutdown is the result of insufficient funds at present to proceed with next year's program.

DeMille has five finished productions waiting release with four more to finish. This will give the company nine program pictures and a special, De Mille's "Godless Girl," when the proposed shut down date is reached. Actual closing hinges on completion of the unfinished quartet and the special, or the New York bankers' refusal to refill a gaping till.

It is no secret that at the present time more money is weekly going out than coming in to the De Mille studio.

William Sistron, studio manager, is now in New York.

Reported financially pressed, Pathe, nevertheless, has no intention of turning loose for immediate release "King of Kings" upon which it places an estimated sales value of at least $2,000,000.

Pearson has been with Pathe for about eight years.

Reorganization

With Pathe bonds breaking seven points Monday from 77½, plunging to 60 Tuesday, and a series of meetings in New York throughout the past two weeks, it is said in New York that a complete reorganization of Pathe may shortly occur.

Pathe now has five completed feature pictures on the shelf and they will be held over for next year's program, rather than to be released at present rentals, with approximately $5,000,000 in cash needed to carry on production work for the new '28-'29 program.

It is understood that the bankers, Blair & Co., and their associates, demanded if they advance $3,000,000, that Pathe-DeMille and Keith-Albee assume the balance. This, on report, the producing-exhibiting firms have refused to do.

The crux of the situation apparently revolved around the financial faction figuring on a Keith-Albee-Stanley-West Coast merger, an impression gained from the New York end. When West Coast tied in with Fox, this proposal was blown wide open as far as the bankers were concerned. Possibilities of a receivership are mentioned but not given much credence.

The bankers (Blair) are said to have invested $6,000,000. The Joseph B. Kennedy-F. B. O. angle as to an affiliation with Pathe still remains. It is not believed that either De Mille or Keith-Albee will financially bolster the Pathe situation themselves.

How much chance there is of Pathe and P. D. C. reorganizing into two groups, is not known at this time.

Pathe stock reached its peak around the middle of last August when its stock was quoted at around 45. Tuesday (Feb. 7) it was selling at 9 with the bonds at 62 at 2 p. m. Last August the bonds at 100¾ sold at a premium.

Right Idea, Wrong Spot

A woman pictures critic, coast representative of a big publication and unusually conscious (even for a newspaper woman) of her importance, attended a recent Hollywood party. Among the guests was a young film executive, more famous for his humor than for his tact. The young man was pointing out celebrities to a cute little flapper whose name he hadn't quite caught when introduced.

"And that dame," he said, indicating the picture critic, "goes around asking everybody what they're doing, although she never prints anything except what Miss Whoozis (naming a picture star who is a "must" in most of the papers the critic represents) had for dinner last night."

"I beg your pardon," said the little flapper indignantly, "but 'that dame' happens to be my mother, and I'm going to tell her what you said."

The next morning the film critic's column was devoted, not to Miss Whoozis, but to what an incompetent, conceited and altogether impossible fellow the youthful picture executive was.

PAR SALES MEETING OF ALL DIVISIONS

Paramount's annual sales conventions, usually starting around May 1, will this year include the entire "front" of the organization. All five Par. divisions will be present, including Publix, these departments being enumerated as production, distribution, foreign, newsreel and theatres.

This is believed to be the first time the theatres have had official representation at the conventions, with Sam Katz, Sam Dembow and A. M. Botsford to attend the sectional meetings. These are tentatively scheduled for New York, Chicago and San Francisco and subject to change.

Eastman's Time Saver In Duplicating Negative

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

With the movement for economy in picture production, Eastman Kodak brings out a new duping negative that will do away with all second cameramen.

The new film known as duplicating negative is capable of producing as perfect a negative as the original. It will also save the labor of cutting a second or foreign negative as it can be printed from the original in the same manner as positive film is printed.

Laemmle in Control

Repeated reports have said that outside interests were after the control of Universal.

'PRINCE'S' $14,000 AT GARRICK LEADS MINNEAPOLIS' BIG WEEK

"Gay Defender" Drops State, Normal Leader, to 4th Place With $10,000—Barthelmess, $11,000, and "Dove," $8,500 for Pan—3 Films Hold Over

Minneapolis, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Population, 470,000)

Competition among local show houses last week was keener than a Broadway traffic cop's supposed wits. Arrayed against each other in the mad scramble were "The Student Prince," "Patent Leather Kid," "King of Kings" (Metropolitan), "The Dove," Ethel Clayton, Ian Keith and Jay C. Flippen in person and a big State stage show and an old fiddlers' contest.

After the final check-up it was found that "Student Prince" led the procession by a wide margin. This picture goaled 'em here, jamming the 2,000-seat Garrick throughout the week and even topping the business done by this house with "Ben-Hur," "Big Parade," "Beau Geste," "Can and the Canny" and "Underworld." One of the biggest weeks the theatre ever has had, and sensational showing made in the face of some bitterly cold weather early in the week.

"Patent Leather Kid," at the Strand, next door to the Garrick, also did exceedingly well. Its length prevented the immense turnover chalked up by the "Prince."

No less than three of the pictures held over for a second week—"Student Prince," "Kid" and "King of Kings."

Whereas the Garrick was having one of its best weeks, the State, ace F. & R. house, which invariably sets the business pace, was having one of its worst. It not only was forced out of the lead, but dropped to fourth place in the patronage race, something that probably never has occurred before and is not likely to happen again. Explanation for this appears to be that Richard Dix is not a card here and "Gay Defender" not powerful enough to stand off competition. House also had an elaborate stage band presentation. The Garrick, charging the same admission, and the Strand, with a 10-cent lower scale, gave its customers nothing but the feature photoplay.

Returns for "The Dove," at Pantages, were disappointing, although takings hit a clip above normal. Norma Talmadge is considered a local favorite, but the fans didn't care so much for this picture. Ethel Clayton and Ian Keith, in person, brought trade to the Hennepin-Orpheum and, together with other such vaudevillians as Jay C. Flippen and Ethel Davis, rather than the feature photoplay, "The Leopard Lady," deserve the credit for the moderately good business.

Estimates for Last Week

State (F. & R.) (2,500; 60)—"Gay Defender" (Par), "Jazz Pirates," stage band presentation, old fiddlers' contest and other entertainment units, gave patrons splendid run for their money; business, however, far off; Dix no magnet and couldn't pull in face of opposition; picture aroused no enthusiasm; around $10,000, one of worst weeks and a drop of $7,000 and $5,500 from two preceding weeks.

Garrick (F. & R.) 2,000; 60)—"Student Prince" (M-G). Raved about this one and flocked to see it; around $14,000, amongst biggest weeks ever at this house; held over.

Strand (F. & R.) (1,500; 50)—"Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.). Landed strongly; about $11,000, splendid and a trifle more than "The Circus" on first week; held over.

Lyric (F. & R.) (1,350; 35)—"French Dressing" (F. N.). Better liked than most recent pictures at this house; jumped business nicely; $2,600 about 20 per cent better than average take.

Grand (F. & R.) (1,100; 25)—"The Gorilla" (F. N.). Second loop showing around $700.

Hennepin-Orpheum (Orpheum) (2,890; 50-75)—"Leopard Lady" (Pathe) and vaudeville. Picture not so much but vaudeville good; Ethel Clayton, former local stock player, and Ian Keith in person, helped draw; good at near $12,000.

Pantages (Pantages) (1,650; 50)—"The Dove" (U. A.) and stage revue. Norma Talmadge big box office here, but picture failed to land strongly; $8,500 disappointing, but much better than house average.

Seventh Street (Orpheum) (1,480; 40)—"His Foreign Wife" and vaudeville. Around $5,300.

Pulling "The Dove"

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

"The Dove" will not complete its scheduled three weeks at the United Artists.

It goes out after two weeks and a day tomorrow (Wednesday).

"Sorrell and Son" follows Thursday.

'POINT' BEARDS NAVY IN DEN AND GETS $26,000

$18,000 for "Helen" at Balto. Stanley—"Cohens-Kellys," $9,000, Good

Baltimore, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Population, 850,000)

Baltimore film exhibitors are supporting the Brookhart bill. William Stumpf, business manager of the Maryland M. P. T. O., states this move has the support of 90 per cent of the picture theatres in Baltimore and 50 per cent in the State. There are a lot of houses here owned by non-film producing concerns, and they are active in support.

Loew, with three local houses in conjunction with United Artists; the Stanley-Crandall, with First National affiliations; the Warner, owned Metropolitan and the Schanberger-Keith-Albee Garden are the local houses directly or indirectly controlled by producer organizations. The Rivoli, New and Hippodrome are the first-string houses in which producer capital is not dominant, and they no doubt lean toward the small neighborhood exhib in opposing block booking. Block booking at the Rivoli, when that house had the exclusive Baltimore F. N. first run franchise, contributed largely to putting the skids under the b. o. about 18 months back, when the schedule ran into a flock of weak bookings. The house has only recently come out of the nose dive to start olimbing.

Apropos of the termination of the Fox-Mix contract, several local managers were quoted last week on the demise of westerns. The Garden, long the local stronghold of the prairie thrillers, passed them up when it reopened as a K-A combination, and E. A. Lake, manager of the opposition Hippodrome, books about four Ken Maynards annually and lets it go at that. This leaves only the neighborhood houses in the market for the cowboy celluloids for Saturday showings.

Stage band idea has apparently caught on here. Leon Navara, brought here by Stanley-Crandall to inaugurate the policy at the new Stanley, came in on a four weeks' contract but the S-C people proffered him a four months' contract at $750 weekly, which Navara has accepted. Sammy Kahn, stage band master of ceremonies at the Loew-United Artists' Century, has also caught on and looks set for a sojourn.

Business at the first-runs recovered from the Saturday blizzard of the previous week. Good weather aided the draw generally, and the town is undoubtedly looking up from an amusement point of view.

Outstanding last week was the Century with "West Point," which bearded the navy in its den. The military film stood 'em out every night. "Helen of Troy," at the big Stanley, after a discouraging opening day, caught on and finished big. "The Student Prince" got a good second week at the Valencia, but the big card downstairs at the Century slowed it up somewhat. The Rivoli, with a Victor Herbert birthday program, got an excellent intake. "Quality Street" moved up to the Parkway, was satisfactory but not sensational. "The Last Block" was not quite the b. o. record anticipated at the Little theatre. The Palace, with a combination burlesque tab plus "The Girl in the Pullman," packed 'em in for its second week of the new grind policy. "Wings" failed to justify its third week at New Rochelle due to picture but to difficulty of diverting moviegoers from regular theatres to a legit temporarily gone movie, always a local problem. Gross under $10,000.

Estimates for Last Week

Century (Loew-U. A.)—"West Point" (M-G) (2,074; 25-60). General Manager Kingsmore and staff arranged military de-up with Fifth Regiment, Baltimore's crack militia outfit, nearly 400 men in dress uniform marching to the theatre Thursday night; fife and drum corps from high school serenaded b. o. Saturday morning; big from start to finish, with stand-outs nightly; "Way Out West," stage band presentation, clicked nicely with Sammy Kahn, resident m. c.; got maximum for this house, a figure not exceeded unless matinees are equal to the night jam; $26,000 or slightly better.

Stanley (Stanley-Crandall) — "Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (3,400; 25-60). Monday opening no criterion on the week; business increased rapidly, finishing big; Leon Navara firmly established as m. c. $18,000 or better.

Valencia (Loew-U. A.)—"Student Prince" (M-G) (1,500; 25-60). Big throughout first week, and second week satisfactory but not sensational; excellent matinee picture, and this is a good matinee house; the Wednesday mat musical feature, orchestral program of request numbers by Mischa Guterson, replaced short subject on bill and again registered; about $9,000.

Rivoli (Wilson Amusement Co.)—"Serenade" (Par) (2,500; 25-60)—Picture with musician hero did nicely with Victor Herbert memorial program, which was the draw; week consistently good.

Parkway (Loew-U. A.)—"Quality Street" (M-G) (1,000; 15-35). Remarkable that picture consistently good; in spite of Hearst press hook-up failed to duplicate success of recent Davies features in this town; moved up to the Parkway, did nicely, but that's all; about $4,000.

Little (Motion Picture Guild) — "The Last Waltz" (Par) (250; 25-50). Not quite the draw anticipated; cameo house has built up class patronage that didn't find it entirely the caviar they looked for; about $1,200.

New (Whitehursts)—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U) (1,800; 25-50). Exceptionally good week; admirably suited to regular patrons here; about $9,000.

MARY DISAPPOINTS IN DEN—GETS $26,000

Reformers' Squawks Look Good for "Sadie"—Menjou, $11,600—Pan., $11,400

Toronto, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Population, 700,000)

With first-run houses reduced to six, these doing an average of better than $10,000 and Loew's out in front with "Serenade," it looked like a normal week all round.

Minor upsets were afforded by the Tivoli, which continued strong with "Ben-Hur" at $8,400, and the Regent, which couldn't shake itself into life with "My Best Girl" at $8,600. No one can figure why the Mary Pickford effort should flop in Mary's home town. It never got better than lukewarm, and was withdrawn after a poor fortnight in favor of "Sadie Thompson." Advance sale and exploitation have both been well handled for the Swanson film, and the howls already raised by reform outfits have them talking early on this one.

Uptown has cut down on stage show and cut out Roland Todd's organ numbers. The result is a shorter program and no harm to biz. This week they just had two acts and a musicale with "The Noose" (F. N.) for an average $9,000. In the face of bad weather "Beau Sabreur" had the S. R. O. out Saturday on the "Beau Brummel" name.

Pantages came out of a trance to grab $11,300 for "The Love Mart" (F. N.), while Loew's beat this by $200 with "Serenade." Both had good vaude shows.

Real smash of the week was "Oh, Kay!" (negit), which went to $24,000 at Shubert-Royal Alexandra without hurting the pictures.

Estimates for Last Week

Loew's (2,300; 30-60)—"Serenade" (Par). Menjou film had an average draw; evening biz slightly off; good stage show helped; about $11,600.

Pantages (3,400; 30-60)—"The Love Mart" (F. N.). Jumped $2,000 over last week, partly due to vaude; radio plugging of little or no help; about $11,400.

Hip (FP) (2,½00; 30-60)—"The Main Event" (Pathe). Fight picture put house over $10,000, which is good going; well handled.

Uptown (FP) (3,000; 30-60)—"The Noose" (F. N.). Dailies didn't think much of film but it got almost $9,000, an increase over previous week.

Regent (UA) (1,400; 50-$1)—"My Best Girl" (U. A.). Never got going at expected pace in Mary's home town; under $9,000 of mostly feminine trade; gave way to "Sadie Thompson."

Tivoli (FP) (1,400; 35-60)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G). Considered excellent on second week at $8,400; held over.

"IRONSIDES" IN PORTLAND

Maine City Held to Heavy Competition for Special in Pop House

Portland, Me., Feb. 7.

"Old Ironsides," scheduled for a week's run at the Strand, was taken off and replaced by "Quality Street," after three days' try last week. The management stated that it was at a loss to understand why "Old Ironsides" failed to attract, having played in many cities at a $2 scale.

Heavy competition may have been the real cause. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman was at the City Hall, drawing thousands, while besides special attractions at many of the houses, the automobile show was also being staged.

MICHIGAN DOES $40,400 WITH 'SHEPHERD'

Detroit, Feb. 7.

Opening of the new United Artists theatre the only oddity among the film places last week. Business otherwise about normal.

The U. A.'s influx did not come until late in the week, permitting older stands to go along without a cutin the first few days. The new house played to turnaway attendance opening day, Friday, and repeated Saturday and Sunday. Gross for the three days neared $16,000.

Notices on "Sadie Thompson" were good, and the boys helped out with mention of the "Rain" adaptation. Not a line about the play in the house advertising.

The Michigan, down the block, was the first to feel the effects of the new theatre. Weekend biz was noticeably off and the big house finished slightly under its usual gait. Screen, holding "Shepherd of the Hills," was outclassed by stage. "The Jazz Singer" and Vita, in its sixth week at the Madison, is now on the down grade and nearing the bottom though still showing a profit to attain an excellent engagement. By playing this one at pops and on grind the returns are exceedingly higher than the grosses on road showings elsewhere. The fact that Detroit is a wet blanket for two-a-day pictures made successful a plan that might be tried in other big towns.

"Love," now in third week at the Adams, is another that suggests curtains for the near future. Gilbert-Garbo team failed to get off as expected and hasn't yet reached the desired pace. "The Circus" is at hand for this house, so "Love" will no doubt be pulled at first sign of loss.

The natural Hearst plug for "Quality Street," the Davies picture, failed to help the Capitol to an appreciable extent. The city's first de luxe presentation theatre turned in an average figure. Big things expected here within the next two weeks with "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," current, and Gilda Gray to follow.

Fox's Washington also looks for better times this week after limping along under the strain of a very ordinary screen attraction the past seven days. "Sunrise" opened Saturday, and Movietone has become a magnet.

The vaude-playing twins, State and Oriental, were neck and neck, as usual. Price slashing war carried on by this pair stopped all of a sudden, though both are playing up the special two-bit morning scale, with the Oriental having a slight edge in size of type. Exploitation of Miles house has improved notably in the past couple of weeks.

Estimates for Last Week

Adams (Kunsky)—"Love" (M-G) (1,770; 50-75). Little recovery after slow start; expected to close at any moment to pave way for Chaplin film; $13,000, not an exceptional second week.

Capitol (Kunsky)—"Quality Street" (M-G) (3,448; 50-75). Extra publicity no aid; $24,600 about normal for good stage band show and film.

Washington (Fox)—"Come to My House" and Movietone(Fox) (1,778; 35-50-65). Inviting title didn't work; only $6,000 worth accepted, much of it on strength of "Tone; "Sunrise" should better.

Madison (Kunsky)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,976; 50-65-75) (6th week). Road showed elsewhere but playing here on grind; holding profitable pace going into seventh week; now far below tremendous early pace, but good at $16,000.

Michigan (Kunsky-Publix)—"Shepherd of the Hills" (F. N.) (4,100; 50-65-75). U. A. opening made slight drop here last days of week, but big one tops town with $40,400.

Oriental (Miles)—"Ragtime" (Ind.) (2,950; 25-90). Slightly off at $16,500; midnight show Saturdays kicks in with extra "grand" weekly; house plays six Pan acts with film and figures nut around $11,500.

State (Kunsky)—"Four Flusher" (U) and Loew vaude (3,000; 25-75). Less transient trade here than in most spots; has regular attendance to keep gross around $13,000 mark; just above water at that.

United Artists—"Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) (2,000; 50-65). Ran wild Friday, Saturday and Sunday after colorful opening; glamour of new theatre the attraction; about $16,000 on three days.

DENVER DAILY AND PUBLIX AT ODDS

New Denver Not Advertising in Local "Post"—Did $18,000 Last Week

Denver, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Population, 400,000)

Theatre attractions here were above the ordinary for the opening of the new month. As a result the cash registers rang more than usual.

Estimates for Last Week

Aladdin (Inde) (1,500; 35-50-75) "Seventh Heaven" (Fox). Ran into second week strong. Complete Movietone accompaniment made this a natural. So many hadn't been accommodated at end of second week that three special noonday matinees were given before regular showing of "Fortune Hunter." Both weeks about even at $8,500.

America (U) (1,500; 15-25-30) "Woman on Trial" (Par). One of nine Paramounts booked by this house, did better than usual, closing around $3,400. Langdon's "Three's a Crowd," flop just before, and the management followed with "Les Miserables" for two days, which nose-dived. "Woman on Trial" then saved the week from complete disaster.

Broadway (Inde) (1,575; 50-$2) "Cradle Song," with Mary Shaw, Eva Le Galliene's Civic Rep. Co., at reduced prices, opened to brisk biz, which held up through their seven-day engagement. Broadway has been dark for long time, and "Cradle Song" reopened it. Close to $9,000, giving everybody a break.

Colorado (Indc) (2,450; 30-40-50) "Man Crazy" (F. N.). Fair program picture. Stage act, plus Scheuerman's band on stage, duck soup for thousands in this town. Never any big dough spent on these footlight features, but they click just the same. About average at $7,000.

Denham (Inde dramatic stock) (1,732; 25-$1). "Sally," Ziegfeld's musical show, started slowly but gained speed and held over for second week. Opening week $7,000.

Denver (Publix) (2,600; 25-40-60), "Gentlemen Prefer Blonds" (Par), plus "Shadowland" on stage, Nothing sensational for this house. Gross showed appreciable drop—large part of which can be laid to the fact that this theatre has withdrawn its advertising from the largest Denver newspaper, "Post," and is using other sheet exclusively. Drew $18,000, which, while high in Denver, isn't high for the Denver.

Empress (Inde musical stock) (1,860; 15-30-50) "Uncle Tom's Cabin." If you can imagine this Harriet Beecher Stowe classic done with song and dance interpolations, you have some idea of what the High Jinks Players had to contend with. Poor old "Tom" drew about $4,600, despite heavy ballyhoo. Too heavy to attempt as light comedy, with music.

Orpheum (Vaude) (1,600; 15-50-$1). Lew Cody headliner, and though business started off all right it didn't maintain an even pace. Things quieted down toward the end of the run, and closed at $9,000 or slightly less. "San Francisco Nights" held screen; Gene Austin, previous week, brought in record receipts.

Rialto (Publix) (1,050; 25-30-40). "The Circus" (U. A.) closed its second week as strong as initial showing. Extra advertising space put this over to the tune of $6,500 each week. First time in months Rialto has had picture capable of bringing 'em in.

Victory (Publix) (1,140; 15-25-30). "Lovelorn" (M-G-M) for last half, with elaborate lobby display, managed to reach the usual mark of $1,700.

'Student Prince, $46,350; Penn's Record, Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Feb. 7.

Penn house records, held by "Love," were shattered by over $1,000 last week by the "Student Prince."

Grand, although hurt some, did well "Shepherd of the Hills" doing around $14,000, not bad on the black ink.

Estimates for Last Week

Aldine (Loew) (2,000; 25-35-50)—"Main Event" and vaude; $13,100, good.

Davis (2,100; 35-50-75)—"Silk Legs" and vaude. House cut acts from 7 to 6.

Grand (2,700; 35-50) (Stanley)—"Shepherd of Hills" and slim stage show reacted favorably.

Penn (Loew) (3,600; 25-35-50)—"Student Prince." Fine publicity campaign and Publix unit "Banjomania" also helped. $46,350, record.

'DRUMS' AT $2 PUZZLING PICTURE; FILMS' INS AND OUTS ON B'WAY

Jannings' 2d Week at Rialto, $48,300, Enormous—"13" Unlucky for Roxy, $94,000—"Ironsides" Couldn't Do It at Par, $69,200

One of those weeks where everything went along about as expected. Preceding week-end's wind and snow didn't do any good in some spots, but the Capitol didn't feel it where "The Student Prince" started off auspiciously enough to be held over. This makes the second successive picture the Capitol has retained for a fortnight. "Divine Woman" was immediately ahead of it. Novarro and Shearer, in the adapted operetta, swept $75,200 past the gate and will try to stay inside the Garbo $12,500 slide on the second week.

Jannings' second week in "Last Command" galloped to $48,300, a $2,700 dip from the previous week. Excellent showing and the film gives sturdy indications of a long time at the Rialto.

Over at the Roxy, where the house has been jumping and dipping $12,000 and $14,000 weekly, "13 Washington Square" last week let the gross down to $94,000 with the third Universal picture in a row to come in this Saturday, "He's My Daddy," Reg Denny subject.

Chaplin's last of four weeks at the Strand tickled off $41,600 with "Patent Leather Kid" going in for so long as it can stay. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" petered out at the Rivoli to $18,500, but stopped Friday at six p. m. to make way for a reserved seat benefit showing of "Sadie Thompson."

The three weeks of the Anita Loos story was unprovocative of any highlights and goes down as a disappointment as far as Broadway is concerned. On the other hand, "Helen of Troy's" third crack at the Street was strong enough to keep it another week at the Cameo after running up close to $6,200 at this midget stand. "Buck Privates" donated $10,800 to the Colony.

"Old Ironsides" didn't do much for the Paramount on its first pop priced showing in town with $69,200 in the tills. It's a drop of $4,400 from the previous film, "Sabreur."

Hi 'Atters

Among the highhat $2 crowd "Drums of Love" is proving a stumbling block. Getting loose for its first full week, matinees were extremely weak and around $9,000 was all the Griffith product could show. Double-header plug ads signed by Belasco and Max Reinhardt are being used. Belasco also endorsed "Uncle Tom," so the silent drama is getting quite some attention from the veteran showman.

"Tom" ambled in at $8,300, slightly under its former figure, while "Chicago" reveals itself as quite willing to call it quits at $6,000.

"Simba," the animal picture, is a surprise. Martin Johnson's telescopic shots have added a Saturday morning for the youngsters and remains above $16,000. A feeler was put out for the Central, but Universal eased its head horizontally. Picture has extended its run two weeks.

"The Enemy" can't get its second wind at the Astor and is merely stalling, but "Wings" and "Jazz Singer" aren't having any trouble grinding out mile after mile of unwinding at $15,400 and $18,300, respectively. "Love," at the Embassy, went back to capacity again, hitting $10,100.

Estimates for Last Week

Astor—"The Enemy" (M-G) (1,200; $1-$2) (7th week). Would be willing to call it a run if anything were ready to come in; quiet since opening and marking time now; if it got $9,000 everybody's satisfied.

Cameo—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (549; 50-75) (2d week). When house gets up around $6,000 means plenty of busincss; hot Grecian mama on third trip to Broadway so nice as house guest she accepted invitation to stay another week.

Capitol—"Student Prince" (M-G) (4,620; 35-50-75-$1.65) (2d week). Second successive holdover film for Capitol; opening week-end storm didn't effect here where full gross ran to $75,200.

Carroll—"Simba" (997; $1-$2) (3d week). Added extra Saturday morning show for the juveniles; backing of natural history enthusiasts helping plenty and over $16,000 sounding off in hurrahs; reported dickering for Vitaphone release with musical attachment; has extended its run two weeks, making six in all.

Central—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) (922; $1-$2) (14th week). At $8,500 not too downstarted; looks had nibble from "Simba" but refused.

Colony—"Buck Privates" (U) (1,980; 25-50-75). Pushed things ahead bit by reaching $10,800.

Criterion—"Wings" (Par.) (973; $1-$2) (26th week). Amongst elite and threatening to break in on roll of honor of big six $2 pictures; no trouble on 44th street corner and still enjoys b. o. lines for Monday matinees; $15,400.

Embassy—"Love" (M-G) (596; $1-$1.65) (11th week). Became playful again and got rid of excess spirits by skipping back to capacity; "Two Lovers" (U. A.) scheduled here March 22; first outside film to play M-G-M house and if date kept, will have given "Love" 16½ weeks here.

Gaiety—"Chicago" (Pathe) (808; $1-$2) (7th week). Roxie Hart bored with Broadway and its $2 tap; or vice versa; at $6,000 willing to blow; "Four Sons" due here for Lincoln's Birthday matince premiere; house cluttered up with two booths, new pipes, extra wires and a lot of profane people; "Chicago" closes Sunday.

Liberty—"Drums of Love" (U. A.) (1,234; $1-$2) (3d week). Just can't get going; afternoons 'way off and bowed to around $9,000 mark; generally liked but no one seems able to lay their finger on what's wrong; lots of guessing though.

Paramount — "Old Ironsides" (Par.) (3,400; 35-50-75-90). Spread sails at pop prices but failed to catch better than $69,200; okay but below what house has been doing since Xmas rush; $4,400 off from previous week.

Rialto—"Last Command" (Par.) (1,960; 35-50-75-$1) (3d week). Able to hold up to $48,300 after record $51,000 week considered remarkable; no telling at this time how long Jannings film will stick.

Rivoli — "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) (2,200; 35-50-75-90). Passed quietly at $18,500. "Blondes" failed to show punch strength at any time; "Sadie" now in.

Roxy—"13 Washington Square" (U) (6,205; 50-$1.65). First Universal picture in series of three at this house got $94,000; means cops stayed in station house; "Love Me" current, and "He's My Daddy" (Reg. Denny) to come in next week; all U films; office staff all smiles Monday after directors' meeting.

Strand—"The Circus" (U. A.) (2,900; 35-50-65-75). Chaplin laughed himself out of Strand to $41,600 after fourth and final week; engagement totalled $243,100, beating "The Gold Rush" week for week. "Patent Leather Kid" current and sure to stay two weeks; more if figures warrant.

Warner's—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,360; $1-$2) (18th week). Jolson still mechanically warbling to many listeners and quite apt to sing to a few more; $18,300; big.

MAE MURRAY HITS AGAIN, $43,600, ST. L.

"Sadie" No Panic at State, $23,900—"Noose" Good at Missouri, $28,100

St. Louis, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Pop., 1,000,000)

Mae Murray brought her tabloid Publix unit, "Merry Widow," to the Ambassador last week, and it included some of the most beautiful settings seen in local theatres recently. Miss Murray was supported by a host of good entertainers, some fine voices and really funny comedians.

Prince Midvani did not come to St. Louis. "He had to go back to California to look after our properties. Someone had to," Mae stated languidly.

Estimates for Last Week

Grand Central (Skouras) (1,700; 50-75)—"Jazz Singer" (W. B.) Vita. Beginning to look like indefinite run. Sixth week almost as remunerative as preceding five; $16,300.

Loew's State (3,300; 25-35-65)—"Sadie Thompson." Teddy Joycc's stage presentation. $23,900.

Ambassador (Skouras) (3,000; 35-65)—"Irresistible Lover." With Norman Kerry and Lois Moran, entertaining little comedy. Mac Murray "Merry Widow Revue" afforded Ed Lowry week's vacation in New York. $43,600.

Missouri (Skouras) (3,800; 35-65)—"The Noose." Melodramatic crook story, in spite of being rather tiresome, gives Dick Barthelmess chance for some very fine acting; $28,100.

Colony—"Buck Privates" (U) (1,980; 25-50-75). Pushed things ahead bit by reaching $10,800.

Criterion—"Wings" (Par.) (973; $1-$2) (26th week). Amongst elite and threatening to break in on roll of honor of big six $2 pictures; no trouble on 44th street corner and still enjoys b. o. lines for Monday matinees; $15,400.

HOT TITLES DIDN'T MAKE HOT BUSINESS

All of K. C. Downtown Off Last Week—Midland, $24,000—Mainstreet, $14,000

Kansas City, Feb. 7.

A bunch of hot ones for the downtown patrons last week—"Helen of Troy," Mainstreet; "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Loew's Midland; "Wine," Liberty; "Gertie's Garter," Globe; "Come to My House," Pantages, and "Sailors' Wives," Orpheum.

If this is what the public want, the public had it plenty, but the alluring titles failed to drag the ticket buyers out in any strength, and the weekly grosses failed to show any increases, with the lone exception of the Mainstreet, which gathered 'em in.

Reviewers gave their strongest adjectives to the "Helen" picture, but were also strong for "Blondes." The other first-runs suffered, some given to more empty seats than customers.

Starting Saturday the Midland changed from its own "home-made" stage show to the amalgamated Loew-Publix units, and another change in policy will go into effect this week, when the opening day for each bill will be Friday instead of Saturday. It is stated that this move was caused to accommodate the routing of the units, which jump from here to Dallas.

Estimates for Last Week

Loew's Midland—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) (4,000; 25-35-60). Stage show headed by Pat Rooney, built around house orchestra and Dancing Rockets, with Jack Sidney m. c. Saturday and Sunday business big, but remainder week not so forte; $24,000.

Mainstreet (Orpheum)—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (3,200; 25-50). Regular vaude. Reviewers fell strong for picture and wrote raves about it. Sunday found house too small for crowds. Steady throughout week; $14,000.

Pantages—"Come to My House" (2,200; 50-50). Picture made from Roche's "Liberty" magazine story, full of thrills and interest. Stage show. Entire bill perfect for Pan's clients, but some evidently didn't know it; $8,400.

Liberty (Ind)—"Wine" (1,000; 25-50). Adaptation of "New Collegians" interesting to those following series. Clara Bow name meant much, whether picture new or revival; $2,600.

Newman (Lowe)—"Baby Mine" (M-G-M) (1,980; 25-35). Rollicking comedy got away to good start Saturday. This house has been hurt worse by new Midland than any of others, and reduction from 60c nights to 35c has not brought results hoped for; $2,700.

New Uptown's feature, "A Woman Against the World," with stage show.

Fall River Blaze Felt In Providence Box Offices

Providence, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Population, 300,000)

With excellent weather breaks nearly all houses took an even score in last week's lineup. The fire in Fall River drew many thousands out of the show-going ranks and the last half of the week left the boxes open for a fall-off.

Majestic broke to high mark for the first time in a long while with "Sorrell and Son" and the Heflin debate in Movietone. Fay's hit a fair draw with "Three's a Crowd" and a good sized revue for vaude. The Strand sat back for a rest after two capacity weeks with "The Valley of the Giants," good for a faint click. Carlton did good biz with "Streets of Shanghai" and some vaude. Uptown continued its successes with "Two Arabian Nights" on a repeat showing.

Estimates For Last Week

Majestic (Fay) (2,500; 15-50) "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) and Heflin debate in Movietone. In the win column; only extraordinary draw of the week; great at $7,400.

Strand (Ind.) (2,200; 15-50) "Valley of the Giants" (F. N.) and "For the Love of Mike" (Col.). Nothing extra at about $8,000.

Carlton (Fay) (1,474; 15-50) "Streets of Shanghai" (Tiff.) and some likeable song and dance vaude. Best returns in weeks at $4,500.

Fay's (Fay) (2,000; 15-50) "Three's A Crowd" (F. N.) and vaude revue. Harry Langdon popular and week held up at about $5,500.

Uptown (Ind.) (1,500; 10-25) "Two Arabian Nights" (U. A.). Carrying on at about $2,800; "Two Women Wanted" also on bill.

Rialto (Fay) (2,000; 10; 25). Second runs notwithstanding struggle at $1,200.

TACOMA AT EVENS

Good and Bad Grosses in Film Houses Last Week

Tacoma, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Pop., 125,000)

Nothing to rave over last week, although good program shows prevailed. Pantages and Broadway run for town's lead. Rialto did a little better with Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl." Colonial had "Beau Geste" alongside of "Beau Sabreur" at the Broadway, this being second time for "Beau" in Tacoma. Unusual booking, but it seemed to increase interest.

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (W. C.) (1,650; 25-50)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par). Biz up little. Dave Good pronounced good. F and M better idea in "Lace." $6,200.

Pantages (1,450; 25-50)—"Pajamas" (Fox). Olive Borden helped draw. $4,900, very light.

Rialto (W. C.) (1,250; 25-40)—"My Best Girl" (U. A.). Mary has following. $7,200, great.

Colonial (W. C.) (850; 25)—"Beau Geste" (Par). Great show and biz up. $1,300.

'NOOSE' TAKES RECORD AT STATE, N. O.; $19,100

New Orleans, Feb. 7.

Loew's State ran ahead last week with "The Noose," breaking the house attendance record for all time, going over $19,000, and beating the previous seven days by nearly $7,000. "The Noose" proved a box office sensation here.

"Last Command" was hurt materially at the Saenger by an inferior stage show, the house barely passing $16,000.

"Quality Street" did very badly at the Strand. Orpheum showed considerable strength with "Almost Human," above $9,000 for the first time this season.

Estimates For Last Week

Loew's State (3,218; 50) "The Noose" (F. N.) with Barthelmess, helped considerably by excellent publicity, also stage show; $19,100, taking house record.

Saenger (3,568; 65) "The Last Command" (Par.). Jannings classic disparaged some by surrounding entertainment; $16,200.

Orpheum (2,400; 75) "Almost Human." Good vaude contributing factor; $9,400.

Strand (2,200; 50) "Quality Street" (M-G-M). Rather poor vehicle for Marion Davies; $3,200 and in the red.

Palace (2,300; 40) "Turkish Delight." Sent returns to $5,800.

Liberty (1,800; 50) "The Crystal Cup." Started in mild manner and never recovered. Just $2,700.

Tudor (800; 40) "The Swell Head" —$1,300.

Fox Did $22,000 and Palace, $17,000, in Wash.

Washington, Feb. 7.
(Estimated White Pop., 450,000)

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia (Loew) — "Student Prince" (M-G-M) (1,232; 35-50). Slip out to storm, final count just nosing over $6,000 for second week.

Earle (Stanley-Crandall) — "Valley of the Giants" and Hyman presentation (2,300; 35-50). Improvement over preceding week in screen, stage and box office; possible $9,000.

Fox (Fox)—"Silk Legs" (Fox) and Sophie Tucker (3,432; 30-40-60-75). Still getting higher scale than others and scrmingly set to fight it out along those lines; Miss Tucker increased business slightly to $22,000.

Met (Stanley-Crandall) — "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (1,518; 35-50). Third week to about $7,500; "Jazz Singer" back currently for repeat of days to bring house to Saturday opening.

Palace (Loew)—"Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G-M) and Publix "Tokio Blues" (2,363; 35-50). Wesley Eddy, permanent m. of c., back after week off. Pit orchestra developed into peach of stage band. Monta Bell picture and good stage show. Lots for 50 cents and about $17,000.

Rialto (U)—"Finders Keepers" and musical comedy in tabloid. (1,978; 35-50). May have resulted in slight improvement to estimated $6,500.

Col. McCoy in Cal. Film

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Larry Weingarten, recently appointed supervisor of the Col. Tim McCoy unit for M-G-M, will put into production next month his first picture. It is a story on early California, with a pony express background.

Nick Grinde will direct.

'SABREUR,' $52,000, CHI; 'WHIP WOMAN,' $47,000

Some Good Runs and Grosses in Loop—"Gaucho" at U. A. Went Up to $25,000

Chicago, Feb. 7.

At the Chicago last week "Beau Sabreur" and a good stage show brought a plump gross of $52,000, although the dailies' reviews were tinged with disappointment in comparing this film with "Beau Geste." Roosevelt let out ... O. T." after two weeks to take on "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The gross didn't call for such a quick exit.

Jannings in "The Last Command" dropped only $1,000 in second week at McVickers. United Artists likewise is clicking with "The Gaucho," going upward in the third week to $25,000. "The Circus" next week.

Estimates for Last Week

Chicago (Publix)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par) (4,100; 50-75). With some aid from stage show this film brought very good $52,000; for three weeks grosses here exceptional.

Garrick (Shubert)—"Jazz Singer" Vita (W. B.) (1,293; 50-$2.20) (12th week). Town's only legit-scaled picture, $14,000, with no closing date set; sensational for this town.

McVickers (Publix)—"The Last Command" (Par) (2,400; 50-75). Jannings continues excellent, dropping only $1,000 in second week; $27,000.

Monroe (Fox)—"Daredevil's Reward" and Movietone (Fox) (975; 50-65). Tom Mix slightly under at $4,300; usually hits at least grand above that.

Oriental (Publix)—"The Whip Woman" (F. N.) (2,900; 35-50-75). With better pictures being brought in to offset apparently weakening stage draw, this one must be credited with giving house normal $47,000. Strong stage show included Paul Ash at its head. Ash's phenomenal run may be finally telling.

Orpheum (Warner)—"If I Were Single" and Vita (W. B.) (776; 50). Customarily nice drop-in trade to $7,300.

Playhouse (Mindlin)—"Faust"—"Loves of Pharaoh"—"Peter the Great" (Ufa). Three-split week of Jannings revivals, little art theatre rewarded very modestly with $3,600. "Faust" weakest and "Peter" strongest.

Roosevelt (Publix) — "Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (1,400; 50-60). Okay in second week with $14,000, following $18,000 first week, but let out in favor of "Blondes."

State-Lake (Orpheum)—"Leopard Lady" (Pathe) (2,800; 25-50-65). Fair week, considering about $18,000.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,702; 25-75). Doing nifty business, picking up to $25,000 in third week, in for four weeks.

"TEXAS STEER" OFF; 'SADIE' ON IN SEATTLE

Seattle, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Pop., 450,000)

Better shows in town last week but there seems to be a little lull before the opening of the massive new Seattle later this month.

"Sadie Thompson" set the town on its ears at the United Artists, while "A Texas Steer" proved a lame duck at the 5th avenue. Pantages billed Duncan Sisters strong in picture, "Topsy and Eva," and biz better. President had Olga Printzlau's new play, "The Showdown," and it looked good. Great theme, with wonderful possibilities. Blue Mouse had fifth big week with "Jazz Singer" and going into sixth, for record picture attendance in Seattle, it is believed.

Estimates for Last Week

Fifth Ave. (W. C.) (2,600; 25-65)—"Texas Steer" (F. N.). Combined with somewhat atmospheric "Harvest Idea," good harmony but no pull in either presentation or picture. Hermie King helped things a lot. $13,000, bad.

United Artists (W. C.-U. A.) (2,100; 25-65)—"Sadie Thompson" (U. A.). Sex-stuff plus with draw plus. Got by censors and pulled in customers. Advertised heavily this screen version of "Rain." $13,000.

Columbia (U) (1,000; 25-50)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par). Second week draw above average second week. $5,300.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (950; 50-75)—"Jazz Singer," Vita. (W. B.) and Movietone. Fifth week held up great. $10,800.

Pantages (1,550; 25-65)—"Topsy and Eva" (U. A.). Advertised strong as United Artists production. Duncan Sisters handy name draw. Biz improved. $12,000.

Orpheum (2,700; 25-75)—"Leopard Lady" (Pathe) and vaude. Biz better. $12,500.

President (Duffy) (1,650; 25-$1)—"The Showdown" (Duffy Players). New Olga Printzlau play received splendid applause. Play brings tears and bunches. Deeply impressive. Duo of Miller acting particularly hard spot. $9,000, very big.

'CIRCUS' STEPS OUT FOR $30,000; SHEARER TOPS 1ST RUNS, $27,000

"Last Command" Under Expectations in L. A., $17,800—Stage Show Helps "Sabreur" at State, $21,200—"Man Crazy" Surprises, $7,500

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.
(Drawing Pop. 1,450,000)

First run houses took it on the chin last week with the exception of Grauman's Chinese and the Biltmore. Trade was way off, worse than it has been since before Christmas. There is a general slackness in employment locally, result being that folks are not tossing their coin at theatre box offices.

Honors went to the Chinese with "The Circus." Picture had a good stage balance in the indoor circus Grauman put on headed by the Hannaford Family.

Of the downtown group the Metropolitan led the field. It had Norma Shearer's "The Latest from Paris" and Fanchon and Marco's "Birthday Idea," with Cliff Edwards the added attraction. Although the house did all right it seemed as though the entire show were not sold through publicity angles in 100 per cent. fashion. The presence of Ukelele Ike was not stressed upon enough. They paid plenty of dough for this boy and did not capitalize on him, but Miss Shearer was the potent b. o. draw she always is here.

"The Last Command" did sort of brody on its first week at the Million Dollar. It opened to about $1,400 less than "Love," its predecessor, and the full count ran $7,000 behind "Love" on the first week. This was despite the dailies put on a rave and the picture was well sold from a publicity angle. Another Paramount blank was "Beau Sabreur" at Loew's State. Had it not been for the drawing power of Eddie Peabody house would not have gotten by the "red" margin. But Paramount was vindicated at the Biltmore by "Wings." This one is running along in great style and its third week was within $1,500 of the first week.

"The Jazz Singer," though not knocking them over in its fifth week, held up nicely. For the ninth and next to final week at Carthay Circle, "Sunrise" went along steadily at around $1,100 below the week before. Second week of "The Dove" at United Artists was not so encouraging. Norma Talmadge film dropped around $6,000 and is scheduled to vacate after playing two weeks and two days in favor of "Sorrell and Son."

"My Best Girl" was a life saver for the Egyptian. This house, in the neighborhood class with a poor line of exploitation and publicity, got the break because there are lots of folks who didn't see the Pickford opus and most of them lived in Hollywood.

At the boulevard customers went hook, line and sinker for "Man Crazy" and Gene Morgan. House was about $750 ahead of week before. Second week of "The Fortune Hunter" at Broadway Palace was just too bad, even though house tried to capitalize on the Chaplin moniker by bearing the name up heavy with "Syd" in small type.

Estimates for Last Week

Grauman's Chinese (U. A.)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,958; 50-$1.50). First week for new Chaplin and the fans fighting each other to plank down the kale at the till; around $30,000.

Carthay Circle (Miller-W. C.)—"Sunrise" (Fox) (1,500; 50-$1.50). Next to final stanza okay, mats off and nights fair to $8,250.

Criterion (W. C.)—"Jazz Singer" (W. B.) (1,600; 50-$1.50). Did well on fifth week, though afternoons very shy; $8,600.

Biltmore (Erlanger) — "Wings" (Par.) (1,655; 50-$2.20). Making remarkable strides here with third week excellent; night trade almost capacity; $18,000.

Loew's State (W. C.-Loew)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par.) (2,200; 25-99). Can't be called sequel to "Beau Geste" and panned all over; Peabody life saver to b. o.; $21,200.

Metropolitan (Pub.-W. C.)—"Latest from Paris" (M-G) (3,595; 25-75). Led the downtown group by totaling $27,000.

United Artists (U. A.-W. C.)—"The Dove" (U. A.) (2,100; 25-$1.10). Second week dropped considerably; around $13,500.

Million Dollar (Pub.-W. C.)—"The Last Command" (Par.) (2,200; 25-99). Not up to b. o. anticipations; dailies raved with public shy—first week $17,800.

Boulevard (W. C.)—"Man Crazy" (F. N.) (2,164; 25-50). Okay here; should have had downtown showing; around $7,500.

Egyptian (U. A.-W. C.)—"My Best Girl" (U. A.) (1,800; 25-65). Thanks to Mary Pickford house got healthy profit; near $10,000.

Broadway Palace (Orpheum)—"Fortune Hunter" (W. B.) (1,540; 15-40.) Second week here unwarranted; house used all sorts of subterfuges to get them in, but $2,950.

"CIRCUS" VERY BIG IN MONTREAL, $17,500

Montreal, Feb. 6.

"The Circus" and full houses at the two legit theatres with "Broadway" at the Princess especially hitting $18,000, didn't seem to do the other offerings a lot of good, although they were better than the week before. Palace with "The Circus" was heading for $20 000 at the start, but fell off a bit later in the week for no special reason and ended to $17,500, very big.

Loew's put on a very attractive picture and got about $14,500. Imperial made a play as usual with vaude.

The safety league in these parts has just completed its second six-monthly inspection of the 50-odd theatres in the city. It gives them all a clean sheet and adds some kind words as to their willingness to conform to the regulations.

Estimates for Last Week

Capitol (2,700; 60-85) "Love Mart" (F. N.). Nice dressy picture, little different to general run; $13,000.

Palace (2,700; 55-85) "The Circus" (U. A.). Looked like a smash at beginning of week, but fell off some; $17,500.

Loew's (3,200; 45-75) "Quality Street" (M-G-M). With average vaude that swung good results in difficult week; $13,500.

Imperial (1,900; 30-85) "French Dressing" (F. N.). Fitted in well with vaude; $5,000.

Strand (800; 30-40) "City Gone Wild" (Par.); "College Hero" (Col.); "Man Crazy" (F. N.); and "Dog of Regiment" (Warner). All together, $4,000.

19-Year-Old Assistant Made Full Director

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

One of Hollywood's periodic shiftings of casting directors occurred last week when FBO took Jack Votion off the job and promoted Rex Baily, his 19-year-old assistant, to authority.

PHELPS DECKER DEAD

Killed by Gas in Apartment—Wife Denies Suicide

Phelps Decker, 41, film editor for Universal, was found asphyxiated by gas in his apartment at 35 East 30th street, New York, Feb. 5, by his wife, Clarice. Decker and his wife had been visiting friends over the week end. He left to return home to finish some work.

When Mrs. Decker reached home about 3 p. m., and, unable to get in, she summoned an elevator boy and the door was forced. Decker was found slumped in a chair, dead. Mrs. Decker denied that her husband had committed suicide, saying he had not been despondent and appeared to be in the best of spirits when she talked over the phone with him a short time before.

Mrs. Decker said her husband had acted in an advisory capacity for Mary Pickford and did research work for D. W. Griffith. Monday afternoon the remains were taken to Fresh Pond and cremated. Besides his wife, deceased is survived by a sister.

ZANE GREY'S 2-REELERS

Author Took Them in South Seas —Par Releases as Shorts Next Season

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

During a ten-month deep-sea fishing expedition to the South Seas, Zane Grey, author of western and sea stories, shot about 60,000 feet of film of the trip. He has had this material edited and titled by George Sargent into six pictures of two-reels each.

Grey has arranged for distribution of the series through Paramount. The pictures will be released next season.

One of the biggest surprises in Washington is the luxurious SWANEE Ballroom.

That the nation's capital supports a place that would make even Broadway "sit up and take notice" is attributable to the directional ability of MEYER DAVIS and the performance of one of his orchestras.

It's worth a trip to Washington to see.

BOSTON GROSSES

Boston, Feb. 7.

With Ruth Taylor at the Met in person with "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par), the picture made no record for the Publix house. Running six days it did $40,900. "Dancing Feet," stage presentation. Met, in Boston, now opens Friday instead of Saturday.

At Loew's State "The Student Prince" (M-G-M) fell below previous weeks and expectations, grossing $26,900, considerably off the previous weeks.

"Sorrell and Son" at the downtown Loew's Orpheum did strong business at $24,000.

"The Texas Steer" at the Olympia brought out Rogers fans for strong trade.

"The Streets of Shanghai" (Tiffany) and "A Light in the Window" (Rayart) played to good houses at the Modern and Beacon. "Love and Learn" (Par), with vaude, had an average week at the New Boston.

Estimates for Last Week

Met (Publix) (4,000; 40-60) "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par), Paul Oscard's "Dancing Feet" on stage. $40,900.

State (3,500; 35-50) Less than expected with "The Student Prince" (M-G-M), Behren's band on stage. Below previous two weeks. $26,900.

Orpheum (3,500; 35-50) "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) still doing good business in Boston. $24,000.

"Daddy" and "Lovelorn" Kind to Please Topeka

Topeka, Feb. 7.

Spotty week with unexpected falling off Wednesday but week's grosses above average. Best bet was Denny's "That's My Daddy"—rather it was the little La Verne tot's picture. Topeka went crazy over this kid.

"The Silver Cord," brought here as a society event with sponsors 'neverthin,' showed to an almost filled house liberally sprinkled with paper Tuesday night. It was a dress affair, but even some of those who put on their tuxes panned the show because of lack of music and too much talking. "The Constant Wife," with Hackett, Walker, Bunting, Tellegen cast, did two performances to three-quarters capacity Saturday night, with the patrons more satisfied.

Estimates for Last Week

Jayhawk—(1,500; 40; Jayhawk) "Quality Street" didn't draw, but pleased. "That's My Daddy" smashed and packed the place. Week's total, $4,200.

Orpheum—(1,200; 40; National) "West Point," with all discrepancies and hokum, just what regular fans wanted. Good. About $2,200.

Cozy—(400; 25; Lawrence) Miss Fairfax's name played up in the publicly helped pull for "The Lovelron," one of the good guesses of the season. "The 13th Hour" got good play last half. Total, $1,200.

Midwest Seeks Sundays

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 7.

The annual spring fight in Sunday blue-law towns in this section of the state is getting under way. The council of this city at its last session received a petition of 5,592 names, more than half the vote, to submit question of Sunday opening at the spring election April 3, and the question will go on the ballot.

In Effingham last week a special election was held and its Sunday closing laws junked. The citizens voted 1,215 to 606 for Sunday shows after a spirited campaign.

"NOOSE'S" $17,000 IS HIGH IN MILWAUKEE

"Dove" and "Prince" Hold Over, $9,000, and $11,000—"Sabreur" 1 Wk., $9,650

Milwaukee, Feb. 7.

It looked like boom days had returned to Milwaukee last week, instead of the present slight slump in employment. "The picture's the thing," the week said.

Every house on the Rialto, barring the combos and the Strand, had a special with Midwesco's Merrill mopping up handsomely with "Student Prince" sliding into a second week. Neat profit, too, at the Wisconsin, due to Eddie Weisteldt, who put on the stage show.

The Garden, after four weeks of "The Jazz Singer," countered with "The Dove," and coasted in well ahead of the red line. Sticks over for another week.

"Beau Sabreur" did well, but not well enough to hold over.

The Majestic's business continued to stay high, but not because of the picture or the acts, but because the Kiddie Movie made with Jackie "Hoo" Ray, the week before here with local youngsters in the east drew in the proud parents, aunts, relatives and friends. Big matinees.

Estimates for Last Week

Alhambra (U)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par.) (1,800; 30-50). Billed like a circus as "sequel to 'Beau Geste,'" but couldn't touch latter's prestige; after big week-end picture ended proposed two weeks in seven days with $9,650.

Garden (Brin)—"The Dove" (U. A.) (1,200; 25-50). Seemed to please but did not catch on as well as expected; hardly turned $9,000, but held over.

Majestic (Orph.)—"Aflame in Sky" (F.B.O.) (1,600; 10-25-40). Biz can be traced to the home made movie more than the feature or vaude; around $9,300.

Merrill (Midwesco) — "Student Prince" (M-G) (1,200; 25-50). Surprise of the town; held them out consistently and cantered home to better than $11,000; easy hold over.

Miller (Midwesco) — "Tea for Three" (M-G) (1,400; 25-50). Stage band and picture held own against the street; drew house's usual $7,000.

Palace (Orph)—"Wreck of the Hesperus" (Pathe) (2,400; 25-50-75). Eddie Foy drew big over poor film; $17,500.

Strand (Midwesco)—"Love and Learn" (Par.) (1,200; 30-50). Weakest picture on street and showed it; not much over $5,000.

Wisconsin (Midwesco) "The Noose" (F. N.) (2,800; 35-50-60). Dick Barthelmess and return of Dave Schooler, m. c., were plenty to get the break here; slid into $17,000 class.

U Editorial Line Up

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Hugh Hoffman, who has functioned in nearly all positions in the Universal plant for years, is to be established in the chair of editor-in-chief, replacing Hugh Montagne, another U veteran. Hoffman has been general art director lately. This shift of assignment does not affect the situation of Henry Henigson, production boss.

Morris Pivar goes back to his post of film editor, while Lloyd Nossler probably will be assigned to edit special productions. All these new placements were expected to be announced some time this week.

"Lonesome" has gone into production under direction of Paul Fejos. It probably will be the last picture on the lot, finishing around Feb. 20, when the studio quits work for 10 or 12 weeks. During the interval preparation of stories will go on, writers, directors and executives continuing during the idle period.

Georgia Hale in Quickies

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

After stepping in big league company for some time, Georgia Hale, the girl in Von Sternberg's "Salvation Hunters" and leading lady to Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush," is back in the quickies.

She is featured in "Gypsy of the North," which Trem Carr is producing at California Studios. Miss Hale was under contract to Paramount for a period.

Brookhart Duplicate

Washington, Feb. 7.

Brookhart bill to stop block booking has been introduced in the South Carolina legislature, according to word reaching the capital here.

ON 7TH ANNIVERSARY STANLEY GOT $30,000

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.

Downtown picture houses had nothing much to complain about last week. Two weekly change houses got by without doing anything sensational. Stanley had "Sorrell and Son" heading its 7th anniversary program, but didn't play up any presentation features, although there was a pretentious dance offering. Gross of $30,000. "Sorrell" was moved to the Arcadia this week for extended run. Fox had a rather weak program picture in "Sharp Shooters," but relied on a strong surrounding stage program and did about $26,500.

The first week of the Karlton's new policy looked encouraging. This house is now to have pictures for runs and is charging 75c top in the evenings. It had been first intended to have an orchestra, but this was later decided against. First film under the new arrangement was "Love." It should round out at least three weeks here unless it gets bad weather breaks. First week about $11,000 with the new scale, excellent for a house of 1,000 seats.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" was a weak sister at the Stanton, and goes out after this week. Its initial gross was under $12,000, not hot for the Stanton to begin a run. The Arcadia fared just so-so with Jackie Coogan in "Buttons," about $3,750.

This week looks strong again with "The Jazz Singer" in at the Fox for at least a couple of weeks and perhaps more. No presentation acts but regular Vitaphone accompaniment. Stanley has Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" plus Donald Brian with songs. Aldine, Fox-Locust, Stanton and Karlton are holding over.

Estimates for Last Week

Stanley (4,000; 35-50-75)—"Sorrell and Son" (U. A.). Critics raved and fans liked it. House was celebrating its seventh anniversary, and the combination got a gross of just under $30,000; good.

Stanton (1,700; 35-50-75)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (F. N., 1st week). Not half as strong as expected and goes out after this week. Under $12,000.

Aldine (1,500; $2)—"Wings" (Par, 10th week) still very strong, last week's gross over $17,445 again. Good until late spring.

Arcadia (800; 50)—"Buttons" (M-G-M). Jackie Coogan picture not very strong; under $4,000.

Karlton (1,000; 50-75) — "Love" (M-G-M, 1st week). New policy for house started well with this Gilbert-Garbo film. Better than $11,000.

Fox-Locust (1,800; $1.65)—"Sunrise" (Fox, 3d week). Just mild pace for this highly praised picture; about $11,000.

Fox (3,000; 99)—"Sharp Shooters" (Fox). Weak program picture but presentation features held up business strongly; $26,500.

F. F. Watson Can't Use Own Name in Film Business

Frederick F. Watson, until last fall the president, general manager and director of the Frederick F. Watson Film Laboratories, is restrained by court order to use his own name in the picture business, on the ruling of unfair competition. With Watson leaving the Watson Labs., the latter sued Watson as an individual to restrain the use of his own name, and that of a Watson corporation organized in Delaware, in competition with the Frederick F. Watson Film Laboratories, Inc., which was priorly established.

Watson and his new company are now engaged in a public stock-selling campaign. Watson is also charged with using stationery and letter-heads "substantially identical" to that of the Watson Film Labs., and the defendant is charged with having received mail intended for the Watson Film Labs. and retained it for a length of time. Watson allegedly agreed not to use his own name upon severing relations with the plaintiff corporation. There are still financial controversies between the parties.

Justice Aaron J. Levy in Supreme Court concludes "the corporate defendant has rushed in to reap the benefits of plaintiff's reputation and standing and is capitalizing it by the stock-selling campaign; and by virtue of the confusion of names to hamper plaintiff in its present legitimate business. This cannot be permitted, whatever may be the individual defendant's personal grievances."

FILM CRITICS GET BETTER

EQUITY'S COAST BRANCH VOTING FOR NEW ADVISORY BOARD

Equity in N. Y. Agreeable—Stops Movement for New Actors' Ass'n—Members of Old Board Eligible —Trying to Patch Things Up

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A general meeting of Equity members on the coast will be held within the next two weeks. Members of a newly created advisory board for the coast branch of Equity will be elected.

Some weeks ago, the Equity Council in New York dissolved the then existing executive committee of the local Equity branch, after the latter failed to get film producers to negotiate a standard Equity contract for picture players.

After some talk of formation of a new actors' association for pictures without Equity affiliation, the New York Council consented to election of an advisory board for local Equity affairs.

It did not object to the election on this board of former members of the old executive committee.

At the coming meeting, nominations for the new advisory board will be made from the floor of the open meeting, the same procedure followed in elections of the Council in New York.

Bland Johaneson With "Mirror" Under Contract

Bland Johaneson has gone under contract to Hearst's New York "Mirror" for one year with a mutual option, at the largest weekly salary paid to any woman picture critic in New York, if not in the country.

Miss Johaneson, who was with Variety when sent for by the "Mirror," went on the Hearst daily tab for four weeks. Before the period expired she was requested to sign a three-year agreement, but compromised on the shorter term. Miss Johaneson is said to have been engaged by Victor Watson, the managing editor or something of the "Mirror," on the express direction of W. R. Hearst, with Hearst also setting the salary.

Crewe vs. Parsons

Regina Crewe is going direct to Hollywood Feb. 12, instead of ghosting a Hollywood news letter for a time while attached to the "Mirror," as was the intention. Miss Crewe's movie news letter will be International News Service-syndicated. Louella Parsons, who was taken from the New York "American" to the coast, is the Universal Service (Hearst) movie news correspondent on the lot.

Miss Crewe's stuff will run in the New York "Mirror" (tabloid) as against Miss Parson's U service dope on the opposing "American," both members of the same club (papers, not girls).

Miss Crewe was movie critic on the New York "Morning Telegraph." Her husband, Herbert Crulkshank, on the same sheet, will resign to accompany his wife to the coast.

Lloyd's 1st Cheaters

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Harold Lloyd's publicity department announces that the film comedian's first pair of horned rimmed glasses will be one of the feature exhibits at the first International film exhibition to be held at The Hague, Holland, April 14-May 15.

Every film unit in the United States has been invited to take part in the exhibit, which will be staged for the benefit of the Dutch Red Cross at the Groote Koninklijke Bazar.

Franklin Back West

This week is set as marking the return of Harold B. Franklin to his presidential office of West Coast Theatres circuit, at Los Angeles.

He reached New York about six weeks ago, expecting to remain 10 days.

HERSHOLT'S CONTRACT MAY BE BOUGHT BY MGM

U Holds Actor at $1,750 Wkly. —Loans Him Out at $3,750 —2-Year Contract to Go

M-G-M is negotiating with Universal to purchase the contract of Jean Hersholt for the two years more it has to go. Hersholt has been under contract to U for several years and starred in a number of its pictures. On loan-outs to other producers U has been charging $3,750 a week for his services, and never has him idle. Hersholt is getting $1,750 weekly and has shown a good profit for the contract.

Par made U an offer to buy the Hersholt contract after the actor appeared in "Abie's Irish Rose," with U turning down the proposition at that time. During the past couple of weeks M-G-M made a proposition to U to take over the contract with the deal now being framed by the two companies.

Jetta Goudal Turned Loose by DeMille

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Pathe-DeMille has definitely withdrawn the proposition presented to Jetta Goudal last December. The company has lined up its 1928-29 program without any Goudal pictures.

Miss Goudal walked off the lot some months ago although under long term contract to Pathe-De Mille. This automatically breached the contract with De Mille refusing to take her back. However, the producer did offer her a three picture contract calling for a specified salary on each one. The actress turned this down.

When Miss Goudal walked off the lot she was replaced in the remaining pictures of her starring series by Jacqueline Logan. The latter contiues on next season's program.

Billy Rhodes' Local Tour

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Miss Billie Rhodes, once promlnent as a film star and working for many years in Mack Sennett comedies, is touring the country with a technical staff making two-reelers in various towns with locals in the cast under theatre auspices.

Miss Rhodes heads the Jason film company, recently organized by Mllwaukee business men, and is booked as an attraction.

LILLIAN'S SPRAIN AND BITE

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Lillian Leighton sprained her ankle while working in a Max Davidson comedy at the Hal Roach studio, but insisted on limping through the picture. She was given a part in an Our Gang comedy the next day and was bitten by a dog on the other leg.

This necessitated crutches, but she will be able to finish the picture.

"GANG'S" VACATION

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Farina, colored member of the Our Gang comedy unit, contracted what the family physician termed the hives. Thinking this was not serious, the kid returned to work rather than hold up production. It wasn't long until Joe Cobb contracted a similar rash, discovered to be chicken pox.

The Gang will have a vacation.

VARIETY'S THIRD BOX SCORE RATING

Betty Colfax ("Graphic") Leads New York at .681—Rob Reel (Hazel Kennedy) ("American") First at .727 in Chicago, and "Record" Combined, .759 in Los Angeles—Regina Cannon has Caught Most Pictures (140) Among Daily Reviewers Since Film Score Started

THE L. A. SYSTEM

Variety's current box score on the daily picture critics in three cities shows new leaders for each one of the towns. In New York Betty Colfax ("Graphic"), .681, has jumped from fourth to first place; Rob Reel (Hazel Kennedy) ("American"), .727, is a recent inclusion and tops the Chicago string, while Los Angeles "Record" (under a combined average), .759, paves the way for the Coast group.

In New York 52 new pictures have been added since the preceding score of Dec. 7.

New York

There is relatively little change in the ranking of the reviewers here, although Richard Watts, Jr. ("Herald Tribune"), drops to fifth place after having led his contemporaries on the inaugural and second scores. George Gerhard ("Evening World"), a late entry on the last tabulation, who immediately jumped into second place, retains that spot at .676, followed by John S. Cohen, Jr. ("Sun"), who also is stationary on the third rung.

At this point the changes start with Quinn Martin ("World"), creeping up two notches to fourth with a percentage of .634. Martin's advance from 16th to fourth place within three scores is due to his getting away from ambiguity. Watts' drop is attendant upon a percentage slide of 64 points, due to having picked up seven "wrongs" and one "no opinion" since the last score. Regina Cannon ("American") has increased her average 48 points to .628, but slips back one nich, due to Martin's sprint. Donald Thompson ("Telegram") is included, although now off that paper, because he was a prolific reviewer. He stands seventh, at .626.

Mordaunt Hall ("Times") has improved his average 71 points to .577, and Harriett Underhill ("Herald Tribune") has also improved her total to .572, but is now in ninth place instead of seventh, due to the generally improved averages. Irene Thirer ("News") stays three from the bottom, despite a point climb; and Jeffery Homesdale ("World") remains next to last through picking up seven more "wrongs," but bettering his total despite that. Alison Smith ("World") is immediately behind Homesdale and again trails the field at .388, a three-point increase over her previous score.

On the Manhattan end the "no opinions" continue to be plentiful, although several are seemingly fighting against the inclination to write copy and not an opinion. It will be seen that the first seven reviewers are fairly well bunched, this only being true of five in the preceding instance, with Bland Johaneson ("Mirror") and John K. Hutchens ("Post") not currently included, due to being recent acquisitions by their respective papers, with too few reviews at present to furnish a definite line on their percentages.

Since the box score started, last June, the following reviewers have been dropped from their papers or replaced: Dorothy Herzog, Joseph McElliott, Howard Barnes, Willella

YOUNG COLLIER'S ROMANCE

Reported Broken Off with Dorothy McCarthy

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Buster Collier is reported to have broken his engagement with Dorothy McCarthy in New York, with whom he tried to elope several times but failed to marry on account of parental objections.

Buster is again seen around with Constance Talmadge and they may yet marry.

Putnam Backing Pictures

George Palmer Putnam, publisher and explorer, has gone into the picture business. With Maurice Kellerman, photographer on the Putnam expeditions, and Vyvyan Donner, young poster artist and costume designer, Putnam has made several short subjects in New York. Kellerman does the photography. Miss Donner writes the scenarios and designs the sets and costumes, while Putnam takes care of the financiel end.

They have released a couple of subjects through Pathe.

JACKIE COOGAN AT OXFORD?

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Jackie Coogan may grow up with a monocle. There is a possibility he will have his education polished off in Oxford, after making one picture this summer for a British film company.

Jackie and his manager, Arthur Bernstein, sail from New York this month to close the deal for the picture.

Oxford is just an idea at present.

SERIAL UNIT CELEBRATES

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A farewell dinner dance was staged at a beach club by the Pathe serial unit to commemorate Pathe's temporary abandonment of serials. The unit produced eight 10-episode serials during its two years.

All featured Allene Ray with Chester Bennett directing.

Silk Train on Rails And Train as Film

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Fox will make a picture entitled "The Silk Train," from a story by Houston Branch. This picture, it is said, will be exploited by all of the railroads in the country.

The story of the silk train is possibly one of the most interesting in transportation, as this train is one of the fastest run across the country. Running time is 73 hours and 16 minutes from Seattle to New York. It consists wholely of express cars.

The silk train has 20 minutes leeway over any other train which may be on the line and only must give way to one train on any railroad—the mint train, carrying gold specie. However, there has been no such train operated across the country in the last 10 years.

The average silk consignment arriving in Seattle from the Orient amounts to around $4,000,000.

Ocean Hopping Means Nothing to Film Men

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

If Ruth Elder, the ocean hopper, goes into pictures she will have to prove her case as a box office attraction, which she has not done in vaudeville.

A screen test was made Monday by Paramount, and there is a possibility that company will offer the aviatrix a beginner's contract at $100 a week. She has been receiving over $1,000 weekly in vaude.

PATHE STOCK AT 9; BONDS 60; TAPE DISCOUNTS REORGANIZING

Reports of Call on Bankers for Urgent Financing Starts Panicky Selling—Fox Off to 80 on Offering of Additional Stock—Other Issues Quiet

The crash of Pathe on the stock exchange monopolized attention. Class A issue collapsed to 9⅛ yesterday in excited trading while the bonds touched 60 in heavy turnover, indicating the market was making all haste to discount a financial reorganization of the film property if nothing more drastic.

Reports from the coast of urgent pleas to bankers to advance more money, widespread statements that the concern was badly crippled in its operations by the competition of three new newsreel services as well as the invasion of the short subject field by other producers, all conspired to start dumping of Pathe stock and bonds. The situation was the climax of the company's difficulties, following upon the heels of the directors' action a few weeks ago in passing the quarterly dividend on the $4 basis annually.

When the stock touched 9 at 1 o'clock yesterday it stayed there for a long time, plain evidence that even at that level there was no demand for it, even for purposes of covering short contracts put out as far up as 22. There has been shorting of the stock by the Times Square contingent ever since the new year and even at 9 these contracts are still outstanding. Certainly there has been no evidence that covering has been done at any stage of the precipitate decline.

The crash of the bonds beginning Monday in heavy jettisoning of paper started the collapse. On that day $250,000 worth of 7 per cent. bonds went by the board, some of it in lots of from $10,000 to $30,000, with breaks of as much as $2 between sales. Size of the blocks that came out frightened holders and increased the panic. Yesterday the selling was even more urgent.

Other Amusements Quiet

Trouble was individual with Pathe and selling did not spread into the other members of the amusement group. Paramount was practically unchanged between 112 and 113, while Loew moved sluggishly between 59 and 60, going to the low figure during the bear drive that started just after noon.

For the first time since it started on the upturn, Fox receded materially from its top. From 88¼, it had gotten down yesterday to 80 flat, representing selling predicated upon announcement that the company would offer new stock to present holders amounting to 125,000 shares at $75. Flotation is for the purpost of financing the West Coast deal. On the retreat dealings went quiet with daily turnover around 2,500 shares.

Story is that Wall street sponsors for Fox are quite contented to have the stock run into periodical reactions, holding its market position firmly. Continued advance had worked it into a pretty well overbought condition where a general market reverse might have resulted in frightened selling by outside traders, a situation the clique operators didn't want to happen. Orderly reactions of the present scope take care of such contingencies. In the present condition of money rates and future uncertainty marketwise, in-and-outers maneuver swiftly on minor changes and are easily dislodged.

Dabblers Out of Loew

Loew's action in failing to go through its old top was a severe disappointment to followers of the stock and small-lot ticker players around the Square are pretty well out now. The new preferred stock goes into trading Feb. 15. Stock purchase warrants changed hands in small amounts on the Curb and at prices much lower—12½ compared to the high of 16.

Shubert was fairly active and weak, selling Monday at a low on the movement of 61½. The peak of the theatre season has passed and there is no prospect of boxoffice performances such as could be used as bull material until after the summer slump. On the recent inspired rise the issue sold up to nearly 75.

Out of town the feature was the continued weakness of Stanley Co. in Philadelphia. Dealings were of smaller size, but prices ruled between 48 and 49, close to the low.

More Pathe Data

The Pathe bond issue is $6,000,000 in self funding gold 7 per cent. paper. Last August it sold at 100¾. The company's profits for 1926 amounted to about $900,000, and it was estimated that the 1927 figure was probably less. Up to the last quarter of 1927 dividends at the $4 rate were paid on the 200,000 shares of Class A preferred, calling for disbursements of $800,000. The dividend was suspended because it was obvious that at the earning rate interest on the bonds, amounting to $420,000 a year, would be jeopardized. The bonds are due in 1937.

That Marrying Publicity Not Always So Funny

A publicity story sent on from the Coast stating that Kenneth Harlan intended to marry Helen Patterson, in "Sunny" on the coast, as soon as he had obtained his diyorce from Marie Prevost, was eaten up as usual by the usual dailies.

Helen Patterson is married to Arthur Hartley, in "Bye Bye, Bonnie," which closed in Cincinnati last week. When Hartley returned to New York and people began kidding him about Harlan marrying his wife he waxed very wroth and engaged an attorney to investigate, it is said.

Disagree Over Causes In Van Cleve Divorce

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

The George B. VanCleves cannot agree upon the causes to be alleged by Mrs. Rose Davies-VanCleve in her divorce action.

It is said that this agreement, if not arrived at between the principals will result in a contest.

George VanCleve is reported insistent that only desertion be charged. It is a legal cause in this state.

The VanCleves have one child, eight years of age.

Mrs. VanCleve is a sister of Marion Davies.

Ted McNamara Dies

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

One of filmland's two-men comedy teams has been broken up by the death of Ted McNamara, teamed some time ago by Fox with Sammy Cohen.

A cold that developed into pneumonia took away McNamara Feb. 3. He was 36 years old.

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 7.

Death sentence was affirmed by the Criminal Court of Appeals against J. R. Silver of Tarrant county, for robbery with firearms which resulted in the death of Roscoe Wilson, manager of the Majestic theatre at Fort Worth. Wilson was robbed of $4,156 and fatally wounded after he had left the theatre with a sack of money.

CAMERAMEN MAY GET WORK CODE FROM JOINT COAST COMMITTEE

Academy Takes Up Subject—Too Many Bosses and Too Long Stretches of Work Impair Their Efficiency, Says Cameramen in Hollywood

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A code of ethics governing employment of cameramen in studios is being worked out by a committee of cameramen and producer members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The code will govern employment of both contract and free lance cinematographers. It will embody the basic clauses of all contracts drawn by individual producers for cameramen.

Committee is composed of G. Gaudio and Karl Struss, representing the cameramen; J. J. Gain and Fred Beetson for the producers, with Victor Fleming, director, as the neutral.

Cinematographers hope to settle two important points through the adoption of the code. Under its operation each producing company will designate the official to whom the cameraman on a picture is directly responsible for his work. In the past, cameramen have encountered interference while shooting a picture with too many officials and others giving different instructions.

Cameramen also want producers to limit their work to a certain number of successive hours each day. It is contended the cameraman is one of the most important factors in making a picture and has to be continually under the lights while working with no relief from eyestrain. For the protection of producers, they want their maximum working time limited to a certain stretch of hours, as they claim the longer they work the less they are able to properly light the sets to be shot.

They suggest no more than 15 hours at a stretch, with periods of rest designated. This clause is suggested by the cameramen for what they claim is the best interest of the producers.

Phoney Mack Sennett Ordered to Leave Troy,

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 7.

Posing as a representative of the Mack Sennett Picture Company, with authority to sign promising girls to long-term contracts, a man giving the name of Erasmus J. Sigler, 28, of Albany, was ordered out of town by Police Justice James F. Byron.

Complaint was made by a local girl who had answered his ad in a Troy paper for "models, out-of-town dress house; experience unnecessary; long season." A reply, written on the stationery of the Hotel Troy, directed her to meet "Mr. Sennett" in the lobby. There he explained that the "model" ad was used to attract pretty girls, his real business being pictures. "Mr. Sennett" gave the young lady the script of a picture, with instructions to take it home for study.

Several luncheon engagements were made and finally she agreed to play the "part" assigned, the man telling her he would wire the Sennett studio on the coast to forward a five-year contract.

Becoming suspicious after a request for $50, the girl notified the police and detectives succeeded in locating "Sennett." He was arraigned in court on a technical charge of vagrancy. The girl told her story and Judge Byron told him to get out of town pronto.

Larry Semon Says He's Broke Before Referee

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Larry Semon, one of the old-timers of the business, confesses or claims that he is broke and cannot pay a judgment of $293, obtained against him by the Reliable Collection Agency.

Haled before Referee Mulville, the comedian said he had $80,000 worth of debts accumulated when he went in on some picture ventures.

He had borrowed his wife's car to ride to court, Semon said.

MASQUERS' CLUBHOUSE

Lambs' Prototype on West Coast Building

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Ground has been broken for the new Masquers' clubhouse to be built on Sycamore street. Quarters include a 500-seat dining room, convertable into an auditorium.

The Masquers is practically the Lambs Club of the coast picture colony. Over one-third of its members are also on the Lambs' roster.

Lya de Putti Called Back

Lya de Putti will return to the West Coast Feb. 12 for flicker work. Miss de Putti had Edgar Allan Woolf payrolled at $100 a week for a time to coach and write a vaude playlet for her. When language handicaps asserted themselves the German actress decided on a sight act, brushing up on her dancing and laying in a fancy wardrobe.

Hollywood called meantime, and she is foregoing stage work for the rest of the season at least.

MINDZENTHY DOESN'T DO

Tibor Mindzenthy, double for Rudolph Valentino, who was signed by First National for a year's trial, may not be re-signed, it is reported. He was tried out opposite Billie Dove, but did not register on the screen despite all camera efforts.

Another leading man was substituted.

FREE PICTURES AMUSE AND HELP TO CURE THE INSANE

N. Y. Film Board Supplying 50 Institutions With Picture Programs—Nothing Charged for Service and No Admission Allowed with Free Films

What started as a small project has developed into a very active business proposition, the business being mainly the work applied in booking free shows for charitable institutions regarded as worthy. Films are supplied through a special department created by the New York Film Board of Trade, with Peter Louis in charge of the booking.

The board has a committee presided over by Louis Nizer, attorney and secretary of the board. It supplies both features and short subjects to hospitals, asylums, organizations, churches, schools, prisons, etc., without expense or cost to the places taken care of.

At the present time the Free Show Committee has 50 places furnished with free films.

In the disposition of films the Film Board sends out a questionnaire which must be filled out before the picture request is confirmed.

The insane asylums have become among the regular places on the list, with the heads of those institutions declaring that the pictures have a cheering and curing effect upon the inmates.

Generally the shows are arranged for nights and Sundays.

The Free Show Committee in its work has accomplished a lot of good, although no publicity or propaganda of any kind has gone out regarding it.

W. P. Gray Left $561,000 Report by Appraisers

Auburn, Me., Feb. 7.

The report of the appraisers of the estate of the late William P. Gray of Lewiston, Me., theatre man, filed by George W. Lane, Jr., of Lewiston, one of the executors and the special administrator of the estate, shows a total value of $561,027, of which $45,000 is in real estate; $44,038, rights and credits, and $471,988, principally theatre stocks and a few municipal and public utilities bonds.

When it became known that Mr. Gray's daughter intended to contest the will, Harry Stetson and George L. Couture of Lewiston and William J. Cranshaw of Auburn, financial men, were appointed to appraise the estate. The appraisers' report has been filed at the Androscoggin Registry of Probate.

U Off Specials, Program Films Only

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Lou Metzger, general sales manager for Universal, is on the coast conferring with studio executives on policy of production for the balance of their 28-29 program.

It is understood U will abandon all super-specials contemplated at the beginning of the season and make program features at a cost that will enable their string of theatres to buy.

If this is decided upon, the only special that will be made on this program, will be "The Show Boat."

PRODUCERS IN U. A. STUDIO

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

United Artists completed plans and will begin work soon on an additional floor to be added to their studio administration building.

This will furnish sufficient office room for the three producers, Caddo, Samuel Goldwyn and Edwin Carewe. In the past they made their U. A. productions outside the United Artists studios.

FAIRBANKS SHELVES SEQUEL

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Douglas Fairbanks will not make "Twenty Years After," the sequel to "Three Musketeers." He is now looking for an idea on which to base his next picture.

"Twenty Years After" was shelved after the story was found to be too tragic for a Fairbanks picture.

A.M.P.A.'S MEMBERSHIP DRIVE GETTING 'EM

40 New Members Just Admitted to Publicity and Advertising Men's Club

All indications point to a banner year for the AMPA in membership. The membership committee has just confirmed 40 new names.

Recently the AMPA let down the barrier concerning trade paper men. They are now eligible and, incidentally, hurrying to become affiliated.

With the first month of the new year the membership committee, headed by W. A. V. Mack and including Joseph Fine, Julian Solomon, George Harvey and James Zabin, has accomplished wonders, aided and abetted by the new president, Bruce Gallup.

In addition to the 40 just added, another 15 are in on applications.

The committee expects to have over 100 new ones long before the end of the year.

'Power,' With Co-operation

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

"Power," an original by L. G. Rigby, has started production at Tiffany-Stahl studios with Reginald Barker directing. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Jobyna Ralston, Wade Boteler, Harvey Clarke and Ben Hendrick, Jr., are in the cast.

The story is centred around the Pennsylvania coal mines. It will have the co-operation of the Bureau of Mines.

The company may go east to film the mining operations.

R. Griffith in Support

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Raymond Griffith, former Paramount star who left it a year ago, is returning to the lot to play a supporting role to another star. It is understood that he is signed for one film only.

Griffith has been idle since quitting Lasky early in 1927.

"WOMAN DISPUTED" DELAY

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A delay of six months and a probable substitution in the interim of another story is the result of Norma Talmadge's dissatisfaction with "A Woman Disputed." It was to have gone into production this week with Henry King directing.

"A Woman Disputed" will be revamped and held for a future date.

Joan Crawford's Lead

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Jack Conway's next for M-G-M will be a Peter B. Kyne story. Waldemar Young is now doing the scenario.

Joan Crawford will play the lead.

Gotham's "Chorus Kid"

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Gotham will produce "The Chorus Kid" as its second production this year.

Earl Kenton will direct.

Press Box Guests Very Annoying

Another reason the Paramount might be harboring an idea of dispensing with a press box may be the conduct of the guests who occupy it.

Last Saturday two of the news sisters came in with their boy friends. The two couples took adjoining seats. After the boys were introduced the lassies launched a conversation which didn't let up until the entire program was over.

All the neighbors in the seats which weren't labelled "For the Press" writhed in annoyance. But it was no use. The duckies had so much to tell each other. One might almost assume they hadn't met since the last press agent tea party.

One of the flaps also wore a flock of jingly bracelets, adding to the comfort of the customers.

At 10 o'clock, after the press lines were down, a man among the mere mob had to turn and ask the literary ladies to pipe down.

Snorts of scorn repaid him. That poor boob didn't know who he was talking to!

Gilbert's Mississippi River Film and Others

M-G-M stars' stories in the immediate future are William Haines in a newspaper story by Van Emery, directed by Sam Wood. George K. Arthur and Karl Dane in "Detectives," directed by Chester Franklyn.

Joan Crawford and James Murray in "The Tides of Empire," directed by Jack Conway.

Marion Davies in "Polly Preferred," directed by King Vidor.

Lon Chaney in "Chinatown," directed by William Nigh.

Buster Keaton in his first starring picture, written by Byron Morgan and directed by Ed Sedgwick.

U'S WRITERS WORKING

Will Keep Going During Studio's Shutdown

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

While Universal studio will be temporarily closed down after Feb. 20 the scenario department, headed by E. J. Montagne, will be unusually active.

Joseph Franklin Poland and Jack Hawks, supervisors in this department, have instructions to keep all of their writers busy. So far Stuart Anthony has been assigned to the adaptation for the screen of Rex Beach's "Mating Call." Ted Sloman will direct.

Isadore Bernstein is making a screen adaptation of an original story, "The Stepmother." He wrote it as a U special.

Beatrice Van is making the adaptation of Rupert Hughes' story, "The Girl on the Barge."

Ernest Torrence Away

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Ernest Torrence will take a six months' vacation after he has completed work in "Chinabound" at M-G-M studios.

He is going to sail from New York April 1 on the "Ile de France" for Paris. While abroad he will probably work in pictures made in London.

T-S Takes Johnson For 4

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Emory Johnson, signed by Tiffany-Stahl to direct four pictures with stories written by Emilie Johnson.

Johnson produced for F. B. O. for several years and recently directed two for U.

Florence Strauss' Trip

Florence Strauss, chief reader for First National, left yesterday (Tuesday) on her semi-annual trip to the coast, to confer on forthcoming pictures.

Connolly Again Abroad

This Saturday (11th) Jack Connolly will start another six-week tour of Europe, for Movietone subjects.

He leaves on the "Leviathan."

TAKING THE NEIGHBORHOODS' SAPPY MOVIE-STRUCK MUGGS

Couple of the Boys Teaching Community Romeos and Juliets How to Get Film Test—Then Air—And Move on to Another Easy Locale

The world's quickest quickies are being made in New York by a couple of slickers, who are taking the neighbors. The stunt starts with an ad announcing that they are making a picture and will award a contract and lead role to the most promising amateur applicant.

The partners rent separate offices and the money begins to flow. Fat mamas and baby prodigies. The community Valentinos. The Garbos, Shearers and Pickfords. They all troup to the first of the offices.

The promoter looks each one over and gives his spiel. "You're the most promising one I've interviewed. Now let's see your screen test."

Never have heard of a screen test. The taker explains.

They're shunted to the second office, where partner gets the first fifty for the screen test. When enough have lined up, all are called out for the test.

Getting the Works

The partners rent a studio and hire a camera man and a phoney director, who gives them the works in "Action," "Camera," "Cut" stuff, with a megaphone and a cap on backwards. They are hustled through the test and the cameraman never stops grinding.

Prettiest girl is picked with the others aired. The boys actually make a picture, as advertised. It's a melodrama, ground out in a week. Costs about $5,000. The boys had taken in $15,000.

A tie-up with one of the neighborhood houses is made and the finished quickie is shown. Then all the testers come in again.

After the week's showing and the clean-up, the quickie is shelved.

The boys then look around for a new movie-struck neighborhood.

CAMERAING CURRENCY WORRIES FILM MEN

Restrictive Gov't Regulation Interfering With Picture Making

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Film producers are launching a campaign to remove the present restrictions of the Treasury Department which forbid photographing of U. S. currency in pictures. The present restrictions applying to films comes under a federal law forbidding photographing money. The law was passed to check counterfeiting of U. S. currency. Film producers and others connected with making pictures have stumbled into the restrictive ruling on many occasions, with resultant elimination of necessary scenes in pictures.

It is claimed that photographing money on moving picture film does not come within the meaning of the law, as the negative would have to be enlarged for counterfeiting purposes, with this procedure destroying all detail necessary for reproduction work.

The board of directors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences adopted and forwarded a resolution addressed to President Coolidge, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and several U. S. senators and congressmen, asking for modification of the present regulations regarding motion pictures.

Ozone for T.-S. Writers

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Tiffany-Stahl is concentrating its scenario department in four persons, Jack Natteford, Viola Brothers Shore, Harry Braxton and Ben Cohn.

This means ozone for about 20 other writers functioning for the company.

U's Two Endings

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Universal has "The Man Who Laughs" edited down to footage where they can decide what kind of an ending to shoot for. To assure meeting all exhibiting demands U will make a happy and tragic ending.

Picture is due on Broadway, New York, early in March.

GERMAN DIRECTORS WANT TO PROTECT PICTURES

Berlin, Feb. 7.

Association of German Picture Directors has resolved to take a stand to protect their rights. At their last meeting 50 known directors were present.

Of late German film manufacturers have in several cases so changed the films of directors by recutting them as to entirely confuse their meaning.

Measures in the way of a standard contract are planned to make such distortion impossible.

FINEMAN'S 4

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

B. P. Fineman is unit producer on four pictures for Paramount, slated for production during March and April.

He is supervising the next Florence Vidor picture, Harry D'Arrast directing; Esther Ralston's next, Gregory La Cava directing; the first Gary Cooper-Fay Wray special, Rowland V. Lee directing, and "Glorifying the American Girl," Dorothy Arzner directing.

ZUKOR'S "FIND" WITH NEGRI

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Paramount has placed Paul Lukas, Hungarian actor, under term optional contract. His first assignment will be "Three Sinners," with Pola Negri.

Lukas came here four months ago after Adolph Zukor spotted him on a stage in Budapest.

1927 Biggest Yet for All Film Exports Abroad

Washington, Feb. 7.

Final figures for 1927 on exports of motion picture films by the Department of Commerce disclose that by combining raw negatives and positives the greatest footage since 1919 left the United States for foreign countries.

As indicated by the 11 months' count recently given in Variety, positives, though ahead of 1926, dropped behind 1925 by many thousands of feet.

Combined total for last year reached 231,995,018 feet. Total on positives was 222,546,067 feet, over 6,000,000 feet above last year.

Latin-America again was our leading market in the point of quantity having received over 82,000,000 feet of American motion pictures. Europe was again second with above 69,000,000 feet, while the Far East, where it was urged a picture trade commissioner be assigned, ran third with about 58,000,000 feet, an increase of over 3,000,000 feet above 1926.

Table, as recently published in Variety, as to the relative importance of the various individual countries, remained unchanged when the final month's footage was added by the picture section of the department.

Using Seasoned Actors

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

C. B. De Mille has selected a coterie of experienced bit and part actors to play atmosphere roles in "The Godless Girl."

Included are Jimmy Aldine, Hedwig Reicher, Viola Louie, Natalie Galitzen, Linda Landi, Margaretta Tuttle, Amelia Eller, Mary Mayberry, Nora Kildare and Betty Boyd.

CAMERA BOYS' DINNER

The first social affair of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industry (cameramen) will be held Feb. [illegible]. Plans for a dinner-dance were abandoned at the last moment in favor of a banquet which is to be held Feb. 9 at the Army and Navy Club, New York. N. T. G. (Nils Granlund) will be master of ceremonies.

BRITISH FILM FIELD

What the Late Jimmy White Said—Who Saved British Production?—Asking for Ten Million Dollars—Some New Promotions—Money for Theatres—Truth About Standard Film Company and Theatre Deals—Independents Doomed?—Will C. E. A. Stay?—Bits and Pieces

By FRANK TILLEY

London, Jan. 20.

Up to six months ago the city had an inhibition against film finance. More, it had a prohibition. You could get money for banana oil or wooden nutmegs more easily than for motion pictures.

Jimmie White once said at a lunch, when a film man had speeched grievously as to finance's lack of support for British films: "When you fillum people put your own house in order, then we'll start thinking about finding you money, and not before."

Or a South Sea Bubble?

In the immediate future the public will be asked to find something like $13,000,000 for film enterprises, and, if some of the projected theatre deals go through, for a few additional millions.

Some of the projects already outlined in Variety, at various times as they have originated, are:

Westminster Pictures Co., combination of the W. P. Film Co. and Neo-Art, Ltd., promoted by J. B. Williams, partner in the catering firm of Pritchards, Ltd. This flotation will ask for $1,250,000.

Julius Hagen, who formerly managed W. P. Films but disagreed with Williams and broke away Jan. 1, is promoting the Anglo-European Film Corp., with himself as general manager and Henry Edwards, picture actor, as director. This enterprise is supported, it is understood, by W. Blake, movie theatre owner and last year's president of the Exhibitors' Association; has an arrangement for part negative cost and release in Europe with a German company, and will also ask for $1,250,000.

British Controlled Films, marketing idea which has suffered a number of vicissitudes. Originally evolved by W. Rassam and G. Malvern, who came here from Australia backed by Senator Guthrie, this company at one time had on its board Sir Henry Cowan, husband of the Lady Cowan who did the agitating in Canada not so long ago. Sir Robert Donald is the chairman, though more than once he has been on the point of retiring, and Sir Henry Cowan has already severed himself from it. The central idea is to buy British films for distribution by other concerns in the colonies and the Continent, as well as foreign films for sale to distributors here. This concern has buying and selling tie-ups with several colonial and continental concerns, and will appeal for $1,500,000.

After this we have British Screen Classics, in existence for some two years. A. J. Gale, prominent exhibitor, and T. Whitcomb, who financed the now defunct Phillips Film Co. and at one time had some $5,000.000 in the Bean Motor Co. and lost it, run this concern, which now operates a news reel called Empire Screen News and releases through Universal's British branch. It looks as if this company is intended as the quota unit for Universal here. Asking for around $750,000.

Louis Blattner is more ambitious. He has options on some 400 acres of land at Elstree and contemplates three studios and a hotel. He has Wilfred Ashley, Sir William Veno and the Marquess of Queensbury associated with him; has appointed Mrs. Wilfred Ashley "censor of etiquette for productions," and is floating a $2,000,000 company to build, produce and generally exploit.

Another big asker is the Herbert Wilcox bunch. They (includes brother Charles and Nelson Keys) are promoting on 14 acres of land at Harrow, a suburb of London; have stories by Sir Hall Caine, J. J. Bell, H. M. Paul and others tied up, and are going into distribution as well as production. Their capital is $2,500,000, of which they are inviting the public to provide $1,500,000.

New Era Film Co., headed by Gordon Craig, is also preparing a public issue of around $1,500,000. This concern has a well-established distribution business and has handled to big figures such films as "Mons," "Armageddon" and "Ypres." It is also producing, and has a contract to release the Stoll Pictures Productions films.

Granger Coming Back

An old-time distributor, whose company blew up several years ago and went into liquidation, is coming back, in the person of A. G. Granger. Originally a theatre owner at Stoke-on-Trent, Granger went into distribution a dozen years ago, and for a time did well. Then he took a flier into production in conjunction with a Dutch company, making films in Holland, dropped badly on it, then t[illegible] another in conjunction with Vitafilms of Austria, which put the final touch on his business. Granger, who is a good scout and on the level, though old fashioned and somewhat slow, is applying to John J. Public for $1,000,000.

Theatre Money Wanted

Wild as war scares have been the theatre-buying rumors these past few weeks. Sir Walter Gibbons has been credited with having $25,000,000 available for this purpose, and is reckoned to have bought the Moss Empires, the remainder of the Gulliver Circuit, which includes the Palladium, Holborn Empire, the Penge Empire and two or three provincial houses.

His latest deal is the Astoria, in existence only a year, and mainly owned by Lyons & Underwood. Gibbons bought this for just under $1,500,000, and now (apart from any other deals that are on and may go through) controls two of the biggest West End pre-release houses—Capitol and Astoria.

So far there is no sign of Gibbons or the group for whom he is operating going to the public for cash, but Isidore Schlesinger is, on account of the theatres bought some weeks ago by him. Schlesinger is understood to have paid some $2,325,000 for the nine theatres he bought from the Claverings, and is floating them for a capital of $1,500,000. It looks as if he had developed an unexpected modesty.

Yet another is a company being formed by Victor Sheridan, one time owner of Associated Cinemas, Ltd.; G. B. Samuelson and Sidney Coronel, for a time connected with the sales department of the W. & F. Co. This concern is to take over Victoria Films, Ltd. (recent incorporation of Samuelson's), and has a line-up of some seven productions, including "The Tower of London" and "It's Never Too Late to Mend." They are to ask the public for $600,000, in 200,000 10 per cent preferred ordinary $2 stock and 400,000 deferred 20-cent stock.

Optimism or Floptimism?

Some curious figures of costs and estimated profits are getting into the prospectuses; figures which certainly have been done on some pictures, but are not fair estimates of what will likely be done on all films. One coming concern claims it will gross $200,000 each on films costing $100,000, which might be done once in a while, but is pretty steep as a basis of continuous business. Especially with no foreign outlets assured.

It is easy to put into a prospectus top figures to be gotten from the foreign and the colonial markets. It is something much otherwise to get them. But the boys making the flotations, though they've had experience aplenty of the toughness of making such sales, are not telling the public that angle!

But, by the time this appears in print or thereabouts, the British public will have put up between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 for this British film industry, umpteen times as much as there has ever been in cash in the business This Side before.

Opportunity!

Despite the difficulty of the foreign markets, especially the American, the British producer has now such an opportunity as in his wildest dreams a couple of years ago he never anticipated.

So far as a fixed and growing number of productions go, they will have to be made to fulfill the quota. Beyond this, what are the chances of the building up of a permanent and paying producing industry here? All it is possible to say is, if it is not done now it never will nor can be done, and so large a proportion of the schemes is just promotion, just money-snatching up the opportunities while the snatching is good, it is difficult to see the future in a very rosy light. It may, probably will, sort itself out in a couple of years or less.

The Theatre Combine

P. C. T. And that's that!

Eliminating the other possibilities last week I told how, if this $25,000,000 movie house combine were being worked by the Beaverbrook interests, coming as a further sequel to W. H. Evans' threat to the Exhibitors' Booking Circuit, Provincial Cinematograph Theatres would be in an almost impregnable position.

For some time Sir Walter Gibbons, owning the Capitol, has been dealing for theatres of all kinds. Sometimes openly, sometimes through attorneys who would not divulge who were their principals.

Finally, the remainder of the L. T. V. halls passed into his hands, then the Astoria, the Shapiro circuit in the Midlands. The Haight circuit of eleven houses in Derby and Liverpool, and also the Metropolitan Electric theatres and several other small circuits of good and nicely placed houses, to the total of between 130 and 150.

It has all along been obvious Gibbons was not operating on his own account.

Closer than a clam, he went so far as to admit he was operating for a "powerful group". How powerful now comes clear, the "group" being the Standard Film Company, which has been mentioned before in this department as having control of Provincial Cinematograph theatres.

The real operator is F. A. Szarvasy, whose name has not previously been connected openly with the picture business, though he is now credited with having been the real promoter of the Standard Film Company in 1919. He is vice-chairman of the Dunlop Rubber Company and chairman of the British and Colonial Trust, which is reputed to hold $500,000 of stock, through nominees, in the Standard Film Company.

This company has an authorized capital of $5,000,000, of which $2,204,680 has been issued, all in $4 stock. Lord Beaverbrook directly holds 39,834 shares, the recently-dead Lady Beaverbrook held 23,146, the Equitable Trust of London holds 100,011, and the Aitken (English) Company, Ltd., 9,719. (Beaverbrook's name prior to his peerage was, of course, Aitken.)

Stock is held in Canada by W. J. Crossen, Ontario, 137; Sir W. E. Stavert, Montreal, 4,812; the Montreal Trust Company, 3,437; Holt, Ltd., Montreal, 7,342; the Royal Trust Company, Montreal, 1,375; V. M. Drury, Montreal, 943, and Marjorie Meredith Todd, Montreal, 2,749.

In May of last year a special resolution was passed at an extraordinary general meeting wiping out certain of the articles of association, which had hitherto prevented the sale or transfer of stock until it had been offered to the board to price and put to the stockholders generally to buy in, when, if offers were made, the stock thus up for sale had to be allotted to members pro rata to their applications. Now, presumably, any holder can sell or transfer or buy without reference to anyone.

The Top Dog

Provincial Cinematograph theatres, through this Standard Film Company and its affiliations, is practically supreme in this market, both in theatres and in its virtual control of product. Provincial Cinematograph theatres, as such, controls about 110 houses. The purchases just made give Standard some 140 more, and the two combines—for their interests and controllers are inseparable—thus have a circuit of about 260 theatres, including the Capitol, New Gallery, Astoria, Palladium and the Holborn Empire, all in the West End of London, while, through the merger with Loew-Metro Goldwyn-United Artists theatres, the Tivoli comes also into the group.

Thus they have practical control of the pre-release or key situation in London. For of key houses in the West End there only remains the Plaza and the Carlton, both Famous Players' houses (the latter reverting to Famous in April next) and the Marble Arch (Gaumont-British Company).

When the new Empire in Leicester Square is completed it will give them still another, and I shall not be surprised to see them also get the Regal, which A. E. Abrahams is building at Marble Arch, though the Gaumont-British crowd are having a hard shot at this.

As to product, what with the tie-up between First National and Pathe (which the same folk own), and between the Standard company and Loew-Metro Goldwyn-United Artists, they haven't much to fear as to product. And they will be in a pretty powerful position as to affording other distributors (American as well as British) an "outlet" in a good many first-run quarters.

Taken by and large, apart from its other aspects, the whole business looks as if it might be a fight between the banking interests, Szarvasy and the Ostrers (who promoted the Gaumont-British Company) to get control of this market. Szarvasy has certainly worked much more quietly, and has pulled by far the biggest end at present. But the developments are not yet all through by a long way!

Vaude End

Gibbons says these deals are influenced first by known attempts of American corporations to get a big circuit here, and secondly by the belief vaudeville is stone dead.

First has good grounds. Lots of attempts have been made to sell the Gulliver Circuit to Famous and others. Someone just lately took the next boat home to try swinging a deal, said to be with Zukor.

But on the other end Gibbons is either out of his reckoning or he is propagating. It is believed on very good grounds there will be another deal, giving the Syndicate Halls to the Moss interests, and the whole lot will then go back to vaude.

Gibbons is probably calculating without this, and figuring there will now be no vaude theatres which matter except the Stoll Circuit, and also with that it will not be possible to continue in vaudeville, there not being a big enough field to furnish work for sufficient artistes to keep the business alive.

After the Moss-Syndicate deal he will doubtless change his opinion. Now he says flat, "Variety is dead." If, later on, what's still left of vaude get together, Gibbons might get another thought coming.

Football and Box Office

While there have been a lot of kicks about the effect of dog racing on picture house box offices, no one so far has figured how much the Saturday afternoon football games take away from other forms of amusement. Records last week show an attendance of 766,240 at 32 first-class games, with around $290,000 taken in. Casual assumption is it does not make any difference to the show business, but obviously working class folk, who form the bulk of both football crowds and picture house patrons, have only a fixed amount to spend on amusement. And if it goes at the football gate it doesn't go at the box office.

C. M. Woolf, head of the W. & F. Company (one of the Gaumont-British concerns), has been elected chairman of the Renters (Distributors) Society for 1928-29. Like Zukor, Woolf originally was in the fur trade.

Emmett J. Flynn, who is suing C. R. Seelye in the British courts for damages for detention of property, failed in an application made through his attorneys here for an injunction to restrain Seelye from disposing of any of the property pending the hearing of the action. The judge refused to make an order on this count against Seelye, who agreed as an act of grace to return to Flynn objects of "sentimental value," including a family Bible and a photograph.

A. E. Bundy, head of British Instructional, left Wednesday on the Aquitania to present "The Battles of Coronel and Falkland Islands" at the Liberty theatre for a season. This film has been sold to every territory in the world with the sole exception of the United States.

F. E. Enders, of British F.B.O. (allied with Columbia of America), was also a passenger on the Aquitania.

British International say it is going to make a film called "Punch and Judy." Herbert Wilcox says he is going to make one with that title, too. Why not split 50-50; have B. I. make Punch and Wilcox Judy?

Alice Terry having announced she has cancelled her contract to play for Godal, Victor Saville has gone to Nice to try and sign her for his first production.

J. C. Graham of Famous, just back from the Continent, and Earl St. John, general manager of the Plaza, were presented to the Prince of Wales Monday when he visited the theatre to see "The Black Journey" at a gala performance in aid of the Lifeboat Fund.

Some 120 British films are made, making and scheduled for this year—just about twice as many as the first year's distributors' quota calls for. Most of the American distributors are smiling at the plenitude of choice.

Newcomers

Anny Ondra, Czecho-Solvakian juvenile, has been imported to play one of the leads in "God's Clay," Graham Cutts directing for First National-Pathe at Elstree.

Penrhyn Stanlaws has signed—at least by cable—with an agent here who is endeavoring to place him to direct some British films.

"A Window in Piccadilly," directed by Sidney Morgan, with De Groot in the cast, was pre-viewed last week-end. "Of the dead speak no evil."

Foreign Hound Leads

"Flash," born and bred in Germany and brought to America by his trainer, William E. Steurer, is now the ace dog on the M-G-M lot.

"Bonaparte," a simple American hound, has been shoved aside for the fancy foreign talent. "Bonaparte" wasn't the type, they say.

"Flash" will be co-starred in a forthcoming M-G-M picture with Ralph Forbes and Marceline Day.

JESSE J. GOLDBERG TELLS THE INSIDE

Writers' Guild's Organs' Story Stirs Up Indie Picture Producer—Caused Trouble

New York, Feb. 3.

Editor Variety:

I am referring to an article in Variety, Feb. 1, headed "Goldberg Panned by Screen Writers' Guild."

I feel Variety has, perhaps unwittingly, done me an injustice, because of the publication of that article.

It is a scandalous and clever misstatement, reprinted from the "Bulletin," house organ of the Screen Writers' Guild. Since I know you have no desire to falsely state anyone's position and because of the exceedingly wide circulation of Variety, I ask that you publish this communication with the same prominence that you published the article referred to.

The facts, with respect to Ruth Todd, are as follows: A story was handed to Miss Todd under the title of "Comrades," and written by the undersigned. She was engaged to write the adaptation and receive a specific sum. It was paid her and an additional sum or bonus if the production cost was less than a certain amount. There was no understanding other than that. It is untrue, as far as the undersigned is concerned, that Miss Todd understood "that the picture would certainly be made under the bonus dead line."

Upon completion of the picture, Miss Todd was afforded the privilege of examining the books, records and vouchers of the production cost, in order to convince her that the picture cost many thousands above the amount specified in her contract.

With respect to Arthur Gregor, he was engaged to write an original story and continuity for the advertised title of "Polly of the Movies." Mr. Gregor did not write four stories. He wrote two, and submitted them, one of which he acknowledged in writing was "rotten." The other story, after he had submitted the same to me, he sold to another producer, and although I paid him on account the sum of $250, I have neither the story nor the money. When I repeatedly called on Mr. Gregor to fulfill his contract, he stated that since he was then employed by another concern, he could not give the matter his attention, and that the "rotten" story, as he said, he submitted I could either leave or take, as I pleased, and he would retain the $250.

I produced "Polly of the Movies" from an original story and continuity written by Arthur Hoerl, which had absolutely no likeness to any idea or story submitted by Mr. Gregor.

Loaned Writer Money

It is untrue that any check I issued to Gregor for the story or under my contract with him was dishonored, and this statement is very unjust. I did give a check to Mr. Gregor before I had a business relationship with him, as a loan, because he claimed he was "starving, out of work and about to be evicted." I stopped payment on this check when I found Gregor was working for another concern, but I subsequently let him have the money when he convinced me of his need for it.

With respect to Jean Plannette and George Dromgold, I paid them $500 under a contract whereby they were to deliver to me a story and continuity. They delivered me a story and continuity which I did not accept, but, quite to the contrary, wrote them of certain changes I desired made. I advanced this $500 in various amounts upon the pleas of Dromgold and Plannette that they were "without funds."

Dromgold subsequently secured a position with another concern. Plannette is kept busy on other engagements, and they refuse to comply with their contract to deliver a story and continuity acceptable to me.

I have been producing pictures for 15 years, and have never had a disagreement with any scenario writer until I met up with these four individuals who, strange to relate, are members of the Screen Writers' Guild. I am curious to know whether that organization is in existence in order to blaspheme and damn producers who fail to be quiet when one of their members receives monies under contracts which they refuse to live up to.

WILL U. S. PUT DOWN WHIP AND 'PLAY BALL' ON BRITISH QUOTA?

Is English Idea on 7½% Bill Effective April 1?—American Distributors Want to Handle Home Films on Both Sides—No Advance or Guarantee

By Frank Tilley

London, Jan. 20.

This market absorbs 12 feature films a week, speaking roughly. Some of them need speaking roughly about. Call it 800 a year, which is about the average. And around 700 of them are American, of which the larger proportion are distributed direct—that is, by corporations having their own branches here.

The distributors' quota comes into force April 1, from which date everyone booking pictures in this market will have to handle an amount of British product equal to 7½ percent of their total output for the year from that date.

As yet few arrangements have been made. First National, by its jointure with Pathe and its own British production schedule under the management of Harry Haun, has taken care of its quota obligations. Paramount has announced three British films, including the Lauder subject, "Huntingtower." Universal may be served through British Screen Classics, though no production schedule is yet notified, and United Artists appears likely to play with Blattner, but he has not yet turned a foot of film. U. A. may also handle some of the Nettleford productions.

Which leaves Fox, Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn and P. D. C. to be catered for. What is there available?

Gainsborough Pictures has 10 films on schedule, but these are all for release through W. & F. Film Co.; Gaumont has 14, which it will handle itself; Ideal, New Era, Westminster Films, W. P. Films, British Lion, Whitehall Films and British Filmcraft all have their own release, and none scheduled through American companies either.

There is left, of the so far scheduled possible production activities, Archibald Nettleford productions (6), Welsh Pearson (3) and Seven Seas Productions (2). And the Welsh Pearson stuff may go to Paramount, though that number won't get them out on their quota.

Many Angles

It is a curious situation and fraught with interesting angles. The position is the American distributors must have their quota pictures; equally some of the British producers cannot get by on their cost schedules without American distribution.

And the attitude of some of the American distributors is this: We will not give you distribution in America, supposing the film is big enough to go in, unless we have the releasing of it in England. And we will not give you any advance or guarantee even then. You carry the whole of the negative cost, we do so much of the okaying and possibly sell you a star, a story and a director. Then if we like the film or want it, we will distribute it on a 60-40 split. But no guarantee. And no advance.

In some cases the idea seems to be there'll exist so much product in excess of quota requirements these terms will eventually be accepted. But the exhibitor is under no obligation to book his own quota from the same sources as his foreign product, and there appears every likelihood of some of the distributors getting in a jam if this attitude is persisted in.

Most new British producing companies are making their own arrangements for home release because they realize the exhibitor can take his quota from them without their handling any foreign product necessarily. And they also grasp the idea that if and when some of the American houses are short on their quota they will have to take not only what they can get, but will have to submit to releasing at least some of the British product in America, with advances and guarantees, in order to get anything.

Either that or subsidize further British production for the moment. But that, with their obligations starting in April this year at 7½ per cent. of their output, gives them very little time to get set.

A Specific Case

It appears some of the American concerns are trying either to walk round the Film Bill or to kill its effect at the outset by a system of hold-up on this release question. One case is that in which United Artists was asked for a story, made a long time back by one of its present stars, which a British company now has the idea of making again. U. A. said the story rights would cost $40,000. Too much, unless there was a release in America. Would they give a release, subject to some mutual conclusions on cast and so on, if the story was bought? Yes, if they had the world rights they might. But not for America only. Why should they release a film in America only of a subject one of their own stars had made a picture years ago? Then on what terms as to advance would they consider a world release? Advance nothing. They would give a straight 60-40. They didn't give Chaplin or Fairbanks or anyone else any advances, so why should they for a British picture? And that's how it goes.

Good for the Banks

They are entitled to work that way if they want. But the parallel of what they don't do for Chaplin and the rest hardly fits. Because these stars own United Artists anyway, and put their pictures through it as their own releasing organization. Which doesn't apply to a British producer.

Probably true, as they claim, it is easy to get banks in New York to make advances to a producer on a United Artists' release contract. But that's giving America goods to sell and then paying her interest on the money that's coming from her in the future. Which may be good for the banks, but it's not so good for the British producer.

Owning the biggest market in the world, and virtually controlling all other markets, the American distributor has the whip hand and can dictate terms. But, at the end, he has got to get his quota films for this market, and as it is a market well worth looking after, why not play ball and keep it sweet?

U. S. films make enough velvet out of it to be able to afford to do it. They make enough by ducking Profits Tax to be able to afford a British film a break once in a while.

ORIG. WRITERS IN N. Y.

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

James Creelman, who recently flew from Los Angeles to New York to obtain color for an air mail picture to be produced by F. B. O., will remain there to write two more originals for the same organization.

Other writers engaged by F. B. O. and stationed in New York are James B. Connelly, Temple Bailey, H. C. Witwer, Hazel Livingston and Harold McGrath.

Colleen Moore's Original

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

"Here is My Heart" is the title of Colleen Moore's next picture for First National. It is an original story by Edmund Goulding and Benjamin Glazier. The latter is making the adaptation.

Production will begin as soon as Miss Moore has finished "Lilac Time," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

ANOTHER BLYSTONE DIRECTOR

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Jasper Blystone, assistant to his brother, J. G. Blystone, director on the Fox lot, has been elevated to handle the megaphone himself.

His first directorial job is "Daisies Won't Yell," a story George Marshall now has in preparation.

Syracuse House Goes Presen

Syracuse, Feb. 7.

Despite denials that such a policy was contemplated, the Empire, operated by the Harrisons, with Willis Whitnall as house manager, has become a presentation house with Don Alvin as master of ceremonies.

B. & K. BILLING STAGE ACT ABOVE PICTURE

Also Submerging Paul Ash for First Time in Oriental's Ads —2 Local Precedents

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Balaban & Katz set two precedents this week in newspaper advertising.

The Chicago theatre ads for the first time are billing the stage attraction, Mae Murray, above and several times as large as the screen attraction, "Love and Learn" (Par.). Besides are additional ads devoted exclusively to the stage attraction.

Continuing its newly adopted policy of playing strong pictures to uphold the gross at the Oriental, where Paul Ash reigns on the stage, will feature "Quality Street" (M-G-M) next week. Ash has been subjected to minor mention in the advertising.

2 Fall River Houses Completely Destroyed

Fall River, Mass., Feb. 7.

The hardest blow struck by fire on theatrical properties in New England in many years was the destruction of the Premier and Rialto theatres during the fire which swept the business centre of the city, causing damage mounting into the millions. Damages to the theatre holdings will reach hundreds of thousands. With the streets still strewn with debris, the theatre owners are considering reconstruction work.

Premier, owned by William J. Dunn and managed by William Purcell, and Rialto, owned by Nathan Yamis and with Walter Bigelow as manager, were playing to capacity houses when word came from Fire Inspector George O. Mansfield that the houses must be cleared. It was near closing time, and the audiences moved out without a semblance of a panic into streets becoming packed with persons from many surrounding cities. It was not, however, until it was seen that the flames were out of control and fire departments of neighboring cities were called that the drastic orders came from the fire inspector.

Newspapers were also hard hit by the fire. "L'Independant," French daily, was completely destroyed with loss of $75,000. Plants of the Fall River "Globe" and "Herald-News" were so damaged by water it was necessary to publish the "Globe" in the plant of the Taunton "Gazette," and the "Herald-News" at the New Bedford "Standard," both Taunton and New Bedford being approximately 14 miles from the scene of the fire.

Empire, vaude house, spotted in another area, escaped the menacing flames and remains the only first class theatre the town now holds.

This house is also owned and operated by Nathan Yamis.

Several small picture houses remain untouched by the fire.

U's 2 Comedy Specials

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Universal has listed two feature comedies, "Finders Keepers" and "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," among their six specials for '28-'29.

This is the first time Univarsal has listed its comedies as specials.

TULLY'S "BEGGARS OF LIFE"

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Benjamin Glazer will adapt Jim Tully's novel, "Beggars of Life," purchased by Paramount. William Wellman is slated to direct, with Richard Arlen and Louise Brooks in featured leads.

Under the sale, Tully will act in an advisory capacity on the story treatment and during production of the picture.

LOIS WILSON SWITCHED

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Lois Wilson has been withdrawn from the lead in "The Sporting Age," for Columbia.

She is held for a starring part in another Columbia picture.

Biro Goes to F. N.

Lajos Biro, Hungarian playwright recently released by Paramount, has been engaged by First National.

Biro is the author of "The Last Command."

PHOEBUS CO. OF GERMANY IN MONEY TROUBLE; FOR SALE

Picture Concern Subsidized in Financial Hot Water —Competition in Bidding for Theatres—Got Gov't Help for Making Propaganda Pictures

Berlin, Jan. 28.

Phoebus Film Co., the most important film corporation after the Ufa, is admitted on the market for sale.

Although the deal has not been finally closed it is pretty positive that its theatres will be taken over by the Emelka-Lustig group, with which the American First National is affiliated. The situation has called forth comment in the papers as the German government had invested money in the firm under the condition that the company make films of a propagandistic nature.

For some years the Phoebus has been the only real rival of the Ufa in Germany and has been particularly noted for its building of modern theatres. In many of the key cities it had a far finer house than its competitior. Its affiliation with United Artists helped it to a strong position.

Of late years Phoebus' own pictures have been of a mediocre quality and it has had little success in disposing of them in foreign countries. Its bankruptcy has been rumored for almost a year.

Last fall it was made public that the Reichswehr Ministerium (National Defense Ministry) had secretly turned over 10 millions in marks to the Phoebus under the condition that they make films which would arouse national militaristic feeling. Only a part of this money was used for this purpose, and the result was merely a few poor patriotic films. This called forth violent attacks from the liberal papers and it became evident that the Phoebus was doomed.

Chief Assets

The chief assets are the long term leases which it has on its many important houses. For these two strong groups have been bidding against each other.

I. G. Farben Industrie (German dye trust), which manufactures the Agfa picture negative and is affiliated with the Terra Film Co., behind which stands Germany's most influential publishing house, Ullstein. (Between this group and the Ufa there are also strands as the Farben Industrie has lately bought the Lignose Film Negative Manufacturing Company, which makes them strong shareholders in the Ufa.) On the other side is the Munich Emelka Company backed by von Lustig, who is affiliated with the First National. Up to now the Emelka has not turned out a first class product, but this will probably be changed by the affiliation with the First National.

The Emelka-Lustig group made the highest offer and to influence public opinion in favor of the Farben Industrie-Terra, the Ullstein papers, over 60 in number, have been conducting a hefty campaign. They charge that the taking over of the Phoebus by Emelka will mean turning over these theatres into American hands. Emelka has given guarantees that this will not be the case, and the last reports are that the Emelka will get the theatres.

No matter how high the price which the Emelka gives, there is little doubt that the German tax payer will have to bear at least a loss of five to six million marks.

Publix's Prelim Houses Now Opening Friday

Starting this week, Metropolitan, Boston, on the Publix circuit, opens Fridays, as does the Publix Olympia, New Haven. This is a physical necessity because of the re-routining of shows which go from New Haven to Boston to New York, instead of New Haven, New York and then Boston.

Rather than risk a delay for the Saturday opening at the Paramount, New York, through a Friday night closing in Boston, as was the previous schedule, Boston closed Thursday night. This affords a day's lay-off in New York refurbishing of costumes, brushing up on things generally, scenery adjustments, etc., which usually pop up after the first fortnight out in New Haven and Boston.

With this, the system of alternating Lou Kosloff, the Paramount's stage band leader, and Al Mitchell, of the Publix Olympia, New Haven, may be abandoned. The stunt is for Kosloff, for example, to open with the new unit in New Haven, leave it when it goes to Boston, but be familiar again with it in New York. In the meantime, the New York leader, Al Mitchell, would be rehearsing with another new unit in New York, travel it to New Haven and play a second week with it in New York.

The theory was all right but it doesn't work out so well because of the Fridays which necessitate a substitute leader in New York under this arrangement, owing to Friday being the opening day in New Haven.

Propaganda or Press Stuff

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

"The Godless Girl," which Cecil B. De Mille is producing, sprung an ardent protest from The Devil's Angel, local branch of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. The local organization has written to De Mille charging that the picture is propaganda.

Signed by John S. Graves, the letter says: "We have unmistakable reason to believe that your picture has been calculated to destroy the efforts of our society. We do not propose to stand idly by and permit this without spreading our stand to the world."

The local body is said to have recommended to the home organization that it takes action to prevent the showing of the film.

Syd Chaplin's 3 Abroad

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Syd Chaplin, currently making "A Little Bit of Fluff" for Gaumont in London, will release one picture a year through M-G-M. for three years.

All will be produced in England.

EVELYN BRENT'S LEADS

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Paramount has assigned Evelyn Brent to play opposite Adolph Menjou in "Super of the Gaiety."

Miss Brent will later be opposite George Bancroft in his next Par film.

Langdon's F. N. Final

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Harry Langdon and staff are now writing the story for his sixth and last picture to be produced under his present First National contract.

Production starts March 1.

Goldwyns on Trip

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Samuel Goldwyn is going to Europe next month. Goldwyn will leave here for New York shortly, accompanied by Mrs. Goldwyn.

Starting "Miracle"

It is reported First National will start production on "The Miracle" shortly.

George Fitzmaurice may direct.

U. A. Studios Quiet Until March 15 Next

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A period of quiet lasting until March 15 will follow the completing of "The Tempest" at the United Artists studios. There will be no units working until then.

Edwin Carewe is preparing to start production at that time. Norma Talmadge having called off production last week, expects to have another story ready by then.

Miss Joy as "Craig's Wife"

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Pathe-DeMille purchased screen rights to "Craig's Wife," stage play by George Kelly. It is now being adapted by Clara Beranger and [illegible] a DeMille special, featuring Leatrice Joy.

Waldorf, Langdon W. Post and Donald Thompson.

Chicago

Following a squawk from the girl herself, the editor, business manager and various other officials of the Chicago "American," their reviewer, Rob Reel (Hazel Kennedy) has been listed for the first time. Variety had previously omitted that paper under the impression that the name Rob Reel was an office by-line for anybody who happened to get a picture assignment. Upon assurance that Miss Kennedy did all the reviewing, she was insupplanted Louella Parsons as leader by a nine-point margin, Miss Parsons holding second place at .750. Three L. A. papers are now listed by themselves because of the large number of by-line reviewers, and in this respect the "Express" and "Herald" are still last, in that order, at .677 and .653—good enough to be amongst the first three in New York. Eleanor Barnes remains in third place with a slight percentage jump and Schallert is fourth with .704, an improvement of 37 points.

Trade Papers

Variety continues to lead the trade papers, increasing its percentage 29 points over the previous cluded and instantaneously jumped to the front with a percentage of .727 on a basis of 22 reviews with a definite decision in each case. This leads her nearest contemporary by 64 points.

This ousts Carol Frink ("Examiner") from first place, a position she had held since the first score. Miss Frink's current .663 is a drop of 57 points for her, with the "News" (combined) closely pursuing at .658 in coming on from last place. Genevieve Harris ("Post") has slipped 72 points, to become last of the Loop critics, while Mae Tinee ("Tribune") has also eased off on percentage but is ahead of Miss Harris by a single point. Arthur Sheekman ("Journal") is still fourth on a basis of .652.

Los Angeles

The relatively high percentages of Los Angeles reviewers should not mislead. The Coast critics are prone to see everything through rose colored glasses and seldom, or never, pan a picture. As approximately 75 per cent. of major studio product makes money, under the "everything is great" system of reviewing high scores are inevitable. There has cropped up a distinct difference in reviewing on the Coast and in New York and Chicago where most of the writers will try to segregate the bad ones and label them as such. The Los Angeles "Times" and its reviewer, Edwin Schallert, are practically the lone example in that town in making an effort to inform readers whether a film is worth seeing or not.

The "Record" (combined) has count, but can't brag with 28 "wrongs." The point advance to .849 is mainly due to having picked up but three "wrongs" on the 52 pictures which have come in since the last score.

"Harrison's Reports" maintains second position at .733, but "Film Daily" has forged ahead from next to last on the strength of an 81-point leap for .720. "Motion Picture News" has bettered its average to over the .700 mark, but is fourth, while "Motion Pictures Today" is still at the bottom of the list despite a 20-point advance.

The trade journals are conspicuous by the curtailment of "no opinions." Not one of the papers has picked up an opinionless review since the preceding score other than "Harrison's Reports," which failed to definitely report in one instance. The other angle to trade paper reviewing, as to how many pictures the various sheets have said "No" on, lines them up as Variety panning 52 out of the 185 reviewed; "Film Daily" shaking its head against 13 on 132 chances; "News" turning thumbs down on 9 out of 103; "Harrison's Reports" rejecting 13 of 75, and "Motion Pictures Today" disapproving of 7 in 49.

Sidelights

Irene Thirer still leads the entire list of daily scribes in the number of "no opinions," her total now being 27, an increase of five over her previous quota. Next in line is Harriett Underhill, who has not added to her preceding sum of 16.

The greatest number of "rights" goes to Regina Cannon at 88, who also held that place on the last score. Behind Miss Cannon is again John Cohen, who trailed by six the last time, but is now 19 in the rear. High total of "wrongs" also rests with Miss Cannon at 40. She is the most prolific reviewer on the boxscore boards in having written on 140 pictures. The runner-up on "wrongs" is Mordaunt Hall, who has 32 and is closely followed by Mae Tinee with 30.

Donald Thompson's 32 "wrongs" on the last score, now changed to 31 on this score, is explained by a picture scored as "bad" at that time, having recouped on further release dates to rate as "moderate" for the current sum up, and upon which Thompson turned in a good notice —thus changing a "wrong" to a "right."

Rating of pictures on the boxscore boards is subject to change. A film generally has been released a month before Variety attempts to rate it as a success, moderate or a failure from the boxoffice standpoint. Hence, a few pictures deemed successes for the Dec. 7 score have changed to "bad" and vice versa, the critic getting credit or discredit for the change, according to his review. So a critic may be wrong in this score on a picture, but later change that to a "right" should the film subsequently assert itself and overcome a weak b. o. start. The pictures are rated on whether they do business or not across the country, Variety checking each film with the sales department and then rechecking that information with its own information.

The final box score for the film critics on the year will be published in June and in conjunction with the year's summing up on the dramatic reviewers.

3 GIRLS FEATURED

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer assigned Harry Beaumont to direct "The Dancing Girl," an original by Josephine Lovett.

It will have three girls equally featured.

KEATON'S "SNAP SHOTS" FIRST

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Buster Keaton's first for M-G-M will be "Snapshots" original by Byron Morgan. Edward Sedgwick will direct.

STOLOFF'S NEAR-RECORD

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Benjamin Stoloff has signed another long term contract to direct for Fox.

He has been with it for over six years.

Film of Studios for Pathe

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Bert Dorris, coast press agent for Pathe westerns and serials, is making a film of the inside workings of Metropolitan studios where Pathe western units work. The picture will be shipped to New York where it will be shown to the Pathe Club at its annual dinner, Feb. 21.

McCarthy's Unnamed Feature

John McCarthy has been engaged by M-G-M to make a special feature as yet unannounced. McCarthy directed "Lovelorn" and "Becky."

Reviewing Pre-Views Unfair, Unjust

It is manifestly unfair, unjust and unethical for any daily, weekly or monthly to critically review a picture on a pre-view showing, unless invited to do so by the producer or distributor of the film.

A dramatic reviewer would not think for a moment of reviewing a stage play in rehearsal. The New York dramatic reviewers do not even go to Brooklyn, Jamaica or Newark, to catch the new stage shows before they reach Broadway. The reviewers are aware those shows are breaking in and do not care to take advantage of the break-in period, whether the productions are in good or bad condition.

Pre-views of pictures are the same as break-ins for the stage plays. Perhaps they are more like the stage rehearsals. A film's producer legitimately and earnestly endeavors to secure an audience's reaction to a picture supposed to be in a hideaway and about to be plunged into the picture houses of the world. His technical staff is with him. They study the picture and the audience; discussing among themselves the various aspects and possible corrections, eliminations, additions or changes.

Susceptible to Changes

For a picture may be cut and re-cut many times. Besides there remains in the studio much footage deleted prior to the pre-view. Almost anything is possible. It's certainly and always 5/1 that the picture on the pre-view will not be the exact picture finally sent out.

And then the producer, whether in or around Los Angeles or New York, and mostly on the coast, reads a review on his pre-view. It's something he does not want and it's something the reading public does not want, for it is not the proper review of the picture that is going to be regularly released.

Newspapers, whether daily or trade, are not alone deceiving their readers with these pre-views, but they are jeopardizing the producer's or distributor's investment. It is so unduly an injustice to everyone that reviewers of their own volition should refrain from the temptation.

Unfair to Actors, Too

And again it is unfair to the players in the picture. No reviewer can know to what an extent an actor has been cut out of a picture in the cutting room nor to what extent his scenes may be restored in the final edition. So it's wrong all around.

Variety has desisted from this practice, even to the limit of declining to review projection room showings, unless the picture in New York be of independent make and unlikely to gain a showing in a Broadway picture theatre. Variety's reviewers agree that no reviewer unless acutely informed as to the likelihood of an audience's reception and that's possible only with comedy or comedy situations, can give an accurate review in the cold four-walled projection room. While frequently the reviewers in the room hold conversations, as deadly to the proper attention the picture should be given.

Picture reviewers hold relations more or less with the picture trade, if only in their writings. All should realize the inimical pre-view review may bring damage and a money loss to a producer or a business. And more especially as the reviewer will have the chance to review the picture when it is regularly put out. The producer at that time feels that the reviewer is privileged to pass opinion upon the finished product, but not before and assuredly not on the unfinished product, such as it necessarily must be in the pre-view.

"Edison Week" on Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

This is "Edison Week" over the West Coast Theatres circuit.

All of the many theatres are playing it up as the birthday week of America's greatest inventor and "The Father of the Motion Picture." It is suspectible to much publicity.

Vita in Texas Houses

El Paso, Feb. 7.

Louis L. Dent of the Dent-Musselman theatres over Texas, has ordered Vitaphones for his theatres at Wichita Falls, Amarilla, El Paso and Waco.

It is reported Publix will install Vitaphone in its houses at Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and Oklahoma City in the near future.

The Interstate circuit is installing Movietone at present into all of its major houses throughout the state.

Ptld. Liberty's Tab Stock

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Liberty, Portland, which played Ackerman & Harris vaud films, will have a change of policy March 2. At that time Will King and his company will present tabloid musical comedy offerings with a weekly change for six weeks, with the policy to become permanent in the house along with other attractions.

This West Coast Theatres' circuit house, taken over with North American group, has been in the red constantly.

ROSENWALD, U'S DIST. MGR.

G. E. Rosenwald, manager of the Los Angeles branch for Universal, has been promoted to be U's district manager for the West Coast. The position was vacated by the death of D. S. Mitchell.

Rosenwald's post at the head of the Los Angeles exchange will be taken by George Naylor, Universal manager in Des Moines.

DICK SPIER'S PROMOTION

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

Dick Spier, for several years with Publix and West Coast, press agent and manager of the California theatre, is going up.

Following shortly on the heels of his promotion to manage the Warfield, Spier has been assigned as assistant to Herschel Stuart, who has charge of all Wesco houses in Oregon.

Publix 3 Northwestern Openings in March

Publix will open its two new 3,000-seaters in the northwest next month and another in Minneapolis with a capacity of between 3,500 and 4,000.

Of the Pacific coast pair the Seattle, in that city, will hold the first inaugural March 3. The Portland, Portland, Ore., will follow the next day, March 4. Both houses are from Rapp and Rapp plans and will have the Publix "magic flying" stages, with which only two other houses are equipped, Oriental, Chicago, and Granada, San Francisco. These consist of Jack Partington's elevator devices, which he originally installed on the coast.

In conjunction with these three openings Publix will hold a national radio campaign in each one of its cities. It will not be a hook-up, but performers from the various Publix units will visit a local station in whatever city they happen to be to do one or two numbers and mention the opening of the new Publix houses. This idea was carried out by Ben Serkowich when the Detroit house opened and, deemed successful, is being repeated.

Publix and Finkelstein & Ruben will operate the Minnesota, with Fox also in when his deal for control of the F. & R. circuit is concluded.

Oil Stove Starts Fire

Des Moines, Feb. 7.

With a show in progress at the Strand, Humboldt, Ia., an oil stove at the rear of the stage exploded, causing damages to the theatre and Russell hotel, in the same building of over $50,000.

Audience left the theatre in orderly fashion.

ATTACKS $56,000 MORTGAGE

Danbury, Conn., Feb. 7.

John Panora, of the Capitol theatre, Milford, Conn., has attacked the mortgage of $56,000 which Charles Nomejko, former owner, holds on the house, because of alleged misrepresentation in the sale.

Panora understood that a driveway leading to the stage door was included in the sale, but has since learned that this is not part of the theatre property. Its use by the theatre is protested.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF BROOKHART BILL QUESTIONED BY ATTYS. FOR PRODUCERS

Attack Along That Line Aimed for Hearings Before Senate Committee—Points Brought Up—Some of Bill's Sections Alleged Identical With Wording of Trade Commission's Findings in F.P.-L. Case

Washington, Feb. 7.

When hearings on the Brookhart bill, aimed to stop block booking as its principal feature, open before the Senate, interstate commerce attorneys for the picture industry, representing the producers and distributors, will attack the measure principally from the angle that it is unconstitutional.

Plans are being formulated between the legal lights of the industry in Manhattan and their representatives here in Washington to first raise the question of price fixing, as the bill is said to do by placing control of any such disputes between the distributors and exhibitors under the Federal Trade Commission. That will be cited as one principle Congress has always avoided and which the Constitution prohibits.

The attorneys intend to point out that though several moves along this line have been attempted in the past, such legislation has always died in the committee room.

Plan of "defense" of the producers will be to show Congress that there is no reason why the picture industry should be selected as the only trade so controlled and that if the bill is passed the courts will not uphold it.

The claim that the courts would not uphold this phase will be also extended to other features of the bill.

Relies on Decision

That an attempt has been made in the Brookhart bill to avoid precedents set down in court decisions will be stressed along the lines that the Senator has used the copyright angle to beat this, evidently relying on the decision of the U. S. District Court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania in the case of the U. S. vs. Motion Picture Patents Company.

That copyright phase will not stand up, it is planned to show that the higher courts later reversed that decision and ordered the Patents Company to dissolve. The question will be further stressed by claiming there is no analogy between a patented device and a copyrighted motion picture.

The tie-up between the Federal Trade Commission and the bill will be brought out in drawing the committee's attention to the claim that Section Two is almost an exact copy of paragraphs two and three of the "findings of fact" of the commission in the Famous Players-Lasky case.

Inasmuch as this section aims to establish the interstate commerce phase, it is looked upon here by those attorneys as having but little value.

Section Three is to be cited as not for Congressional action at all, but that, if the conditions outlined affecting unfair discrimination in selling to affiliated chain theatres, block booking, etc., are as set down, then it is a matter for the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice—not Congress.

"Copyrighted" Inserted

Conferences here have brought out that Section Four of the bill is an identical copy of paragraph two of the commission's order to Famous Players (Paramount) to "cease and desist", except that the word "copyrighted" has been inserted before the words "motion picture films."

Following this it will be shown that the bill provides for no appeal to any court from the decisions of the commission (Section Seven). This said the attorneys when questioned, violates the Federal Trade Commission Act itself, with it being further claimed that such an appeal is provided for the railroads and others under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Other phases to be brought out include the proviso that incompleted films can be sold. This is in Section Five. Here will be brought out the right of a manufacturer to contract for delivery of unfinished goods, for instance the steel industry, and will, in this instance of the pictures, kill its largest credit factor, its contracts for future production. It would also do away with the right of a manufacturer to select his customers, a right which has been upheld in the courts, and which under this bill would place the industry strictly on a basis of selling its product by auction to the highest bidder.

Should such a precedent be set down, the attorneys say, it would force out all manufacturers operating retail stores, the phrase being incorporated in Section Six wherein every exhibitor is to have the right to bid for a picture on the same basis as an affiliated house.

Penal Clause

Section Eight providing a penal clause in the bill cannot be upheld, allege the lawyers, as it brands producers and distributors violating any of the provisions as criminals.

Request put to the Department of Justice for an opinion on the bill met with a refusal to comment. The Department stated that as yet neither Senator Brookhart nor the sponsors of the bill in the House, Celler and Canon, had yet been furnished with such opinion.

The Other Side

In local exhibitor circles it is believed that a decision on the Brookhart Bill by the Department of Justice regarding its constitutionality in present form would have its influence with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is expected to meet shortly for a hearing on the matter.

Exhibitor leaders claim, however, that even if the bill is found unconstitutional by the Department of Justice it may be amended and presented again still in a condition which would protect the exhibitors. The independent theatre operators claim their intentions are not to violate the constitution, but to remove some of the evils of the industry.

Such matters as the penalty clause in the Brookhart Bill may be removed, while the functions of the Federal Trade Commission, to which the producers take exception, may be modified to meet constitutional requirements and still keep the strength of the bill intact.

U. A. and B. & K.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

All supplies used in converting the Apollo, legit house, into the United Artists theatre at a cost of $900,000 were purchased through Balaban & Katz, a Publix subsidiary.

Likewise Barney Balaban is sitting in on all conferences concerning building and furnishing the $3,000,000 U. A. house in Detroit.

Although technically classed as opposition, the U. A. executive offices here are in the B. & K. offices, with the latter exercising final authority in matters pertaining to building and buying.

Barney, A. J., and John Balaban are reported the last court of resort for U. A. in Chicago.

FREE SHOWS ON SUNDAY

Amarillo, Tex., Feb. 7.

After operators had been arrested twice, two local theatres Sunday ran free shows in an attempt to evade the blue laws.

There are over 50 cases on court docket here awaiting trial.

Dover, O., Feb. 7.

Mayor P. J. Groth varied the monotony of having managers of three picture shows arrested Sunday for the operation of shows on the eighth successive Sunday, by barring the Tunney-Dempsey fight film at the Weber. Groth held that the fight picture was not suitable for Sunday exhibition.

COMEDY REISSUES

Keith-Albee has taken the Charles Chaplin reissue, "Sunnyside," and it starts its K-A circuit travels week March 3.

Loew signed the Harold Lloyd reissue of "Grandma's Boy," and it starts going about the last week in [illegible]

Topeka's School Board Promotes Special Film

Topeka, Feb. 7.

For the first time in years the Topeka school authorities have cooperated in the pushing of a picture, casting all former rules into the discard. Rotary club here bought the Jayhawk, 1,500 seats for the first matinee performance of "King of Kings." The tickets were turned over to the school principals, who sold them to the children.

The school board has a rule that no exploitation of children for any show be allowed. For "King of Kings" the rule was not only shoved aside, but permission was granted for a half holiday for all children who purchased the reduced price tickets.

The picture is being road-showed at the Grand with a 50-cent to $1 top for matinees.

School children got the seats at a flat rate of 25 cents. Rotary club is absorbing the difference.

LOEW'S IN JAMAICA

Takes Over Publix Proposed 2,000-Seater

Loew has taken over the proposed 2,000-seater which Publix planned in Jamaica, L. I., at Jamaica and Bergen avenues. After Publix had progressed as far as the foundations in the erection of the structure, changed plans necessitated a halt. The blueprints have been formally approved by the building authorities and Loew, in the interim taking over the house, will resume building Feb. 16.

Chicago's New Colored House Is Welcomed

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Chicago's South side is reveling in its new amusement center, Lubliner and Trinz' new Regal theatre, which opened at South Parkway and 47th street, Saturday.

Perhaps the greatest drawing card of the city's only theatre catering exclusively to colored patronage, is Fess Williams and his 22 syncopators. Williams acts as master of ceremonies. Other acts on the bill are the Regal Steppers, Calloway, Cole and Wade, Alex Lovejoy and Marshall Rogers. Colored performers welcome the new house as an opportune addition to the Chicago presentation circuit. All house employees are colored, including the manager, although the theatre will be under the direct supervision of a man from the Lubliner and Trinz office.

Loses Only Theatre

Humboldt, Ia., Feb. 7.

Strand, the only picture house here, operated by W. B. Franke, was destroyed by fire following the explosion of an oil heater in the basement of the building. Flames also destroyed the Russell Hotel, the town's only hostelry.

The night show was in progress when the heater exploded, but the audience made its exit without injury.

Fox in Frisco

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

Bank of Italy officials deny the widely circulated rumors that William Fox is thinking of abandoning his deal whereby the bank is erecting a large capacity picture house for him here.

Day and night shifts have been working constantly on the excavation and the steel work is now ready to be erected.

"SIMBA" WITH TALKER

It is said that the animal picture, "Simba" at the Carroll, New York, when going out, may have a "talking" device tacked on. With what talker is not reported.

At present "Simba" has some sort of an awkward synchronization giving the impression its music and the Johnson lecture are propelled through a phonograph horn.

Bankers and Indie Exhibs Are Used by Producers Against Bill

Senator King, Utah, has been receiving communications from bankers in Utah protesting against the Brookhart bill. Banking influence in the film industry is being brought to bear in political circles throughout the country. The general cry is against government interference in private enterprise.

Letters and wires reaching Senator King have been reported to Senator Smith W. Brookhart, sponsor of the bill, to protect the independent theatre owners of the country. Brookhart has, directly or indirectly, issued a call to the independent exhibitors of Utah to answer the banking pressure with letters and petitions in favor of the passage of the bill.

The Hays organization is evidently using the financial interests to hold the Senate in line and may block the bill when it finally reaches that legislative body. If Hays fails to block the bill in the Senate, it may result in the disintegration of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' Association, since the affairs now conducted by that organization through the medium of the contract and the film boards of trade would be nullified through regulation by the Commission.

The producer-distributor forces are also dynamiting by means of a petition which salesmen are being told to take around for exhibitors to sign. These petitions, it is reported by exhibitors, are so framed as to lead independents to believe that in signing they are favoring the Brookhart Bill, while they are actually protesting the measure.

The producers have also lined up several independent leaders to work against the bill. Members of the organizations led by these men have been protesting against their behavior on this measure, since it may cloud the issue at Washington. Independent exhibitor leaders, about whom complaints have been heard either verbally or in writing from members of their respective organizations, are known and named in New York.

Some of these leaders have refused to explain their reasons for fighting the Brookhart Bill, while others have taken up the stock excuse that the bill will bring the Government in too strongly.

106 CASES UP FOR ARBITRATION IN 1 DAY

When the joint arbitration board of the T. O. C. C. and the New York Film Board of Trade held its regular weekly session Feb. 1 in New York, 106 cases were up for consideration. Most were adjourned or defaulted.

Vitaphone brought a claim against the Meyer & Schneider Circuit for alleged violation of a Vitaphone contract. M. & S. presented a counterclaim. Differences were amicably adjusted. Attorney George C. Pratt represented Vitaphone, while Phillips & Nizer were attorneys for M. & S.

Another action involved the Fox offices against the Palace, Lakewood, N. J., Fox claiming that the theatre had failed to exhibit five pictures, with the exhibitor countering by stating that it had been obliged to play 20 instead of 26 under contract.

The board held the exhibitor's contention that he need only play 20 pictures, but awarded judgment to Fox for the five pictures specified in the original claim.

Revivals and Vaude for W-C Houses Off Nights

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

West Coast's Ritz theatre, a suburban house which has been kept out of the red since opening by an average of three previews a week, will inaugurate a series of film revivals each Monday, in addition to five acts of vaudeville.

West Coast will experiment with the revival policy, plus vaudeville, and if it prospers will install it in other houses for off nights.

Publix Mgrs.' School

Publix's school for managers will not resume for four or six weeks, or until the required number of students is obtained. For the coming term it is understood not more than 15 or 20 will be enrolled, with the school heads willing to wait six months if necessary until this quota shapes up as to quality.

The Publix school holds "class" in the New York theatre building.

LOOKING OVER 1ST CHI UNIT

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Jimmie Cowan, Milton Feld and Earl Saunders of the Publix arrived in town today to look over the first Publix unit produced in Chicago.

While here they will book some acts for the New York units.

"Crowd" Cuts Unit

"The Crowd," 92-minute feature at the Capitol, New York, opening Saturday, will necessitate the cutting down of the Publix unit.

This starts off the unit policy under a handicap as the new house policy, in view of the feature's overtime.

Frank Cambria produced the unit.

FRISCO UNIONS TRYING TO SEW UP THEATRES

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

In an attempt to further intrench organized labor in the amusement affairs of San Francisco the local Operators' Union has introduced a measure before the City and Country Supervisors seeking regulation of picture projection apparatus and film. If passed this ordinance would affect film exchanges.

The joker in the proposed measure is that the head of the inspection bureau would have to be a thoroughly qualified operator of no less than four years' previous experience, meaning he will have to be a member of the local Operators' Union.

The ordinance was first introduced several months ago but at that time pressure was brought to bear by the Allied Amusement Enterprises, which includes all local picture house managers.

Local managers are convinced the supervisors will never pass the measure.

Arthur Loew's Return

Arthur Loew returned from abroad Tuesday to attend the M-G-M sales convention to get under way next Wednesday (Feb. 15) at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The first of the delegates, Benjamin Feinburg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district manager in Brazil, arrived in New York Tuesday on the Boltaire.

Par's Take-Chance-Week

For week of Feb. 18, the Paramount, New York, will have "Take-a-Chance Week." It's an idea originating in the Balaban & Katz theatres in Chicago, and since employed all over.

PATHE'S SO. EXCH. CHANGES

Dallas, Feb. 7.

Several important changes have occurred in the Pathe Exchange here, following the arrival of Dan Michselove, newly appointed southern sales manager. E. C. Leeves, formerly manager for P. D. C. at Dallas, is appointed branch manager, succeeding J. L. McKinney, who will remain as short subject sales manager.

Ralph Morrow, district manager at Dallas, has resigned, L. C. Baxley, acting as branch sales manager, will remain.

"SPEEDY" AFTER "SADIE"

"Legion of the Condemned", is named to follow the next United Artists picture at the Rialto with Paramount's "Last Command" current.

MANEGE

(GERMAN MADE)

Berlin, Jan. 25.

By far the best picture which Delina, partially financed by First National, has yet turned out. It may be the best German film of the year. Following in the footsteps of "Variety," it unquestionably stands on its own feet.

The two partners of a right-rope-walking act have quarreled over a woman and for years have not spoken to each other, although continuing their act. In the circus in which they are playing, a frail little girl is performing a leap-the-gap sensation, certain to end in making her a physical wreck. But she is so under influence of her brutal stepfather that she goes through with it nightly.

The youngest of the acrobats, Ralph, tries to threaten the stepfather into discontinuing the act, but without success. Then he tries to force the manager of the circus to stop it by inciting a strike among the other performers. This also fails. Gaston, his brother, feeling that he really has been at fault in their estrangement, goes to the stepfather and during a quarrel knocks him down. The police come to get him that night at the close of his turn, which he goes through with the knowledge that they are waiting for him.

Solution is happy.

Direction by Max Reichmann is competent and often full of intensity. He will bear watching. Mary Johnson as the little girl has a helpless naivete, very moving, and Kurt Gerron has a Jannings-like brutality. Raymond van Riel and Ernst van Duren are more than adequate as the brothers. Trask.

THE WHITE SHEIK

(BRITISH MADE)

London, Jan. 20.

Produced by British International. Released by Wardour Films. Directed by Harley Knoles. Adapted from Rosita Forbes' novel, "King's Mate." Photography, Rene Guissart and J. J. Cox. Previewed at the London Hippodrome, Jan. 17. "A" censor certificate. Running time, 95 minutes.

The White Sheik	Jamieson Thomas
Martengo	Warwick Ward
Rosemary Tregarthen	Lilian Hall-Davis
Menhebbe	Clifford McLaglan
Zarifa	Julie Suedo
Pat	Forrester Harvey
Jock	Gibb McLaughlin

Mrs. Rosita Forbes is an explorer. And a novelist. They claim she was an active assistant on this film in choice of location and in direction. So maybe Harley Knoles isn't to blame.

Anyway, it is the first film British International made — before "The Ring" and those shown since — and it has been the last of this set of productions to be previewed. There is a fine cast, some good photography, lots of Moorish mud huts, streets and sandhills. Natives juggling muskets. A couple of comic soldiers, two good troupers who just have to come in and be funny and go out.

Story? What there is goes something like this: A girl wanders into the foothills, gets lost, is captured by Riffs, who have a mysterious white leader. (Yes, he is the title part.) Villain, who pursued her before she was lost, is one of the white men gone Riff, and as the White Sheik won't let her go back to poppa in Fez, in case she tells of the secret massage to the Riff stronghold, villain promises to help her escape.

She goes to his hut, is attacked, rescued by the White Sheik, who marries her — platonically — for her own safety. Villain fights a duel with hero, is wounded, frames to murder him, girl saves him, and discovers she loves him. And it's as blah as it sounds.

Nothing, apart from the story, specially calls for criticism. Likewise nothing calling for recommendation. Just dull and pointless. Frat.

LOVE OF JEANNE NEY

(GERMAN MADE)

Berlin, Jan. 25.

A disappointment after the splendid work done by the same director, G. W. Pabst, in "Secrets of a Soul." Taken from a novel by Ilya Ehrenberg, said to be good, it never got to be a picture scenario. It is not anywhere near concentrated enough.

It begins interestingly enough in the Crimea, where a young French girl falls in love with a bolshevik agent. But when the two meet again in Paris the atmosphere is disturbed by the introduction of a burlesque detective, the girl's uncle.

This character is murdered, and the youth is suspected of the crime. The girl discovers the real murderer, an international swindler.

Only good performances are by Uno Henning as the male lead and Brigitte Helm in a minor role. Edith Johanne, French actress, did not pan out at all in the female lead. Trask.

Clive Brook opposite Pola Negri in "Three Sinners." Roland V. Lee directing for Par.

Marceline Day, feminine lead in "Detectives," next George K. Arthur-Karl Dane for M-G.

Robert Hopkins titling "Monkey Business," Arthur K. Dane comedy, for M-G.

Guy Oliver in "Abie's Irish Rose," Par.

SADIE THOMPSON

United Artists production and release. Starring Gloria Swanson. Adapted from original story by W. Somerset Maugham and directed by Raoul Walsh. Cameramen: Oliver Marsh, George Barnes and Robert Kurrle. Titles by C. Gardner Sullivan. At Rivoli, New York, for run on grind starting Feb. 4. Running time, 94 mins. 900 ins.

Alfred Hamilton	Lionel Barrymore
Mrs. Hamilton	Blanche Friderici
Dr. McPhail	James Rennie
Mrs. McPhail	Florence Midgley
Joe Horn	James Marcus
Sergt. Tim O'Hara	Raoul Walsh
Sadie Thompson	Gloria Swanson

After viewing "Sadie," silent but in motion, a lot of the boys are going to say, "Well, what was all the shootin' for." Was Sadie going to reach the screen or not? She was. She wasn't. Rumor this. Rumor that. And here she is. With so much "poison" extracted that she's fangless. Nobody's going to get excited about the old girl. She'll be a good program picture, that'll be that and they'll forget her. The women will probably go stronger for this one than the men.

Little doubt that the script has been handled with kid gloves. Barrymore is neither Davidson nor a reverend. He's Hamilton and a reformer. Program credits make no reference to "Rain" the play, the picture having been adapted from the original story by Maugham. However, the presentation is conveying the idea of "Rain" by a stereoptican downpour effect prior to and through the opening titles.

The scene in which Hamilton enters Sadie's room during the night is not more than barely hinted at, finishing with Barrymore standing at the door. For a few previous feet is shown his mental struggle to overcome Sadie's physical attraction for him, but nothing more than a faltering hand reaching out to stroke her hair is flashed. The pause before the door takes Barrymore out of the picture, as he supposedly kills himself on the beach before morning, explained by the following action and title.

Sadie's costume, her struggle to articulate above and over a wad of gum and her familiarity with the Marines is sufficient to establish her character at the beginning. But there's likely to be a wide difference of opinion on Miss Swanson's interpretation of the role. And at least that difference should be better than indifference—for the picture.

A long sequence in which Sadie berates Hamilton for having her deported, following him from room to room as she rages, is excellently played by the star, although at other times, particularly during the first two reels, her hard-boiled walk, gestures and facial expression seem out of proportion. She's let her hair grow, too.

Barrymore's performance is okay and Raoul Walsh, assuming the double duties of actor and director, does well by both. He plays O'Hara with whom Sadie eventually sails away. Charles Lane makes a minor bit count, and Blanche Friderici rises to her occasion late in the running. Production and photography are all that they should be, with no special reason for the full 94 minutes the film is using at the Rivoli.

"Sadie Thompson" isn't great, but it's big program material with the Swanson name and "Rain" rep to help.

They've let Sadie down and gently. Sid.

HER WILD OAT

First National release. Produced by John McCormick. Starring Colleen Moore. Directed by Marshall Neilan. Adapted from Howard Irving Young's story. At Paramount, New York, week Feb. 4. Running time, 65 minutes.

Mary Brown	Colleen Moore
Philip Latour	Larry Kent
Tommy Warren	Hallam Cooley
Daisy	Gwen Lee
Dowager	Martha Mattox
Duke Latour	Charles Gibbs
Miss Whitley	Julanne Johnston

Nice, bright comedy; nice and bright especially in its substantial little star, bright in its captions and as bright at times in its business, while the production when needing to be nice, is nice. And a staple Colleen Moore program release for First National.

It may be Miss Moore's first time in the Paramount on Broadway. If that house has its own clientele, aside from the Strand where she is so well known, the Paramounters won't forget her after "Wild Oat."

Film starts novelly and swiftly with Miss Moore, as an orphan, operating a lunch wagon. She's saving her earnings, to take a vacation, and finally does that when she gets a fellow who the girl believes is looking for a job. But he's not. Soused one evening, that young fellow got his clothes taken away by panhandlers and when appearing at the girl's all-night rumbler for a cup of coffee he looked a panhandler himself.

Afterward with his face washed but still wearing the jumper suit he had borrowed, he told the girl he had a job as chauffeur and was driving down to the beach, where his boss lived at a $30 a day hotel.

When the luncheroom young woman decided to go to that hotel and did, it seemed as if the picture would blow up, with the French farcial ingredients immediately mixed in. But it didn't, for that's where the business or gags started, commenced by a publicity agent who thought he would star the girl as a duchess and picked "Potage de Granville" off of the menu card for her name, making it the Duchess de Granville. Then the real Duke of that name on the scene, and her young man his son, besides mixing her into the centre of it as the Duke's latest wife.

Marshall Neilan's handling okay all of the time, with some nice bits also from his end. Extra good photography with much of the screening in the open.

Colleen, the pensive lunchwagon girl, Miss Moore displays that intelligence of knowing her work that makes stars of the Moore grade endurable in pictures. There are not so many.

And it won't do any harm to all of the parties interested that the Colleen Moore picture is at the Paramount this week.

Cohens-Kellys in Paris

Universal comedy production and release. Directed by William Beaudine, featuring George Sidney and J. Farrel MacDonald. At Colony, New York, week Feb. 5. Running time, 70 minutes.

Mr. Cohen	George Sidney
Mr. Kelly	J. Farrel MacDonald
Mrs. Cohen	Vera Gordon
Mrs. Kelly	Kate Price
Patrick Kelly	Charles Delaney
Sadie Cohen	Sue Carol
Paulette	Gertrude Astor

Another chapter in the Jewish-Irish screen embroglio inspired by "Abie's Irish Rose," and the best thing of its kind to grow out of that much overdone vogue. There is a good deal of genuine comedy in the new "Paris" version of Universal's "Cohens and Kellys." It is heavily overlaid, of course, with heavy-handed gagging, but basically they is a deal of legitimate fun in the scrappy Kelly and his partner Cohen.

The subject is so innately amusing that even the laborious and determined efforts of the director and players to make it funnier doesn't quite defeat its intrinsic humor. In all probability the broad effects will enhance the fun for the fan mob, but to the fastidious it does seem to be stretching it when Kelly and Cohen go to a cabaret and become involved in a riot when they think the Apache dance is on the level and interfere with the assault on the woman dancer.

Picture is full of this sort of thing. Perhaps it is necessary to put a certain amount of banana peel comedy into a picture of this kind to make certain that all the 12-year-olds of all ages will be amused, but it does inspire impatience in the adult spectator.

However, there are passages of robust comedy that are laughable on their merit, the titles throughout are skillfully fashioned, the action is fast and well sustained and the production is first class in a technical sense.

Titles were supplied by Al Desmond and the introductory crack is a fair sample. It goes, "Irish and Jewish partners have quarreled ever since David played with a harp and called it a lyre." That is submitted as perhaps the neatest thing that has been pulled on the "Abie" situation.

The same Cohen's daughter Sadye and Kelly's son Patrick are in Paris, the girl for voice training, the son to study art. They marry secretly. Summoned home by the old folks' cablegram, they pretend they are only engaged, and both sets of parents start immediately in wrath for Paris.

Usual and inevitable seasick scenes on shipboard. It must be admitted that Cohen's mal de mere is funny and the stunts are ingenious.

In Paris the marriage is revealed for more violent demonstrations of enmity by Kelly and Cohen. They decide to make the best of it.

At this point Sadye demands a divorce because Pat has had a blonde model in his studio. Thereupon Cohen and Kelly seek out the blonde model in a night club to square things.

This episode departs widely from the story for the sake of acrobatic comedy when the model's French gigolo misinterprets the intentions of the two elderly Americans who seek the girl in her dressing room. There is more of the same sort of thing when Kelly and Cohen meet the girl in her apartment, and, of course, it all ends in an uproarious chase.

Vera Gordon contributes her Jewish mother type, flawless in comedy or drama, while Kate Price plays the Irish mama in excellent comedy vein without overdoing. Sue Carol is a pretty youngster, acceptable in a mild way, while Charles Delaney gets something definite out of the boy role.

MacDonald plays the Irish father up to the hilt for low comedy. He has tricks of manner, such as a curiously oblique lifting of the eyebrow when he is angry, that are first-rate comedy contrivances.

Sidney plays the Jewish family man with rich unction. Even in his most extreme comedy moments Sidney is Cohen in real life. He is never a conventionalized comedy type—and no comedy character in the whole range can be more hoked up than the middle-aged Hebe—but always a human being rather than a stencil. Sidney here has to do a lot of hoke comedy, but it is always the material that is mechanical, never the method of the player.

Picture will be a clean up, for the title will attract the fans who enjoyed earlier chapters of the same theme, and the picture itself will make its way on low comedy laughs. Rush.

LOVE ME

(AND THE WORLD IS MINE)

Universal production and release. Starring Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry. Adapted from the story, "Affairs of Hannerl." Directed by E. A. Dupont, with Jackson Rose, photographer. At the Roxy, New York, week of Feb. 3. Running time, 67 minutes.

Hannerl	Mary Philbin
Von Vigliti	Norman Kerry
Mitzel	Betty Compson
Van Denbosch	H. B. Walthall
Baron's Manager	George Siegmann
Billie	Albert Conti

"Love Me" won't hold up for a week in the big houses and may have its troubles getting the production cost back.

E. A. Dupont first directorial effor in this country, and he must have taken a couple of looks at "Merry Go Round" before starting. With Miss Philbin and Kerry having been in that picture, the similarity between the two is emphasized. But there's no comparison on merit. "Merry Go Round" was quite a film.

Dupont used up a lot of footage to tell a commonplace screen story. Locale is gay Vienna, with the war creeping in and the lovers marrying as the boy starts for the front. Meanwhile the simple maiden (Miss Philbin) has been cast from her aunt's home because the Austrian officer kissed her while billeted there. She has turned to an old friend, Mitzel (Miss Compson), of the opera ballet, whose boy friends must have money.

Interwoven is Van Denbosch (Walthall), middle-aged bachelor, who adopts Hannerl and wants to marry her. Dramatic climax is that Hannerl casts aside the bridal veil to dash to the station as Von Vigliti (Kerry) goes to war. An impromptu three days' leave allows him to hop off the thrain so as not to make a fool out of Hannerl's wedding gown.

Picture is slow and Dupont hasn't been able to draw the love tragedy of boy and girl, both needing money and not caring greatly or strongly enough to make anyone concerned over whether they get together or not. Neither could the director resist newsreel shots to herald the war declaration, one passage holding five scenes within the celluloid frame. In fact, the story doesn't do other than just ramble along, lacking the punch to accelerate a pace that never threatens to violate the law.

To see Miss Philbin under Griffith and then Dupont is to watch not only two performances but two distinct girls recognizable except by name. Miss Philbin proved her ability in "Merry Go Round," and such stories as this are probably the reason she has been blanketed these many months and a few years.

In "Love Me," a bad title anyway, she is just a fine looking miss with no mass or sex appeal, and Miss Compson subsequently throws Miss Compson into added prominence, although she, too, has been better than in this film. Kerry's performance is spotty, but Walthall is good throughout, with Siegmann meeting requirements in what little he has to do.

Production is rife with back drops and some of those interior opera views of which U has many in its library. Photography is very plain, with Miss Compson's makeup bordering on the German idea. Sid.

SOUTH SEA LOVE

FBO production and release. Directed by Ralph Ince. Patsy Ruth Miller starred. At the Dipodrome, New York, week of Feb. 6. Running time, 70 mins.

Dull picture obviously designed to cut in on the South Sea thing, rain and "Sadie Thompson." This one is a flash in the pan and a dud. About up to the Hippodrome grade.

Fairly capable cast struggles to no purpose with a discursive and rambling story which begins back East on Broadway and then brusquely switches to the South Seas where hero goes in search of a fortune in pearls. By theatrical devices that would make a hack writer for the dumbbell magazines blush, hero, heroine and heavy are all brought together in the jungle settlement, just as the rainy season starts. The trio are housed up until they go coo-coo and the heavy gets a sock in the jaw from the hero, which naturally makes him confess that it was his plotting that brought about all the misunderstanding between the two loving hearts.

So they send the heavy comfortably back to civilization, while the hero and the heroine, who had been a musical comedy star during working hours back on Broadway, settle down to sweet domesticity in the fever laden islands. Fans of an intellectual condition that would swallow this trash deserve to get it.

Production has some lovely tropical shots, even if the characters do paddle with the river tide both coming into the settlement and going out of it. Must have been one of those belt line rivers. There's another fascinating bit. The heroine, driven quite frantic by imprisonment in a lonely shack during the months of rain, is so wrought up that when she has a quarrel with her lover she tries suicide by throwing herself in the same river. Instead of sinking she floats gracefully off with her head well out of the water until the natives go up to the camp, call the hero and he swims out to tow her ashore none the worse for her experience.

Story has no pattern or shape, merely rambling and doubling back on itself. All in all you get a confused impression of the heroine's character, as though you were watching Theda Bara playing Little Eva. Faults are of course in the script and the direction. Miss Miller looks good, even when being paddled up the tropic river dressed for a dansant including gloves. That's the kind of a picture it is. A beautiful river, but can't keep your mind on the dramatic interest for concentrating on the gloves. Hasn't a single spark of comedy of any kind.

Hippodrome spreads upon lobby display suggest hot love story, with girl in shredded wheat skirt spooning among the palms with stalwart hero. If that idea persuades them to buy, they'll be plenty peeved. Rush.

Phantom of the Range

FBO western featuring Tom Tyler. Directed by James Dugan from story by Oliver Drake. Cameraman, Nick Musuraca. In the cast: Charles McHugh, James Pierce, Marjorie Zier, Pauline Dure, Duane Thompson. Reviewed in projection room Feb. 1. Running time, 46 mins.

Attached to a story of some novelty—in the beginning—is a title that cannot remotely be associated with the plot. While the title of a western is probably the least important part thereof, "Phantom of the Range," for a story about a stranded actor, seems unduly careless.

The picture is launched interestingly with a barnstorming troupe of one-nighters giving their show in a western tank town. The leading man (Tom Tyler) is an ex-cowboy and a bum actor. The troupe goes blooey when the manager skips with the dough and the cowboy has to go back to being a hand." Disgusted at finding the ranch is a milk cow ranch, he is walking out when the gal taunts him with being a snob and a ham actor. He sticks to prove he isn't.

Thereafter the ex-actor becomes the champion and protector of the family against the real estate agent who is indifferent to the principles of Rotary.

Regulation western stuff and okay in that classification for the regular western stands. Land.

The Law and the Man

W. Ray Johnston's Tremm Carr production, released through First Division. Adapted by Arthur Hoerl from story by Octavus Roy Cohen. Directed by Scott Pembroke. Hap Depew, cameran. Gladys Brockwell and Tom Santschi featured. At Loew's New York, week Jan. 31, one-half double bill. Running time, 60 minutes.

Dan Creedon	Tom Santschi
Margaret Grayson	Gladys Brockwell
Ernest Vane	Robert Ellis
Quintus Newton	Tom Ricketts
Miss Blair	Virginia Turner
Jimmy	Jimmy Cain
Stanley Hudson	Henry Roquemore

"An unusual story" states the First Division press sheet on this picture, and it is, in its class. A feature film that can make the split weeks nicely and hold up for them. It's a well-made independent and splendidly carried along in its continuity through the adaptation by Arthur Hoerl of the Roy Cohen tale, "False Fires."

Direction by Scott Pembroke is skillful. Ready to go mad-melodramatic at any time, Mr. Pembroke has held it down and admirably, even in the courtroom scene. That makes for the better effect with the more intelligent picturegoer.

It takes the threadworn political story and turns it right around. It is like seeing the customary tale on the other side, played backward as it were. Here the political boss of a small town, 60,000, to win the good opinion of the girl he loves, reforms himself. He throws out the crew of grafting officeholders put in by him, asks the girl, who is a lawyer, to accept the nomination for district attorney, and agrees with her that she can go the limit in her prosecuting office.

During this the girl thinks she is in love with another, an architect and a bad boy. She is engaged to marry the architect. That is a shock to the politician when discovering it, but, despite that, he determines to win the girl, and does.

While doing it he protects the architect, who becomes a forger, and for a climax, when the district attorney is impeached, the political boss voluntarily takes the stand to assume under oath the crime he thought the girl he loved had committed to save her fiance.

You don't catch a story like that on the screen every day. It's much better in the unreeling than in this description. It's also much better visually expressed by Tom Santschi and Gladys Brockwell as the leads.

Mr. Santschi could not have played it better if he had lived the role and that's enough to say for his work. He poured a lot of feeling into it

TRY THESE ON YOUR FRIENDS--

They are typical titles from First National's $2.00 Broadway Special, THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY. The New York Herald-Tribune called them "some of the wisest cracks ever printed on the screen". Laughs like these are one of the reasons why HELEN "opened to the biggest three-day business in the history of the Rivoli Theatre, Portland", following other sensational runs at popular prices. Try them on your friends if you want to get an idea how your audiences will react to this brilliant novelty comedy.

CONTRACT CONFERENCE IN CHI WITHOUT IMPORTANT RESULTS

Deadlocked Mostly—One Clause Only Adopted—Time too Short to Agree—Several Changes in Committee—Another Arbitrator, Maybe

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Efforts of the exhibitor and producer committees to draw up a new standard film contract have so far been unsuccessful. Discussions on all of the important clauses have resulted only in deadlocks.

One clause, it is understood, has been adopted. That is to the effect that the approved form of contract be authenticated by the Federal Trade Commission instead of Will Hays.

In the other instances where a subject has been taken up and readied for drafting into the contract the delegates would ask to think the matter over and, on their return the next day, propose so many suggestions and changes as to nullify the first intent of the clause.

This inability to arrive at an understanding on a new contract is causing no surprise among exhibitors here or in New York. The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, New York, is not even represented here, because executives of that organization could not be prevailed upon to believe that committees could draw up a contract in a few days.

During the Federal Trade hearing held in New York, Leo Brecher, of the T. O. C. C., advised against the appointment of contract committees, arguing that it was out of order.

Hays Proposal

It was generally known to exhibitors who attended the Federal Trade Conference that the proposal of a new contract was served up by the Hays organization as a means of keeping the present contract conditions from an open hearing. Few believed that substantial relief would be afforded through meeting with the producers.

Several changes have been made in the committees. Saturday the committees were as follows: Producers - distributors, Ned Depinet (First National), Felix Feist (Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer), Phil Reisman (Pathe); chain theatre operators without vote and sitting in an advisory capacity, Fred Desberg, Loew's, Cleveland, and E. A. Schiller, vice-president of Loew's; independent exhibitors, Nathan Yamins, Fall River; Richard Biechele, Kansas City; Benjamin Bernstein, Los Angeles.

Yamins left Chicago Saturday on account of the fire in Fall River, which wiped out two of his theatres. J. W. S. Walsh, Hartford, Conn., took his place. Louis Walsh, alternate committeeman for the independents, left Friday for Florida, where his wife is reported ill.

If the committees fail to arrive at a solution, they are to decide on a seventh arbitrator. In the event of being unable to decide on the seventh man, the matter is scheduled to go to a judge of the U. S. Supreme Court for a final decision.

LIEBER CLOSES DEAL WITH PUBLIX THEATRES

Places 4 Houses in Big Chain —Skouras's to Operate— No Deal With W. C.

Indianapolis, Feb. 7.

Robert Lieber has completed his theatre deal with Publix Theatres. Under it the Lieber four theatres will be placed in a separate company, with Publix and the Skouras of St. Louis holding 50 per cent.

Skouras Brothers will operate the Lieber houses. It effectually squelches the several reports of the Skouras's alligning with West Coast to operate the Saxe circuit in Wisconsin.

Lieber's principal houses are Indiana, Ohio and Uptown, here. Publix previously had a piece of the Indiana.

Lieber was formerly president of First National, the picture producer. He was succeeded in that position by C. B. Hawley of Philadelphia, present incumbent.

Lieber's First National franchise and stock, if any, will probably pass to the new concern.

FILM NEWS OVER WORLD

Washington, Feb. 4.

Summary of reports received by the motion picture section of the Department of Commerce.

Regulations for Censorship

Chilean Minister of Interior has announced that films formerly considered inappropriate for children under 15 or unmarried women would no longer be delected; but, instead, notices should be placed outside the theatres showing these films, to the effect that children under 15 and unaccompanied young women would not be admitted.

Censorship in Shanghai

In a recent address before the Shanghai Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a paper on "Better Films" was presented by Miss E. S. Lester, states a report from Assistant Trade Commissioner Viola Smith, Shanghai. Considerable attention was given in the paper to the police inspectorship in the international settlement of Shanghai. Statement was made that 155 films had been censored, one and one-half hours being devoted to each film, since the Board of Film Censors began its activities in October, 1927.

Projectors in Russia

Leningrad Plant Tomp is manufacturing two types of picture projectors; Tomp No. 4 for stationary installations and Goz for portable installations, according to "Economic Life of Moscow." During the current year this plant will manufacture 1,000 units of the first type and 3,000 of the second type, and also spare parts to these projectors valued at 500,000 rubles (1 ruble equals 51.4 cents).

Reduced Earnings of Norway Theatres

Earnings of picture theatres in Oslo during 1927 were materially below the preceding year's level and the earnings of theatres in the majority of other large Norwegian cities are also reported to have shown a decided decline, states a report from Commercial Attache H. Sorensen, Oslo.

Gross earnings of Oslo "movies" during 1927, according to report, were 3,820,000 crowns, as against 4,280,000 crowns during 1926, a decline of about 10 per cent; net earnings dropped even more, from slightly above 1,000,000 crowns in 1926 to 760,000 crowns during the past year, decline of about 25 per cent.

Agfa Controls Lignose

Agfa, Berlin, branch of I. G. Farbenindustrie A. G. (German dye trust), purchased in December the controlling rights of Lignose G. m. b. H., Berlin, according to advices from the American Commercial Attache, Berlin. Latter has a capital of 1,250,000 marks, out of which about 60 per cent. is controlled by I. G.

Before an American Co. had concluded in July, 1927, an agreement with Glanzfilm A. G., Berlin-Koepenick, to manufacture raw films in Germany in the plants of Glanzfilm, using the American formulas and manufacturing methods, Agfa controlled about 64 per cent., and Lignose roughly about 20 per cent. of total German production of raw films.

Since Lignose is now controlled by Agfa, or I. G. Farbenindustrie A. G., this group on one hand and the American group on the other have practically a monopoly in the manufacture of raw films in this country, as the outsiders, i. e., Goerz Optical Company and Toko Film are of minor importance in this field.

"TALKERS" IN COMPETITION; ANY PROPOSED DEAL IS OFF

Vitaphone, Movietone and Others Going After Business—Many Houses Reported Agreeing or Asking for Wiring—Previous Rumors Had Talkers in U

"Talking" picture producers are out in the open, competing for trade, an unofficial but reliable report says.

This takes the foundation from under the many stories that all of the talkers would get together on a common basis for business, guided by the electrical companies furnishing equipment (wiring and installation) to the theatres requesting service from the producers.

In the lead of the "talkers" are Warners' Vitaphone and Fox's Movietone. Others of lesser importance have announced themselves as competitors, but all were to be included in a non-competitive selling understanding.

A very large number of theatres of late are reported contracting for or requesting "talkers." Equipment makers have widened their facilities for turning out wiring material. Wiring capacity when Vitaphone first launched its "talker" was limited.

Among the buyers of "talkers" of recent months have been the large chains.

There is no line on the current number of houses wired, or about to be wired, for "talking" pictures. They do not at present amount to a sturdy percentage of the total picture theatres.

Chicago Censors May Be Appointed by Mayor

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Members of the judiciary committee of the Chicago city council are considering a picture censorship ordinance, presented to the council by Alderman Frank A. Sloan. Alderman Sloan's draft of the censorship ordinance provides for its transfer from the civil service board to the mayor's office, the mayor to appoint the censors.

Few changes of the present ordinance other than that mentioned are suggested. Provision is made for a new member of the department who will work directly under the director as "reviewer in charge." The present ordinance prohibits the exhibition of mutoscopes, kinetoscopes, cinematographs and penny arcades without a permit.

Civil service employees of the censorship bureau, as now operating, will be transferred to the new department and their jobs insured.

Members of the Chicago Church Federation, in a resolution passed recently, ask that the censorship appointments remain under the jurisdiction of the civil service board rather than that they become political appointees of the mayor.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

On account of the popularity of several midnight shows at the United Artists theatre the management has decided to continue them each Saturday.

This is the first time a de luxe picture house has ever attempted this in the loop.

U OFFERING COLONY TO INDIES AT LOSS

Universal is reported to be offering the Moss' Colony, New York, under a sub-lease to independent picture producers at price below their own weekly rental of $4,500.

U is operating the theatre under a lease of five years from B. S. Moss at $225,000 a year. The first report of U's Colony rental was $200,000.

Using it for weekly first runs of its own pictures, U has been said to be taking a weekly loss, which a sub-rental might avoid.

PICTURE POSSIBILITIES

"La Gringa"—Favorable

"LA GRINGA" (Comedy drama—Hamilton McFadden-Little).

A good story for the screen, with the color of Mexico and a change of pace to New England. Ought to provide satisfactory material, with nothing for the Mexicans to squawk about. Ibee.

"Salvation"—Unfavorable

"SALVATION" (Hopkins, Drama, Empire).

Inside stuff on evangelism nullifies it for screen because of religious phase. Play poor and its stage flop another liability. Abel.

"Mirrors"—Favorable

"MIRRORS" (Lewis, comedy-drama, Forrest).

Good flicker story, affording unusual ingenue opportunities. Story has meat and with cinema embellishment can be made good box office stuff. Particularly strong on the "society" angle. Abel.

"We Never Learn"—Favorable

"WE NEVER LEARN" (William B. Friedlander, Eltinge theatre).

This is a ready-made program picture. It is told in picture language and unreeled in screen technique now, on the speaking stage. The story is light melodrama with one moment of heavy crime, but there is much mother love and family affection as well as cheating, mystery and comedy to keep it hot. This can safely be grabbed for run-of-the-mine movie material. Lait.

"Carry On"—Unfavorable

"CARRY ON" (Drama, Carl Reed, Masque).

Story of a family which disintegrates. The father following old traditions distroys a home morally and financially. A serious play and not especially interesting. Ibee.

"The Mystery Man"—Favorable

"THE MYSTERY MAN" (Gustav Blum's production of Morris Ankrum's and Vincent Duffey's mystery play, Bayes).

A first rate chance for screen development. Better for screen than stage. Picture version would hold up suspense better by working up side angles. This is not practical in one set stage version. Rush.

"The Queen's Husband"—Favorable

"THE QUEEN'S HUSBAND" (Comedy, Brady, Jr., and Wilman, Playhouse).

Satire spotted within the palace of a mythical kingdom. Should be the makings for an amusing program picture. Ibee.

"57 Bowery"—Favorable

"57 BOWERY" (Morganstern-Comedy-Drama-Wallack's).

Sympathetic ingredients for Jewish-theme picture, although generally familiar. Abel.

"The Optimists"—Unfavorable

"THE OPTIMISTS" (Gideon, Revue, Casino de Paris).

Musical revue sans plot and not for flickers. Abel.

Meek Mose—Unfavorable

"MEEK MOSE" (Comedy Drama, Lester A. Walter, Princess).

Nothing here for pictures. A play set within a community of poor colored folk in Texas. Ibee.

DETROIT THEATRE MEN ON TRIAL FOR ARSON

Detroit, Feb. 7.

Examination of arson charges against Joseph Cosco and Emilio Tork, lessee and manager of the Tivoli (pictures), Woodward avenue, was set for today.

Cosco and Tork were arrested after the burning of the Tivoli and first arraigned Dec. 20. They pleaded not guilty and were held in $2,000 bonds each.

The charred remains of a man later identified as that of Frank Montesano was found in the theatre ruins. Police intimate Montesano was a firebug by profession and engaged by Cosco and Tork to do the Tivoli "job."

Hana-phone Another

Still another talking device for films—this one's called Hana-phone, after the inventor, Paul Hanover.

Jean Marcus, of Philadelphia, is handling the device.

Myers Knew Nothing of Indies' Plan for Him

Washington, Feb. 7.

Commissioner Myers of the Federal Trade Commission seemed surprised at the reported offer to make him head of the Independents. He stated that no such offer had been made to him and that those behind the reported movement are only weakening his position while handling the picture case for the commission.

Asked if at some future date he might consider such a proposition Myers stated that he had no such ambitions as "he was too 'democratic' to want to be the czar of anything."

Reports of the movement to establish Commissioner Myers as leader of the independent exhibitors emanated from the ranks of the Unaffiliated Independent Exhibitors, an organization headed by Frank Rembusch. It is understood a circular contained the reference to Myers.

Sydney S. Cohen, mentioned in connection with Myers, has stated he has not seen the commissioner since the trade conference.

FILM HOUSE QUITS

Danbury, Conn., Feb. 7.

As a result of the theatre war in Middletown, Conn., the past month, the Grand has been forced to close through lack of business.

The Grand was the only house in town offering a straight picture program. The other two houses, Capitol and the Middlesex, are running vaude and films.

Ontario Out of Sympathy With Quebec on Children

Toronto, Feb. 7.

Prime Minister Tacheresu of Quebec in his motion before the legislature to ban all children under 16 from moving picture houses finds no support in the sister province of Ontario. Rather, children are being encouraged to attend movies here and special programs are set aside for them by welfare workers.

A preferred list of pictures labeled as especially suitable for children has been prepared and they are shown under educational direction at Saturday morning shows. There are also Saturday afternoon shows put on by film houses themselves.

Warners' Apollo Pictures

With the passing out of the Apollo Exchange, its pictures were taken over by Warner Bros., as many of the bookings are former Vitagraph subjects.

"Hickman" Film Ordered Off by K. C. Censor

Kansas City, Feb. 7.

Gus Holmes, picture censor for the city, stopped the showing of a film called "Hickman, the Fox."

The picture is said to have consisted of a patchwork of news shots and faked scenes. It was offered to several of the better downtown houses but was turned down.

It was finally set in the Cayoso, small grind place, and run several days before complaints from organizations and individuals caused the city censor to forbid its showing.

Most of the local theatres have agreed not to show news reels of the case on account of the sordidness attached.

Canadians Oppose Bill

Toronto, Feb. 7.

While the Canadian film industry will neither be rocked nor jarred inside or out by the Brookhart bill if it becomes effective, the Canadian branch of the M. P. T. O. A. has gone on record as opposing the bill.

RECEIVER WON'T OPERATE

Danbury, Conn., Feb. 7.

The Commodore Hull theatre, pictures and vaudeville, Derby, Conn., controlled by the Friend Theatres Corp., of New Haven, now in the hands of a receiver, was closed last week as the receiver refused to assume the responsibilities of operation.

House has been inspected by New York theatrical men with the intention of purchase.

"CHICAGO," L. A. RUN

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Pathe-De Mille will crash into a downtown run house with "Chicago" in the Million Dollar theatre in March.

It is the first extended run downtown for a De Mille picture since "Gigolo," which went two weeks in the same theatre a few years ago.

CONTROL OF 1ST NATIONAL?

ing taken over West Coast, added on the North American circuit on the upper Pacific Slope of over 100 houses to the then already 135 West Coast theatres; agreeing with Publix and Loew's, also United Artists, to operate their coast de luxe houses, and then to carry his West Coast chain into Fox, and add on for Fox, Saxe and F. & R., all within a year, has brought more notice to Franklin among the insiders of the show business than has been bestowed upon any man as an executive of recent times.

It is said that Franklin, as the operator of West Coast, was one of the main inducements persuading Fox to listen to purchase of West Coast, and the other circuits. With Franklin the past and present associate of the other big chain leaders of this country, his position becomes more marked among the big theatre men of the country.

Another report is that the possibility of the Stanley Company renewing its negotiations with West Coast, but this time with Fox, is predicated upon some arrangement between Fox and Franklin whereby the latter will be the sole operator of the entire Fox chain.

Hayden, Stone and Company is the banker financing the purchases by Fox of the West Coast and F&R circuits. The same report states that, as reported last week, Fox has found new and strong sponsors in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company connections.

First National

There is no talk of any outward contest for First National control. Nor has there been to this time any rumor that the former understanding West Coast and the Stanley company have had of working in concert on First National matters, they jointly stock controlling it, has been altered. It is expected by the trade, however, that unless that unison between the two largest First National stockholders is maintained, eventually there must be a scramble for the upper hand.

Reports from the coast have reached New York already that Fox will get First National, and if so, will move his Hollywood studios to the First National's lot at Burbank. This is based upon the greatly increased realty value of the spacious and present Fox lot. Reports in New York contradict that, without going into the question of First National control. They say Fox will not move his present studios under any ordinary condition.

Franklin within the few days since Fox acquired West Coast has been frequently seen in the Paramount building, also with Adolph Zukor, Nick and Joe Schenck and Sam Katz, besides William Fox and Winnie Sheehan. That didn't indicate anything to the wise boys, excepting perfect composure amongst the leaders of the picture theatre circle.

Mr. Sheehan arrived in New York last week, and Joe Schenck a few days previously. Schenck left for the coast Saturday, with Sheehan remaining in New York.

Winnie Sheehan's influence in the Fox organization is extensive. It is suspected he has come on for conferences with Bill Fox on the whole proposition. Mr. Sheehan otherwise is the head of the Fox production department, which he has raised to the front ranks of film production also within two years.

An estimate in Variety last week of Fox having 475 theatres, more or less, is not subject to any decided correction. Some have placed the Fox maximum just now, including the F & R houses, at 400, but Fox's vaudeville and other theatres have been overlooked in that compilation.

Indie Exhibs' Views

Expressions by independent exhibitors have been to the effect that if these theatres are to form a big chain, they prefer Fox to anyone else.

William Fox is looked upon in the film trade as a staunch independent, opposed to trustification. He has been an independent in theatre operation and picture production.

Fox's fight years ago against the "Picture Trust" of that day, and one that opened up the producing and distributing field, also bringing about the downfall of the General Film Company and Motion Picture Pictures Company, the component ends of the "Trust," forms an epochal period in the career of the motion picture business.

Standing of Fox in this respect is claimed to give him an edge on theatre trades or deals. It is said that before long Fox may be swamped by offers from indie exhibs to join his chain. One story is that the Fox people have started to hear things from that direction.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

A rumor current says there will be shortly a consolidation of the Fox, Ascher Bros. and Cooney Bros. interests in this city.

While officials will make no statement, one admitted something like that is in the air.

Fox lately took over the Ascher houses.

IF TITLER CAN PASS

If a director makes an alleged comedy that fails to comede, the supervisor will tell the title writer to pull it out of the fire. The titler will hop to it, figuring they're desperate and he finally is in a spot where he won't be interfered with. After weaving in his best wows and out-talking the super, they go to the bat and preview. The director is on hand, surrounded by his entire ball club. Every title laugh is greeted with sneers by the director and his yessers, because the carriage starter figures the titler is trying to steal his picture.

The post-mortem which follows on the sidewalk out in front of the shooting gallery sounds like a meeting of irate taxpayers protesting against the opening of a new street in Venice.

Some Squawks!

The director squawks that the cutter and title writer have ruined his opus. The titler is accused of destroying the characters of the comics by giving them wisecracks to speak, and the cutter is accused of trimming every gag down, so that the belly laugh is whittled down to an abdominal quiver. The writer butts in and accuses the director of ad libbing with the script and losing some of its best comedy situations, while the super gets the ear of an exec and tells him that the whole mob have double crossed him and turned out a lousy picture, just to embarrass him and the producer.

This finally breaks up when the house turns out the lights on the marquee, and the peasants who have been standing around on the outskirts of the crowd, begin giving them the giggle and walk out on them.

The serfs are told to report at the studio early next morning, when the real fun starts. The titler begins to write titles just about then, for the film rabble is turned loose to save it. Every time a scene is cut or switched a few new titles are necessary. All the titler has to do is explain that the girl is now wondering whether the boy has been successful in getting the job on the newspaper and that her father has her worried because he is squandering their small inheritance buying first editions of the Farmer's Almanac—boil it down to six words and make it funny.

A few days of this, and another preview. The second peek usually proves that some of the laughs in the first one have been lost, through the cutting and retitling, so some more cutting and titling follow.

By this time the title writer is so punch drunk that he will take supervision like a man. Any suggestion that will get past the super and hasten the film to its inevitable resting place will now meet with no opposition from the title writer. He has developed an inferiority complex that a greyhound couldn't jump over, and if he had that Lincoln and the bungalow paid for that picture racket wouldn't see him for dust. But he sticks.

Why He Sticks

He sticks because he figures that in time he'll be up in the brackets, alongside of George Marion, Joe Farnum, Ralph Spence, Malcolm Boylan, Hoppe and the rest of the big leaguers, and when that day dawns he'll give some of those supers a load of his opinion that will make them wish they had stuck to selling Fuller brushes and not horned into the fifth art on a rain check.

I could wear out four or five stenogs giving you the real low down on what we're up against, but this will be enough for this trip. I am going to quit beefing right now, but I just wanted you to know that that picture you squawked about was a sample.

It's true, as you say, that my monicker was on it as the title writer and that the titles were only fair, but I'm holding a flock of titles that never got in that picture that would have pannicked them. Every one slays anybody I read 'em to. But what can you do when a super puts a sour look on his pan and says, "I don't think that's funny"?

Why, in that picture you saw I had five titles written that I would have made book on, for I saw them in a two-reeler at a preview of another company, and every one goaled the saps. And then to have a mug tell you that no audience would laugh at them. I was tempted to take him to their second preview and let him hear for himself. But at that he would probably have told me that it wasn't a representative audience.

Your old pal,

"SIMBA" AT WOODS AT $2?

Negotiations on for the Johnson jungle picture, "Simba," current at the Earl Carroll theatre, New York, to play at $2 top in the Woods, Chicago, following "Hit the Deck" (musical).

Norman E. Field, general manager for the Jones-Linick-Schaefer offices in Chi, which controls the Woods, finds his house without a legit attraction prior to the opening of "The Sidewalks of New York," April 8.

PRODUCTION OVERTURE ABANDONED ON COAST

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

The production overture system, inaugurated at the Metropolitan, has been eliminated.

This system caused the house to increase its orchestra 12 men as well as the weekly overhead $2,000.

It is said that the patrons were more interested in the stage productions there than they were in the production overtures, which they did not seem to understand.

The only music to be furnished in the house in the future will be that given by Al Lyons and his musical bunch of 18.

"TAKE A LETTER!"

The public knows which house in this town shows the Big Ones. M-G-M is in a class by itself with such pictures as "Big Parade," "Ben-Hur," "Love," "The Student Prince" and "The Enemy." It's an ad for any house to show five Road-Show attractions like them in one season. I'm proud to be an M-G-M exhibitor. Congratulations, Boys.

The Law and the Man

and made that leap off the screen. Acknowledging the director's imagination, and there's plenty of that here, Miss Brockwell also gives a grade A performance. She's not the outlandish woman lawyer with spectacles, but a balanced girl who believes in her official duty. It must have been direction with Miss Brockwell. There's no girl of the screen capable of handling this kind of a characterization without direction.

For a play without the s. a. spilled all over, one must admire the love motif as here advanced. Hardly a prettier scene could be wished for than the political boss when about to propose to the girl, being set aside by her as she walks away, to kiss her fiance at the end of the ballroom. It was a wallop to the boss, and he showed it in suppressed emotion, not by chewing up scenery.

In comedy relief is Tom Ricketts as a country editor, always lighting a cigar. Somewhat overdrawn in all ways. Another smirch is the political boss' overconfidence in his stenographer, to the extent of revealing his heart.

That double bill day at the New York again means nothing here. Perhaps the producer believes his courtroom scene is the kick, but the punch is the story. That different, and that it is different should be played up.

Production in keeping and well produced.

THE RUSH HOUR

Pathe production and release. Supervised by F. McGrew Willis. Directed by E. Mason Hopper from story by Frederick and Fannie Hatton, "The Azure Shore." Screen adaptation by Zelda Sears. Starring Marie Prevost. Cast includes Harrison Ford, Seena Owen, Ward Crane, Dave Butler. At Keith's Hippodrome, New York, week Jan. 30. Running time, 60 mins.

Screening this picture about the most effective means of clearing house. Draws honors for dullness and monotony unrelieved by the [illegible] it's the type of picture made five or more years ago, and only third rate at that time.

Story is of a girl who wants to go to Paris. She lives in Jersey, must get up early in the morning, and is part of the usual morning hour rush. She doesn't like rushes. Also, she both likes and dislikes her sweetie.

The girl finally decides to go to Paris. She hides on board a steamer and is discovered. Ordered to work her passage she becomes seasick and experiences similar exciting adventures on board ship.

Finally, picked up by a team of con workers who figure to use the girl as a bait for the wealthy mark, the girl gets to the Riviera.

The female half of the crook team becomes jealous of her and tells all.

Meanwhile the mark has proven himself such a great guy that by the time they bring the hero over from Jersey the sympathy of the audience is with the boy who gave up 100 g's so that the girl could get a commission.

Ending unsatisfactory.

Miss Prevost okey on appearance.

OUTCAST SOULS

Joe Rock (Hollywood) production for Sterling release. Directed by Louis Chaudet. Priscilla Bonner featured. At Loew's New York, one-half double bill, one day, Jan. 24. Running time, around 60 minutes.

Useless waste of celluloid. Not only the picture drags terribly all of the time but most of everything illogical and what's not is not explained. The finish reels off as though entirely cut out to make the proper running time.

The episode some while ago of a husband and wife having been arrested in Cleveland for necking in their machine and the traffic cop sued for damages appears to have suggested this film.

At the start the young couple meet in the afternoon, going out in his roadster the same evening. They are taken to the station house for the same reason. Telling the cop they were married, they informed the desk lieutenant they wanted to be. So he phoned a justice of the peace at 2 a. m. and they were married, going to the girl's home to advise her mother and then going to a hotel, all within 18 hours.

Later the father of the husband meets the mother of the daugher, while the latter is acting as a decoy on a sight seeing bus. The father pays $14 to sit with the mother on each bus until it's her time off. Then he procures a marriage license, with neither knowing the other and not knowing their children are married.

After that you can go to sleep or go nuts.

THE BANDIT'S SON

FBO western featuring Bob Steele. Directed by Wallace Fox from story by Frank H. Clark. Cameraman Nick Musuraca. In the east: Ann Sheridan, Tom Lingham, Stanley Taylor, Bobby Mack, Finch Smiles, Hal Davis. At Arena, New York, one day, Jan. 21. Running time, 53 minutes.

A slight variation of the western plot formulas. The variation, though unimportant, is welcome. Perhaps the single outstanding fault of all westerns is this overpowering attachment to one or two plots.

FBO lays down a good idea in "The Bandit's Son," but doesn't do much with it. The situation of a man living honestly and decently in a community for 20 years, but unable to gain any standing because of old stories about his having been a bandit in his youth, is capable of dramatic development. The scenario, however, handles the intriguing idea of a reformed bandit with all the trite conventionalized machine routine of the movie factories.

It is just a little absurd in the particular of the young scoundrel (Stanley Taylor) who is a cold-blooded murderer, a bully, gambler, and son of the sheriff. When escaping after the truth comes out he pauses to grab the heroine and gallop off. The hero is not two minutes behind him.

The movies will no doubt continue to represent men fleeing from the law as having the inclination or foolhardiness to add kidnapping to their other crimes.

Production, cast and direction okay.

HEROES IN BLUE

Rayart release, presented by W. Ray Johnson and directed by Duke Worne for producing unit bearing his name. Story by Louis Morgan. Cast includes John Bowers, Sally Rand and Gareth Hughes. At Stanley, New York, Jan. 14 (one day). Running time, 57 mins.

An economically produced flicker that will satisfy the neighborhooders and go well in the hinterland through tie-ups with the local police and fire forces. As title implies, "Heroes in Blue" glorifies the pavement pounders and the smoke-eaters.

Around the Dugans and the Kellys is built this meller. Sally Rand of the "Smoky" Dugan clan is opposite John Bowers, a young cop whose sire is a veteran flat-foot. The Dugan's stepson is a pyromaniac responsible for the series of incendiary fires and simultaneous robberies. A young member of the Kelly tribe, on the detective squad, is killed by the Dugan bad boy, as is Kelly pere. The double murder by the heroine's stepbrother is avenged by her own father, "Smoky" Dugan, who dies with the hoodlum in the punch conflagration of the footage.

The ingredients are trite, but satisfactorily handled. The mother stuff, the constant battling by the checker-addicted senior Kelly and Dugan, Mamma Kelly's fortitude in worrying about her husband and two sons, and the romance between the fire-eater's daughter and the cop's son make for an okay neighborhood flicker that will do for a single day's booking.

Story and title seemingly were devised with an eye to the small town exhibitors and exploitation hook-ups.

One naive title between the leading pair has Bowers telling Miss Rand that they'll go to the movie tonight and see John Bowers and Sally Rand. Abel.

THE FEARLESS RIDER

Universal "western" production and release. Directed by Edgar Lewis. Fred Humes featured. At Loew's New York, one-half double bill one day, Jan. 24. Running time, around 55 minutes.

Usual western type, with Fred Humes knocking out seven or eight men in a small room, before his own four men arrived to capture them all.

More story than customary. This would be a strong recommendation for "The Fearless Rider" if the tale did not run so mechanically, although the youngsters won't detect that, of course.

Not much riding and very little shooting. Just a bad man, the doctor and druggist of the village, trying to steal a gold mine from the old miner who had a good-looking daughter, who Humes first saw as the picture opened, although both had been living on opposite sides of the range for years.

Humes given little to do, but that one scrap. A fair western of the second class.

SHORT FILMS

GEORGE'S FALSE ALARM

Stern Bros.' two-reel comedy, released by Universal. At the Colony, New York, week of Jan. 28.

Rather better than the routine knockabout comic. Good deal of ingenuity goes into making of a burlesque fire department story. Dumb hero takes sweetie out motoring in the hook and ladder stolen from his fire company. While they're gone biscuits she left in oven burn and an alarm is turned in.

Entire department arrives on scene same time hero rolls up in hook and ladder and burlesque rescue ensue, with throwing of characters from fourth-story windows into fire net or plop onto pavement good for laughs. Sweetie's papa, the fire chief, gets most of the bumps. Well sustained rough house and riot for kids of average fan mob.

Rush.

WILD PUPPIES

Fox production directed by Clyde Carruth and featuring the Fox kids and animals. Story by Fred Spencer and Sidney Levee; photographed by George Meehan. Reviewed in projection room Jan. 12. Running time, 18 minutes.

One of the Fox juvenile comedies, featuring a miniature war between rival gangs of kids. Numerous novel warfare contraptions are used and should be a knockout with the younger customers.

All right for the adult trade, too.

HAVE A DRINK

Record make. Edited and titled by Beth Brown. At Rialto, New York, week Jan. 21. Running time, 3 minutes.

Best thing about this assembly of running water scenes is the title—and that's disappointing, since it's water only.

Just a series of views of rapids, falls and placid streams. Doesn't mean a thing but utilized nicely at the Rialto as a background for the orchestra's overture.

Slide says of Record make and certainly of record length for a short, three minutes.

Dailies Ahead of Mags

The dailies were running behind the magazines in national advertising lineage, but it is now reversed. Automobile advertising has dropped off in the mags and increased in the dailies. Allotments for national publicity by motor manufacturers appear to be a reaction of price cutting between the makes, with radio outlay a possible factor. Last week a national weekly quoted a price on a popular car, with one of New York's dailies contradicting that figure.

The reduction in adv lineage in the mags is reported to have already affected writers. One assigned to write two articles on a national issue was asked to confine his work to one. The inference is that the magazines are overboard with stories and articles.

Pays But Stalls

There is a prominent monthly mag in New York that decides and pays promptly on articles, but sometimes takes a long time to get round to the publication.

A contributor recently wrote the Ed: "You have solved the problem of writing for posterity."

"Canary Murder Case," Film

"The Canary Murder Case," book by S. S. Van Dine (Willard Hunting Wright), has been bought by Paramount.

Price reported between $15,000 and $20,000.

Organizing Fan Sentiment

An experiment in consolidating local film fan sentiment is in progress by the Syracuse, N. Y., "Herald" under the direction of Chester B. Bahn, dramatic editor of the publication. It is called the Cinema Critics' Club (or Tri-C), and membership is limited to 50. Meetings are held the first Wednesday of every month in the Public Library and are widely attended by non-members. The club holds a dinner once a month.

President is Prof. Walter P. McIntosh, head of the English department of Syracuse North High School, and the membership includes students, business men and women, teachers and housewives, representing a wide range of fan taste, according to Bahn.

Meetings are given over to discussion of current pictures and other appropriate subjects, while a member acts as guest critic for the "Herald" every week. Syracuse house managers admit the club, and in consequence the "Herald's" picture reviews, have a distinct effect at the boxoffice, and Bahn asserts the plan has made circulation for his publication, as well as earned good will of the theatres since fans are interested in the paper's screen department, and more or less react to its critical judgment on current bills. They take the attitude that anything that stimulates local interest in the screen is good for the box office.

Although the Tri-C started as a newspaper promotion, it pays its own way. Annual dues are $2 and members pay $1 for each supper meeting, of which 10 a year are held.

The club celebrated its first anniversary in January upon which occasion the "Herald" published an extra supplement given over to articles by members, a resume of the year, greetings from notables of the screen and such material.

Harold Hersey's Denial

Harold Hersey stands up to relate that Variety's broadcast of his retirement as supervising editor of Bernarr Macfadden's "True Story" mag was a trifle wrong; that the short and accurate way to describe it would have been to say that he merely resigned, which is true, as Mr. Hersey states. He's at his country home, "Rockridge," Highland, N. Y., preparing the second edition of his magazine "Selah."

Another contradiction to the same item is that Fulton Oursler states he has no intention of returning to the Macfadden forces. The item said Oursler might return to it.

"Bernarr Macfadden, who thinks with his heart, is too deep for you sophisticates. He goes his lonely way carving his own niche and without any traffic in pseudo-intellectuality and that is about the best thing that can be said for any man, living or dead," etc.

Well, there was a panic among Variety's crew over that "pseudo-intellectuality." It's the longest word, hyphenated or not, that any rummy Variety reporter ever tried to pronounce, much less define. Two of the boys wanted to wire Mr. Hersey for the exclusive rights, stage, screen and road. Calmer minds prevailed with some discussion as to whether Mr. Hersey could explain his scheme and if he could, would he?

One of the boys said the foreign rights alone would be sufficient and that he could ship the word over to Europe without Mr. Hersey's consent or knowledge. Another of Variety's near-brilliant rumors wanted to use it for a picture title but expressed fear it wouldn't fit into the electrics.

The argument was settled when a notice went up on the bulletin board in Variety's office that no member of the staff could use the double-header over once weekly in any story, until further notice. Also that Mr. Hersey was not to be annoyed for any reason; that Highland, N. Y., is a quiet village and anyway, Mr. Hersey sent the double-decker out of town.

Pseudo-Intellectuality! Not a guy in the office knows either end of it. One said pseudo was the Spanish way of spelling suade. And then he couldn't spell suade.

New York "News" New Building

A 20-story building for its plant has been arranged for by the New York "Daily News" on East 42nd street, between 3rd and 2nd avenues. It will contain the New York offices of the Chicago "Daily Tribune" and "Liberty," totaling the three big Patterson publications.

Coast and Critics

One of the writing picture men of Hollywood has an idea the scheme would prove beneficial to the critics of the dailies and the picture field, if the critics were invited to Hollywood, to secure first-hand info at the studios as to film making. The other side is that the plan might prove to be a continuous chain, with the never ending change of critics on the dailies all over the country.

Smart Chorus Girl

The story of the week at the Milwaukee Press Club regards a Milwaukee newspaperman, former police reporter, who used to complain of his wife's mania for detective fiction.

The newspaperman married a chorus girl and her thirst for detective stories kept the reporter shelling out two-bit pieces for "crime" magazines. The reporter told his wife that instead of buying her magazines he would tell her true stories gleaned from the days when he was on the police run.

After hearing three or four of the yarns, the wife told the reporter to write them out for her. He did. The wife mailed the stories to the magazines. They were bought. She now is spending the checks on more detective magazines.

Judge Lindsey's Rep

Reformers, especially those who harp on books that may be a little outspoken, are reported stumped on "The Companionate Marriage," the best seller by Judge Ben B. Lindsey.

If written by anyone else, the reformers might have torn into the book, especially up around Boston way, but Judge Lindsey's rep has held them back. Wainwright Evans wrote the book, with information furnished by Judge Lindsey.

Heavy-Minded "Times"

One of the New York "Times's" staff, reading in Variety the Joe Frisco gag, about "It was the night before Christmas and all the boys tried to make Mary," thought he would repeat it in the editorial rooms for a laugh.

First he told it, then explained it and then spelled out "Mary" and then he didn't get a laugh.

"Graphic" Elevation

Emil H. Gauvreau is now editor and publisher of Macfadden's New York "Evening Graphic," an elevation. Wm. E. Plummer has been made managing editor, with Howard Swain, city editor. The Graphic," last week, started a serial by Bossy Gills, the freak nut mayor of Newburyville, Mass., whom Thomas Carens, political writer on the Boston "Herald," brought into publicity.

Ortin Goodwin in Trouble

Ortin Goodwin, former newspaper man of Seattle, was arrested by Federal authorities on a charge of having defrauded through mails in connection with a mining deal near Seattle, involving about $1,000,000. Goodwin was arrested in Los Angeles and held in $5,000 bail.

Thyra Winslow's Exception

An exception in the importation of eastern writers to the Paramount's western studios through the agency of Herman J. Mankiewcz appears to have been made for Thyra Samter Winslow. Miss Winslow is reported leaving for Hollywood April 1, at a reputed weekly salary of $350, with a guarantee of 12 weeks. Mankie's other recruits have been transferred west for a maximum of five weeks on the experiment, at $200 a week.

With either, however, the acceptance of a script while on the lot brings a bonus of $5,000 immediately, without regard to salary.

Wilstach's Inside Stuff

"The Picture Game," novelette by John Wilstach, revealing the inside on movie financing, is featured on the cover of this week's Argosy-All Story Magazine. Wilstach has done movie press work in the past.

Nanette Kutner Breaks In

Nanette Kutner is the youngest authoress to make "Cosmopolitan." Her first fiction yarn, short story, appears in the March issue. Ray Long, the editor, has asked her for a serial. Miss Kutner is 22 and was 21 when she received her check of acceptance.

The p. a. is continuing as a free-lance publicist in addition to writing.

Macdonald Prize News Story

The prize offered by "The Bookman" in its awards for the best newspaper stories goes to Charles Macdonald of the Boston "Transcript" on his Florence Mills' funeral story. It is reprinted in the February "Bookman."

$5,000 Settlement

Action taken by Anna Young Klaus, legatee of the estate of Isabella Ostrander Lamb, authoress, against Robert McBride & Co., publishers, for unpaid royalties, has resulted in an offer of $5,000 in settlement which will be accepted. Abner J. Rubien attorney for Miss Klaus.

Miss Lamb, author of over two dozen detective novels, and who died about two years ago, left her property to Miss Klaus, a companion. Miss Klaus claimed that the publishers had sold second serial rights for the novels without authorization and, when placing the investigation in her attorney's hands, found also that royalties on foreign sales as well as domestic had not been accounted for.

The Outdoor Show Biz

A new outdoor show publication, called "Amusement Park Management," has made its appearance, published in New York. It is a monthly, with the intention to make it a weekly if it gets across. Joseph Hoffman is editing. "The Billboard" has the futile and useless outdoor field sewed up for whatever that is worth.

Mrs. Roche's Hot Stuff

"Move Over" is called hot stuff by the visitors at Palm Beach. The book is by Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, who has dramatized it. Edgar Selwyn is reported as the stage producer.

Ethel Pettit, whom the book labels as the writer, is the author's maiden name. It's a satirical novel caricaturing the lives of the ritzy winter-time Palmbeacher.

The Roches have been resident of the Florida resort for several seasons. They have mixed with the brighter lights down there, and the book in its dialog is claimed to disclose a reflection of that association.

Ambitious College Girl

Margot Matson, of Cleveland, attending the School of Journalism at Columbia University, New York, doubles evenings for the "Evening Graphic" as reporter and second string dramatic reviewer.

Miss Matson, said to be a beautiful young woman, studies journalism in the mornings.

Herbert Moulton, former drama writer on the Los Angeles "Times," has been working on the Paramount lot for the past four weeks, writing an article for Encyclopedia Britanica, to which Jesse Lasky's name will be attached. The producer was invited to do a history of the film industry for the literary work.

ACTS' SALARIES SMALL, LITTLE WORK IN OR AROUND CHICAGO—CONDITION BAD

Performers Playing Nightly for from $2 to $10—"Staking" Seems Chief Industry in Loop—Agents Not in Much Better Shape—Bottom Drops Clean Out of Vaudfilm Local Situation

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Plodding along in an apparently insurmountable rut, hoping against hope, not within 10 years has Chicago vaudfilm theatrical business been in such pitiful condition as it is now.

Performers and agents are down, almost cut and not quite sure what it's all about. They're painfully aware that dollars have developed into elusive discs of suddenly portentious dimensions.

Outside of Publix and a few de luxe independents, there is hardly a local house in the vicinity which can, or will, pay an act full salary. This year there haven't been more than five vaudeville routes of 20 weeks issued from Chicago—and these had 15 cut-week houses on the contracts. Chicago, alone, previously supported from 12 to 15 weeks of vaudeville, booked direct from this city. Today there are three lonely weeks, all cuts.

Hotels and Bills

Theatrical hotels report they're "carrying" performers two to 12 weeks, and in most cases chances of collection are so dim as to be invisible. From morning to night the boys line up outside the Woods building 200, sometimes 300, strong; likewise they're in front of the State-Lake building and Loop End building. Now and then they make the rounds, exchanging greetings with the agents, hearing the inevitable mention of nothing doing, and then return to the eternal sidewalk vigil.

The smaller performers are panicky. But even the better known acts who indicate better times by stopping at the Morrison, Sherman and Eastgate, are up against it.

The W. V. M. A., K-A, Gus Sun-Billy Diamond office, C. L. Carrell office and Johnny Jones-Loew office are besieged day and night by more performers than ever were hitting the spots before. Standard small time acts are playing one night stands at $5, 7 and $10, and begging for more. Many haven't even carfare to blow the town.

Small time managers, usually booking five acts for $50, have been so affected by the horde of acts desperate for work that they've stuffed bills with extra acts and paid out a few more dollars, just to give performers a chance to exist. Their generous efforts to relieve the situation are tremendously appreciated, but things have reached a pass where it is impossible to combat tough times on so small a scale.

One small time actor came into an agent's office begging for work at any price. Told there were no open dates he said he had to have enough money for food but wouldn't stoop to panhandling, no matter what happened. He was placed on an already overfilled bill for one night at $2, and claimed it was the only break he'd had in months.

6 Agents "Breaking"

Out of the 16 agents doing business with the W. V. M. A.-K-A office, three are making a little money, three more are making living expenses and the rest are plugging along in the red.

Independent agents, having a broader field through being able to charge 10 per cent and booking picture houses besides vaude, are nevertheless in tough financial condition. Only four can be classed as profitable, the others strictly red ink entries.

Musicians, although the local union is one of the fastest and most efficiently conducted organizations in the country, outnumber the jobs available and it seems impossible to get employment back to normalcy.

Disastrous Condition

The disastrous condition of theatrical business in and around Chicago cannot be overemphasized. There are individual cases where outside aid was voluntarily given, though it could ill be afforded.

There is one ray of hope. Publix has started producing units in Chicago, with routes starting here. Using chorines and acts suited to presentations, this may bring relief to a certain extent. But for the straight, small time vaudevillians the future is just the future, and no one wants to peek around the corner. But it couldn't be much worse.

Home Screen Test

A former vaude actor now featured in a Broadway musical is taking his home movies very seriously. The lad was once on the Coast, taking a screen test.

Now he's got his own camera before which he tries out and then watches it run off on the parlor projector, picking his mistakes. The idea is that if he ever folds up as a stage comic he may be able to do something in the studios. Smart?

Walter Bradbury Says Stage Hands Beat Him

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Walter Bradbury, playing picture houses, has filed suit for $50,000 against Marks Bros. and three of their stage hands at the Marbro theatre, charging he was assaulted and considerably battered by the hands.

According to Bradbury, while playing the Granada theatre New Year's eve, he asked for one of about forty sandwiches that had been sent backstage. The stage hands, Bradbury alleges, informed him that such things weren't for actors, so he claims he said: "Very well, thank you," and let it go at that.

The following week while Marks Bros. unit was at the Marbro, Bradbury charges he was hauled into the alley behind the theatre for a beating and heeling by the same stage hands.

The men named in the suit are Harry Woods, Larry Giannescki and Jack Ginsburg.

St. Louis Singing Policeman Decides for Stage Only

St. Louis, Feb. 7.

With a farewell stage show built around him at the Missouri called "So Long, Arthur," the former singing policeman, Arthur Nealy, left that theatre to act as master of ceremonies at the Shenandoah, 2312 South Gr....d boulevard.

Nealy has been at the Missouri for 22-weeks' engagement and has featured numerous song hits as part of the stage shows. He has resigned from the police force.

Marion Harris Engaged To Kolk, Banker's Son

Marion Harris' vaude salary, opening at the Orpheum, St. Louis, is $1,750, $500 rise on her previous vaude salary. She went into production at $1,500, getting that much from Gene Buck when in "Yours Truly." She was since with the Shuberts in "A Night in Spain," being succeeded by Aileen Stanley in Chicago.

Miss Harris, who is under a five-year contract to Gene Buck, is paying the latter 10 percent on her earnings by arrangement. This phase of it may be legally adjusted.

Miss Harris is due for a Kit-Cat Club engagement in London in the summer, and may take her fiance, Walter Scott Kolk, from "Take the Air," with her. Kolk is the son of a banker, who was placed with Buck's "Air" show at Miss Harris' request.

JESSEL'S VALET LOSES

Dismissed for Reason, Decides Jury in $795 Wage Claim

A religious and racial issue was on trial in a $795 wage claim by David Hallar, negro valet to George Jessel, who complained he had that sum at the rate of $60 a week due him when discharged by Jessel in Montreal, while on tour with "The Jazz Singer."

The jury before Magistrate Lewis in Municipal Court found for Jessel, dismissing Hallar's complaint after Jessel testified that the reason for Hallar's dismissal was insubordination, coupled with some comment about Jessel's faith.

The valet, through Attorney Billups of the colored law firm of Billups & Johnson, refuted this, stating that his mother was Jewish and for this reason he could not be accused of any disrespect to the faith.

Commish Suit Against Girl in Jail Stopped

Jenie Jacobs, despite her allegation of a meritorious claim for $1,200 commissions against Dorothy Mackaye, has instructed her attorneys, Kendler & Goldstein, to formally discontinue the suit which was started a year and a half ago, some time prior to Miss Mackaye's misfortune with the authorities as the result of her husband's, Ray Raymon, death, for which Paul Kelly, also an actor, is serving a prison term in San Quentin, Cal. Miss Mackaye is also serving a one to three-year sentence in connection with it.

Miss Jacobs states she forgot about her suit, one of several against professionals for accrued commissions. The defense counsel's filing of a notice of trial was a matter of office detail, he not figuring that the agent might discontinue the suit altogether.

War Hero's Act With 4-Reels of "Chevrons"

Clayton K. Slack, world war hero and one of the 54 living holders of the Congressional Medal of Honor, has been booked by the Loew Circuit upon recommendation of Dave Loew. Slack will due a spiel in connection with four reels of war pictures.

The film is part of "Gold Chevrons," which showed at the Cameo last November. Slack made good on a tryout recently. He opens his Loew tour next week, splitting between the Melba and Willard.

Lambs' Gambol Skit in Vaude

"Guilty or Not Guilty?" recent Lambs' Gambol piece, is to become a vaude act, with John Connolly, Herbert Haywood and Jeanne De-Mar as the principals.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Announce

Following is the announcement, verbatim, sent out on the Keith-Albee-Orpheum merger.

Lee Shubert becomes a director through holding a block of stock he secured some years ago, coming out of one of the late A. Paul Keith's bequests. At the time, Shubert made the purchase in order to obtain statements of the Keith's vaudeville theatres, preliminary at that period to the Shuberts starting their own, but flopping vaudeville circuit.

The C. L. Kohl named is Mrs. Charles E. (Caroline) Kohl, of Chicago. Herman Fehr is of Milwaukee, the Pabst attorney in that town, and always interested in the Orpheum Circuit. Joseph Finn is the former partner of Marcus Heiman, and became active in the Orpheum Circuit's management when Heiman assumed its presidency.

Walter P. Cooke, another of the directors, has been a Keith attorney and is of the K-A end, as is B. L. Heidingsfeld, of Cincinnati, of the K-A group in that city, with Frank Tate, of St. Louis, another now figured as K-A.

In division in the board of directors, the former Orpheum would be represented much in the minority.

The announcement:

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Officers Announced

The first meeting of the Board of Directors of the newly-formed Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation was held on Monday of this week, and the following officers and directors were elected:

Officers

President	E. F. Albee
Executive Vice-President	Marcus Heiman
Vice-Pres. and Gen. Mgr.	John J. Murdock
Vice-Pres.	C. L. Kohl
Vice-Pres. and Exec. Mgr.	E. G. Lauder, Jr.
Vice-Pres.	Reed A. Albee
Vice-Pres.	J. Henry Walters
Vice-Pres. and Gen. Counsel	Maurice Goodman
Secretary	B. B. Kahane
Treasurer	Myron Robinson
Ass. Sec. and Director of Publicity	Mark A. Luescher
Ass. Treasurer	William J. Kernan

Walter P. Cooke	Joseph M. Finn
B. L. Heidingsfeld	Herman Fehr
Lee Shubert	C. L. Kohl
Frank R. Tate

Edward V. Darling and Max Gordon, respectively, general managers of the Booking Department and the Production Department.

This consolidation of interests and the election of its officers completes the organization of one of the largest theatrical enterprises. E. F. Albee will be the president and Marcus Heiman the executive vice-president, and throughout the personnel it will be observed that the eastern circuit and its new western ally (Orpheum) are equally represented both on the roster of officers and on the directorate, forming a combination of executive efficiency and ability.

J. J. Murdock, associated with vaudeville for 35 years, is vice-president and executive manager.

Edward V. Darling is general manager of the booking department, and Max Gordon general manager of the production department, and this combination assures an entertainment bureau, which, with its various departments and lieutenants and with the branches in Boston, Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles, assures a series of programs that will set a new high standard.

The publicity will be centralized in a general bureau, under the direction of Mark A. Luescher, director of promotion and publicity.

The headquarters at the Palace Theatre Building will house the main administration bureaus, and work has already begun on the details of co-ordinating the various departments of these two great institutions into one organization which will function as a single unit from now on in the direction of the combined interests which control book and conduct, with its affiliations, one of the greatest chains of theatres in the United States and Canada.

Jeanne LaMar Knows How to Protect Herself

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Jeanne LaMar, claiming the title of champ woman boxer, found that used against her when Judge Bush in Municipal court refused to hold Thomas Falllace, her husband, on a charge of attacking her.

The court based its decision of not guilty on the ground that Miss LaMar is capable of handling herself.

Faillace, pro golfer, who uses the name of Tom Faye, was haled into court by his boxing wife after an argument in their home, during which Miss LaMar claimed she was knocked out. Faye said he was forced to put over a couple in self defense as she was angling for a K. O. herself. After the court trial Miss LaMar announced she had filed suit to have her marriage annuled.

Marjorie White Rushed To Hospital from Stage

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Marjorie White of White and Tierney, who opened Sunday at Hill street, was rushed to the California Lutheran Hospital immediately after her first show. She was operated on for acute appendicitis.

Ed Tierney, her partner and husband, appeared alone doing a monolog. Record and Caverly were brought in Monday to replace the turn for balance of the week.

Miss White's condition was reported late last night as favorable.

COMIC STAVED OFF PANIC

Amarillo, Tex., Feb. 7.

Rody Jordan, blackface comedian, told stories and played a saxaphone until smoke drove him from the stage in a fire at the Fair theatre here, preventing a panic.

The theatre was emptied in an orderly manner, but the house was considerably damaged.

Colored Team Suing Leslie for Breach

Rucker and Perrin, vaude team, have brought action against Lew Leslie to recover $3,100 claimed for alleged breach of contract on "Blackbirds," which Leslie produced in London.

Louis Handin of 1501 Broadway is attorney for the plaintiffs.

SHAPIRO-O'MALLEY QUIT

Detroit, Feb. 7.

Abe Shapiro and Jack O'Malley, standard two-act for several years, have discontinued as performers and will enter the agency business in Chicago.

They played their final date in Detroit last week for Charlie Mack.

HARRY CRULL IN J. C.

Harry W. Crull, manager of the Branford, Newark, N. J., will assume charge of the new 4,500-seat Stanley, Jersey City, when that house opens next month.

Crull, now staging the shows at the Branford, will supervise production at both houses.

SCHIRESON, BEAUTY FIXER, GETS IN ANOTHER BAD JAM

Amputation of Both Legs of Elsie Holland, Non-Pro, Blamed Upon General Mender of Maps—Girl Wanted Bow Legs Straightened

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Dr. Henry J. Schireson, beauty specialist with fame mostly secure through treating show people with resultant publicity, is in another bad jam.

Elsie Holland, non-professional, has had both of her legs amputated, through gangrene having set in following an operation to take the bow out of them.

Schireson is blamed, but alleges he did not perform the leg operation. At a hearing it was claimed that Dr. Zaph, head surgeon of the Osteopathic hospital, performed the operation for the removal of the bow, while Schireson had previously removed a scar from the girl's shoulder.

Miss Holland called at Schireson's office to have the scar removed. She is said to have also consulted him about straightening her legs, without any report as to whether Schireson suggested the bow operation. Upon being taken to the Osteopathic hospital, the leg operation was performed.

Some days later the girl's family insisted that their family physician assume charge and removed Miss Holland to the Wesley Memorial Hospital. Following gangrene set in, obliging the amputations.

Another defense by Schireson at the hearing was that the removal of the girl was injurious to the patient and started the gangrene. It is also alleged by Schireson that the American Medical Association dislikes the publicity he has received and has repeatedly started a campaign to have his medical license in this state revoked. The Illinois state license inspector refused to revoke Schireson's license.

Schireson claims he will start damage and conspiracy suits against the association and some of the daily papers here that have given Schireson a bad rapping over the matter.

A. M. A. Prints Record

In the Journal of the American Medical Association of Feb. 4, an editorial headed, "Schireson—The Disgrace of Illinois," relates Schireson's career since 1911. It contains 23 counts against him and ends: "How much longer will Illinois tolerate Henry Junius Schireson?"

Dr. Schireson has made his headquarters in Chicago for the past few years. He is known as a "publicity hound" and has especially sought theatrical people as patients for the prospective press work, presumably profiting through lay people from it.

Schireson's biggest publicity patient of late was Fannie Brice.

Yes and No

Agents complain of a devil-and-sea situation with the vaude bookers. When they submit familiar vaude names the bookers squawk; when new names and acts are submitted they will have nothing to do with them. The reason is the acts are unknown, etc.

The agents burn up because the picture houses have been paying fancy salaries to these same unknown (to vaude) acts.

Vaude Acts on Coast Receive Vita Offers

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

With over 300 Vitaphone units installed throughout the country and orders in for 50 more to be installed in theatres over the west coast, the Vitaphone studio in Hollywood is working to capacity.

Most every available vaude act with a big name visiting or playing Los Angeles is negotiated with for making Vita numbers.

It takes from one to five days to make a single 10-minute number with as many as five different changes in settings and costumes. This is an improvement accomplished recently, which makes the talking device as flexible as a motion picture.

Benny Rubin in Film For Fox; Also W.C.'s M.C

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Benny Rubin, functioning as m. c. for West Coast Theatres Circuit in Fanchon and Marco units, is doing a double job, also appearing in a comedy picture for Fox. He has been placed under a six months' Fox option as well as having signed a one-year contract as permanent m. c. in a Los Angeles house for West Coast.

Benny's mornings will be devoted to studio work and his afternoons and evenings to the theatre.

Howard Bros. and Penny Named for Film Houses

Willie and Eugene Howard will play picture houses between the closing of the present "Scandals" and the readying of the next edition for which they are slated.

It is also reported that Ann Pennington is another recruit for cinema spots. She may make a swing around West Coast Theatres for Fanchon and Marco.

Wilfred Clark for Loew

Wilfred Clark has been playing straight farces in vaudeville for years. Recently he commissioned Harry Clark and Percy Wenrich to fix up a musical version of his skit, "What'll Happen Next?" which Alf T. Wilton booked this week for a tour of the Loew Circuit, starting next week at the Premier, Brooklyn. Clark has been a fixture on K-A time.

Wilton also obtained Loew routes for Eddie Hodge's band and Jack Conway Co. Other bookings by Wilton included Olga Steck with the Stanley Co.; Al Tucker's orchestra, through Steve Forrest, and the Four Symphonists.

Genuine Male Soprano

What is touted as the only genuine male soprano the show business will be seen in America when Charles De Thome arrives shortly from Hungary.

Joe Fejer, Hungarian gypsy band leader, is importing De Thome. Edgar Allan Woolf is writing an act for four people, since De Thome is also a dramatic player and pianist. The sketch will introduce all his talents.

WILLIAMS SERIOUSLY ILL

Ernie Williams, Loew booker, is critically ill.

Recently Williams suffered a collapse, but persisted in reporting for work. His condition became such that he had to remain home for treatment, with no change noted in his illness within the past week.

Detroit, Feb. 7.

Col. W. S. and Mrs. Butterfield will sail Feb. 11 from New York on a Mediterranian cruise. They will return in May.

PEGGY HOPE'S PARTNER

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Clarence Nordstrom, musical comedy juvenile, and Peggy Hope, soubret with local company of "Sunny," have teamed for vaudeville.

They open for Pantages here Feb. 27.

HAYAKAWA'S NEW ONE

Sessue Hayakawa, Jap film star, is shelving his current vaude playlet for a new sketch by Tom Barry.

AL JOLSON'S $10,000 GUARANTEE AND 50-50

Playing One Week at State, St. Louis—Then Back to Palm Beach

Palm Beach, Feb. 7.

Al Jolson will appear next week at Loew's State, St. Louis, under a guarantee of $10,000 up to $25,000 and 50-50 over that amount.

He left here Saturday (4th) for New York.

St. Louis, Feb. 7.

Al Jolson's engagement at the State next week will have to beat $45,000 house record, made by "The Big Parade." "The Student Prince" did $39,900 there a couple of weeks ago. Last week it did $24,000.

One way it is hoped to tilt the high gross is through Jolson making the request that all mats be paced at 50 cents, a slight increase of the current scale. The State's average is around $23,000 to $24,000.

Al Jolson reached New York Monday and will leave today (Wednesday). He is going through to St. Louis, for a day or so, in advance of his State's opening.

Following the St. Louis engagement, Al intends returning to Palm Beach for a benefit there Feb. 21.

No other theatre dates at present have been made by him. He has repeatedly declined to appear in the Broadway picture houses under any terms, while his Vitaphone picture of "The Jazz Singer" (Warner) is at the Warner's theatre at the $2 scale.

LOWRY'S 2D VACATION

M. C. and Columnist Got Chance With Mae Murray on Stage

St. Louis, Feb. 7.

Ed Lowry, record-holding master of ceremonies at the Ambassador (Skouras Brothers) theatre in downtown St. Louis, took another vacation last week while Mae Murray was starring at the Ambassador.

Ed, who has packed the Ambassador for six months, returned to his Ambassadorial duties this week after a trip to New York.

Being a columnist of no mean punning parts, Ed wired his humorous stuff every day to the St. Louis "Times," which has flooded the city with one-sheets, two-sheets and such announcing that Ed's column is a daily feature in that newspaper.

Orpheum's Coast Houses Trying M. C.s Themselves

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Orpheum houses on the coast, evidently feeling the stage band policy in the West Coast movie parlors, will try the master of ceremonies gag.

Charlie Irwin will play a run in each house opening Feb. 18 in Oakland and later going to the Orpheum, San Francisco for four weeks.

Eventually he will open at the local Orpheum for an indefinite engagement.

"DELIGHTFUL," SAYS BLOSSOM

Boston, Feb. 8.

"Our present associations are delightful," says Blossom Seeley and Bennie Fields, referring to their current engagement in the Shuberts' "G. V. F."

It also refers to a report in last week's Variety, suggesting dissatisfaction.

Alice Brady's Sketch Tour

Alice Brady has passed up the idea of being playlet star for the Greenwich Village Theatre and will enter vaudeville instead.

Miss Brady will open in a sketch at the Palace, Chicago, Feb. 20. Three in support.

Tommy Dugan, Film Actor

Tommy Dugan, formerly of Dugan and Raymond, who retired from vaude two seasons ago to become material writer, will shortly go to film acting having been signed for "Dressed to Kill," forthcoming Fox Film.

Billy Gould, another vaude actor, will be in the cast of the same film.

MARKUS AGAIN LEADS INDIE BOOKERS; 110 HOUSES ON BOOKS

Linder Second With 80—Same Relative Standing as Before—No Gain in Business With Some Indie Houses Hardly Breaking Even

SPOT LOOKED SOFT

A vaudevillian in Philadelphia, says John A. Murray of that city, heard there were nine acts in "The Strange Interlude," at the Golden theatre, New York.

Rushing to his agent, he said:

"That Golden in New York looks like a soft spot. Nine acts playing once a day. Set me in, can you?"

Sayag's All-American Show for Paris Cafe

The complete show Edmund Sayag has booked for the Ambassadeurs, Paris, cafe, through the William Morris Agency sails in two shifts to open May 10 for eight weeks, with an option of eight more. The 16 choristers sail April 11 and the principals April 25.

The latter include Buster West and John West, his father (Virginia, mother, of the 3-act is in retirement), Bud and Jack Pearson, Darlo and Irene, Mignon Laird, Katherine Ray, Myrio, Desha and Barte, and Waring's Pennsylvanians.

The show will cost Sayag around $8,500 weekly.

Johnson's Electrical Act Cancels, With Alibis

H. M. Giles, manager for Bernays Johnson, the electric chair defier, has issued a statement that the electrical novelty act has been forced to cancel 24 weeks of advance bookings by order of Dr. Harry Rich, Johnson's personal physician. Johnson is said to have suffered a severe shock affecting his left side and leaving it partially paralyzed.

Dr. Rich, attached to St. Vincent's hospital, Newark, is quoted as ascribing Johnson's disability to irregular hours and improper dieting.

Avalon and Vaude

Loew's Avalon, Brooklyn, N. Y., which opened several weeks ago with straight picture policy, may go vaudeville in a couple of weeks.

Avalon, 2,500-seater, is in the Kings Highway section of Brooklyn in an area much over-seated through the Schwartz Circuit having two large houses on Kingsway and Mayfair, as well as nine other independent theatres within a close radius.

It is figured the Loew house will add vaudeville, although nothing definite on this score has been set yet.

Dunedin Quits Agenting

Jimmy Dunedin, former vaudeville performer, but of late years an agent for Keith-Albee, has gone back to his act.

Dunedin broke in last week and is on his bicycle.

Little Gangsters' Turn

Johnnie Down, Mary Kornan and "Scooter" Lowry, of "Our Gang" comedies are in New York.

They are going on the Loew circuit as an act.

PEACHES FOR K-A IN N. Y.

Keith-Albee is following the Fox houses in New York in the playing of Peaches Browning as a headliner.

After bookings by K-A for the girl out of town, Peaches will appear in the K-A booked Moss houses of Greater New York.

Lillian Shaw with Pan

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Pantages has signed Lillian Shaw for ten weeks. She opens next week in San Francisco.

Little fluctuation in the mid-season standing of independent bookers. Few additions within the past month and with the previous ratings of independents before the new year practically the same.

Fally Markus maintains supremacy with 110 houses, including split weeks, last halves, one and two-day stands.

Jack Linder, through a tie-up with the Walters-Denish Agency, Boston, booking some 20 houses in New England territory, holds second place with 80 houses, also including splits, halves, one and two-day stands.

Arthur Fisher Agency and A. & B. Dow are practically tied with 20 houses, with Fisher having the edge on the money angle through having the greater number of split week stands. The Plimmer-Leon combine is next with 18 houses, while John Coutts holds 15.

Smaller independents holding five houses or less are not included.

Business conditions in most of the independent stands have shown but a slight gain, with the majority of houses just about breaking even, while others are in the red.

Latter is mostly due to spotting in over-seated towns and with the business seemingly impossible to get despite occasional plunging on shows.

Rogers Can Have Half The Gross in Pan's House

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Alexander Pantages will split the gross of any of his theatres Will Rogers cares to play.

William Rowland of Lyons & Lyons conceived the idea of Alex and Will getting together. It looks like a possibility although Rogers is holding the proposition in abeyance until he fills some concert engagements.

Doc Rockwell Shubert

Dr. ockwell will be lost to vaude for next three years. He has signed for that term with Jake and Lee.

"Doc" is featured in the current "Greenwich Village Follies," produced by the Shuberts with contract calling for his being starred in a musical at the expiration of the run of "Greenwich Village Follies."

LE MAIRE AND VAN-LOEW'S

Marvin Schenck, of the Loew booking office, has given LeMaire and Van, the blackface talking comedy team, a full route on the Loew vaudeville time. They open next week at the State, New York.

LeMaire and Van have established rather a good talking disc following, around which Schenck expects to take advantage in the exploitation of the turn.

ENGAGED BY COCHRAN

Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield will sail for London on the "Berengaria" Feb. 11, to appear in C. B. Cochran's new revue.

Castleton and Mack will sail Feb. 11 on the "Leviathan" for the same Cochran show.

EDNA HIBBARD IN PLAYLET

Edna Hibbard is withdrawing from "It Is to Laugh." She will return to vaude in "Five Minutes from the Station," under direction of Albert Lewis.

MARTIN BECKS SAIL

Martin Beck sailed for a trip to the coast cities of northern Africa Tuesday. He is accompanied by Mrs. Beck.

Olga Steck Goes P. H.

Olga Steck, prima, has gone picture house. She's at Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, this week.

Alf T. Wilton did it.

K-A AGENTS MUST SHOW UP—DARLING

Agency heads booking with K-A-O will hereafter have to make thrice weekly personal appearances on the booking floors, according to an edict handed down last week by Edward Darling, chief booker, or else.

Agents constantly represented upon the booking floor by younger assistants and seldom dropping in, even socially, may find themselves in a jam, according to the Darling edict.

The announcement had most of the boys on their toes. Many personal appearances happened late last week, with many making their first appearance on the floor in weeks.

Loew's Taking Care Of Ass't Managers

Five more promotions of assistants to managerial posts in houses of the Loew Greater New York list.

Harry Brown, former assistant at the State, New York, as manager of Manor, Brooklyn; George Oshrin, assistant at Hillside, Jamaica, to manager of Brevoort, Brooklyn; Frank Stedman, former assistant at Sheridan, to State as assistant; A. L. Greene, from Manor to Avalon as manager, with John Hope, new with the organization, going to the Sheridan as assistant to fill Stedman's former assignment.

The Loew Circuit has been most prolific in promoting assistant managers who have shown managerial timber, this being the third group elevated within the past couple of months.

Pan's Special Weeks

Special weeks such as "anniversary week," "carnival week" and "international week" are now certain for presentment in the Pantages-booked houses in Brooklyn and Long Island during the remainder of the winter. In arranging the special weeks, the usual five-act bills will be increased to eight on each split.

All bills are being booked by Bob Burns in the N. Y. Pan office.

MORRISON'S L. A. OFFICE

Charlie Morrison, K-A agent, will inaugurate a Los Angeles office next month. Morrison may hop out there, either taking a representative with him or selecting one upon arrival.

He will be the first K-A agent to establish a talent-scout on the Coast.

He does not choose to drive it.

Stage Bands Out In 2 Loew Houses

With the stage band-presentation unit policy practically flopping for Loew's Melba, Brooklyn, and Temple, Birmingham, Ala., it is probable that both houses will shortly revert to their former vaud-film policies.

The stage band-presentation units have worked successfully in other Loew stands but failed at the Brooklyn and Birmingham house after several weeks. J. H. Lubin, chief booker of the Loew vaudeville circuit, is convinced that these respective stands do not want the present policy.

Clash on "Nightstick"

Ben Boyar's decision to revive the vaude version of "Nightstick" was given a setback last week when Louis Werba, controller of the road rights to the piece, served notice on Boyar that he would institute legal proceedings to restrain the vaude producer.

Boyar is casting the vaude version and claims he will open it next week.

"Nightstick" is an elaboration of a vaude act which Boyar previously produced as "One of the Finest." Boyar claims to have secured the vaude rights from the author, John Wray, also stating he will project the sketch under the title of "Nightstick."

AILS' K-A DATES

After weeks of holding off, K-A resumed negotiations last week with Roscoe Ails and routed him solidly, starting Feb. 27 at Reading and Harrisburg, Pa. Ails has been playing independent dates in and around New York. He is booked by K-A until June.

Clint Lake, Foster's G. Mgr.

Clinton Lake, former manager of the Hippodrome, New York, has been appointed general business manager for Alan K. Foster.

He will have charge of placements of the various Foster Girls units.

Freaks Draw Big at Tilyou's on Repeat

What is regarded as a real freak booking is that of a freak act at the Tilyou theatre, Coney Island, where the freaks were originally stationed for many months. They draw business, too.

The Tilyou has played two freak acts, proving that Coney Island doesn't tire of seeing 'em, or doesn't bother to look in the summer.

Few Animal Acts

For some unexplained reason animal acts appear to be scarce, or at least not working around New York.

Tiber's Seals is the only animal act in the Loew houses of greater New York this week, and there are very few animal turns on that entire circuit at present.

No significance is attached to the circumstance except that it is a freak booking circumstance.

ONE WEEK VAUDE DROP

Vaude is out of Loew's State, Norfolk, Va., this week on account of the house playing the Marcus Show, 60-people tab troupe, standard in the south.

It is a solitary Loew date for the show as Marcus plays all other Loew southern stands in other theatres.

ST. L. ORPHEUM INTO 3-DAILY AT 65c TOP

St. Louis, Feb. 7.

Orpheum theatre, for 31 years St. Louis' downtown two-a-day vaudeville house, has given up the ghost. Starting Sunday the daily pair of shows were abandoned for a "continuous" policy. Top admission has been cut from $1.10 to 65 cents.

Under the new policy there will be three shows a day, the first starting at one p. m., and with no reserved seats. Night prices will range from 25 cents in the "upper circle," once the gallery, to 65 cents downstairs. Balcony privilege sells for 50 cents. Top for matinees, except Sundays, is 35 on the lower floor and 15 cents in that "upper circle."

Years ago the Orpheum replaced the old Columbia which, under the guidance of Frank Tate, was known as one of the biggest money makers in the field.

K-A Loosening Up?

According to vaude agents doing business with Keith-Albee, the bookers have been tipped to be a little more generous in salaries. This is believed due to the recent Orph-K-A consolidation and the absence of big acts on the books.

Within the past few days a number of turns passed up on previous presentations have again been offered for bookings.

Pauline Resumes

Dr. J. Robert Pauline has returned to vaude with his hypnotic act, working the second half for Amalgamated in Hazelton, Pa. Pauline is using a street ballyhoo for the matinees.

Kingsley Handling Press Stuff for Moss Houses

A new press regime beame effective this week through the rearrangement of the Keith-Orpheum houses which includes the 15 houses taken over from B. S. Moss, all under the national directorship of Mark Leuscher.

Walter Kingsley has been assigned the Moss houses heretofore under Harry Mandell's publicity direction in the Moss offices. Kingsley will handle all the publicity for New York and Brooklyn. Mandell joins Kingsley's staff, with the readjusted K-A-Orpheum p. d. to occupy the present Edward Darling offices on the sixth floor of the Palace theatre building. The Darling staff is to be removed to more commodious quarters on another floor. Mandell has had his office in the Moss suite in the Bond building.

Floyd Scott, who will be the Chicago representative, came into New York this week.

MARRIAGES

Virginia Isabelle McCandles, screen actress, to J. Frank Glendon, stage and screen, Jan. 2, Los Angeles.

Jack Rose, with band, in vaude, to non-professional girl in New York, Feb. 2.

Mrs. Athole Ward, sister of Norma Shearer, will become wife of Howard Hawks, scenario writer, both in Hollywood.

Johanna Mathieson, head designer at Universal City, Calif., to Elmer Woolf, head of the costume department for Western Costume Company, Los Angeles, Feb. 5, at Hollywood, by Rev. Neal Dodd.

Mark Murphy and Loretta Kennedy Jan. 31 in New York. Bridegroom is a K-A booker and bride is non-professional.

BILLY CURTIS' RETURN

Billy Curtis, one of the old timers, is returning to activity as an agent after two years' retirement, due to illness.

He is opening an office with Harold Clement and Steve Carmine. They will handle independent stuff.

3 Chicago Divorces — Chaz Chase Paying $20 Alimony— Helen Charlton Files Suit

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Avonne Taylor, former "Follies" girl, was granted a divorce in Superior Court from Louis Gress, musical director formerly with Flo Ziegfeld, on charges of desertion. She was represented by Ben Ehrlich.

When her bankroll flew so did her husband, Miss Taylor told the court. She related how she won $500,000 on the stock market after her marriage in 1925, and later lost it in an effort to make it into several millions. Immediately thereafter Gress disappeared, she stated.

Chaz Chase, who married Jennie Feldman, also secured a divorce through Atty. Ehrlich on charges of desertion. Chase claimed he was framed into the marriage, and that after he did the right thing his wife ignored her vows. Ehrlich recommended no alimony, but the court compromised on $20 weekly.

Helen Charlton, of vaudeville, has filed suit for divorce against Sidney Z. Charak, son of a New York furniture man, charging cruelty.

Mrs. Edwin Carewe will sue for divorce in Mexico, according to admissions made by the director in New York. Couple were married while they were on the wedding party of Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor in Juarez in 1925. Wife is known as Mary Aiken on the screen. There are two children.

PRINCE JOVEDDAH'S AD

Acquitted in Specials Sessions of Misrepresentation

Prince Joveddah, 42, of 245 West 51st street, claiming to be a native of Thibet, and who describes himself as a psychology teacher and lecturer, was acquitted in Special Sessions of a charge of inserting a misleading advertisement in the New York "Times." At the same time Mrs. Olive Fink, 42, of 57 West 75th street, white, the Prince's business manager, and Max Frankel, 19, of 328 West 59th street, secretary, were also freed.

They were arrested on the complaint of Mrs. Bertha Morelles, of 600 West 183d street in December after Mrs. Morelles had answered an advertisement inserted by the Prince's organization for men and women to sell courses in psychology.

Ad stated that salary and commission would be paid to those given the positions. Mrs. Morelles testified she was informed by Mrs. Fink that no salaries were to be paid, but representatives were privileged to have drawing accounts and would be compensated for each pupil brought in.

The Prince did not take the stand, but Mrs. Fink and Frankel, besides others, declared that the $12 paid weekly to representatives was in lieu of salary. The Justices after hearing both sides decided that the defendants did not violate the law knowingly and acquitted them.

Ettleson Adds Dates

Emory Ettleson (Gus Sun-Billy Diamond) has taken over the Casino at Marshalltown, Ia., formerly booked by W. V. M. A. The house is now using two-day vaude. Other houses acquired by Ettleson for the Gus Sun-Billy Diamond circuit include Ft. Madison, Muscatine and Oelwein, all in Iowa and on a direct route and jumps.

Irene Bostwick Hurt; Dancers Can't Leave

Irene Bostwick, 20, 100 West 58th street (Dario and Irene), dancers, was seriously injured when run down by a taxicab at 58th street and 6th avenue. She was removed to Hunts Point Hospital.

Miss Bostwick, who was to have sailed next Saturday for the Riviera to fill a dancing engagement with her partner, Borzani Dario, 131 West 58th street, was crossing 6th avenue when the taxicab hit her. The dancer was thrown several feet and rendered unconscious.

The chauffeur, James Curran, 929 2d avenue, with Policeman Milligan, Traffic C, carried her into a store and summoned an ambulance from the City Hospital. When Dr. Cohen arrived he found she was suffering from contusions of the chest, but refused to go to the hospital and went home.

Later she felt pains in her head and called Dr. Charles Rogers, Grand Concourse. The medico believed she had suffered a concussion of the brain and directed that she be removed to the hospital for further examination.

Miss Bostwick had just finished an engagement at the Montmartre club, New York, and was preparing for the European trip.

No arrest was made as the police said the dancer was at fault.

ACT SETTLES WITH CONRAD

Dillon and Parker rehearsed with a Con Conrad vaude production which never opened and sued for $600 on a two weeks' notice. They were awarded $300, accepting $100 cash and a note for the balance due Feb. 20.

The team has a new act, "In Life's Shop Window," which Phil Offin of Max Hayes' office is handling. Ben David and Sam Ward wrote it.

MELSON, M. C., IN J. C.

Charles Melson will be m. c. for the new Stanley theatre, Jersey City, opening March 16.

Melson closes Saturday at the Branford, Newark, with Nat Nazarro succeeding him as m. of c.

HOUSE CLOSES

KAHN'S REVIVING BAND

Roger Wolfe Kahn is reassembling his original orchestra for a tour of the metropolitan Fox houses. He opens at the Academy, 14th street, Feb. 9.

Markus' Booking Mgr.

Jack Allen is now booking manager for Fally Markus Agency, independent.

Allen has been with Markus for a year and a half.

Harry Lorraine and William Cloonan continue as bookers. All under the supervision of Fally Markus.

ELDRIDGE EXPANDING

Harold F. Eldridge has reorganized his presentation department, Billy Smith, producer; Sam Harris, vaudeville manager, and Sam Fliashnick, agent, are now associated. Two stage units are under production, with floor shows for the Moulin Rouge, Atlantic City, and the Red Lion Inn, Larchmont, N. Y., underway.

PANTAGES BACK TO ACTS WITH FOX FILMS

Minneapolis, Feb. 7.

Having played the last of its United Artists' pictures last week, Pantages theatre here will return to a permanent policy of six acts and a feature film. It will continue to devote most of its newspaper and other advertising to exploitation of its picture attractions except when it has some outstanding vaudeville "name," according to Manager E. C. Bostick.

Pantages uses most of the Fox product. Its ads are given over almost entirely to the picture with none of the acts mentioned. One line in fairly large type states there are "six vaudeville acts."

In conjunction with "The Dove" (U. A.) last week, and the other United Artists' offering which preceded it, Pantages used only a 30-minute stage revue, produced in each instance by Mr. Bostick and employing some of the acts booked for the house that week.

Practically every one of the United Artists pictures jumped the Pantages average business 50 per cent. and more. Because of the stiff terms imposed by United Artists, it is doubted here if the house made a large profit. F. & R. now have the United Artists' pictures again.

ILL AND INJURED

Uda Waldrop, San Francisco organist and composer, went to Mary's Help Hospital to recover from slight injuries and shock sustained when an auto struck her and a fellow club member while crossing Bush street. His injuries are not serious. Waldrop is well known in San Francisco and coast musical circles.

Charles Modini Wood, pioneer opera impresario and singer on the Coast, is seriously ill of inflammatory rheumatism at his home in Los Angeles. He is 72.

Edna Archer Crawford (with San Antonio Siamese Twins) to St. Barnabas hospital, Newark, N. J., for appendicitis operation. Reported recovering.

J. Maxwell Joice, in a hospital, New York, with a broken leg and internal injuries received in an auto accident, is now in the recuperating home for St. Luke's, Westchester Co., N. Y.

Robert F. Hunter (Hunter stock) is ill in St. Joseph's Infirmary, East Parkway, St. Louis.

Harry S. Alward, vet circus p. a., confined to the Pan-American Hospital, E. 90th street, New York.

Mrs. Richard Spier, wife of the manager, underwent an operation for appendicitis at St. Francis Hospital, San Francisco, Jan. 31. Recovery is expected.

Chris Pender, manager, Billy Arnold's Revue, recovering from injuries received when hit by a taxicab Jan. 24.

Wife of Joe Darcy is recovering from a severe illness.

William Gaxton, in "Connecticut Yankee" at the Vanderbilt, underwent an operation on the throat Friday after the performance, and was able to play the Saturday matinee.

Leo Rosenblatt, son of the cantor and his business manager, entered the Mt. Morris hospital, New York, Feb. 6, to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

The wife of Edward Farrell, treasurer of Wallack's, was operated on for appendicitis at the Murray Hill sanitarium, New York, last week. Mrs. Farrell is employed in the Bascom ticket office in the hotel Commodore.

Marcia White, injured in a taxi accident in Harlem some months ago, has returned to New York from Chicago where she was under treatment by a plastic surgeon for facial injury incurred in the smash-up. She is hostess at Benny-Davis' 54th street club.

Shoolman Deal Cold; Coterie Is Hopeless

Boston, Feb. 7.

Members of the Max Shoolman coterie, who subscribed to the deposit fund of $400,000 through which Shoolman obtained an option for the purchase of the Poli circuit for $22,500,000, admit the deal is cold.

The 12 subscribers apparently have accepted their losses, with another $40,000 to be added as brokerage fee, from accounts.

Some of those subscribing were business associates and others relatives of Shoolman.

Despite any willingness, it is claimed, of Poli granting another extension of the option, first expiring Jan. 3 and renewed until Feb. 1, the Shoolman crowd seems to have given up hope of putting through their speculative deal.

Hartford, Feb. 7.

There has been no break in the relations between the parties in the Poli-Shoolman deal and, despite the lapsed option which expired Feb. 1, the latter can buy the theatres, according to Charles M. Thayer, attorney representing S. Z. Poli interests in the transaction.

When asked what had prevented Mr. Shoolman from taking up his option Mr. Thayer said that he knew of no reason.

Lois M. Sagal, general manager of the Poli Circuit, in New Haven, repeated the information given by Mr. Thayer and added that Shoolman could still buy the circuit, saying: "All he has to do is pay over the money."

Nathan Nirestein, real estate dealer, of Springfield, the broker in the transaction, spent two days in Boston conferring with Shoolman. He announced later that negotiations were still under way, and it looked "as though the sale would not go through." He further added that "no one realized the tremendous amount of work necessitated by the massive sale." He gave as one of the excuses for the delay the "countless documents which must first be investigated and prepared."

No one would state whether or not Shoolman had forefeited his $400,000 deposit as an option on the deal.

That deposit was placed in escrow in a Boston bank, with the provision that Poli would have to furnish clear titles for all of his properties or there could be no default claimed nor the deposit forfeited. This raises a point, it is contended, since Shoolman did not make a formal tender of the remainder of the purchase price by the expiration date of either option.

Whether it will be followed by a legal action to secure the money by Poli or Shoolman is not reported, pending the possibility through Poli's willingness of Shoolman getting his buy through.

INDIE BOOKERS MAY NOW GET TOGETHER

Possibility of the organization of independent vaude bookers is in the air again. This latest attempt is seemingly more probable.

The latest move is prompted by the inability of most agents to collect commissions from houses on their books and with the idea at this time a reciprocal agreement among the better class of independents that one will not accept a "dumped off" house from another.

A meeting was called for the latter part of last week.

Remittances to bookers have been notoriously bad this season, they say, and with seeming slim chance of collecting the outstanding money's due.

Several previous attempts have been made to whip the independents in line for organization, but all flopped. Now that most are feeling it from a money angle the chance seems better.

Vivian Breaks Troth

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Vivian Duncan's engagement to Nils Asther, film actor, is off. Miss Duncan admits a parting of the ways, due to the pair having drifted away from each other.

They are still friends, however, says Miss Duncan, who with Rosetta is playing vaudeville out here at present.

UNITED ARTISTS
(DETROIT)

Detroit, Feb. 5.

While important on the surface as a new and modern theatre, this latest link in the U. A. chain seems most notable as a medium for an attempt to sell straight pictures on a level with and against picture playing nearby with high-powered stage shows.

Nothing new to Detroit in straight pictures, of course, but straight pictures as presented in the class atmosphere of the United Artists and at an admission scale equaling those of attraction-playing theatres are new angles to this town, here for the first time with the U. A.'s advent this week.

With that in mind, clocking the progress of the new house should prove an interesting pastime to the film showmen of Detroit.

The U. A. theatre is on Bagley avenue and seats 2,000. An 18-story office building is in accompaniment.

The operators have a long term lease on the house proper, and no doubt are in close harmony with the Stormfeltz-Lovely Co., big-holders of most of the sod on Bagley. It is proudly related hereabouts how, two short years ago, Bagley was a broken-down side street—until Stormfeltz-Lovely, a heavy money combination, started to think and work. When speaking of developments on the avenue they now speak of units. The Michigan theatre and building is unit one, Detroit-Leland hotel, unit two; United Artists, unit three, etc.

Physically, the United Artists is beautiful. Its structural idea might be Persian, Grecian or Indian. Or it might be all combined, with several other international flavors added. There have been so many beautiful new theatres of late, and all so hauntingly similar in appearance.

The new house was opened colorfully by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld. Lots of high hats, plenty of low gowns and the best in town. Strictly invitational and ultra-formal.

Exploitation of the opening preceded considerably immediately after the walk-out of Nellie Revell, p. a., but the lady space grabber's efforts resulted in enough to cover the following lack of publicity. This early campaigning and the glamor of the new house helped to stand 'em up throughout the opening day.

The initial program supporting and leading up to the feature, "Sadie Thompson" (U.A.), exhibited a shrewd sense of the selection of classy, subdued secondary entertainment, and clicked in the manner intended. Even if tough on those who had witnessed the Chicago, U. A., opening, which was exact in every detail.

"Overture Populaire," symphonic arrangement of a pop song, by the 20-piece pit orchestra, broke the ice. Dr. Riesenfeld conducted opening night. Fred Stahlberg will be the regular director. Besides conducting in his excellent style, the Doctor made a speech and called attention to a telegraph operator behind the foots, awaiting a signal from Hollywood, where Gloria Swanson would push a button to open the United Artists curtain, even if Gloria was then in Palm Beach. Whether Miss Swanson pushed or not, from either place, the curtain parted. Ditto in Chicago, only Norma Talmadge was then on the other end and in Hollywood.

Followed the first occupant of the United Artists screen, short film entitled "Bridges—The World Over," and including some comely shots of various types of spans. Windup with a title about no bridge like our own bridge after all, and a flash of Detroit's favorite. In Chicago they used the Michigan boulevard span. A nicely cut and photographed short, and perfect for civic priders, though out for bridgeless towns.

News reel anemic, with stale Pathe stuff forming the body. "The Maestro," Max Fleischer cartoon short, having a pup conduct the house orchestra, led right into the feature.

"Sadie" proved infinitely better here as an opener than "The Dove" did in Chi. Swanson picture looks good for two or three weeks, and if followed by pictures of equal value the house may pace its program changes on a three-week plan, if finding sufficient followers of straight films.

No mention of "Sadie's" source of adaptation from "Rain." That alone was creative of added interest. First day's audiences replete with women seeking hot stuff. Reaction to the picture as whole rather favorable, with a comeback in Detroit predicted for Gloria Swanson on the strength of it.

Charley Hammerslaugh, formerly with Orpheum and Publix, will manage the house.

PARAMOUNT
(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 6.

Colleen Moore and Sophie Tucker will have to fight it out for the complete capacity from 7:20 until the last show Monday evening at the Paramount. With the chances favoring the film girl, since she is known in the New York film palaces and Soph is not.

But Soph will be if she sticks around with some of the songs and some of the talk she is doing this week. Her bluest remark was, "If they can make better men, I'll make them," and again, to a man at a phone behind a screen, "You always want me for the worst," with some stuff added to make it worse.

But even if Soph didn't whamm them, she made both women and men laugh at the talk or lyrics, but mostly the women. A Spanish travesty to the "Marcheta" melody was too slow for its spot. Soph's finishing number when conducting the stage band and asking the audience to applaud if they want "us" to stick, as their applause decided, got right back to the Gus Sun time and that of over 10 years ago. It was a surprise from Soph! And the house didn't fall. So picture house audiences are too new in more than one thing. Her honors were "Salt of My Tears," "Bologna" and "Tall, Dark and Handsome." In the latter "hell" occurs in the final line. The begging-applause number is called "What Do You Say?"

Soph has something else, too, to think about for the picture houses. It's her son, Bert Tucker, who dances neatly and talks well enough to introduce his mother. But there's a doubt if an audience wants to know that Sophie Tucker has a grown-up son, and even if they don't care, the son should not be his mother's advance agent on the same stage; rather a surprise, following her. But that's up to Soph.

Mother and son did one number together, bringing out as the noticeable part that Bert is nearly as tall as Soph, with everyone around asking another, "How old is she?" Singers of hot stuff should look it and not be chilled by a grown-up child alongside.

The Tucker turn, staged by Jack Partington and with Lou Kosloff as m. c., but without interrupting, and also taking in the 6 English Tivoli Girls, ran 21 minutes.

The Tivoli girls got as much as anything on the bill, other than Miss Moore's picture, "Her Wild Oat," a crackerjack comedy film, full length. The six young women looked very good in their Ella Shields evening clothes (men's) and their Tiller steps, with an unusually pretty step exit movement.

Another stager, Paul Ascard, took care of the "production overture," that had two scenes to house orchestra's "Chopin Meledics." One was an operatic oval set effect, with Leonora Corl, soprano; Herman Saleski, violinist, and Carl Schuetze on the harp. It was touched off briefly and briskly by a mob posed effectively to the rear, made striking by the lighting and the flashing glance given of it.

Jesse Crawford was alone at the organ, with Mrs. Crawford absent. Mr. Crawford went through a light rep, using slides mostly, and concluding with a special lyric to music stuff—how glad he is to get back to Broadway. The Loop had better not hear that lyric, because it says Jesse claims Broadway is the best ever—that it made him and he is going to stick to it.

Paramount News held a Paramount view at either end, with M-G-M in between and but one outsider, Fox. Other than Fox, Paramount's reel was exactly the same in running and scenes, including any cuts, if made, that Loew's New York held last Saturday, two days before tonight (Monday). Merely indicative of the news reel running as to until another week is in. The Fall River fire was in both, also the "Saratoga" scenes.

A Pathe tinted water scenic, short, the same, minus the tint, but not nearly as good as "Have a Drink," another short that opened with "The Last Command" at the Rialto and may be still playing there on the run.

The Tucker interlude was labeled "Welcome, Sophie."

For real laughs, the Moore picture furnished everything.

A word for the Paramount—it grows more atmospheric in the warm way the longer it is running, and its staff has never lost a motion in gentility or attention.

METROPOLITAN (BOSTON)

Boston, Feb. 3.

This Publix house has switched over to a policy of opening its weekly show on Fridays, change being due to the routing of hits which open in New Haven and then jump here for a Friday to Friday week.

First unit under the new plan was Jack Partington's "Steps and Steppers," a neat dancing outfit already in fair shape. Glenn and Jenkins are carrying the unit with their vaudeville routine, supported by a male dancer who does the syncopated shoe-shine bit in sure fire hand. The support comprises Ilomay Bailey, prima donna; Charles Huey with a whistling novelty that went over surprisingly well, and Mud and Buddie in a clean routine of straight hoofing. Six girls and six boys, all able to do stunt dancing, are featured, winding up with a well staged ensemble in which they dance up and down a flight of stairs. Staging and lighting hints of economy although a eye transformation is used and the staircase is a bit of flash construction behind scrim during a short blackout for a feature bit. Seems okay but lacks a punch.

Gene Rodemich, as m.c., was at his worst, even the femmes failing to flutter for him Friday night. The band worked well, being too engrossed with the new score to engage in their too-frequent asides and grins at some of the dapper little director's capers. Rodemich pranced around more than usual and in one bit worked without the spot. It may have been the light that failed and it may have been a compassionate operator. Rodemich worked up his old specialty of having the prima sing him into ecstatic goose-pimples and nervous frenzy but it did not register as Fahrenheit as hitherto, probably because of the aforesaid hitherto.

"The Last Command" (Par.) was the film and what a draw opening night. Both shows were turnaways. Balance of film fodder comprised a newsreel in which Paramount was given a hand for showing both airplane and close-up night shots of the fire in Fall River.

Arthur Martell at the organ used the comedy Ford song and once again proved that he can put over anything from a publisher's plug to a classic. Martell is unquestionably able to boast of the biggest organ following in New England. It is the combination of his broadcasts of real music, combined with popular music and his pit renditions of hoke and song plugs that have turned the trick.

LOEW'S MIDLAND
(KANSAS CITY)

Kansas City, Feb. 3.

From the overture, "1812," to the flash finish, mirth and color in abundance. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) was the picture.

The Midlanders, under direction of Carbonara, have gone in for heavier music, and the overture was heavily applauded. A Short M-G news followed and then Art Hayes, at his organ, and "The One-Man Show," followed.

The opening by the stage band brought the Rockets on in long skirts and sailor hats of the early 90s. These were quickly shed for the abbreviated skirts of the modern dancing girl. A team of harmonica players were next, and got over a couple of pops in nice shape. Another dance ditty was the band's feature. One of the prettiest production numbers seen on a local picture house stage followed.

This was led by Jack Sidney, who offered a new bluebird number. Stage was draped in light blue, the singer under a blue spot. After the first chorus the back drapes parted, showing four huge bird cages with two Rocket girls in each. When the cages were lifted the girls gave a neat bit of toe dancing.

The Rooneys—Pat, Marion and young Pat—received a nice reception, and didn't disappoint. The Rockets were on for another dance, which brought the Rooneys out to assist in the finish.

This is the last of the home-made shows for the house. Loew-Publix units start Feb. 4, "Listening In" being the first.

STATE
(MINNEAPOLIS)

Minneapolis, Feb. 1.

State's first stage band presentation in a number of weeks, "Jazz Pirates," met with the same poor box office response as the succession of similar shows in November and December. It was quite elaborate and afforded a fair flash. It also provided a considerable amount of first-rate entertainment. But it lacked an outstanding personality in the master of ceremony role. This deficiency apparently proved its undoing as a patronage puller.

A pirate ship provided a good setting for the revue. Members of the pit orchestra, in pirate garb, occupied the customary center elevated platform, and Fred Heiseke, house orchestra conductor, stepped forth as m. c. Heiseke is a good conductor, but the m. c. thing is outside his line.

Nine bare-limbed girls, the young and pretty State ballet, in abbreviated male buccaneer regalia, were on first for a neat bit of stepping. Then John Williams, house ballet master, and Beulah Gleason, also a State ballet member, for one of those classical dance numbers. The flying leaps were well done. Fox and Mack followed with comedy songs and patter, and scored a fun hit, their songs, including a travesty on grand opera, being particularly good. After this the girls were again as pirate captives and did another corking dance with their ankles chained together. In their varied scarfs they presented a colorful appearance.

Stage band next had its inning, giving special arrangements with the pianist singing a chorus and a cornetist soloing. Effective. This preceded an old fiddlers' contest. Three of the vets, ranging in age from 70 to 78, came on and won considerable applause. Featured in the billing, the Wise Trio, novel eccentrics, went over big with their balancing, foot juggling, acrobatics and dancing. For one of their sensational stunts they had a member standing on his head on the top rung of a ladder balanced on the feet of another who was playing a violin. One of the trio showed fair comedic ability. Helen Snyder, house ballet girl, led the other girls through a Zulu song and dance number in which the scantiest of costumes and green wigs were worn. This paved the way for the finale.

Because of the stage show's length the balance of the program was somewhat curtailed. The feature, "Gay Defender" (Par.), did not land heavily. International News had some interesting shots. Then a pleasing organ novelty, "Auf Wiedersehn," by Eddie Dundstedter, with the words flashed on the screen and a personable young couple, local boy and girl, breaking in, doing the chorus with good voices. Vitaphone trailer for "The Jazz Singer," an underlined attraction, ran to considerable length, but proved interesting with views of film celebrities attending the New York premiere.

Corking show for 60 cents, but failed to attract in the face of stiff opposition.

UPTOWN
(TORONTO)

Toronto, Feb. 4.

One of the smartest bits of stage illusion ever attempted in any Canadian picture house is "Rain," to the credit of Jack Arthur, in conjunction with "Beau Sabreur." Opened to a full house that came to see the picture and went away to talk about the stage number.

A dozen Florence Rogge dancing girls get it under way in some snappy hoofing that is part highland fling and part military drill. Five minutes of action before screen folds to show a terrific rainstorm. Costumes for first abbreviated pale yellow with apple green trim and gold trailers.

During storm scene band gets in some effective work, while the girls coming back in vari-colored slickers and sou'westers and handing them a black bottom in the midst of the lightning flashes.

Charlie Auld, banjoist in the pit, gives a vocal refrain on "Rain" with orchestra accompaniment and curtain opens on a rustic farm scene, with Thelma Bateman and Richard Alexander on a rail fence. They do a duet on "April Showers" with immediate calls for an umbrella when real rain comes down and engulfs them. First time real water ever poured over a Toronto stage and it went over big. Special drains put in at some cost. On the second chorus the "rainbow soon coming" words have the dancing girls draped over the cut-out in rainbow shape and wearing costumes of all colors except black.

The amusement world has heard little of Thelma Bateman, but she is a "name" in these parts, due to frequent encouragement by Jack Arthur, both at this and other houses. A better than average soprano, the girl pays strict attention to direction.

Band made a hit with selections from "A Connecticut Yankee," with solo efforts taken on by some of the boys. This musical number has been looked on for months as the tid-bit of the evening, being overshadowed by the stage show on this occasion.

Ten minutes of Fox and Pathe news, both showing shots of the opening of Parliament at Ottawa and the visit of President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State. The M-G short "Dames Shall Never Meet" was also spotted. Opening biz excellent. Looks like good week.

Sinclair.

ROXY
(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 4.

Quiet show in the big house this week, with not much of a punch anywhere in the running. A plug for a new popular song had a little production around it and passed for what it was, a filler, while "Fantasy Viennese" was the main presentation item used as a prolog to "Love Me and the World Is Mine" (U). The outstanding current stage impression is the lighting.

Frederick Fradkin, violinist, was included in the prolog backed by a male quartet of fiddlers who did one number. Fradkin personally accompanied one dance by Gambrelli in "two" which took place behind a scrim with side spots picking out the danseuse in steel blue and violinist in red, the entire house being darkened.

Five violinists were also bathed in red from a single side.

Most of the 17-minute interlude took place in a completely darkened house, the opening allowing a soprano to turn loose an aria high up and mid-stage picked out by an overhead white spot. As the only light in the theatre, other than the exit and floor aisle glows, it had to get attention.

Finale flash was terrific stairways, also behind a scrim, which counted around 90 people on the stage at the conclusion and ended with the tenor singing the late Ernie Ball's famed song. Meanwhile, the scrim had gone up and then come down to catch the picture's title. No need for the scrim after the drapes parted to reveal the full stage set, the gauze making the haze too deep inasmuch as the scene was lighted in blue. Hard on the eyes and smothering values. Gamby and Daks teamed in this scene for a neat bit, it's one of Gamby's good weeks, and ballet and Roxyettes were sprinkled across the apron to effect.

"Southern Rhapsody" made a corking overture well rendered and got plenty following the crossed melodies of "Dixie" and "Swanee River" as a climax. This big orchestra, around 85 men in the pit for Saturday's 1:30 show, is constantly improving. Not so the Roxyettes, who were ragged in their routine for the five-minute pop tune plug. This was before black-bush with the 16 girls entirely lighted in white, heavy from the wings, for their short trunks and stockings of similar color plus gold fan-shaped headdresses representing the sun. Number was introduced by tenor and soprano placed in opposite side boxes unused for entrances.

Previous to this the Kentucky Jubilee Choir, holding over from the previous week, had a full stage night wharf setting, turning loose a spiritual and "Deep River." They also swelled the chorus for Lesslets on a popular air while the Trainor boys' fast hoofing topped up the applause. Scene was under blue floods, principals being picked out by not too brilliant white spots. Ran 10 minutes.

Three organists at the house, so whoever played the feature had nothing much more to do than stick to the theme song of the same name.

When the newsreel lets down here it's the tip-off that the camera boys haven't had much to shoot at. The 12-minute magazine showed the Fall River fire as the highlight and a couple of feature subjects filling for news. Movietone was thrice represented, the talking newsreel now using its own orchestral accompaniment while introducing each item, evidently to cover up the mechanical noises during the titles. An Afghan king's arrival in Paris, night airmail take-off and cops pistoling chalk sticks out of the hands and ears of some hardy soul filled the Movietone quota. The only regular services represented were Paramount (3), Kinograms and Pathe once.

No shorts in the de luxe show.

Sid.

NORSHORE
(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Jan. 30.

N. T. G. talking. Always talking.

We remember a couple of years ago we were helping Paul Ash start the Paul Ash policy. We predicted it would catch on in this column, but unfortunately it caught on the stage. So we sighted and opened another Loew theatre.

Anyway, while we watched the show at Marbro's we saw a little blond chap dejectedly tooting a saxophone. He was a likable little chap, sending his dough home to his mother and never mixing with the gay Wabash Ave. crowd. So after the show we spoke to him.

"We are N. T. G.," we predicted.

"We are "OKMNX," he replied, "and if B. B. B. were here we'd be a plate of alphabet soup."

Things have happened since then. Al Kvale, the little blond chap, remained in Paul Ash's orchestra when it moved to the Oriental. He got more and more solo spots, tooting his little saxophone to hails and cheers from the youngsters. When Paul was absent Al took over the directing and developed into something like a comedian. Then, a few months ago, Balaban & Katz gave him his own stage band and put him in the Norshore theatre.

We were right. Playing to more adult customers, Kvale developed a better sense of humor. He acquired a new following. He's okay.

When the velvets parted we saw 12 girls looking at a large billboard. Then Kvale comes down and sings a song telling about his earlier days at McVicker's and the Oriental. He can't sing so well, but neither can Beatrice Lillie. Incidentally, we remember when Beatrice Little was in the floor show at the Parody Club, dancing for $18 per week. She wasn't getting over because she had on too many clothes, so we told her she should get rid of some of them. Later she married a fellow named Peel. That's terrible.

George Riley smokes cigars and talks falsetto. His good showmanship squares it. He told a couple of gags we first printed in this column.

Guy Nell was done right by when she knocked off some taps in a hardly noticeable costume. Her stuff is modern and good for this type of show business. If Gay didn't spend her earlier days saying no to rich men and wearing cotton clothes we'll never mention her again.

Kvale demonstrated his comic ability in working a "now and then" number, the same one we used to open the Loew Circuit. He's pretty good, too. In a too-small hat and coat, Kvale went through an old-fashioned song and dance routine with six choruses in bustle skirts. Riley led six modern gals in shorts through a jazz routine for contrast. The idea was presented well and proved the best item in the program.

Zeck and Stewart, working the old Sweeney and Stewart act, make a good comedy turn for picture houses. In loose clothes and wild make-up they clown through a singing and gagging routine with plenty of hits. Tommy Wonder, a kidlet we didn't discover, was a show-stopping specialty with a swift line of acrobatic dancing. For a snappy finish he comes on with a dummy gal strapped to him and works a comedy ballroom routine. We predict that this kid will catch on in this column, even if he's too young to be original.

Riley took a regular spot with some more of our gags, and then got serious for a song in natural voice. Usually he works with Helene Heller, who sings, but here he appeared as a single. Either way, the act is reliable feature stuff for picture houses. We remember when Riley was in the chorus at the Silver Slipper dancing for $10 a week. Or maybe that was Patricola or Soph. Whoever it was, we remember we predicted there would be a better day.

For a finale the Gould ballet danced an interpretation of "Rhapsodie in Blue," not an important bit as presented here but sufficiently strong to close the program. We did the same thing at the opening of Loew's Isis and killed 'em. We had to do it because they almost killed us.

Chauncey Haines, organist, used the "now and then" idea for his solo, first playing some old-time numbers with antique illustrated slides and using a funny-looking gent for discordant vocalizing. Then he went through a few modern pop numbers, asking the customers to sing and prove to themselves how much better present songs are. The solo was liked.

We remember when Haines was dancing in Roseland for $1.50 a week. One night he fell and broke his leg but we mended it with a cover charge, only to have him turn on us and start taking organ lessons. There should be a law.

"Spotlight" was the feature picture. Patronage good, especially considering the house adjoins the city limits.

We remember when the city limits were in the Palais D'Or, doing a sister act for $10 a week . . .

N. T. G. signing off. Loop.

FOX

(WASHINGTON, D. C.)

Washington, Feb. 3.

Jack Stebbins, doubling front and back as managing director and producer of the stage presentations respectively, is currently doing an opera vs. jazz idea and well. Too long, maybe, but, as the town is accustomed to much show for little money, fitting in with the general trend.

For the opera side Stebbins has a big symphony in the pit, a group of fairly good opera singers and a good ballet. For jazz: Wells and Brady, an imported trick drummer in the pit, a couple of girl steppers, three feminine harmonizers and again the big symphony.

All of which hinged around one rather youthful chap who was one minute in the classics and next in the jazzical material. That was Leon Brusiloff, director, who went in today as first conductor, succeeding Adolphe Kornspan. Brusiloff came to the Fox from the small and antiquated Columbia down the street, with 10 men constituting his orchestra. He handled the big assignment like the veteran in experience that he is and back of that was youth and the consequent flash.

If the show held nothing else, there was compensation there to cover the ante at the gate. But that wasn't all, for Wells and Brady got across, too, and how! Another highlight was young Manny King, a local boy soprano, riding up from the "depths" on top the organ, doing a ballad number accompanied by Alexander Taylor at the manual. This brought much applause.

The imported trick drummer, Jess Altmiller, went over big, while the returns to the harmony singing of the three Abbey girls was worth while. Plenty of others there also at various interludes.

Show also marked the introduction of an unseen master of ceremonies via loud speaker. Novelty and pleased.

All together the show was excellent in contrast to carry out the idea and though, as stated, too long, the running time can, and undoubtedly will, be curtailed to hit just the right happy medium.

Scenically perfect—lighting likewise. Movietone unusually interesting.

"Old San Francisco" (Fox) feature. Meakin.

WISCONSIN

(MILWAUKEE)

Milwaukee, Feb. 4.

Eddie Wesifeldt, guide of the Wisconsin stage shows, turned in another knockout with "Rhapsody in Blue." For a perfect hour's entertainment this stage presentation is unsurpassed. Combined with "The Noose" (F.N.) rounded out a banner program.

Opening with a newsreel, the show gradually speeds up to a motion picture introduction of the stage show. Pictures show Dave Schooler, m. of c. who has been on a two weeks' vacation in New York, climbing into a plane at Curtiss field. Air shots of Broadway and a raee with a train "Milwaukee bound" furnish the highlights of the reel until the punch, when it shows the alleged Schooler climb from the cockpit and drop into the air, his parachute fully opened. Sercen draws away showing the Eight Abbott dancers and band on stage looking toward the fly gallery. Schooler, small parachute in hand, drops down from the flies and the fun starts.

Against a stage set in deep blue, huge bunches of grapes against a lighter blue background, Schooler introduces the Loomis Twins. These kids sing a couple of numbers and give way to the orchestra. Buddy Doyle, blackface comedian, kids a bit and sings the new Ford song. Fair reception, but not too hot.

Clever staging shows itself in a silhouette number. Back screen pulls away to a serim in light blue lights and the Abbot dancers do a toe dance minuet. Band gets a good play in this number, with Billy Meyers again stepping in for a chorus. LaMarr Brothers, burlesque Apache dance, with a wrestling travesty and strong arm stuff also thrown in, get plenty of laughs.

Boyd Center is the show stopper. This lad plays a mean sax and knows how to sell his stuff.

Schooler, himself, rings down the curtain by playing "Rhapsody in Blue" on the concert grand with the aid of the orchestra, directed by Glenn Welty, music arranger for the theatre. Billy Meyers slips in a chorus and Schooler's ivory tickling gets a tremendous reception as the screen drops into place for the Barthelmess picture. A two-hour show with no padding. Israel.

RIVOLI

(BALTIMORE)

Baltimore, Feb. 3.

Frank Price, manager, conceived the idea of presenting a Victor Herbert birthday memorial program. Orchestra was augmented to 35 pieces, under direction of Felice Iula, with Raymond Rouleau, concert master.

Program opened with "March of the Toys," from "Babes in Toyland," with scrim curtain dropped in one. Following this Rouleau played "My Dream Girl" as a violin solo from the pit. Act proper started with a Herbert medley played by orchestra and sung by vocalists behind scrim. A second scrim, painted with rose effect, served as a back drop. Lights dim on back scrim, up on front. Iula then rendered "Absinthe Frappe," from "Nowdland," stage dark, a white spot in flies picked out the artist.

Next number sung by mixed team working before a screen under the same light effect, duo being in spot. They sang "Because You're You," from "Red Mill." Soprano, in baby spot, then rendered "When You're Away," from "Only Girl," also working in front of screen, this one on opposite side of stage. Orchestra did "I Can't Do This Sum" ("Toyland") and no voices for this one. Next a tenor solo in spot before screen, "Falling in Love With Someone" ("Naughty Marietta"). A baritone, also before a screen, offered "Gypsy Love Song" in a red spot. "Kiss Me Again," by soprano, in same manner. Act closed with entire ensemble in full light on full stage rendering "Italian Street Song." Characters in costume.

Iula worked under baton when the late composer filled several engagements as guest conductor in this theatre. Iula rearranged all numbers used in tempo employed by Herbert. Act scored at every performance, stopping the show repeatedly.

One of the outstanding musical features ever staged in a local picture house.

MELBA

(DALLAS)

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 3.

Continuing its special film policy, Publix's recently reopened Melba has Chaplin's "Circus," making the second leading attraction on Elm street with the heaviest gross.

J. O. Cherry has held it over for three days with a capacity house for each performance of the four-a-day.

Overture program, although atmospheric in intentions, misses its mark considerable. Director Kleinert conducted his orchestra through a series of excerpts from operas and entitled it "Memories of the Metropolitan." It made only deeper in contrast the comedy film, a Technicolor short, "The Lady of Victories."

Judith Dawn, at the organ, did "Souvenirs," ending in song accompanied by the full orchestra. Although not so bad as a songbird, she did not leave much impression at the manuals. Thus far Miss Dawn has failed to excite the town, although she was brought here from the Kirby in Houston as a drawing card.

No overture for the picture, although it is the policy of the house to employ overtures for all pictures, using local talent. Kleinert is steadily increasing his popularity, sticking to straight classical and operatic music. However, the pictures still remain as the Melba's sole drawing card. Donat.

VAUDEVILLE REVIEWS

LOEW'S

(Yonkers)

Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 2.

Smart showmanship invaded Yonkers last (Thursday) night with the opening of the new Loew house here. A 3,000 seater of the modern type, built in the best residential section of the town with its plek of Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists and First National pictures and Loew's vaudeville, it spells heartaches, and bank-aches for the Proctor house in the older part of Yonkers. It operates at a 50c. top in comparison to 75c. at Proctor's.

N. T. G., (Nils T. Granlund), radio announcer for Station WHN, topped all the stars for laughs as master of ceremonies. N. T. G. handled this opening all by himself and he made fun. It's a habit with him as the official Loew operator.

The celebs, real and would-be, threw a slight damper over the proceedings toward the end of the evening. Most of them flopped. The little girls from the night clubs, unknown to picture house N. T. G. handled this opening all by himself and he made fun. It's a habit with him as the official Loew operator.

The celebs, real and would-be, threw a slight damper over the proceedings toward the end of the evening. Most of them flopped. The little girls from the night clubs, unknown to picture house and vaude audiences, delivered in fine style.

Among those announced was Priscilla Dean, who bashfully wended her way to the stage from a seat in the first row in a fur wrap of glaring white. "In person for the first time in the east," announced N. T. G., while Miss Dean gracefully bowed in response to the plaudits of the admiring multitude.

Another was "a man who has brought laughter and happiness into every corner of the earth via the screen," according to Granlund, turned out to be Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle. Roscoe got a big welcome.

Clara Kimball Young, another luminary who followed later, implied that the audience was a great, big, dear, good-hearted congregation for giving Roscoe the glad hand on his return to the stage. And she hoped that they would give her a similar welcome when she came around to this Loew stand with her playlet.

Credit Granlund with the applause following the introduction of Dagmar Godowsky. No one seemed to know what it was all about, but after Granlund's description they would have gone wild over anything.

The m. of c. put another one over with Frances White. He said if the customers were insistent she might be persuaded to deliver a song. Miss White got on the stage and put on her whole act. She had an accompanist and an eccentric hoofer. For a time it seemed as if she had settled down for the night.

Elinor Glyn put in a plug for all her old novels, talking from the floor of the house. She mentioned, incidentally, that she was writing a special story, entitled "The Tigress," for Greta Garbo, and that Greta was simply too divine for words because she had "It."

Gwen Mill was the first of Granlund's chorines to be introduced. Gwen does toe hoofing at Tex Guinan's. The same routine here, backed by the Frivolity Club orchestra, was pleasing. But another girl from Guinan's, Dorothy Jackson, showed strongest for returns with a buck number.

Following Harriet Burnett, of the Frivolity, N. T. G. announced a Rumanian girl to do a Russian dance, accompanied by a Polish orchestra, introduced by a Swedish announcer for an American audience in Yonkers.

Keller Sisters and Lynch, one of the impromptu offerings, scored. Harry Fox was another volunteer.

Opening the regular program were the Five Maxellos, probably the smartest risley team in vaudeville. Gagged tumbling was a sensation to the Yonkerites. Followed by a songstress who slowed the tempo somewhat.

O'Donnell and Blair, in their best prattfallian manner, registered for six minutes of continuous laughter with knockabout slapstick comedy, revolving round a collapsible building.

Buck and Bubbles in next to closing. Buck almost failed to convince in the hoofing department on account of scarcity of material. Some of the comedy in this act does not get over well enough for the spotting, and unless Buck does a little more leg work the standing of the act is bound to suffer.

Natacha Nattova, in a flash dancing number, closed. Difficult spectacular feats got over for full value, but routining is slow.

Adolph Goebel, featured organist, demonstrated ability to juggle the keyboard in good style. Use of slides with pop numbers would help make the organ recital a popular feature instead of merely musical entertainment.

"West Point" (M-G-M), was the feature screen attraction. Mori.

PALACE

(St. Vaude)

Whether it was Waring's Pennsylvanians at $2.20 after playing for a run across the street at the Mark Strand at 75 cents, or the misguided hold-over of Moss and Fontana for a second week—although impressing better on the repeat than originally—the gross was badly off both shows Monday. Not even the song pluggers' turn-out in tribute to Waring at the mat helped at the first performance and it was little better the second. House dressing couldn't camouflage the gaping holes of empties on every side.

Waring's Pennsylvanians are the topliners, the dance team splitting the honors a financial distinction as well—and Edith Meiser (New Acts) from productions, sub-feature.

The band act was a Palace revelation. Collegiate jazzists did it minutes and had to bow out. Waring's showmanship reasserted itself in the excellent manner of his presentation, building up from a quiet start to a wow finish. The illumination effects in "Dancing Tambourine" and "Positively-Absolutely" got 'em housingly. Thingsticks-lighted tambos manipulated through the air on the pitch dark stage, arranged in symmetrical formations, finally spreading out in a huge "W" across the rostrum, was as canny as it was an eye-fetching sight.

The band act prompted a rearrangement of the entire show for the evening. Because of Waring's anti-climax curtain, they started walking out at the mat, with the Pennsylvanians spotted closing the show, and then remained standing up in the aisles. The band turn now reopens intermission.

Because of the switch, the deuce turn, Ed Levan and Joe Dori, (nee Davis), opened. Levan is the nimble hoofer of the twain. They present their dance-and-uke stuff a la Clayton and Edwards of years ago, with the hot "breaks," but do not prolong the motif. Their turn is primed for speed and they click pretty in a zippy eight minutes. A pantomimic effect for the closer is an original creation, carrying them off big.

Max Gruber had an animal act, baby elephant and recalcitrant zebra. Gruber's spiel that this is the first and only performing zebra in the show business, owing to the unruly nature of the breed, is sufficient explanation for the animal's misbehavior. It's ornamental anyway, and the "bull" is a snappy worker, so it balances matters. Originally spotted for the trey, but playing No. 2, the act does not rate beyond the opening hole on first-grade bills.

Tex McLeod, brought down from first after the siesta, was a bright interlude. Marjorie Turner filling in for the feminine atmosphere. McLeod does his Rogerisms in a dress suit, a novelty anyway. He ad libbed twice that they got his gags here like they do in England, which could have been omitted, although good-naturedly received. It was in McLeod's act that the battle of the stage acts versus Benny Roberts' trench jazzists started. Benny won out; he finished first and had to start all over again to keep pace with McLeod. Maybe after the Warings do their marathon for a month it might have a better effect on the morale.

Medley and Dupree, in their regular spot, murdered 'em with hoke. This team was American Roof-ing it a couple or three weeks ago, and has been one of Loew's high turns. At two bucks they went even better than at two bits. The man is a product of real knock-'em-down, knock-'em-out, make-'em-laugh vaudeville. No rhyme or reason to but for results—oh, baby! He even dragged that Joe Miller of Tin Pan Alley of serenading his girl "without a shirt," etc., as obliggato to a ballad.

Moss and Fontana occupied 12 minutes for their dance drama, "El Tango Tragico," and, strangely enough, for all the length of this productioned tango, it was an histrionic as well as terpsichorean success. No question but that these two are dance artists, but, like so many of their distinguished contemporaries, they completely overlook the limitations of stage presentation as compared to the intimacy of a cafe floor. There, their foot work is the paramount feature, but it doesn't mean a dirty word on a rostrum in a large auditorium. Ernie Holst and his Club Mirador Orchestra, accompanied well and to good purpose but without opportunity for distinction.

Reopening were the Warings. Edith Meiser was a class, if slow, contribution, occupying 18 minutes.

Mlle. Rhea and Santoro, with Marion Barclay, Arthur Clazin and Joe Witt, were not wasted in the closing, holding them surprisingly well. Regardless, they merit better than open or shut, being programed for the starter, until the show shift. Their variety divertissement is okay for anybody's theatre, picture or vaude, with the former sure to prove a welcome outlet. Abel.

RIVERSIDE

(St. Vaude)

An exceptionally strong and clever line-up with only the act closing the first half, "The Wedding Gown" (New Acts), not rating in this category.

Hal Neiman, tramp monologist, billed second in the last half, registered strongest for laughs and applause. Delivering comedy by linked popular lyrics Neiman kept the crowd happy without pausing for breath for eight solid minutes. Lyrics are clever, but Neiman's salesmanship accounts for the success of the act. His make-up in dilapidated evening clothes, with only a brim of a high hat as a cover for a sandy crop of wig hair, scores with the audience immediately.

Neiman has risen to a new high level since his first appearance in this act. With better lines to replace some of his material he is a natural for next to closing. Obliged to shut off the applause with a curtain speech after trying to duck twice.

In next to closing Solly Ward and Co. (New Acts), in a comedy skit entitled "Off to Maine," created a record for the maximum number of giggles possible during the length of his stay. Few 25-minute skits get the response awarded this, following the drop of the curtain.

Clark and Bergman, opening the second half, were given a cold acquaintances by small groups in the audience. Act has been polished since at the Palace at the beginning of the season, and a couple of lines added that help. They seemed to like the last number best in this house. This is where Bergman delivers about the small-timer who has fallen from stardom after splitting with the girl partner who had made the act. There is a touch of reality about the scene that puts it across in big style. It is a smart and sure-fire clincher.

In third Margaret Severn did specialty hoofing. With the exception of the pantomime number woven round the simp country maid and the big town lover, which is okay for laughs, the other routines do not please except as regulars. More pop material like the pantomime coupled with Miss Severn's natural ability would tend to create a stronger return than with which the act was awarded at its close.

Hurst and Vogt, with 14 minutes of comedy, pleased as usual. They doubled into the next act, "The Wedding Gown," the two acts being booked together to make this possible.

Frakson, imported illusionist, two-spotted with far greater results than the average act in that position. Frakson's cigaret trick is a winner.

Four Girton Girls, acrobats, opened. In closing Inez and De Wyn, with art bending that borders on contortionist work and an adagio, filled nicely. Mori.

STATE

(Vaude-Pcts)

Greta on the marquee "and all the boys were there" on the seats. It must have been due to M-G-M's vamp, for there isn't a name in the vaude lineup to draw. That, or the State has reached that stage where they troupe in from habit. Not capacity but next door to it downstairs and three-quarters on the big shelf. The Garbo girl was present in "The Divine Woman," the same picture which just completed two weeks at the Capitol.

Vaudeville, too, most of it supplied by Hall and Dexter, who split their time between two acts, rang up 41 minutes of effort and a sweet applause salute. Next to closing and closing were the spots, the nine-piece band in "two" plus the two principals and a Russian dancing imp supplying the multicap. They liked little "Red" Dexter, who had to strain to make herself heard in the big house. One of those nights when she could do no wrong after the first five minutes. Hall also felled the comedienne ably, so it was satisfactory on both sides of the foots. Miss Dexter tripped off by a black bottom step to tune of that name and for which the band could stand a new orchestration. As currently played it sounds as if every instrument were carrying the melody. No background or undertone to the number.

Rose Kress Trio, on rollers, opened with Earl and Bell second. The two boys had the house electrician dizzy at the dimmers, taking the lights up and down at the end of each song. Team should look into it, for they'd do just as well on a fully lighted stage. Four songs for the boys and off to fair applause.

Franklyn D'Amore Co., third, starting out as a two-man comedy team, thence a burlesque adagio which tips them off as acrobats. They were through the act proper in 10 minutes, but a couple of encores, whence the disguise is dropped and full acrobatics hold sway, tacked on the long count of 300 seconds. An unbilled woman pianist plays while the act is in "two." A lift from over the back of a chair swelled the turn's final count.

Margie Coate rambled along on the strength of four songs but didn't threaten an upheaval. Miss Coate's present handicap seems to be in the tempo of her opening songs, both slow.

The Hall and Dexter turns, followed by Greta on reels.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

(Vaude—Pcts)

An off week for draw names down here, but not so with business Monday night. House jammed as usual and a good show. Eight acts, Movietone and "The College Widow" (W. B.) for 50 cents.

Six Daunton Shaws, opening, provided lively fancy and trick cycling, the two men handling the difficult stuff with the girly foursome dressing and topmounting the balancing stunts. Fast and a good opener or closer for any of them.

Howard and Brown, mixed colored team, followed with songs, chatter and dancing, the latter the mainstay. Howard's acrobatic eccentric stuff won plenty. James C. Morton Co. livened things with Morton's broad clowning hitting the mark for yells. His dancing an asset also, as were the song and dances by the mixed younger couple of the act. Jockey Tony Francesco and Thoroughbreds, latter a band combination, followed on and also did well (New Acts).

Marion Sunshine, assisted by Bob Leroy and male pianist, offered some nifty capers and a few songs, which planted her solidly. Miss Sunshine retains the piquant delivery that set her in musical comedy and has good support in the elongated Leroy. "Moods," colorful dancing flash enlisting nine, also scored. The featured dance team were superb in opening ballet divertissement and follow-up adagio. Six dancing girls went over neatly in their precision ensembles with a tenor rounding out the cast.

Tom Smith, nut comic, had somewhat of a struggle in getting to them with his brand of nonsense, but finally did, although never wowing them. Crandell's Riding School, combination of equestrian feats by man and woman, contrasted later with plants learning to ride with aid of hoisting apparatus, closed. Edba.

AUDUBON

(Vaude-Pct)

Apparently the class of bills hitting the Audubon, Fox's at 168th street and Broadway, is turning the house attendance trick. Biz there took on an upward trend on the first half, which has the Fox Movietone to help it out, but the last halves have been something else again.

At the Audubon the last half had several "names" that were worthy of individual ballyhoo.

The show included Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, Roscoe Ails and Katie Pullman and band, and George Le Maire and Rex Van. This triple array insured business. With picture, "Gateway of the Moon" (Fox).

Show was started by Betts and Partner. The woman does the understanding and displays prodigious strength without apparent physical strain. The man is no featherweight which makes the woman's lifts by hand over her head seem all the more difficult.

Libby Dancers may be shy on the vocal thing but the style of numbers as presented for dancing department sold the act nicely. A bit of comedy byplay by one of the girls travestying a ballet dance got a lot of laughs.

The Libby act closed to big applause returns, the football number proving quite a novelty.

Roscoe Arbuckle, ably aided by Franklin Batie, drew perhaps the biggest ovation tendered him since his eastern vaude debut. Applause was so long and spontaneous all Fatty could do was just to stand there and feel good over it. His act started off a comedy inning that was not finished until the Ails act had bowed off some minutes later.

The new blackfaced combo of Le Maire and Van is working smoothly now; the gags build right along to steady laughter all the way. Van makes a perfect comedy foil for the straight slams of LeMaire and as framed is an 18-karat comedy sure fire.

Roscoe Ails, with Katie Pullman, Joe Rose, Dorothy Ellsworth, Ralph Fenton and the five-piece band, has a little show of his own that carries everything imaginable in the way of music, gags, dancing and revue "bits."

Roscoe, despite an injury to his left hand, painfully injured last week by a blank cartridge from one of the prop guns used in the finale, worked hard and accomplished a lot with his funplay and dancing.

In addition to the raft of stuff that Roscoe has in his new act he inserted another "bit" for which he receives credit as having created. This "bit" is a choice travesty or burlesque on the Siamese twins with the eccentric hoofing comic acting as one of the "twins." This "bit," decidedly funny, will develop into a valuable piece of stage property.

This "twins bit" would be funny had neither the Hilton Sisters or the Gibb Twins appeared in vaudeville. The "bit" has great latitude. With Fatty Arbuckle on the same bill and arreeable, he was inducted into the turn as master of ceremonics. Incidentally Arbuckle not only proved an important part and parcel of the "twins bit" but he appeared in another of the Alls "blackouts," namely "One Word," where Fatty created a roar when he appeared from behind a screen in his BVD's and shouted for his pants.

Fatty as a m. of c. fitted in like a glove insofar as working up to Alls as one-half of the "twins." Arbuckle first appears, making the announcement that during the balance of the week there would be surprises and celebs presented each night as an additional feature. He introduces the famous Hilton Twins and on walks Alls and a colored boy, in scanty feminine habillment, a torso laff from the start.

Then came an exchange of questions between Fatty and Roscoe, the gagging being along the lines that Roscoe, being white, was born in the daytime; Alls chants a song, with Arbuckle then working up to a comedy point on the query as to just how they were joined together. Mark.

5TH AVE.

(Vaude-Pcts.)

A mishap in the opening act when the duo of dancers in the Geraldine Imperio (New Acts) turn fell off an improvised stand on which they were doing a routine, and the break in the top tenor of the Cliff and Radcliff turn were two things which marred the show at the 5th Avenue Monday night. When the man and woman toppled to the floor it looked for a moment as though one or both had been hurt, but each resumed.

And that singing in the two voices by one of the colored members of the Cliff and Radcliff combo was too great strain perhaps, but anyway the old pipes slipped and the vocalist had to grin sheepishly. When they hit into hoofing they got away and the audience forgot the rest.

Comedy satisfaction in two of the turns, "The Fakir" and Sully and Thomas. Joseph E. Howard with his Chink plant managed to interpolate a few laffs with their exchange of Oriental chatter.

After the show started with the Geraldine Imperio trio, and Cliff and Radcliff appeared in the deuce spot.

Eva Clark, with Dan Casler and band doing a new turn (New Acts). Miss Clark not overdoing and the returns very much in her favor. The Casler band is to all appearances a modest outfit that knows its music.

On the screen, "A Texas Steer" (F. N.). Mark.

AMERICAN

(Vaude-Pcts)

Nifty vaude first half, banged across without a fliv. Way the talent punctured the bulls eye it looked like decorations for all hands. Percentage on an eight-act bill, 1000.

Rathburn Trio, featuring Vernon, lad with a pompadour and saxophone, opened. This turn (New Acts) has been dressed up, presented neatly, and makes a nice opener.

Carney and Pierce (New Acts) are pop songsters with zeal and vigor aplenty. Songs just so-so, but their personality and delivery suffice to get them on the solvent side.

A guy without his pants and with kilts over a padded stomach could'nt flop at the American. Jack Conway accordingly was aces with the cheer squad. He would have been a hit without showing his B. V. D.'s. With the plaid lingerie he brings out the shrieks.

Jumping from one extreme to another to still another, Conway's custard pie stuff was followed by the Royal Pekin Troupe, in turn followed by Lucille Benstead (New Acts), high range and class soprano. Structurally it was an extremely well blended and varied bill.

Chinese commanded salvos of applause with their gasp-creating, awe-winning feats of sensational dexterity. This turn, seemingly minus some of its original membership, now consists of six performers. Dressed and mounted lavishly the act moves at a gallop, building always, lagging never. Some laughs and a lot of showmanship is involved. They can play the world and repeat indefinitely.

Beeman and Grace are funny—in two directions. Their gags are pretty funny and the sudden switching from "one" and kibbitzing to "full" and roller skates. It is safe to assume the ball bearings come as a complete surprise to those seeing the turn for the first time. In retrospect their delivery seems like a modification and development of the out-of-breath dialog common to dumb acts when incorporating talk, but Beeman and Grace have developed beyond roller skates. While the last few minutes are okay there seems no need for the sudden change in the style of the act up to then.

The girl is an unusual—brunet-type and the man has a nice personality. Their ideas are probably a little chaotic at present but that skating mat must mean excess baggage.

Hawthorne and Cooke, indefatigable nut comics, with a trunk full of foolishment, held the major comedy assignment. Evelyn Phillips and two clever lads closed with a pleasing dance turn.

"In the Air" (Par) on the screen. Land.

EDITH MEISER (1)
Character Songs
18 Mins.; Three
Palace (St. V)

Edith Meiser, out of productions, is out of her element for vaude although it's no limitation with the proper material. What Miss Meiser is doing is giving 'em production lyrics at pop prices, a not too great contrast for the main but markedly so in the type of stuff she retails.

Her songs, more in the nature of rhymed monologs, are Rodgers and Hartlan in their character and may have been authored by the same team responsible for "Gaieties" and "Peggy Ann" in which shows Miss Meiser appeared. The nature of the entertainment, with strict attention required to 18 minutes of more or less familiar observation, but distinctively done in lyric form, does not make for good vaudeville.

Her "Misfits" opener should be dispensed with for speed purposes. Her three songs dwell on certain feminine types, one on Queen Elizabeth, "the Virgin Queen," being tartly racy.

In total, while she was well received, Miss Meiser will find herself too limited. With straight vaude as it is, it behooves the comedienne to widen her scope for wider appeal. Abel.

"THE WEDDING GOWN" (8)
Songs, Comedy and Dancing
29 Mins.; Three (Special)
Riverside (St. V)

Despite the presence of Frank Hurst and Eddie Vogt, funsters, the revue does a nosedive through lack of material and lustreless dance routines.

Mildred Keats is only fair vocally but impossible as a hoofer and not strong on appearance.

This is an attempt at a tabloid musical comedy, produced by George Choos. Words are by Darl McBoyle and music by Paul Yartin.

Hurst and Vogt double into this from their own act which precedes one turn ahead on the program. Both have booked jointly.

Action is in a ladies' wear store, the opening scene bringing on the owner of the store, Palmer Young, and the four assistants, Ada Marcus, Audrey Butler, Norma Butler and Lillian Martin. The girls are later used in a miniature fashion revue but the clothes are not flashy enough to create the proper impression.

Story centers round a girl who enters the store to return a wedding gown. Her boy friend had disapproved of the length. They quarreled and it was all over.

The boy friend, Hurst, stumbles into the store and accepts temporary employment as a clerk for a gag. The girl, finding him there, plays hard-to-get and accepts the advances of an unknown gent who had been forcing his attentions on her.

Between songs the boy and girl make up. Danny Dare also featured in program billing. Mort.

BEN BARTON and Orchestra (13)
Music and Dancing
18 Mins.; Full Stage
Tower, Chicago (V-P)

This orchestra, reorganized, is as good an attraction for picture houses as it is for vaudeville. There are 11 men, including Barton, with two girls, one fiddling and the other dancing, completing the company.

The numbers are up to date and played well. Barton's announcing is handled with an eye for mild comedy and gets over. He is an accomplished dramatic song-talker, working the most effective spot in his act with a strong ballad arrangement.

The girl fiddler is used in a comedy number wherein she and Barton converse with their instruments, and later plays in a string quartet. Dancing by the other girl is a fair eccentric routine done in male clothes.

Barton is an efficient m. c. and dominates his act. Loop.

4 KARREYS
Contortion
13 Mins.; Three
State (V-P)

Contortion act that tops anything seen before. Three men and a woman open very Saraha in Oriental trappings. Men strip to ornate but working abbreviated costumes, the woman assisting in full attire of veil, harem pantaloons, etc.

Two of the male trio do bend stuff that leaves the auditor somewhat in a cold sweat. Their twists and knots are indescribable. Formations in pyramids are unique in addition.

It rates as the last gasp in acts of this type, done with such precision and artistry it does not offend in the slightest. Abel.

EVA CLARK and CASLER BAND
Songs and Dances
24 Mins.; Full (Special)
5th Ave (V-P)

When last reviewed as a new act, Miss Clark was assisted by Dan Casler at the piano. This time Miss Clark heads a turn that has Casler still rendering musical accompaniment but doing it upon a more elaborate scale, a band of 12 pieces. And in addition to that background there are two youthful hoofers, Fillman brothers, who work hard, fast and skillfully.

By way of adding a little more variety to the act Casler permitted Johnny Sully and Muriel Thomas, who preceded on the bill, to come on for a dancing bit that cleaned up.

Act opened with young Sully introducing Casler. A topical number set them off nicely followed by Miss Clark, who sang a pop number to advantage. Then the stepping brothers, who showed ability that can be bettered as they grow older. Casler then used his one-handed playing of a piano to a mild reception. After the Sully-Thomas insertion and the band did another number, Miss Clark went into a ballad and followed with another. She is an attractive looking woman, has lots of personality plus ability to wear clothes. Her second outfit is a pip. And she's there on voice too.

A novelty dance, the brothers affecting a monkey style, was capitally done. A brassy, crashy number for the finish resulted in an encore.

Any time vaude gets tired of Miss Clark, and that doesn't seem possible, she and the Casler orchestral layout can step into the picture houses. It's that kind of a turn. Mark.

HENRI A. KEATES
Solo Organist
Oriental, Chicago

Circumstances surrounding Keates' sudden departure from the Oriental eight weeks ago were not explained. After four weeks of idleness he resumed with Balaban & Katz, rotating as solo organist between the Uptown and Tivoli theatres. Milton Charles, a devotee of straight o an playing, was brought into the Oriental from the Chicago and had some success as a novelty man. Now, Keates is back where he belongs.

As far as the younger generation is concerned, Keates is the originator and only thoroughly efficient exponent of community singing extant. When his song slides are flashed on the screen, words pour from juvenile throats in overwhelming enthusiasm. So assured is Keates of his response, he ceases playing accompaniment for long intervals and grins at the customers while they shout at him.

Keates' present solo is titled "No Wonder I'm Happy." Rhymed slides tell the customers he's tickled to be back at his old stamping grounds, and it's up to them to show him they're glad to have him. He goes through a pop number to test them out, with slightly weak returns. Then he works a burlesqued song, having the girls plead for gifts from the boys, and the young gents shouting hearty denials. There's more interest now, a.. Keates hits off another pop number to good response. From this point on it's a mixture of comic slides and the pop stuff, the community singing getting continually louder. In closing, as the organ descends and the slides are used up, Keates always plays an particularly popular song, having the singers rely on memory for words.

Keates has something possessed by no other picture house solo organist. Patronage at the Oriental, with Paul Ash on the stage, is young in the majority. Having a mob of kids to work on, Keates originally imbued in them the urge to sing as soon as he started playing. When voices scattered all over the house start warbling the moment he bats off a note, it's not a tough task getting additional devotees to take up the operatics. None of that uphill sledding met with in a house full of diffident and conservative customers and none to start things moving.

And that's where he has it over em all. Loop.

Through a sudden switch in bookings, with no change in billing on the part of the theatre, Variety's reviewer gave the Piccadilly Quartet credit for taking honors of the Fox (pcts), Washington, presentation bill when it should have been the Masters Quartet.

JOCKEY FRANCESCO and Band
Dancing and Instrumentation
18 Mins.; One and Full (Special)
Academy of Music (V-P)

Francesco is a genuine jockey whose penchant for hoofing for the edification of the stable boys and jocks at Belmont Park sent him into the cabarets as a novelty attraction. This is his first stab at vaudeville. He is a diminutive youth of much personality and natural ability as a hoofer.

Flanked by a seven-piece orchestra and girl dancer, the former jock has an act that hits on merit and novelty. Francesco features a couple of hot acrobatics and then wields the baton for the band, the latter a pleasing combination. The girl dancer spaces Francesco's contributions and a tap is her outstander.

GERALDINE IMPERIO CO. (2)
Dances and Music
15 Mins.; Full (Special)
5th Ave. (V-P)

Atmospherically and as to routines, music and clothes, this act is decidedly and unquestionably Spanish. What may have been expected to have been a standout was a dance atop of a table, or pedestal, which, used by the man and woman, cramped them to such an extent they both tumbled to the stage. The accident marred the turn and put the dancers at a big disadvantage. For a moment it was feared the woman was painfully injured, but she came back and worked through.

Spice and flavor throughout was perhaps the most effective, a novel bit being the tambo number done by the three. Lady Geraldine is assisted by two men throughout, the men taking care of the musical numbers interpolated individually, one with the mandolin and the other at the piano, the latter also taking part in the dance routines with the woman.

Act seemed to please 'em here. Mark.

BOBBIE ROWLAND (2)
Songs
15 Mins.; One
Riverside (St. V)

Bobbie Rowland is a female impersonator doing the average song routine with male accompanist. Billing and handling fool the mob pretty well until he goes into a "blues," in raspy masculine voice prior to the unwigging Monday night.

Were not vaude seemingly overrun with fem impersonation acts this season, Rowland would have better chances to capitalize this angle. As is, he gets over and did in deuce Monday night. Edba.

BROWN-DEMONT REVUE (5)
Songs and Dances
14 Mins.; Full Stage
5th Ave. (V-P)

An all colored singing and dancing troupe with novelty supplied by one of the women disguised during the early section as a boy. The act has considerable pep, the other two women filling in for some of the approved hotsy totsy stepping.

About the biggest asset is a boy who is an exceptionally clever tap dancer. His time and tapping are fast and perfect. Act stands up well in comparison to other outfits of the kind. Mark.

HOUSES OPENING

The Dyckman, 207th street, New York, which for sometime has been playing straight pictures, expects to play five acts on a split week basis.

Fulton, Mo., college town, has a Dubinsky Brothers (Kansas City) theatre. Vaudfilm policy. Theatre cost $60,000.

Walker, 1,400 seats, catering to colored audiences in Indianapolis. Reginald Duvalle, musical director.

Albert J. MacKennan and Donald F. MacClellan, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., have added the Lyceum theatre, Pawling, N. Y., to their circuit.

The new Regal, Chicago, opened Feb. 4 with Dave Peyton as musical director; Fess Williams and orchestra on stage and The Right Quintet.

A. H. Schwartz theatre, under construction in Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, opening next fall. Combination policy planned.

New house in Lyndhurst, N. J., opened Feb. 4.

Palace, Lorain, O., 2,500, opens March 15 with vaude. Built by Variety Amusement Co., Cleveland.

COMPROMISE KILLS OFF IRON-CLAMAGE WHEEL

Firm Gets United Show Franchise and House in Wheel to Quit Opposition

The proposed new burlesque circuit, sponsored by Warren B. Irons of Chicago (Irons & Clamage) enterprises, has been eliminated by the acceptance of a new show on the Mutual circuit and the adding of the I. & C. house, Haymarket, to the combined Mutual-Columbia wheel.

The Haymarket, Chicago, starts its new Mutual policy week of Feb. 19 with the attraction, "Sugar Babies" as the opener. The new Irons & Clamage show, "Puss Puss," opens the same week at the Empress, Chicago.

Under the new arrangement the Mutual shows playing the Haymarket will remain in Chicago, but move several miles south to the Empress.

Definite steps had been taken by Irons to launch a new circuit and had even gone as far as to issue ads for burlesque performers as well as houses for a 40-house circuit.

J. H. Herk's deal on the Haymarket affiliation and a show franchise to Irons & Clamage changed the situation.

Warren Irons formerly had a show on the Columbia. He and Clamage have at different times operated burlesque stocks, having one in the Avenue, Detroit, which they operate on lease, as well as the one now running at the Haymarket, Chicago.

MUTUAL AS TITLE FOR BOTH WHEELS

The merged Columbia-Mutual interests will operate as the Mutual Circuit for the remainder of the season, without adoption of the United Burlesque Circuit title until next season, if at all.

Conditions of the merged circuit are gradually working out to satisfaction, with I. H. Herk in full charge and keeping check upon both shows and houses.

Business has improved generally in both Mutual and Columbia wheel houses since the guarantee arrangement on shows went in, with producers equally satisfied.

BIRTHS

Daughter to Mrs. Mary Dunston, formerly Mary Downes of "No Foolin'," at the Shore Road Hospital, Brooklyn.

Son to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Berger in New York. Mother was formerly Charlotte Davis of "The Chiffon Girl" and "The Vagabond King."

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Whalen, in New York, Jan. 31, daughter. The mother is a daughter of Tom Kirby of the Pat Casey office.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Leventhal, in New York, Feb. 5, son. Mother is the daughter of Joe Leblang and the father the general manager of the Equity ticket agency.

JUDGMENTS

Grencourt Hotel, Inc.; Burns Bros., $1,359.

Clarence W. Morganstern; M. Slade, et al.; $527.

Macy-Masius, Inc.; Polygraphic Co. of Am., Inc., $3,278.

CANTON ON WHEEL

Lyceum, Canton, Ohio, will play United Burlesque wheel shows, beginning next week, with "Bare Facts" the first show.

LID LIFTERS

Comedian	Al Hillier
Second Comedian	Eddie Lloyd
Straight	Joe Forte
Utility	Don Gauthier
Prima Donna	Pearl Smith
Soubret	Gladys Smith
Soubret	Aline Rogers
Ingenue	Judy Butler

High average burlesque troupe, made up by organization of consistently good personnel. Hillier builds the comedy, the Smith Sisters take care of the sex appeal, and Joe Forte gives the whole affair a tone and background with some of the best straight playing seen in a Wheel show for many a month.

Not the least of the "Lid Lifters'" assets is a brisk chorus. Lewis Talbot, who owns the unit, would confer a favor upon the circuit by revealing how he gets these 16 girls to go through a performance as though they liked it.

In a general way these details indicate the sum of the show's effect. But a number of small details help greatly to put it over. A capable cast gives a fine example of team work. And the result is a fast performance, helped by the active cooperation of the chorus.

Hillier is a genuine comedian, doing "Dutch" with a particularly complicated dialect that sharpens his gags. He works among moderately quiet lines in business, but some of his stuff is pretty broad in double meaning. However, it has the saving grace of spontaneous fun, and that alibi doesn't go for most of the modern comics. Eddie Lloyd doesn't get much chance in the bits, working as eccentric without dialect, but his inning comes in his specialty dancing and in a couple of blackouts. Gauthier is a juvenile of almost revue class in appearance, a nice dancer and agreeable singer.

Forte is a real asset to a burlesque show. A suave feeder and a capable worker on his own. He had one of those song-numbers worked up into a dramatic episode, and for once he made it stand out. Most of these things are crude, but this one is so well handled it gets over splendidly. Forte starts a sentimental song in "one" and carries it into a special full stage set of a cabaret, where the song lyrics tell a story of a sweetie double crossing a good fellow. The idea is really a lyric sketch, interesting and well done.

Another elaborate bit out of the ordinary is the auto sales room number. Comedian is supposed to be auto salesmen, showing the various models to customers, the cars being the girls in union suits. Dialog gives opportunity for some pretty blue lines, but brings individual girls to front like pickout number, always a popular bit with the mob.

Most of the body weaving and shape revealing is done by Gladys Smith, and remarkably well managed, considering this soubret is of the petite and boyish form model, whereas the gang likes 'em plump. The girl gets over the handicap by playing "teaser" bits across the board, always being a little short of frank revelation, but threatening to go the limit. Once she did her hip waving behind a wrapping of newspaper and several times underneather of a Spanish shawl. If she'd come into the open with her 100 pounds of girlish figure she'd have been blah, but coquetting this way she was a wow.

The other sister, Pearl, has the curves, but doesn't use 'em except in discreet stepping, leaving the way open for the other girl to deliver.

Aline Rogers is another girl of opulent shape who doesn't go very far in sex exploitation, but leads several numbers agreeably wearing trunks and waist, which is considered all muffled up in burlesque. Judy Butler does the gracefully polite throughout, her department being the vocal one. She has a first-rate soprano for this grade of show, with a good clear high note. Besides she does a violin solo by way of specialty.

Most of the people have specialty of some sort and all dance well, the girls as well as the men. Rush.

H. CLAY MINER TRAVELING

A trip south to be followed by a visit to Alexandria, Egypt, to see his son, was started this week by H. Clay Miner.

The southern trip takes in Havana and Florida.

At Alexandria the younger Miner is in charge of an advertising campaign for General Motors, taking in several foreign countries.

CHI "SHAMBLES" BIG; N. Y. SHOW HALTED

"Midnight Shambles," the show Fred Clark and Sidney Anschell contemplated for midnight performances at the Columbia, New York, has been scrapped after two weeks of rehearsals.

Anschell, Chicago concessionaire, financing, is claimed to have soured on the idea and called things off, paying the company, including James Barton, contracted as an added attraction, two weeks' salary.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

The Star and Garter theatre, one time Columbia stand and now operated by Sidney Anschell as a stock burlesque house, has inaugurated a special Saturday night business getter with an augmented company that takes in the Rialto theatre stock.

Through the dailies and one sheet stands the theatre is exploiting the name "Midnight Shambles" starting at 11:30 Saturday night and winding up at 3 in the morning. The combined companies include 64 chorus girls and 20 principals. The seating capacity of the house is 2,700. The admission prices are $1.65 main floor, $2.20 boxes and $1.10 balcony. The house has been doing near capacity business on each midnight performance. The people in the cast all getting extra money for the extra show. The show is run on revue policy with Leo Stevens producing.

Albany Off Wheel

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 7.

Burlesque has passed into local oblivion with the announcement the Capitol will play only legitimate attractions. "Frivolities of 1928," booked for the last half of the week, will be the last United wheel show to appear in Albany.

Oscar Perrin, manager of the Capitol, where burlesque shows have been staged the last half of the week for the last three seasons, has been urging the new policy for his house for some time.

Wrestling in Ill.

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Through the efforts of Joe Coffey, local sports promoter, the Illinois Boxing Commission has finally sanctioned wrestling in theatres.

Some time ago wrestling matches were staged in the Haymarket and Star and Garter burlesque houses as added attractions, with the affairs considered so "preconceived" they were ultimately prohibited.

It is probable an attempt will be made shortly to install matches in eastern burlesque houses.

Burlesque Changes

Donnelly and Lec have left "The Merry Whirl," to return to vaude.

Vinnie Phillips has replaced Marion O'Neill in "Kandy Kids."

Morris Wainstock leaves next Saturday to join the "Hello Jake" (Mutual) as company manager.

Joe Edmonson, long attached to the New York Columbia Circuit quarters, in the auditor's department, has become company manager of the Lena Daley show (Mutual).

STOCK AGAIN AT MYRTLE

Stock burlesque has again supplanted the tab policy at the Myrtle, Brooklyn, N. Y., the new policy going in this week.

Company includes Billy Dollman, A. Green, Betty Harrington, Marie Boots, Jules St. Clair, Phoebe Dunham, S. Callen, Anna Barber, Pearl Orall, Helen Hewill, Gracia Palmer and Dody Dawn.

DODY STAGING RUNWAY

Fred Clark has succeeded Dan Dody as stager of the runway numbers for Isabel Van and girls at the Columbia, New York.

Dody is on tour installing similar runway ensembles in other wheel houses, most of which will eventually adopt the feature.

Midway Hip for Vaudfilm

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Midway Hippodrome, 63rd and Cottage Grove, will discontinue burlesque March 1 and install vaudfilm on straight pictures. At that time its contract with the Musicians' Union expires and it can cut down the seven piece orchestra required for burlesque.

BURLESQUE ROUTES will be found on page 62 in this issue.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

This department contains rewritten theatrical news items as published during the week in the daily papers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and London. Variety takes no credit for these news items; each has been rewritten from a daily paper.

NEW YORK

Vilma Banky is an example of a personage who has attained a position where publicity is almost automatic. The other day she appeared at the Borgo Office to buy a return permit, and most of the tabloids blew the story up to carry a cut. Here's where old publicity counts. Pretty much all the newspapers in the country have stock cuts of Vilma in their morgues, a big item in publicity. Frequently city editors have a stack of items in front of them, to be used or rejected according to whether there is a stock cut available. If there is a cut available the story runs. If not it goes on the floor. That's where good distribution of photos counts in month by month free lineage.

Wild animal zoo attacks are always news. The story of Al G. Barnes being hurt by a frightened Zebra in his Los Angeles winter quarters was carried by A. P. from coast to coast. Barnes was reported in the hospital with bites and bruises.

Helen Wainwright Holland, swimming champ, won an annulment of her wild marriage to a Dallas organist. One of those "dare" things.

Federal Judge Knox reserved decision in the plagiarism suit of Clara Lipman Mann against Edgar Selwyn and Edmund Goulding. She charges "Dancing Mothers" is a copy of her play, "Ladies of Westchester." Court said he would read both MMS.

Guy C. Harrington, of the Lambs, applied for letters of administration on his dead wife's estate, but her relatives opposed, asking that an interlocutory decree of divorce obtained by the wife be made final. The court in Binghamton, N. Y., refused to make the writ final. The wife, Emma Olga Harrington, was killed in her New York apartment in December, apparently beaten to death. She was an actress.

An example of good publicity method occurs in the story of Mrs. Margaret Mann's elevation to a featured role in Fox's "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters," climax of a long career as an extra. Instead of being broadcast as a routine publicity item, it somehow got to the New York "Evening Post" as an exclusive feature and went for a column of space. From here it was picked up in all manner of exchanges. Personal newspaper contact frequently opens the way for an exclusive of this kind, and there is no better way of breaking a human interest story than to get it a single spread somewhere.

High Hat club, 150 West 56th street, and Spirit of Paris, 63 West 48th street, went the way of night clubs. Federal raids.

Cops and dry agents said they paid $30 for a quart in the Oxford club, 72 West 51st street, which they later raided.

Martin Dwyer sues Thea Rasch, German aviatrix, for $100,000, alleging he arranged flying stunts for her in America, got her movie contracts and prepared to get her theatrical engagements. Girl had sailed before filing of suit.

Roger Kahn's new Bellanca aeroplane, just delivered, has been getting more newspaper attention than the new Holland tunnel. A couple of the Wilmington du Ponts took a ride in it last week.

LOS ANGELES

J. E. Noll, mule trainer with a circus, was granted a divorce from his wife, Grace Noll, by Superior Court Judge Bowron. Noll claimed that his wife called him a mule skinner. It made him very angry, as he is a mule trainer and there is a big distinction between the two, he says.

Mrs. Hope Phillips, San Francisco actress, was convicted of manslaughter in superior court for driving a car that killed a woman. She is facing a sentence of one to 10 years in San Quentin penitentiary.

Prince David Mdivani, husband of Mae Murray, was divorced for speeding since Sunday. Alexis, the prince, who is a brother of Serge Mdivani, Pola Negri's husband, was going 35 on a main street.

Colleen Moore made good her promise to Dr. D. W. Duane, one of wealthy scientist and writer, who died penniless in the U. S. penal he had after a lingering illness. Miss Moore offered to aid him upon condition prior to his death. After he had passed away she took upon herself the arrangements of his funeral and paid for all the expense. Duane at one time made a preparation of a certain kind of perfume which he dedicated to Miss Moore. It still carries her label.

Traffic violations against a number of the picture colony came up in municipal court in one day. In Judge Valentine's court, Marshall Neilan, director, was ordered to come in on a bench warrant when he failed to appear to answer to a tag. Charles Rogers, screen leading man, also failed to show, but was given another day, as it was his first offense. June Collyer, Wampas baby star of this year, didn't get off so easy. Judge Valentine fined her $10 on a plea of guilty. Wallace Beery and Joseph Schildkraut both received slips to appear while Ruth Chatterton was also notified to answer. Three others presented with tags for violations were Rowland V. Lee, director, Milton Sills and Pauline Garon.

Marie Dodds, picture actress, who does not want alimony from her husband, was given a divorce from Edward Dodds, Universal employee, on ground of non-support. Actress agreed to accept $15 weekly, however, for the support of their child, whose custody she was granted.

Charles Craver, musician, was freed of charges of failing to provide for his child by an all-woman jury. His attorney brought in testimony indicating the past life of the mother was doubtful.

Harold F. McCormick, Chicago millionaire, denied impending rumors that he will divorce Ganna Walska, opera singer. Press dispatch carried this from Santa Barbara, where McCormick is visiting.

Appeal is on file in Superior Court of Tom V. Dalton and Robert Whalen who received a jail sentence and fine in connection with the "Hot Mama" show case. A hearing was set for Feb. 17 before Judge Hardy. Pair got 150 days and $500 fine after conviction in Municipal Court.

Two separate suits were filed in Municipal Court against Lionel Barrymore and Jack Pickford. Broadway Florist shop is suing Barrymore for $54.80 bill, while Brandstatter's Aiglon cafe claims Pickford owes $207.25 for food.

Mrs. Helen Cooke Wilson was given an interlocutory decree of divorce from Harry Leon Wilson, novelist, at Salinas, Cal. Grounds were desertion. Superior Judge Treat had the case under advisement for several months.

Mrs. Wilson received a property settlement of $86,000, approximately half of Wilson's fortune.

Albert Hay Malotte, former picture house organist now conducting a school, was sentenced to jail for three days. He was held in contempt for failing to make alimony payments to Mary Jane Malotte, cabaret and vaudeville actress. She was granted $150 a month by the court.

Boris Sapiro, 18, Lithuanian actor, was detained by immigration authorities at Los Angeles harbor to determine whether he was a minor alien without visible means of support. Sapiro told the federal officers he was a friend of Emil Jannings and asked to get in touch with the German picture star. The boy arrived here from South America on the "Mongolia." He has no relatives in this country. Unless he can get someone here to vouch for him Sapiro will be deported.

Edward Faust and Charles B. Dreyer, owners of "Peter the Great," film dog, recently awarded $125,000 from Fred Cyriacks for the death of the dog, must go through another trial before collecting. Judge Marsh, of superior court, thought the sum was too excessive and set aside the verdict, ordering the new trial. The dog was killed three years ago during an alleged argument between the owners and Cyriacks.

Sonograph Corporation, exploiting a new sound device to be synchronized with pictures, were given a permit by the state corporation department to issue $1,000,000 worth of authorized capital. The company is a California corporation with capitalization of 50,000 shares at par value of $20 each. The product is the invention of E. H. Foley. Officers of the company are A. E. Slaton, president; I. A. Thorkelson, secretary; P. H. Harwood, vice-president; J. H. Kreider, treasurer; Charles W. Hutchinson director.

Jack Dempsey will box on the [illegible] of Nov. 5 [illegible]

TELLING 'EM OFF

Etiquette in high circles was revealed to the mob at the "society premiere" of "Sadie Thompson." A Junior League candy-butcher in an ermine wrap ran up and down the aisles all during the picture poking gumdrops under the noses of the aisle-seat holders.

As Lon Chaney Might

A young German lad presented himself for a Vitaphone test recently, announcing in good faith that he wanted to be a Vitaphone Lon Chaney.

Upon being asked why he thought he could do it, he said, "Lookit!" And threw one hip and shoulder out of joint with a resounding crack.

Chorus Boys' Hideaway

The biggest under-cover frolic the chorus boys have pulled was staged recently with the Fifth Avenue Childs midnight gross falling off 80 percent. The laddies rented an impoverished school for backward children near Inspiration Point. The blackboards which lined the rooms were used for original Mother Goose murals. Kiddies were assessed $20 per. Promoters were left holding the bag for about 4 c's. They hadn't figured on food for the following day and cars to get the boys back downtown for the next night performance.

Posing for Penny Pictures

Some of the prizes among the Times Square chorines are secretly picking up $10 daily posing for the flickers in the penny arcade machines. They say the work is as dignified as any they've struck, as the pictures are rigidly censored.

Undress stunts aren't required, although the penny machines display provocative billings. The penny operas are being shot in one of the shut-down motion picture studios.

Making-Up Policewomen

A pair of dignified matrons called on one of the Times Square make-up experts last week and asked to be made-up so they could pass for professional gals. The artist obliged, but felt plenty of curiosity. It developed the skittish babies were representatives of "the law," and they wanted to pass as belongers, having been assigned to a raid.

"Love Me" on Ice

The girls are getting around a bit. There doesn't seem to be a hot spot for a picture heroine who faints four times in as many reels. The girls like to imagine themselves in the heroine's place.

And how can they do it, when the maiden is so unreal as Mary Philbin is required to be in "Love Me and the World is Mine." Mary is so pure and gentle she can't understand why all the men are so good to her. And E. A. Dupont, who gave spine to all the characters in "Variety," is responsible for this one. Mary isn't only goofy, she's sappy, letting a playmate joy-girl bulldoze her into breaking with the sweetie.

One thing about the American girl fans should be explained to E. A. Dupont of Germany. They like their Cinderella legends in a form which fits their own lives. They like Cinderella to get the Prince aggressively, not leaning on mere chance. "Love Me" might be hot for the provinces still devoted to wide eyes and smelling salts.

A Cry Picture

"Sadie Thompson" will hand the girls a wallop. It's a cry matinee film. And what broad-minded femme won't like to see a wrong-girl get a marine sergeant with a license over the mantel?

Sadie's a great show for the women, aside from the sympathy it gives the kicked-around. Great drama, great comedy (some not too refined) and oorking performances by the whole troupe.

Soph's Promise

Who but Madame Soph Tucker could go fly on a picture house stage? At the Paramount Sophie gives them two sizzlers. And they like it.

Sophie says, "When better men are made, I'll make 'em." And the ladies yell. There's been so much scarf dancing and sofa-cushions coming to life on the stages of the picture theatres, it looks as though the Madame finally will help the girls let down their back hair.

Colleen Moore's Nice Fit

"Her Wild Oat" has Colleen Moore doing a female Harry Langdon, and the gag comedy yarn is more suited to Colleen than anything she has done in a long time.

It's all very Cinderella, to be sure, and the poor girl who invades a sassiety resort in pursuit of her man is a story with whiskers.

But Miss Moore is very clever as the fake duchess named after a soup. And the story doesn't matter for the gags are good. The girl fans will eat "Her Wild Oat."

Three writers share credit for the title: "This is an aviation season. Let the hips fly where they may."

Bright—and From Sweden

"Discord" looks as though the Swedes may have gotten the idea. It's a bright comedy in any language. And one particularly appealing to the ladies, setting forth the unique theory that a wife may kiss a gorgeous man and not mean any harm, even though she happens to be in the nude at the moment.

"Discord" is more in the spirit and technique of the American market than any one which has come out of Sweden. The makeups, the girls' legs, the cutting of closeups into long shots are all Hollywood.

Story is a very light comedy of adjustment in a marriage between a country man and a city belle. Acting is good. And the final scene is charming and sophisticated. And there's a bet for film men in a very young girl who has a minor role.

D. W.'s Error

When "Drums of Love" opened at the Liberty, D. W. Griffith offered an apology for not having made a "box office picture." If it isn't the girls aren't going to the movies. "Drums" is a girls' picture. Girls eat love tragedy. There isn't one who secretly wouldn't like to die for love. And if they won't pay $2 at the Liberty, they will flock into the regular picture houses to see "Drums."

And that is what Mary Philbin does, in beautiful photography. Also, she cheats. Another trick in which women have not lost interest. Francesca di Rimini has been the flick's romance for generations. It's hardly possible they'll pass it up when it is done in the popular form of motion pictures.

Marjorie Spahn's In

The chorines who subsist entirely on thyroid capsules have been thrown into a panic by a 135-pounder who is the ensemble outstander in "Take the Air." This girl is overweight and looks it, but she gets a hand at every performance. She is plenty cute. Her name is Marjorie Spahn. She's 19 and from the Jersey Oranges.

Every morning before running for her train Marjorie fortifies herself with six eggs. And a number of the chorines who've been eating pineapples to keep their jobs are secretly passing their plates for mashed potatoes.

Couple of Peeks, Too

"The Web of Fate," with Lillian Rich doubling for vice and virtue, both as a blond, got so entangled finally it repeated a shot of the villanous lady peeking through the curtains though she had changed her dress for the second peek. But this is what they call a quickie so they move and work fast.

Her velvet brocade negligee was rather unusual with the material coming from the waist in front to fall over the shoulders into a narrow train. The bill called for an ermine coat, but it didn't photograph like that.

Miss Rich rode in white linen, posed in the moonlight in beaded georgette and said "yes" in a long white frock that was the essence of innocence. She did very well with her dual character.

Bessie Mack's Double

Bessie Mack, generally believed to be the p. a. of the Capitol, New York, is now the accredited publicist, succeeding C. A. Leonard, who came from Howard Deitz's staff in the M-G-M home office to take charge when Martha Wilchinski went Roxy.

Miss Mack's former title was actually that of secretary to Major E. J. Bowes. She is now doing both.

GRAY MATTER

By MOLLIE GRAY

(TOMMY GRAY'S SISTER)

At the Palace

Palace program says that in the Mid-Season Bill next week, "the high standard of the winter will be maintained." Any fur dealer will tell the world that as a winter this one has been a failure.

Waring's Pennsylvanians are making overtures out of popular songs and making new friends in their new territory this week.

Edith Meiser, delighting everyone with songs of the past and present, had a gown that was just as accommodating. Of a beautiful shade of blue taffeta, it was first a robe de style with a large bow of yellow at the right hip, and its short tight sleeves were slit. Then Queen Elizabeth made big puffed sleeves necessary as well as the stiff lace collar, flaring, and cap to match. When the upper skirt was removed and the lower one dropped and an enormous feathered hat and boa added Miss Meiser became the Gibson Girl. A disappointed audience got no encore.

Tex McLeod shouldn't tell trade secrets. He said he laughed when he saw the audience coming in. Marjorie Tiller, with Ted, was attractive in a soft white crepe frock with a red rose perched on her shoulder. Slipper bows of the same color would be a big improvement on the pink ones now used.

Medley and Dupree, who have no first names according to the program, were entitled to the laughs they got. The girl is very pretty, more so in the green lace frock with tiny roses showing through it than the one of black velvet, whose rhinestone trimming across the bodice ended in a hip ornament and strings of the stones from it.

Marion Barclay's fine voice seemed in the wrong spot in an opening act, Rhea and Santoro, whose many curtain bows must have satisfied any act. A white lace costume of Mlle. Rhea's was lovely and the black satin white feathered hat a good way of bringing out that fact.

Shin Kicking Out Here

"Dimpled Darlings"—and did they have room for dimples!—will go into burlesque history for two reasons. There was no policeman in it and it had the most girls, judged by the scales. They were all pretty and quite lively, proving the Columbia stage is well built.

Nora Ford left nobody in doubt that she has a pretty figure. She and Dolly Beranger made Isabelle Van's girls appear very modest in spite of the new colored lights that have been added to the edge of the runway.

Isabelle was a vision in a cap of stiff een tulle and silver spangles and long green and silver skirt with not much between. Her left arm was much bracelotted.

Her girls appeared once in white taffeta and again in two colors of the same material, both costumes having real skirts. They had to do something to distinguish themselves from the chorus so they dressed.

The Columbia has only one thing to recommend it as an assignment, it's the only theatre where a woman doesn't have to profit by the old proverb, "A knick in the shins is worth two gentle hints." Regardless of how obvious the reason the fact is rare enough to entitle the theatre to a bronze tablet.

Three times in two hours the "shin kick" made the goal—an empty seat—at another theatre on Broadway.

As to "Cradle Song"

As famous as Eva Le Gallienne has become it was probably natural that the crowded lobby failed to recognize her in a sealskin coat, her hair all on end from the wind and trailed by a shaggy pup. She carries her honors quietly. The usual full house saw "The Cradle Song," for which a handkerchief is as necessary as a ticket at the old 14th Street theatre. The simple charm of the story and the delightful playing of Miss Le Gallienne and Josephine Hutchinson have made people go often enough to learn the lines.

Strange, too, when there are no sensational disclosures of any kind, no slapstick or lipstick or even liquor, just a little gem in a most dilapidated setting.

At the Paramount

Sophie Tucker must create her picture public so her next appearance there should receive a warmer welcome. Her gorgeous ermine and sable coat Monday covered a green crepe gown, the color of which matched the lining of the coat. The uneven hemline of the gown was achieved by a fullness at the right side hanging longer. A single loose panel hung from back of the left shoulder and diamond earrings and several bracelets completed her costume.

Six English Tiller girls wore men's formal dress clothes with top hats and canes, and appeared in the finale in fantastic black and gold costumes and high feathered hats. Scarlet velvet curtained the stage, once with silver strands and again plain.

"Buck Privates'" Help

Joseph Cherniavski and the Colonians—why didn't they call them Colonists?—are doing a lot to bring 53d street to the picture public in spite of the heavy billing outside, which usually makes people skeptical.

The Colony assumed a martial appearance with ticket takers in khaki, bugler mingling with the auto horns outside and aviatrix ushers in silver and satin inside.

All for "Buck Privates," and it needed the help. Everything is blamed on the war, so making Lya de Putti an ingenue will have to be, too. Maybe she likes curls and girlish dresses and a chance to wear a uniform—more a Boy Scout's than an overseas veteran's. But she had her beautiful white satin wedding gown, pearled on bodice and edge of long train, ready on a moment's notice, giving a lesson in preparedness.

A Lindy A-Horse

Sombreros will surely go out of style now with Tom Mix making our Westerns so high hat. "The Arizona Wildcat" is actually interesting and though even Tom couldn't make East and West meet he did bring the wild and woolcy to the slick and silk of California.

This let Kathleen Key unlock another wardrobe, this time for Dorothy Sebastian. Her white taffeta frock had lace sleeves open the whole length, caught at the wrist in a narrow band, and the skirt half covered with the same lace. The short cape that matched a darker silk frock was tied at the neck in a big bow and had a deep hem of heavy lace.

Cissy Fitzgerald would be exiled from California for wearing a mink coat in the daytime, a direct reflection on their sunshine, but since it was only Arizona she needed it. Her black satin coat was lavishly trimmed with black and white monkey fur.

Would such a wealthy lady pay cash for stock, but of course there would be no sense in fighting for a check and Tom Mix sure took those flatrs on High. He's the nearest one to Lindy on a Horse.

AUSTRALIA

in only one production for Empire Theatres. Both performers did well here, but, owing to nothing else in sight, they will be released when contract expires, in two weeks.

Leon Gordon will open here this year in "The Trial of Mary Dugan" for W-T. Gordon was a hit here last season in "White Cargo."

Williamson-Tait making big preparations for grand opera season in Melbourne in March with Toti dal Monte.

William Anderson is playing "Annie 100 Per Cent," with Nellie Bramley, at Royal, Adelaide.

"The Ghost Train" in Perth next week with Betty Ross Clarke. Miss Clarke has taken the show over from the Carrolls and will play it under her own management.

Fuller people are getting ready for "Rio Rita," which they claim will be the biggest musical attraction yet offered in Sydney. Gladys Moncrieff will be featured.

Some of the big shows that made much coin here last season were "Rose Marie," "The Ringer," "The Terror," "Cradle Snatchers," "Madame Pompadour," "The Ghost Train," "Not Tonight, Dearie," "Meet the Wife," "The Best People," "The Gorilla," "Lady, Be Good," "No, No, Nanette," "Archie," "Sunny." Bad flops included "The Road to Rome," "Ruddigore," "Green Hat," "Rain" and "Oh, Richard."

Louis Bennison is claiming $5,000 from Williamson-Tait for alleged breach of contract. Case will come up for hearing early this year in the Supreme Court of New South Wales. Bennison appeared here with Margaret Lawrence in "The Road to Rome," "Rain" and "Our Wife."

Picture News

"What Price Glory" looks like a long run at the Prince Edward, Sydney. Extra session each day this week to cope with holiday rush. Next will be "Scarlet Letter," probably followed by "King of Kings."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will go into a main city house for run.

Two British pictures will be screened here shortly, issued through Paramount under titles of "Huntingtower" and "The Flight Commander."

"Camille" now offered on general release in neighborhood houses after doing great business in main city theatre.

"Sunrise" here as "special" by Fox. Other attractions released by this exchange include "Mother Machree," "What Price Glory" "7th Heaven," "Cradle Snatchers" and "Womanwise."

E. Silver has arrived to interest Australian capital for building a local studio for the manufacture of colored scenics showing the various beauty spots of Australia.

Another Australian picture will be "shot" at an early date under title of "Odds On," with Phyllis Gibbs, who recently returned from Hollywood after winning a beauty price in this city.

Eva Novak is making personal appearances with the Australian made picture, "Romance of Runnimede," in which she plays the lead.

Byron Bidwell will stage the prolog for the new Regent, Sydney, which opens this year under the direction of Hoyt's Theatres, Ltd.

Royal Commission dealing with the film industry in this country has finished its job and is preparing its report, with the layman left wondering what it has all been about and at a cost of $250,000. The whole thing arose over a statement of a Senator that America had a stranglehold on the picture business of this country. Hundreds of witnesses proved to the Commission's entire satisfaction that the statement was in error.

LOOP'S NO PARKING

with officials to remove the parking ban.

Loop merchants already had a touch enough break through the opening of Sears-Roebuck community stores in neighborhoods.

Actually at present there is little incentive for persons not in business downtown to visit the Loop. Neighborhoods have everything, including deluxe picture houses on a par with the city's best, and have far surpassed the downtown section in number of amusement places.

Where the Loop has seven deluxe picture houses, the neighborhoods have 25. There are three Loop cafes and 18 in the neighborhoods. It is probable there are nearly 100 dine and dance places in the outlying districts. The dailies carry regular advertising on 80 picture houses outside the Loop, which means these houses are big enough to warrant the regular advertising expenditure.

Legit, the only straight Loon amusement, long ago lost out in competition with the horde of picture houses and their pop scales in this town.

Lya de Putti's Dances

Lya dePutti, the imported German movie luminary, has a strong fondness for New York and for this reason will not go to Hollywood for screen production. Which accounts for Miss dePutti's decision to break into vaudeville and ultimately into legit, the latter after her linguistic handicaps are bested.

The foreign actress has not mastered the native tongue. That is the reason she is taking dance lessons for the purpose of doing a dance act and exhibit clothes, rather than the sketch which Edgar Allen Woolf was outfitting her with.

Woolf is understood to have been receiving $100 a week from the star for his preparatory services.

NELLIE REVELL IN NEW YORK

By NELLIE REVELL

Home again. That is, if one insists upon calling her room in a hotel "home." Which I do. And while my recent trip to Chicago, Detroit and Boston afforded no end of excitement—I can even say amusement—I was glad to be back in my own 12th floor southern exposure room of the Somerset.

Glad, too, to be back in the corner seat at the Tavern and to see the smiling face of Frank Gerety. Glad, again, to be lunching with John Pollock, a custom of ours for more than 20 years; and to drop in at The Meeting House with "Danny" Doran, and to meet there Hugh Dillman, erstwhile husband of Marjory Rambeau, but now married to the Dodge millions. He frequently escapes from the splendor of his newly acquired responsibilities and can be seen in this less pretentious eating place.

While there are ever so many reasons why I am glad to be home, I find myself missing some familiar faces. Joe Freiberg, our host of the Somerset, is in Europe. Betty Brown, the best reader of my scribbling in all Mex or any other place, is in California on a vacation. Lillian Pulaski, who knows what you like for dinner better than you do and who also knows how to cook it, is with Betty Brown; and I wish they would all come home.

In Boston last week, where I was the guest of Ray Dooley, I learned of many other old-time friends in whom the theatrical world is still interested. Hattie Williams, former Frohman star, is running a rooming house in Boston; Carolyn Nichols, the leader of the Boston Fadetta Orchestra, has also retired from the stage and has made her home in The Hub.

Phelps Decker, former scenario editor for Universal, was found dead Sunday in his New York apartment. He was the husband of Clarice Vance who, a few years ago, was one of the best singles in vaudeville.

That line in last week's Variety, "Over DeMille to the Poor House," reminds me that I have met the only man who ever said "No" to Cecil B. DeMille. Last summer, at a Writers' Club festivity in Hollywood, the toastmaster wanted to introduce the most unusual character in pictures.

"Come on, Mr. So-and-So," he said. "Tell the gentlemen how you once said 'No' to DeMille."

"It was this way," replied the man addressed, who, incidentally was no longer working for DeMille, "We were in the projection room looking at the day's flashes and Mr. DeMille said, 'Did you ever see such wonderful pictures?' And I stood right up and said 'No!'"

A veteran bootlegger padded into the sanctum of B. C. Whitney in Detroit a few weeks ago. The purveyor of forbidden waters wore a look of a man in a position to do the world many and great favors.

"I've got a wonderful collection this year," he told Mr. Whitney. "Whiskies, wines, liqueurs, cordials—anything you want."

"Fine," said the magnate, "I'll take a couple of quarts of absinthe."

The bootlegger threw up his hands in horror.

"Absinthe!" he yelled. "Man, I can't sell you that. It's against the law!"

FREE "AD" FILM

Stanley concern, the firm is 50 requests behind on "Fine Arts in Metal," showing the making of bronze and silver ornaments by Gorham.

Return Info

Along with the picture is sent a card asking the projector to write the reaction of the audience to the subject of people who viewed it. A checkup on these cards has shown that the average home audience is 30 people and that the subject was interestingly entertaining. The Stanley outfit estimates there are 110,000 home projectors in the country and is making 45 prints of every "industrial" contracted for.

The original print is on standard film, reduced to 16m. size. The picture is despatched in three 400-ft. 16m. reels, taking about 45 minutes to run off, the equivalent of about 3,000 feet of standard stock.

In the case of "Fine Arts," Pathé Review took 2,500 of the original 5,000 feet taken and got it for nothing.

This style of commercial advertising has never been able to break into the theatres, hence the Pathe gratis footage and the theory that to get it into the homes would be almost as good.

Future plans are to make one on the automobile industry, with one car selected as the example; the turning out of a newspaper, observing as the model etc.

To get the film on board the trans-Atlantic ships, the Stanley firm pays the transportation concern a service charge and another service charge is leveled against the direct but semi-masked advertiser on a one-year basis plus the original cost of making the picture.

Advertising Free Film

Stanley Co. has a list of every home projector owner in the country. It is using "Amateur Movie Makers," monthly magazine belonging to the organization of that name, to help circularize the field.

The January number carried a complete story on the making of "Fine Arts in Metal." It held a strong plug, besides advertising copy, urging the reader to send for this free 16m. subject. February issue had keyed follow-up ads, with the packet exhibitor responsible for nothing other than postage, both ways, on a seven-pound package.

"Movie Makers" January number was 66 pages and cover and its February issue ran to 138 pages and cover. A likely tip off on the interest being manifested by the amateurs in taking and showing their own films.

"MARCHETA'S" PROFIT

Plaza Music Co., instituted action through O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll.

When Vogel was with Sheridan, who operated the John Franklin Music Co., Vogel dug up a shelved song, "Marcheta." It had been purchased from Victor Schertzinger, the movie director, for $50, all Schertzinger got out of it.

Vogel thought he had a good piece of property in "Marcheta," a perspicacity for nascent song material that has since repeatedly reasserted itself, and Sheridan told Vogel that whatever he did with the number he could keep 25 per cent.

Vogel admits payment of over $10,000 on the song, which amounts Sheridan credited to Vogel in a special bank account. Sheridan told the then youngster that if he gave it to him direct he (Vogel) would dissipate it, hence the "in trust" banking arrangement.

In this wise, Vogel did not know how much was due him until later discovering through a friendly bookkeeper that the $150,000 mark was the net profit on the sensational ballad which Sheridan and Vogel popularized from a cubby-hole of an office, without professional staff, and solely through exploitation by voluntary singers, starting with a couple who bought their copies from the music counters and made their own arrangements because of their faith in the song.

According to Vogel's estimate, he asks for $30,000 additional royalties for his share of the profits.

Resignation of A. G. Stolte, manager of the Riviera (Publix), Omaha, because of ill health has caused considerable flurry. Harry Watts, of the Capitol in Des Moines, will become Riviera manager. Nate Underfield, publicity director of the Riviera, will have Watts' place at the Capitol.

Hazel Kennedy from picture presentations is going Loew vaudeville.

ON THE SQUARE

A Bit Too Hard-Boiled

At a recent party for some show girls given by a young man about town who rather prides himself on being cynical and hardboiled, one of the guests was a pretty youngster, formerly a chorus girl and now a "Follies" principal, whom he had never met before.

About two o'clock she started to go home—alone. When saying good night to her host, she told him with an air of great distress that her pocket book was missing. When he offered to search for it she told him not to bother, but that if it turned up later, to save it for her as it contained something of great sentimental value.

Figuring the story a new racket and the girl just another digger, he broadcast the incident among his friends, particularly impressed by the girl's cleverness in refusing to borrow carfare from him.

Several hours later, when the party broke up, one of the guests found the pocketbook under a pile of coats.

Opening it, the young man about town discovered a couple of dollars in silver and a string of prayer beads. All of which considerably revised his ideas about life in general and this young "Follies" girl in particular.

Father, Daughter and Booze

An irate father who thought that, by tipping off friends in the prohibition department, he would stop his young daughter from cocktail jags on afternoons, may discover his daughter can find joints faster than enforcement can close up.

It almost caused one of the nicer places its privilege of continuing in business because the pater tipped on the place. The boys paid the restaurant a visit and mentioned the socially prominent man's name as the sesame. With the restaurateur not suspicious, the boys flashed a search warrant, but found nothing.

A half-hour later the daughter entered the place, stating she had escaped her nurse in a sanitarium to warn the restaurant man against her father's intended retaliatory measures.

The Real Perfect Husband

Last week's Perfect Husband, who failed to supply ice water and cigarets to his wife, has been shown up as a small timer by a new claimant really out for the title.

This gent, famous and rather wealthy author, recently tried his hand at play writing, was married not long ago to a young actress with firm ideas about feminine independence.

The author couldn't induce his bride to accept money from him, either for support or as a gift, so he finally offered to bet her $1,000 that a play he had just finished would be accepted for production within three months. She took the bet, whereupon he called up his agent and withdrew the play from the market until the end of the three months, without, of course, letting the wife in on it.

Gunmen's Suite in Times Square

Despite the vigilance through which space was rented in the new Paramount building in Times Square, until that sightly edifice was looked upon as the class tenant holder of uptown, the police last week nabbed 14 gunmen and bandits, as they claimed, in two adjoining offices in the upper part of the building. Cops called them "The Diamond Gang," lead by the Diamonds so they said, who were concerned in the recent ganster shootings on the lower east side.

One of the men arrested when asked to explain the name of the "exporting company" sign on his door, said it had been suggested by the name inside his hat.

Canyons of Times Square

Lower Broadway was once unique for its high wind currents created by sky-scrapers. Now Times Square has its own canyon. The currents around the Paramount building sometimes lift bits of paper almost to the top of the tower. Last week three large plate glass windows of the Paramount stores were smashed by the wind.

There is another new high wind spot at 45th and 8th avenue, created by the new Hotel Lincoln. Large sheets of glass were broken nearby through heavy wind pressure.

Morehouse Luck

Ward Morehouse, theatrical columnist on the New York "Sun," was in a taxicab with Miriam Hopkins, actress in "Excess Baggage" when the taxi smashed into an "el" pillar last Friday. The taxi was damaged and Miss Hopkins was bruised. Morehouse, lucky anyway, wasn't hurt.

He took Miss Hopkins to her theatre, where the curtain was held five minutes while a doctor attended the actress.

No Good Anyway

Which reminds us that a kid who appears in a few clothes in a night club thought up a new Scotch gag and rushed over to a flock of friends to spring it on them.

It was a terrible gag. One hard boiled newspaper man looked at the kid, and said:

"Even if you told that in the nude it wouldn't be good."

An Individualistic Walk

Frank Orth may not know it but his stage walk is a replica of President Coolidge's street walking form. Frank may adopt his stage strut now for the sidewalks or agencies, for when done by either it's a very individualistic stride. Mr. Coolidge was caught in the news weeklies doing his stuff for the Cubans.

A girl who is the central nude figure in a Broadway revue went up to a farm over a week-end. Arriving at 6 a. m., after the night clubs closed, she wanted to go horseback riding, and did, for two hours. Later she discovered the inside of her riding pants had been a little rough. She is not in the show at this writing.

"East Lynne" Billed on Broadway

As a publicity stunt for the Times Square district "Show Boat" is plastering old-time handbills advertising "East Lynne" by the Cotton Blossom Floating Palace Repertoire Company. No allusion to the Ziegfeld musical or theatre.

Three young stick-up men entered a bookie's establishment and cleaned it out. They knew there could be no squawk. But one of the yeggs got funny. Leaving, he turned and asked:

"Hey; how about a good thing at New Orleans for tomorrow!"

Name Your Choice

A new contrivance on Broadway is called the Sodamat. This machine, for a nickel, mixes any one of 12 different flavors and slides them out to customers in sanitary cups.

Canned For Swearing on the Square

An excavation on Eighth avenue bears a printed sign on the fence stating that "loud" or "obscene talk" on the part of employees will result in the canning of same.

Percy Hammond is looking better. Mrs. Hammond has about recovered from a recent side splitting op, usually referred to as appendicitis.

NEW WEDDING TWIST IN RITUAL PREFERRED

Lewis Browne Tying 'Em in Quaker Style—Popular as Marrier for Literati

Lewis Browne, author of "This Believing World" and "That Man Heine," and once a rabbi, is becoming a serious rival to the Little Church Around the Corner in the matter of performing marriage ceremonies, especially among the literati.

Within the past few weeks he has tied up several couples, either one or both of whom are known in the writing or theatrical world, among them Thyra Samter Winslow, author of "Show Business," and Nelson Hyde; Henrik Willem Van Loon, historian and author of "The Story of Mankind," and Frances Goodrich, actress; Patrick Kearney, author of "A Man's Man" and the adapter of "An American Tragedy," and Betty Pennock.

Browne uses the Quaker marriage ritual, with a new twist of his own. Instead of saying "until death you do part," the ex-rabbi says "until death of love you do part," which seems to start the couples off with a more comfortable feeling. Another thing, it insures some pretty good publicity right at the outset for those interested in that aspect of the situation.

BOOZE EXCUSE N. G.

70-Year-Old Man Said He's Bootleggers' Messenger—Held for Theft

One of the most novel excuses in extenuation of a theft was offered by Emil Cohn, 70, 300 West 45th street, before Magistrate Brodsky in West Side Court on a petty larceny charge.

Cohn was arrested by detective Flood, West 47th street station, at 44th street and 8th avenue. Marion Hilford, salesman from North Carolina, parked his automobile at 44th street and 8th avenue and started to visit a customer.

In his machine he left a grip with some samples. Suddenly he remembered he had forgotten to turn on the parking lights and started toward the machine. As he did he observed Cohn reach into the car and extract the bag. He nabbed the old man and held him until the detective arrived.

To Magistrate Brodsky Cohn said he was employed as a messenger by a big bootleg ring. He said it was his duty to sit in his room and when a certain automobile drew up to the curb opposite he received a signal and he went to the machine. He was to take the bag to a specified address and deliver the contents.

This particular bag, he said, was supposed to contain benedictine and chartreuse. He said the car was exactly like the one used to transport the liquor and he had made an honest mistake in taking the bag. Magistrate Brodsky was not impressed with the explanation and held Cohn in $200 bail for trial in Special Sessions.

Usherette Killed by Hotel Man's Bullet

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 7.

In one of the most mysterious cases which ever came before local police, Loretta A. Graber, 22, usher in the Lincoln picture theatre, met her death by the discharge of a gun in the hands of her alleged fiance, David Ormsby, 28, hotel proprietor. Ormsby, who claimed the shooting was accidental, waived examination and was held in $5,000 bail for the grand jury.

The tragedy is supposed to have occurred about two hours after Miss Graber finished her duties at the Lincoln, her lifeless form, still clad in an usher's uniform, found by police in a yard off Ormsby's hotel.

Ormsby's version of the accident is that he and Miss Graber were talking in the hotel when he heard a sound in the yard and went to investigate. She accompanied him and, according to the sheikish young hotelman, suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, David, David!"

Thinking she had been attacked, he claims to have fired a shot from his revolver. The bullet killed the usher immediately, according to physicians who performed an autopsy.

About 1:30 a. m. Ormsby phoned police headquarters to "send over a couple of plain clothes men—some one's been shot."

When the girl's body was found in the yard, police arrested Ormsby, whose stories about the affair are said to have been conflicting. Several guests and a colored couple living nearby were released after telling the police they had heard no shot.

Miss Graber had been married, but separated from her husband and resumed her maiden name. With her child, she lived at the home of her parents. When arraigned in police court, Ormsby was modishly dressed, his overcoat being of raccoon. He had a newspaper over his face, with holes cut out for his eyes, so that newspaper photographers could not take his picture.

Ormsby is well known in sporting and theatrical circles of Troy, his hotel and cafe, near Proctors, being familiar to professionals.

LOOPING THE LOOP

(IN CHICAGO)

Joe Lewis' Explanation

For the overly curious mob, Joe Lewis has improvised a take it or leave it explanation of his recent "accident," which he expounds nightly at the Rendezvous cafe.

"I was in my room," says Joe, "when three good friends of mine walked in. They seemed pretty sad."

"Whose songs are you singing, Joe?" they asked.

"Feist songs," I answered. "You can't go wrong with any Feist song."

One of the men shook his head. "Joe, he said, "you oughta sing my songs, don't you think?" And he pulled out a little knife and whittled on my face just a bit.

Then another of the guys butted in and told me I oughta sing his songs, maybe. I explained to him that you can't go wrong with a Feist song, but he didn't understand, and he whittled on this side of my face.

The third guy fingered a little gat as he said he thought it was a pity I didn't sing his songs and he touched me on the head with the butt—just enough to put me to sleep. I woke up in the hospital a few days later.

"Anyway, I've learned something," concludes Joe. "You can go wrong!"

Orpheum's $36 Conference

Orpheum managers in Minneapolis, finding themselves unable to cope with the recent strike there of motion picture operators, wired the Chicago office for assistance. Chicago sent down a "fixer" or so.

While in that city the "doctors" stopped at a downtown hotel and incurred a $36 bill. When Orpheum got the bill it called a conference, and decided that such extravagance should not be tolerated. The bill was paid by Finkelstein and Ruben.

Winter Vacationists

Chicago showmen and their wives vacationing in Florida include Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Maurie Greenwad, J. J. Ruben, A. J. Balaban and Mrs. Sam Tishman.

Billy DeBeck, cartoonist, has also elected to do his vacationing in Florida. Johnny Jones and Aran Jones, Jr., are at French Lick.

Worried at 33

Keith-Albee-Orpheum office attaches and affiliated agents are worried, due to the Orpheum-Pathe stock that they've been salting away in safety deposit boxes. The boys find themselves stuck at 33.

In discussing their mutual problem, they discovered that all tips came from the same Orpheum executive.

Henry Endorses Joe

Joe Santley goes to the right sort of people for endorsements. To wit: "Henry Ford says Joseph Santley's merry musical comedy, 'Just Fancy,' is a great show." Advertising in Chicago papers.

Tea-Dance Stuff

Two oily-heads peering in at the College Inn's tea-dance crowd. Says one: "Let's stay out; there's not a nifty gal in the place."

Retorts the other: "Sap! And overlook our first chance to be a sensation!"

Bigger and Better Billing

Theatres in this city go in extensively for elaborate fronts. Marquees, canopies and electrics are continually becoming more brilliant.

Combined with the heavy newspaper advertising in vogue, acts probably get bigger and better billing here than in any other city. Most Chicago theatres have enough lights to include ushers in the billing.

Krueger's Physical Loss

Bennie Krueger, the stage band leader who took time off to attend the I. A. T. S. E. ball, likewise took time off later to recuperate.

During one of those things that happen, Bennie found himself flat on the floor after greeting somebody's fist with his jaw. Then a foot connected with his teeth, and quite a few of them gave 'way.

Vic Young took charge of Bennie's orchestra while the latter underwent an overhauling. Krueger will be okay.

Discrimination in Chicago

Discrimination in handing out refreshments at a social function is apt to cause ill-feeling. This ill-feeling at a theatrical function is no minor matter.

A gent guarding the refreshment room at an annual event took pains to announce only members of the organization could get past him. Someone became offended and pulled a knife. A moment later the guardian was running toward the exit with a slit in his neck.

Chicago has its moments.

Tremont's Padlock Threat

Tremont hotel, 29 So. Dearborn street, once world-famous as the Saratoga hotel and cafe, theatrical rendezvous, is up for padlocking proceedings. Federal officers raided the hotel Jan. 28 and found liquor, arresting three bell boys and an alleged "actor-bootlegger" whose name was not revealed.

The past few years the Tremont has been extensively patronized by outdoor show people. Frank Rihelmer, Abraham Rudolph and Albert Singer are the lessees.

Gazzolo and His Boy

Frank Gazzolo, former lessee and manager of the Studebaker, and one of the Loop's most familiar figures for years, has set his boy, Dudley, up in show business with one of those parental sendoffs that carry a kick for the old boys. Dudley's dad introduces him to Chicago with the following announcement carried at the top of two columns, full-page length newspaper ads, and says in part:

"Realizing the difficulty experienced going and coming, to say nothing of the higher prices incurred, by the neighborhood theatregoer in seeking theatrical amusement. I have taken over the Kedzie theatre and installed the Dudley Players, named in honor of my son, under whose management the theatre will be."

PALM BEACH

By SAM KOPP

Palm Beach, Feb. 4.

Arrival here of the Marquis and Marquise de la Falaise (Gloria Swanson) put the latest Wilson Mizner story into circulation.

Bill was among the guests at a party given by Hank and Gloria soon after his arrival on the West Coast. Hank having heard of Wilson's quick wit and biting tongue, was rather nervous all through the dinner. Every time the Broadwayite and ex-Florida realtor spoke, the Marquis motioned him to lay off the blue. Finally, Mizner left his seat and, putting his arm around his host in friendly fashion, said, loud enough for all to hear:

"That's all right, Hank; I have been through the same thing myself."

Ned Wayburn arrived today to supervise his school in the Palm Room of the Royal Poinciana, under the direction of Earle Thomas, business manager, and John Lonergan, second instructor. All sorts of classes are now running or in the process of formation. With Wayburn here, a production at the end of the season is being planned.

Meyer Davis, who during the past few winters has spent considerable time in Palm Beach, will not visit the resort this year, leaving on Feb. 15 with his family on a five-week West Indies cruise, according to Ben Abrams, his general manager.

Difference in Nuts

Mizner, while selling real estate here, was haled before a local judge to explain a land transaction at Boca Raton, land development south of Palm Beach.

The complainant charged that Mizner had misrepresented the land by claiming that the purchaser could grow nuts on it.

Mizner when called upon to explain his side of the story said:

"Judge, this man is loco; I didn't say he could grow nuts on the property; I said he would go nuts on the property."

Joe Leblang left for New York today (Saturday) for the purpose of urging Lew Fields to come to Palm Beach for a rest and an appearance at the Kiwanis Club benefit here. If Lew comes down for a union with Joe Weber, now here, it will mark the 51st anniversary of their appearance as a comedy team. Al Jolson and Maurice Schlesinger were in Leblang's northbound party.

John McNulty Drunk Again But Hops on the Wagon

John McNulty, actor, who plays the Sergeant in "The Road to Rome" made such an eloquent plea to Magistrate Francis X. McQuade in West Side Court that the judge freed him and his brother, Peter McNulty, 32, salesman, of 451 West 44th street. The pair were arrested by Patrolman Cosgrove of the West 47th Street station on the charge of disorderly conduct.

The actor gave his address as 451 West 44th street. He has been in West Side Court several times. Cosgrove told the Court that he arrested the pair in an alleged "speakeasy." A battle was on and both brothers were in it. They looked it in court after spending the night in the coop.

"Your Honor I am an actor. A good one too. I will, tell you quietly what show I am with. The last time I was arraigned in court the reporters broadcast the fact all over the front pages. I don't want that to happen again.

"Pete is my brother. He has reared a family of seven. He is to get married soon and we began to celebrate. What happen, I don't know. But I don't want anything to happen to Pete. He will soon be on his honeymoon.

"If you free us I will never drink again. I will jump aboard the water wagon immediately. I am to join my company in Rochester." The Court smiled. So did the spectators. The actor and his brother received a suspended sentence.

STAG RAIDED

Dancers and Others Landed by Downtown Cops

Following a raid on a stag given at a restaurant at 407 Pearl street on the night of January 27 last, Ruth Cromwell, 21, of 142 St. Anns avenue, and Dorothy Kale, 25, of 413 West 92d street, both dancers, and Victor Sigler, 34, theatrical agent of Sussex, N. J., were each held in $500 bail by Magistrate Macrery in the Tombs Court for a hearing Wednesday (today).

An additional charge was made against Sigler and George Tizard, 48, actor, of 21 Suydam street, Brooklyn, alleging the attempt to show an indecent movie film at the stag. Bail of $500 each was fixed on this charge.

According to detectives of the Second Division, who conducted the raid, the restaurant was filled with over 150 men when the two girls appeared in nothing but a beaded girdle. The dance, according to the police, was suggestive, and they immediately arrested the two women. While searching the place, the police claim, they found the lewd picture film in the possession of Tizard and Sigler.

LOVES DORIS NILES AND PINCHED FOR IT

Harold Van Horn Wrote Burning Letters—Trips to the Island No Use

After being convicted twice for annoying Doris Niles, dancer, of 200 West 57th street, Harold Van Horn, 35, unkempt and shabby, of Woodcliff Lake, N. J., was committed to Bellevue Hospital for observation by Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky in West Side Court.

Van Horn was arrested on a warrant issued by Magistrate Brodsky. The defendant had just completed serving five months and 29 days for annoying Miss Niles. He was about to leave Welfare Island when Warrant Officer Daniel Fisher of West Side Court placed him under arrest.

Miss Niles appeared in court accompanied by two attorneys. The latter displayed fourteen letters of an amorous nature written by Van Horn to Miss Niles.

The latters were gotten off the Island anad mailed, apparently, by a visitor. Van Horn admitted that he wrote the letters and stated that he loved the dancer.

Miss Niles told the court Van Horn came to the Capitol theatre about two years ago when she was playing there and would sit out the entire day's performance. At that time she first began to receive the objectionable letters. She said that she noticed him in the first row of the orchestra. He would smile and place a handkerchief to his face. Not long after he appeared in the hallway of her home and she had to summon a policeman when he refused to leave.

Arraigned before Magistrate Bernard Douras, Van Horn was sentenced to the workhouse. When coming out he again bothered her. He was arrested and sent back to the workhouse for another five months and 29 days.

Van Horn told the court he loved the dancer and thought she loved him. He said he worked at odd jobs. He told reporters that his arrest was just the way that the dancer showed her affection for him. Van Horn is short and has long hair.

Chi's Auto Show Flops And Theatres Feel It

Chicago, Feb. 7.

A flop. That's what Chicago's auto show was.

In previous years the town has drawn crowds from far and near to its auto display. Chicago showdom had come to count on the motor trade exhibit. Never known to flop before, this year's show disappointed everyone.

Small attendance, very few out-of-towners, and an apparent lack of local interest. Hotels scarcely did a capacity business.

JAMES REGAN HELD; STRUCK 2 WOMEN

47-Year-Old Man Assaulted Mrs. Florence Tysan and Her Mother

James Regan, 47, saying he is a restaurant man and who said that he owned property in Miami, Fla., was held in $11,000 bail for the action of the Grand Jury by Magistrate Louis Brodsky in West Side Court. Regan was arrested on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Florence Tyson, 35, and her mother, Mrs. Sara Tyson, of 3115 Broadway.

The elder Mrs. Tyson is confined to her home in a serious condition. She has a possible fracture of the skull and several knife wounds. The younger Mrs. Tyson came to court with her head swathed in bandages. Regan was charged with felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law.

According to a patrolman who captured Regan after a two-block chase, the assault was the result of jealousy on the part of Regan. The younger Mrs. Tyson came to her door to get a bottle of milk. As she did, Regan struck her over the head with a "billy" and began to slash at her with a potato knife, she alleges.

Mrs. Tyson's aged mother heard the daughter's screams and went to her aid. Regan then began to beat the elder Mrs. Tyson and cut her. Regan fled to the street. The patrolman captured him after he threatened to shoot. A coil of rope and cotton was found on Regan. He said he intended to truss up both women to make them suffer.

Regan gave his address as 3120 Broadway. He stated to reporters that he has known the younger Mrs. Tyson for several years. He declared that he met her while she was employed at the Martinique Hotel. He told the scribes that she did not give him her undivided attention.

COLLEGE BOYS DRINK MORE NOW—JUDGE

Magistrate Louis Brodsky in West Side Court took occasion to razz fraternity clubs when William Starley, 23, 24 West 48th street, Philadelphia, Lehigh U. student, was arraigned on a charge of intoxication.

Starley had been arrested by Policeman Ulsamer, West 47th Street station, at 8th avenue and 47th street, when, with his load, he refused to stop directing traffic. It was at the time when the theatres were breaking and traffic was congested.

The student pleaded guilty and said he had received his liquor at a local fraternity house. Judge Brodsky stated he would not ask him to reveal the name of the club but said it was time that some of the fraternity clubs were cleaned up and the bottles thrown out.

He then compared the days before prohibition to the present time. Formerly, he said, it was unusual to see a youth around 21 brought in for intoxication. He said it is quite common nowadays and, unfortunately, many of them were college students.

After this lecture he suspended sentence when Starley said it was his first offense.

Chicago Going After Its "Taxi" Academies Again

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Dancing academies of the "taxi" variety, where men pay 10 cents for half-minute dances with girl instructresses, were denounced last week by Frank Peska, city prosecutor, as "feeder resorts for houses of questionable reputation."

Last week proprietors of three such places, said to be operating without licenses, were arraigned before Municipal Judge Holmes. All cases were continued for more intensive investigation.

SISTER AND BROTHERS

Mrs. Auerback Charges They Stole From and Wrecked Her School

Charles Seaman, 42, 146 West 96th street, and his brother Mack, 38, 102 West 90th street, were held without bail for the Grand Jury when arraigned before Magistrate Earl Smith in West Side Court on charges of burglary preferred by their sister, Mrs. Dorothy Auerback, 63 West 48th street.

Mrs. Auerback conducts a school of elocution at the 48th street address and had employed her brothers. There was some disagreement when Charles and Mack were discharged. Dec. 4, Mrs. Auerback charges, she and her secretary saw the brothers leaving the place and when they entered they discovered that an oriental rug, $4 cash and a charter had disappeared.

She said she also discovered that her paintings and piano had been damaged. She notified detective George Ferguson, West 47th street station, and the brothers were arrested. They denied that they had taken the property or that they had wrecked the place as their sister testified.

Counsel for the two men waived examination and they were held without bail for the Grand Jury. Both brothers have criminal records.

They intimated the place was a "speakeasy," but Mrs. Auerback and her secretary, Katherine Hill, denied it.

BRIDGE ROOM WOMEN DISCHARGED BY COURT

Alexandra Raymond and Mrs. Geo. Broadhurst Can Charge Each Player $1 for Service

Miss Alexandra Raymond, 153 West 97th street, and her sister, Mrs. George Broadhurst, 2612 Broadway, were freed in West Side Court by Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky.

The women were arrested on the second floor of 329 West 72d street by detectives under Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan, charged with keeping and maintaining a place for gambling. Sergeant Patrick Kennealy and Detectives Bill Shelly and Tom Weppler made the arrests. Shelly testified that he found about 24 men and women engaged in bridge. The detectives took the names and addresses of the players.

Attorney Arthur C. Mandel, 300 Madison Avenue, who defended the women in court the next morning, was playing bridge at the time of the arrest, he told the court.

Shelly said that the game ceased after the arrest. He testified he saw no money on the tables. He said that the defendants stated they operated the game, charging each players $1. The players are members of the club, called Alexandra Raymond Club, Inc.

A certificate of incorporation was hanging on the wall. The club has been organized since 1925. Mandel scored the detectives for making the arrest and asked the court for a warrant of oppression.

Mandel stated to the court that a uniformed patrolman was stationed in the premises following the arrest. The court directed Shelly to notify Inspector Bolan to remove the officer.

The Raymonds formerly conducted a place in the Hotel Alamac. Mandel stated that Special Sessions had ruled when the Raymonds were arraigned before them that the game was not gambling, and that they could charge $1 for service rendered for the use of the cards and other conveniences.

The defendants refused to give their ages, but told the sleuths they were over 21. Magistrate Brodsky in discharging the defendants ruled along the same lines of the Special Sessions Court, that the Raymonds had a right to charge for services.

Edward Goodman, former treasurer of 81st Street theatre, has been promoted to post of manager, succeeding Robert Hawkins, transferred to Keith-Albee's Riverside.

If you are planning to sit for a portrait you will hardly select your interpreter from the painters exhibiting until Feb. 14 at the Whitney Studio Club, 10 West 8th street. I wouldn't look like any of those 50 faces for all the berries in all the banks of the bourgeois world. Evidently the models were types picked mostly from our moronish midst and not sitters with check books and faces to be lifted and lacquered into canvas perfection.

The artists are mean to their subjects, but no mean artists—witness the names: Allen Tucker, Edmund Archer, Henry Schnackenberg, Reginald Marsh, Betty Burroughs, Angele Watson, Nan Watson, Ernest Flene, Katherine Schmidt, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Alexander Brook, Eugene Speicher, Dorothy Varian, Isabella Howland, Guy Pene DuBois, Niles Spencer, Raphael Soyer, Joseph Pollet, Gertrude Tiemer, Henry Strater, Richard Lahey, Carl G. Cutler, George Hartmann, Henry Mattson, Leon Underwood, Charles Downing Lay, Lincoln Rothschild, John Sloan, Kenneth Hayes Miller, Blendon Campbell, Thelma Cudlipp Grosvenor, Van Vleet Tompkins, Mungo-Park, David Morrison, Henry Billings, Randall Davey, William Glackens, Georgina Klitgaard, Molly Luce and a few others, names not to be sneezed at in the world of art.

And the subjects were not picked from Broadway limb shows, beauty contest winners or the fashion-plate handsome Harrys. Most of the posers were registering something or other—trouble, disdain, hate, discontent, surprise, jealousy, naivete, disgust, pride—the baser and beastly emotions mostly.

Impromptu Parties

Parties that just happen are the happiest. These formal, prepared, stiff and stupid affairs are rarely worth the candle, even if it burns at both ends. But gatherings of kinsprits that come about somehow still thrill me tremendously.

Kelly arrived the other night from the neighborhood of New Dorp with three gallons of red ink and planted all of it on Bill's studio table. Friends in the building and out of it called without price or premeditation or special invitation. Terry and his Betty happened up, and I, too, with a nose for news and an aching tooth.

Dorothy and Mary and Slim and Nellie and Frenchy and Jerry and Ruth and Jacques and Joy came and stayed. Stories that were worth more than their weight in red ink were told freely.

Eventually food was suggested, and I invited the gang to my bigger floor. We piled into two sedans (yes, Villagers have cars of their own) and continued joying ourselves with such sandwiches as I can make on short order.

Nobody passed out, no one fought, no one wept and there was nothing nasty, everything informal and many a hearty laugh with very little gossip but experiential yarns that were wickedly self-revealing.

Jacques Saint Anne, who edited the one edition of the "Bell Ringer," financed by Kathleen Kirkwood four years ago, a magazine devoted to the downing of the K. K. K., is living until June at 1 Sheridan square. Here it was where Clivette handed out philosophy and other antiques years ago.

And back of this ramshackle structure, doomed to be razed this summer, is the new and remodelled 1 Sheridan square, the erstwhile factory and office building of eight floors. About 50 one-room-and apartments with high ceilings, frigidaire and maid service have taken the place of spacious lofts for making candy, dental supplies and overalls.

Montgomery and Stone and Elsie Janis in "Lady of the Slipper" at the Globe, topped the town with $15,000; in the dramatic list "The Whip," English melter, was a sensation, doing $25,000 to $26,000 steadily.

The old Haymarket, night life rendezvous of 10 years before, but now selling only soft stuff, was offered for sale. The place stood at 6th avenue and 30th street. The adjoining property on the Broadway frontage was Daly's theatre, now closed by order of the fire department, also was on the market.

John Bunny, almost as well known in Europe as at home via the screen, was offered $1,250 for appearances in Berlin.

Louise Groody was recovering from an operation in the Deaconess hospital, Indianapolis.

Commenting upon the decline of road attractions, it was reported that the Metropolitan, Seattle, had been closed eight out of 12 weeks, while local picture houses were elaborating their shows, and drawing as much as $6,000. The film places also were using large newspaper advertising space.

Arthur Hopkins' production, "The Poor Little Rich Girl" was making a solid success, doing about $9,000 a week at the Hudson, New York. A No. 2 company was organizing.

H. H. Tammen, Denver promotor and publisher, said he had closed a deal by which Buffalo Bill would be associated with the Sells-Floto circus which he (Tammen) owned. This seemed to forecast the separation of Cody and Gordon Lillie, his partner in the wild west show.

The news sensation of the day was a violent controversy going on between two popular Brooklyn preachers, Talmadge and Beecher. Talmadge, who continued to be a sensational lecture platform card for a decade, preached the fire-and-brimstone line of theology, while Beecher's beliefs were milder.

Stanley reached Paris on the way back from Africa, and "Cleopatra's Needle" (the obelisk that now stands in Central Park) was reported afloat and on the seas bound for New York. (The Great Eastern carried the monolith, a hole having been punched in the big ship's side to admit the obelisk.)

Turkey and Servia were at war and upon the opening of the British Parliament Queen Victoria read a speech of pacifism.

A paragraph is to the effect that Charley Ross has been found in Baltimore. (Charley Ross was the mystery of the day. The kidnapped child was reported discovered in scores of places, but he never actually came to light.)

They had a special line of violent crimes that are not much heard of in these days. "Body snatchers" were reported at work in Toledo, while 20 Brooklyn dealers were fined for watering milk.

The Pacific Coast baseball league was organized.

Joaquin Miller, California poet, sold his first play, "The Danites," to McKee Rankin.

INSIDE STUFF

ON PICTURES

Reformers in Washington, or those led by Canon Chase, have the opinion picture distributors and producers are really in favor of the Brookhart Bill. That is why, from the account, they withheld approval of the measure.

A joker in the bill as they read it is that with passage, the Brookhart measure would give the producers and distributors a longer time to readjust their business on the restricted block and blind booking than they would be certain of were they finally obliged to obey the findings of the Federal Trade Commission in the Famous Players ruling along the same lines.

The Brookhart Bill provides a period of six months after signed for the block booking clause to become effective and 18 months after on the blind booking. Another point the reformers make is that the p's and d's figure it is least expensive with the Brookhart Bill passage than it is to fight the Commission's ruling. In short the Chase group seem to calculate that the Brookhart Bill, in reality, will supplant the Federal Trade Commission as far as the picture industry is concerned.

If the independent exhibitors could think the same with Canon Chase, although they are not in love with reformers, the indies would send the Canon almost anything he could ask for, of course omitting flowers and booze. But they can't and the Canon might better keep his eyes off the A. P. more and devote a little time to read up on what he expects to talk about.

Taking the presentation angle on the picture house stage, St. Louis appears to have picked up a glancing view for "Old Ironsides" at the Missouri there this week. That is not a non-presentation test, as St. Louis may have been lead to believe by its daily papers. It sent out by the Skourases, that was but press stuff.

"Ironsides" is a special now on its picture house run. An attempt was made to send it across as a $2 road show. Probably playing under extra terms in the Missouri and with it longer than the customary program feature, the house threw out its stage show for this week, to meet both ends, in the expense and turn overs for the film's performances.

No reason against the Skourases doing that, but if "Ironsides" stands upon its own this week, another special or super would have to follow it next week and just as strong, and so on every week. It's understood in the trade that if the picture is strong enough it can fill the house, even a 3,800-seater like the Missouri, but the trouble has been there are not enough of such, and there is too much theatre competition, with the management wanting to do all of the business a house is capable of, with picture and presentation or picture only.

"Ironsides" had a $2 showing in St. Louis which should be of much help to it at the pop scale. But it's no test, Tom.

Many editorials complimenting the attitude taken by Harold Murphy, Orpheum manager, and Bert Levy, manager of Universal's Columbia, Portland Ore., in refusing to accept newsreel prints, which exploited the capture of William Edward Hickman, brutal murderer of Marian Parker, were written in the local press.

As the news flashed across the country, informing the world that Hickman had been captured in Pendleton, Ore., 200 miles south of Portland, all cameramen rushed to the scene, most of them in specially chartered airplanes. Jesse Sill, Northwest cameraman for Metro-Goldwyn, came near losing his life as he was making the trip to Pendleton to get a few shots of the murderer. Others in the planes were unheard of for hours, owing to the unfavorable weather.

After the prints were developed in record time, they were rushed to the theatres with the management of the respective houses refusing to exhibit the newsreels, claiming that would be bad judgment to exhibit the reels in public, as disorder might be created. The Circle, a secondrun downtown house in Portland, exhibited the pictures, and it was S. R. O. all week.

Alan Foster is building up an unique choristers' organization. He trains girls for acrobatic specialities mostly, on his novelty contrivances or in the usual stage number producing that calls for more than the conventional ensemble girl work of years ago. To ensure adeptness and have the girls under his and Mrs. Foster's eyes during the apprentice period, Foster has a home over in Astoria, L. I., presided over by Mrs. Kay, where 30 of the Foster girls from out of town room and board while in training. Each is charged $12 weekly, with that amount to be deducted in small sums weekly from their salary when regularly engaged. Girls accepted receive a three-year contract with a sliding scale starting at $35 a week.

At present Foster has 64 girls rehearsing in his New York studio. All are intended for Foster girl acts with Publix theatres stage units. He has seven of those acts now with traveling Publix units and is producing one about every three weeks. The acts use from 12 to 16 girls.

Liberal censoring was performed upon the newsreels' views of the dirigible, "Los Angeles," alighting at sea upon the specially contrived landing deck of the U. S. aircraft carrier, "Saratoga." An underline on the news weeklies said "released and censored by the Naval Department." Views previously of the "Saratoga" also had been censored, although enough of each was shown to make up the views.

The secret of the censoring must lie in or on the deck of the "Saratoga." What was actually censored with the "Los Angeles" was its final landing.

These are reported the first times anything have been denied the news cameramen by the Naval Department. Several views of late of U. S. naval construction and maneuvers were thought extremely liberal in scope, almost to the extent that Germany has permitted the news reel and but recently to expose how she again has started to drill and train the future German army.

Making a newsreel special of President Coolidge's visit to Havana cost Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, Pathe, International and Paramount $50,000 or approximately $10,000 each.

To bring the film from Havana to New York on fast train and air mail would have cost the five reels about $200. The difference in money is about $49,800 while the difference in time would have been about nine hours.

The first Coolidge reels to hit Broadway were by Fox and Paramount. Pathe has been claiming first appearance but the Pathe film was taken to Atlanta and developed there, not coming in time for Broadway showing until long after Fox and Paramount.

Through loss of the flyer Ben Mosely with his plane disappearing in a storm, M-G-M was obliged to buy a dupe of the Coolidge print from Pathe, it is reported. Pathe got enough out of this deal to wipe off the cost of the special airplane transportation and register a profit, from the report.

A new 4,000-seater, Hollywood, in Detroit, holds claim to a "cry room" for babes and their mothers. It also has a glass front, as previously reported in Variety of a Milwaukee house. The Hollywood besides has a "Nursery room" with individual cribs and a trained nurse in attendance.

The picture "Jesse James," Paramount, was held up in Ohio through censorship. Regarded as funny, as the same censors only recently lifted the ban on the Dempsey-Tunney fight film.

The girl friend from Canada is still after Variety, but cut it down to a page last week. Sad note is that it looks as if she is simultaneously making a play for E. F. Albee.

INSIDE STUFF

ON LEGIT

Few authors have collected royalty from a play so long as Edwin Milton Royle, whose "The Squaw Man" dates back into the last decade. It was first produced the day his daughter, Selena Royle, was born, revived in 1922 on Broadway, and is still in use by stocks. The play was sold for pictures some years ago, and is again back on Broadway in the guise of the operetta, "White Eagle," current at the Casino.

Alexander Clark, Jr., went on as the movie hero in "Excess Baggage" for the first time last week although he has been drawing a salary since the show opened. Clark engaged by Bryant, Crimmins and Barbour on a run-of-the-play contract, but at the last minute was not permitted to go on, Herbert Clark (no relation), appearing in his place. The theory was that Alex lacked the necessary menace, which he must have picked up meantime.

Another pay but not play situation in the same show exists with Joan Marion, who holds a run-of-the-play contract for the part of the daughter in the sister act. Doris Eaton was substituted during rehearsals, when they began building up the dancing angle of the role.

Jacques Cartier and Agnes De Mille have been booked by Bela Blau for a second dance recital Feb. 26, following their sellout last Sunday night at the Republic. Theatre is not yet announced, as Blau is looking for a larger house. At the first recital there were 31 standees and about 100 turnaways, most unusual for entertainment of this type. Mr. Cartier is in "Golden Dawn," doing his "Voodoo Dance," Miss De Mille is a daughter of William De Mille, picture director.

Late premieres especially musical shows are playing havoc with out of town attendance because of the late start and unusually long performance in getting the surburbanites out of the theatre in time to make trains home.

In several recent instances out of towners not clocking the shows were out of luck to make their trains, after seeing the entire show with the ultimate choice of remaining over night in New York or making the trip home by taxi.

The late shows have practically lost most of former Northern New Jersey trade because of no provision made by the Erie, Jersey Central or others for late trains nightly that would suit the theatregoing trade. Both Erie and Jersey Central run their final surburban trains at 12:20 p. m. Under normal conditions that would make one hustle. Several times the Erie has announced an after-theatre special to leave the terminal at 1 a. m. but this has never been adopted.

INSIDE STUFF

ON VAUDEVILLE

What has become of the "700 theatres" publicized by the Keith-Albee interests? E. F. Albee gives the lowdown in an advertised letter to the underwriters of the new merger stock, setting down a total of 211 theatres controlled by Keith-Albee, Orpheum and their associated companies.

Out of that total the Keith circuit actually owns 18 houses and leases 28. There are 115 in addition owned or leased or operated by companies "in which the B. F. Keith Corporation owns varying amounts of stock." In 19 of these theatres the Keith people have a stock interest of 50 per cent or more.

Fifty more theatres are credited to Orpheum, of which 14 are owned outright and five owned on leased land. That's a total of 32 theatres actually owned in fee by Keith and Orpheum.

This business of going to the bankers or investors has its disadvantages. Until Keith-Albee floated its bonds a couple of years ago, its earnings and profits were nobody's business. Now it is selling securities and it is forced to submit itself for public inspection, which cramps its showmanly style.

Albee's letter contains a record of the combined Keith and Orpheum earnings from 1922 to 1927 inclusive. Top figure was in 1924 when earnings were $3,921,635. Figures for 1927 are not entirely available, but the estimate puts the total at $2,600,000.

"The decrease in 1927," the statement from Albee says coyly, "is attributable to certain abnormal conditions last year which are not expected to continue or recur."

Eddie Conrad was the subject of a practical joke during his performance at Keith's 81st St., at the conclusion of his act, when he asks the nearby stage box occupant for a match, then a cigaret, topping it usually with a humorous request for a sandwich.

This gets a laugh always, but Sunday Conrad was surprised with a donation of an over-size onion sandwich, with the odoriferous vegetable dripping and oozing all over.

Conrad was nonplussed, but managed to ad lib, "I see that my friends think strongly of me."

A chief booker for one of the large circuit headquarters in New York discovered his net loss of time daily listening to useless agents averaged nearly two hours, besides costing him lunch. His first intention was to let out the useless agents, those who called every day with the same lists that the booker was letter perfect in. He relented after giving the matter some thought, to decide he would delegate an assistant to interview that group of time wasters, having his assistant call his attention to anything any the six or seven vexers might possibly dig up.

Which may also be a tip off to the agents who know of this that they had better keep on their toes to hold their franchises.

Stories agree that the Loew booking office idea of annexing agents of the former big time to the Loew agenting staff has virtually been abandoned. In Loew's vaudeville houses it has been noted that the higher priced acts of no distinctive "name" value have failed to increase the grosses proportionately to their salaries. This brought about by J. H. Lubin and Marvin Schenck, the Loew vaude playing the Loew vaude bills in their customary manner, with the feature picture attachment.

Loew's vaude booking office has no bearing upon the Loew picture houses, those of the deluxe type with their stage shows now booked or produced through the joint production department of Publix and Loew's.

Mrs. Osa Kirsch has had a letter written by her to Variety some time ago, reprinted in the Dear Mr. Albee's controlled papers. Variety threw the letter into the waste basket when received. Upon Mrs. Kirsch's request to know why it was not printed, she was advised that as the N. V. A. should help actors, her single case was no startling bit of information.

Of much more interest to the vaudeville players who support the N. V. A. would be a free and open election of officers, along with a financial statement of the club's standing on the coin—who has it and how much of it has he got.

While Mae Murray is on a picture house stage, she has made it a rule that no master of ceremonies may interject talk or announcements. It started when Miss Murray was at the Paramount, New York, but probably the same rule was in effect for her turn while she played the coast film theatres.

'VANITIES' SHOW GIRLS $100 UP; STARTS WILD BIDS FOR BEAUTS

Carroll May Snare Famous Broadway Glorifiers—Look for Keen Competition for Prize Lookers—Dancers to Get $75 Minimum

Earl Carroll is to produce another edition of his 'Vanities." The way it is being lined up, the revue is to be regarded as the most important of the spring or early summer musicals.

The producer has definitely set a girl standard for the new "Vanities." Show girls are to receive a minimum of $100 weekly and dancing choristers a minimum of $75 per week.

It is assumed that by such offers the Carroll revue will attract many of the "lookers" that grace Broadway's musical comedy boards. He does not intend, however, to limit selections to the current prize beauts. Newcomers have the same chance at the exceptional salary proffer. Just how high he will go to get some of the champ show girls of other revues is not stated, but there is liable to be some competition in that respect with other revue producers. That also goes for the dancers.

Newark's Sunday Stock Stopped by Equity

A stock performance was given in Newark, N. J., Sunday night by the Charles E. Blaney players, but Equity called Blaney to account and warned him not to repeat the Sabbath stunt. Blaney complained that Sundays were necessary to the existence of stock in Newark and all had gone broke because the Sundays were out.

Blaney claimed the same Sunday privilege as Hoboken, close by, which has been an open town on Sunday for 30 years.

Under Equity's regulations no Sunday playing is permitted where it was not the custom prior to May 1, 1924, at which time the agreement was signed with the Managers' Protective Association.

Pabst Closed for Safety

Milwaukee, Feb. 7.

While the Pabst theatre has been closed because it has been found unsafe, the pilings under the house having rotted, other theatres in the downtown district bordering on the river front, where it is swampy, are safe, according to a report from the building inspector this week.

The Pabst is expected to be ready for opening in about six weeks. The only work necessary is the capping of the wooden pilings with concrete and replastering of the cracked walls.

Forced out of the Pabst theatre, the German stock closed its season Sunday with two performances at the Davidson theatre.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra will use the Auditorium. Other concerts and recitals billed for the Pabst under the auspices of Marion Andrews or Margaret Rice will play the Davidson, smaller Auditorium halls or in the concert room of the new Hotel Schroeder, which opened last week.

"Radio Murder" in Sq.

"The Radio Murder," given a stock trial last week by the Blaney Players at the America (formerly Miner's Bronx), New York, stood sufficient test to warrant its reproduction for legit by Charles E. Blaney.

Blaney begins assembling the legit cast this week with strong possibility that Cecil Spooner will star in the mystery show when it is brought downtown.

"The Radio Murder" is by Dana Rush and John Milton Hagen. Its authors have a plagarism suit pending against authors and producers of "The Spider," alleging the latter play an infringement on theirs.

O'NEILL STAGING ON COAST

Eugene O'Neill leaves New York Feb. 10 for Pasadena, Cal., to supervise the staging of "Lazarus Laughed" on the west coast and also to work on "Dynamo," his new play.

"PATRIOT" AS OBLIGATION

"The Patriot," Gilbert Miller legit production which represents an investment of around $100,000, was an obligatory production on account of the film rights having been sold to Paramount for $75,000.

The film version of "The Patriot" is now in production on the coast.

Miss Hines and Authors Gain Point on Zieggy

Appellate Division in New York gave Florenz Ziegfeld double setback Friday in two different suitors. In one, Elizabeth Hines claims she has been damaged $100,000 worth; the matter must go to arbitration. In the other, two authors, Irving Caesar and David Freedman, are asking royalties on the flop Ziegfeld production "Betsy."

Miss Hines alleged she was to have gone into "Show Boat" with a stop limit proviso of Jan. 24, 1928, that in case the musical didn't open by then Miss Hines would be assigned to another Ziegfeld production. She didn't open with "Show Boat" and has not been set for another engagement, resulting in her foregoing other managerial offers.

Caesar and Freedman have been dragging their claim for accrued royalties on "Betsy" through the courts, and it has been ruled Ziggy must defend the issues.

Chi's Bunch Really Don't Want "Racket"

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Although recent announcement by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe that presentation of "The Racket" would be barred in Chicago was considered just advance publicity, Crowe made his statement seriously.

"The Racket" in New York purported to be an expose of Chicago's gang life and its political connections.

While the play actually can't be barred, theatre managers here know that any house taking it on will have a tough time; also, that the house will lose caste considerably with city officials.

And the boys wouldn't want that.

ACTORS TAKE "JOHNNY"

Show Going Out Again—Halted Before When Salaries Stopped

"Oh, Johnny," musical, recently closed by Equity when salaries were not paid, is about to make a fresh start with cast reported having taken over the piece.

"Oh, Johnny" had been out several weeks with financial troubles hovering over it from the start. Before leaving town Equity demanded a bond. Rehearsals were abandoned for several weeks until a bond was posted, covering chorus only and with principals waiving security.

The musical was produced by Louis Isquith with an under cover man reported financing.

GAIGE'S TRYOUTS

Crosby Gaige will soon join the managerial colony at Palm Beach, about Feb. 15. He has two tryouts scheduled for early spring—"Black Belt," by Wallace Thurman, colored, and William Jourdan Rapp, one of the Macfadden editorial staff; and "Lowdown," by Ferdinand Reyher.

Both will be shelved until fall. Gaige may sail for Europe as soon as the tryouts are over.

"SPRING 3100" PLAYING

Lefty Miller's "Spring 3100" is still playing. It was at the City, New York, last week. It was in the Bronx the previous week.

A report spread of its closing through a Miller misunderstanding with the author, Argyle Campbell. That has been patched up.

Lyric's Lease in Danger; Oppenheimers Involved

Application for a trustee by the estate of E. E. Smathers has placed in jeopardy the lease of the Lyric, New York, operated by Jacob and Joseph Oppenheimer. It is at present housing Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita."

With back rent of the theatre unpaid and creditors demanding settlement for the recent alterations to the house, the matter may not be definitely settled until late this week. Indications are that a satisfactory settlement will be made.

It appears that the Oppenheimers went overboard in remodeling the Lyric to receive Zieggy's "Show Boat." The total cost is said to have been more than $120,000. Changes in the lobby and a counterweight system back stage were among the improvements. There was construction under the stage while the lobby and entrance proper were changed.

Ziegfeld transferred "Rio Rita" to the Lyric and signed contract to follow it in with "Three Musketeers." The "Rio" engagement has been profitable but the demands of the contractors who made over the house became insistant, while other indebtedness crowded the brothers.

It was stated the Oppenheimers sought a loan in order to satisfy the creditors and offered 50 per cent of the lease in return.

Benny Stein, treasurer of the Lyric, resigned Saturday after differences with the Smathers estate people, but remains in the Oppenheimer office. Frank Loomis has replaced him, with Tom Burke remaining the assistant.

Woollcott Did Resign

Alex Woollcott did resign from the New York "World," following the order from H. B. Swope which kept him from reviewing "Strange Interlude" last Monday. Alex denied it Tuesday, last week, and said that he had no feeling in the matter. Everybody on the morning "World" but his immediate associates seemed to know—and talk about—a letter of resignation which Alex later wrote Swope and a commendatory letter back from Swope, which praised Alex but accepted the resignation.

This, presumably, means that when the Woollcott contract with the "World" expires May 1, he will finish as its dramatic critic. He has long expressed a wish to escape the rigors of daily criticism. "The World," by reason of its plant's location, must print earlier to make the same trains which carry the "H-Tribune" and "Times" out of town.

The switch of critics for the Guild premiere seemed to have been generally understood as having come from within the "World," voluntarily.

Ziegfeld Must Pay 'Follies' Week's Salary

Flo Ziegfeld is all grouched up about the abrupt closing of his latest "Follies," called off last week on the day due to open in Philadelphia. Eddie Cantor's attack of pleurisy brought about the shut down.

Zieggy claims the closing cost him $39,000 after a visit last week to Equity where he was informed that the company would have to be paid a week's salary.

Marie Saxon Off London

Marie Saxon has declined another starring engagement for a London-produced musical.

Producers are reported near-frantic for musical comedy leads of the type the English prefer. A scarcity is said to be clogging up other proposed shows for the English capital.

Miss Saxon lately closed with "The Ramblers."

H. THOMPSON WITH PAR

Harlan Thompson, the playwright, has undertaken one of those Menkiewicz-Paramount experimental tenures for the picture studio on the coast.

Thompson's agreement is reported for three months, with the usual option and bonus provision for accepted film scripts.

Marian Peltzer (Mrs. Thompson) will leave with her husband for California within a few days.

SHUBERTS' "BRIDAL SUITE"

James P. Judge and Charles Rodde are collaborating on a musical "The Bridal Suite."

The Shuberts will produce it next month.

Zieggy's Intimate Wire

Atlanta, Jan. 28.

Variety, New York:

If Variety will again review "Rosalie" and write a criticism instead of the notice of a 42d street conversation, when I return I will see you about copy.

Why not give me a break and say Ziegfeld's two shows played to nearly $50,000 each. Got half-million advance sale and I got lot of money to bet "Rio Rita" played to more than any other musical show, excepting, possibly, "Good News," but I doubt they paid government more than "Rio Rita" will.

Do "Show Boat" in London immediately.

Arranged for new theatre in Chicago and another in New York. Turned down million cash and 51 per cent. stock for my name.

You don't get any of the real news. Ziegfeld.

"Taza" With 110 People Closed After Two Weeks

"Taza" spectacle with 110 people, independently produced, closed in Jamaica, L. I., Saturday after playing two weeks. It was slated for the Earl Carroll Feb. 20. "Simba" the animal picture has extended its booking there for two weeks from that date.

Tuesday the "Taza" management applied to Equity for a two weeks lay-off privilege, naming the Carroll date to follow.

Revision of the script is given as a reason for the closing.

The players were paid off by Equity through a salary bond. The bond was filed by Samuel Cherkos, an attorney, who is said to have withdrawn his interest. Gus Wilson, who staged "Taza" and others are now reported in charge.

Shuberts and Studebaker The Insull-Backed House

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Capitalist Insull, who has the Studebaker under lease and didn't know what to do about the Michigan avenue theatre his wife toyed with, has turned the bookings of it over to the Shuberts.

Bookings will continue with the Shuberts during the remainder of the Insull leasc.

Dark, the Studebaker would have cost Mr. Insull about $100,000 yearly; with his wife its manageress and producer, it could and did cost him much more.

George Kingsbury is managing the Studebaker for Insull. There is to be no change in house staff.

"So Big" Musical

Another Edna Ferber book is likely to be seen as a musical comedy next season. It is "So Big," Miss Ferber's Pulitzer prize winning novel.

Jerome Kern, who first saw the possibilities of "Show Boat" as a musical comedy, is said to entertain a similar feeling toward "So Big."

NEWARK'S SUNDAY STOCK

Newark, Feb. 7.

Empire Players, dramatic stock, opened on a Sunday matinee, Feb. 5, at the Empire. This is a new idea here, having stock on Sunday. Prices will be 25 cents to $1, with a $1.50 top Saturdays and Sundays.

A. Johnny Mack, recently manager of Miner's Empire, will manage both the house and company. Edward Sothern Hipp, dramatic editor of the "Sunday Call," will do the publicity. Helen Baxter has been engaged as leading woman, with Barbara Gray, ingenue.

BALIEFF H. O. FOR 2 WEEKS

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Balieff's "Chauve Souris" will holdover at the Belasco for two additional weeks when the original four-week booking expires Feb. 13.

It will depart for outlying coast towns at the end of its local run.

"The Scarlet Lady," with Pauline Frederick, will follow the Russian troupe at the Belasco. The play is a new one by Zelda Sears.

Casino Stock Running

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.

J. J. Leventhal is operating his dramatic stock at the former burlesque wheel Casino theatre here.

MET'S BEGINNERS ARE NOT HIGH SALARIED

About $125 Weekly Usual Salary for 2d Line Singers—Grace Moore's Start

Another expensive musical comedy prima has left the legit stage and a fancy salary to go into the Metropolitan Opera Company for that $125 or so they give their second line singers every week.

Latest is Grace Moore, debutting yesterday at the Met. Her age has been set in the publicity at 27. She has been around Broadway for over six years, appearing here first in "Up in the Clouds." Last in "Music Box Revue" and rated as high salaried.

Reversal of her going into Met was the coming of Louise Hunter from the Met to Broadway, now starred in "Golden Dawn" at a good salary. She sang second leads at the Met.

Mary Lewis, formerly of the "Follies" and the Ponselle girls, Rosa and Carmella, who were once in vaudeville, are also fixtures at the big house down at 39th and Broadway.

Met gets the debutters at economy prices and plenty of publicity.

Miss Moore's matinee performance was in the nature of a benefit for the Misericordia Hospital, New York. Its elastic price scale of $25 top appeared to have been stretched the wrong way. Ticket brokers held plenty of the $25 coupons which they sold at any price over $12.50. They were reported having paid $10 each.

It indicated capacity was not anticipated as the lowered priced ticket sales started last week.

NO CHICAGO DIVORCE FOR JEANNE EAGELS

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Jeanne Eagels is reported to have consulted Benjamin H. Erhlich, the Chicago legal expert on divorces, looking toward a permanent marital remover certificate from her husband, Ted Coy.

The star of "The Cardboard Lover" at the local Adelphi, is said to have been advised by the attorney she could not obtain a divorce in this city through not having established a residence here.

'A La Carte' Represented Cash Loss of $114,000

In the brief run of "A la Carte," Rosalie Stewart's intimate revue, had at the Martin Beck theatre, the musical lost $114,000, representing $54,679 in operation and $59,000 in production. This data results from Miss Stewart's efforts to recover $6,000 as a balance from Martin Beck, who agreed to share 25 per cent in the profit or loss.

Miss Stewart is arguing in court that Beck's defense is a sham, the latter stating he will settle his share of the loss after everything in connection with the corporation has been wound up. Beck is credited with $22,000, which he invested in the musical as a one-fourth partner, but allegedly owes a difference of $6,000 up to $28,000 which is his share of the loss.

Judels Leaves Shuberts

Charles Judels, for the past four years general director for the Shuberts, resigned Sunday.

Judels claims the severance of relations was amicable and not due to any reported differences of opinion.

Nothing stated, he might produce and again he might return to the stage as an actor.

Squabble Over Terms Halts Ferguson Play

Production of "Careers" by the Shuberts has been temporarily halted. Elsie Ferguson, who was to be starred, wanted $1,750 a week and 15 per cent. of the gross over $15,000. The Shuberts offered $1,000 a week and 10 per cent. of the gross over $15,000.

The deadlock stopped the acceptance of a contract by the Shuberts with A. Korff, of the Reinhardt troupe, who was offered $500 a week to be production manager and play the lead in "Careers."

SHOWS IN N. Y. AND COMMENT

Figures estimated and comment point to some attractions being successful, while the same gross accredited to others might suggest mediocrity or loss. The variance is explained in the difference in house capacities with the varying overhead. Also the size of cast, with consequent difference in necessary gross of profit. Variance in business necessary for musical attraction as against dramatic play is also considered.

Classification of attraction, house capacity and top price of the admission scale given below. Key to classification: C (comedy); D (drama); R (revue); M (musical comedy); F (farce); O (operetta).

"A Connecticut Yankee," Vanderbilt (15th week) (M-882-$5.50). Business generally eased off last week, particularly first half; inclement weather one reason; "Yankee" among money leaders; virtual capacity; over $23,000.

"A Free Soul," Klaw (5th week) (C-830-$3.30). Appearance of William A. Brady on stage accounts for some business here; cut-rated, but takings satisfactory at $8,000 and over.

"And So to Bed," Bijou (15th week) (C-605-$3.30). Likely to string along into spring; business not exceptional but apparently profitable; estimated at $7,000.

"Artists and Models," Winter Garden (13th week) (R-2,493-$5.50). Natural draw of house of some aid to box-office; show, however, not what it should a bit more than $20,000.

"Atlas and Eva," Mansfield (1st week) (CD-1,050-$3.30). Presented by Harry Delf, who appears in and authored play; first called "Six Feet Under"; opened Monday.

"Behold the Bridegroom," Cort (7th week) (CD-1,043-$3.85). Run in doubt, business having dropped off to even break or less; last week slightly under $10,000, which is stop limit.

"Broadway," Century (73d week) (CD-2,890-$2.20). Final week; going on tour; last season's melo-dramatic smash and big winner; "The Shanghai Gesture," next week.

"Burlesque," Plymouth (24th week) (CD-1,041-$3.85). Error; agency buy extended with lowering of scale; still getting real money at $19,000.

"Cock Robin," 48th Street (5th week) (CD-960-$3.30). Downstairs draw; fair business and probably profitable, with recent takings between $7,000 and $8,000.

"Coquette," Maxine Elliott's (14th week) (D-942-$3.85). Solid dramatic hit; no empty seat since opening; takings exceeding $19,000 by virtue of standees.

"Divorcons," 49th Street (5th week) (C-704-$3.30). Appears class draw but getting enough to get by; estimated between $7,000 and $8,000.

"Dracula," Fulton (19th week) (D-914-$3.30). Book thriller away out in front; does not cost much to operate and turning in neat weekly profit; over $13,000.

"Escape," Booth (16th week) (D-704-$3.30). Not really big of late, but quite successful show and money-maker; approximately $11,000 last week.

"Excess Baggage," Ritz (7th week) (C-945-$3.30). Getting good trade, with agencies developing call; ought to stick out season; last week over $13,000.

"Five o'Clock Girl," 45th Street (18th week) (M-1,490-$5.50). One of most consistent of big-money shows; heavy trade especially from Wednesday on; quoted around $40,000.

"Funny Face," Alvin (12th week) (M-1,400-$5.50). Another musical just as consistent; getting $38,000 and over right along.

"57 Bowery," Wallack's (3d week) (D-770-$3.30). Doesn't appear to have chance; last week takings approximated $3,000; financial trouble may force show off this week.

"Good News," Chanin's 46th Street (23rd week) (M-1,413-$5.50). Another musical smash, one of stand-out shows of the season; selling out since opening; close to $40,000.

"Happy," Daly's 63d Street (8th week). Closed recently at Carroll; resumed Monday, presumably with fresh b. r., but some of cast waived salary guarantee.

"Hit the Deck," Belasco (42d week) (M-1,000-$5.50). Another two weeks to go; last summer's musical hit; around $21,000 of late; "The Bachelor Father" next.

"Interference," Lyceum (17th week) (D-957-$4.40). Moved here from Empire last week; still getting profitable trade, though not quite as good as first stand; over $12,500 last week.

"It Is to Laugh," Forrest (C-1,015-$3.30). Went off definitely Saturday; jerked to life after closing week previously; didn't have chance either time; maybe $2,500.

"Jimmie's Women," Frolic (20th week) (C-602-$3.30). Hardy little cut-rater this; lighting roof house for some time and making money at $6,000.

"La Gringa," Little (2d week) (CD-630-$3.30). Opened Feb. 2; did not impress as having much chance for real money; more definite line this week.

"Lovely Lady," Sam H. Harris (7th week) (M-1,051-$5.50). Doing very well; using some cut rates, but business bettering $23,000; about $1,000 less indicated last week.

"Manhattan Mary," Apollo (20th week) (M-1,168-$5.50). Probably will last out season, but newer shows likely to take edge off pace here; around $38,000.

"Marco Millions," Guild (3d week) (C-914-$3.85). "Marco" current this week; last week "The Doctor's Dilemma" (9th week) played under alternating system and to around $15,000.

"Mongolia," Taken off at Mansfield Saturday after playing six weeks in all (opened in Village); $3,000, maybe; "Atlas and Eva" Monday.

"My Maryland," Jolson's (23d week) (O-1,777-$5.50). Estimated around $18,000 with cut-rate aid; operetta rated among fairly successful musicals.

"Paris Bound," Music Box (7th week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Extra matinee inserted Friday and nine performances weekly probably played through winter; again over $23,000 (party one night kept gross from going higher).

"Porgy," Republic (18th week) (C-896-$3.30). Going along to substantial business; not capacity, but quite profitable with weekly pace over $14,000 as last week.

"Rain or Shine," George M. Cohan (1st week) (M-1,111-$4.40). Presented by Al Jones and Morris Green; Joe Cook starred; well regarded out of town; opens Thursday (Feb. 9).

"Revels," Shubert (11th week) (R-1,395-$4.40). About breaking even, but rated very good show; business holding to $19,000 or bit more; date indefinite.

"Rio Rita," Lyric (54th week) (M-1,995-$4.40). Getting ready to leave for tour; class musical show figures to be clean-up out of town; recent grosses over $30,000.

"Rosalie," New Amsterdam (5th week) (M-1,702-$6.60). Big ticket demand, and close to "Show Boat" for leadership; bettering $48,000 since opening.

"Salvation," Lyceum (2d week) (D-957-$3.85). Opened Feb. 1 with first-nighters not strong for show; first week around $8,000 with aid of buy; not promising.

"She's My Baby," Globe (6th week) (M-1,416-$5.50). Beatrice Lillie draw here; business good, with strong agency support, but not capacity; around $27,000.

"Show Boat," Ziegfeld (7th week) (M-1,750-$6.50). Scale went to $6.60 top Monday with expectation of weekly gross of $56,000; last week at $5.50 again nearly $49,000.

"So Am I," Comedy (3d week) (C-682-$3.30). Not expected to stick; poor start, with notices unfavorable; estimated under $4,000.

"Strange Interlude," John Golden (2d week) (D-900-$4.40). New smash from all indications; plays but six performances (no matinees) because show starts at 5:15 in afternoon; over very good considering subscriptions.

"Sunny Days," Imperial (1st week) (M-1,446-$5.50). Presented by Hassard Short; well regarded out of town; musical version of "The Kiss in a Taxi," by Clifford Gray, William Carey Duncan and Jean Schwartz; opens tonight (Feb. 8).

"Take the Air," Waldorf (12th week) (M-1,111-$4.40). One of musicals which should have gotten better break; fair business, but profit questionable; over $20,000.

"The Baby Cyclone," Henry Miller's (22d week) (C-946-$3.30). Leaving for road after another week, opening on subway circuit; around $9,000 now; "Our Betters" next.

"The Command to Love," Longacre (21st week) (C-1,019-$4.40). Downstairs trade continues in good measure, with upper floors off for some time; estimated around $14,000, satisfactory.

"The Golden Dawn," Hammerstein's (12th week) (O-1,265-$6.60). Likely to last well into spring; although performance creates difference of opinion, average takings over $30,000 weekly.

"The Ladder," Belmont (70th week) (D-517). With closing of "Broadway" this week, "Ladder," by curious condition of giving tickets away free, becomes longest run show on list; but that doesn't mean anything.

"The Madcap," Royale (2d week) (M-1,117-$4.40). Didn't impress reviewers favorably and doubtful of run; on tour business good on strength of Mitzi's draw; $11,000 in first seven performances.

"The Merry Malones," Erlanger's (20th week) (M-1,500-$5.50). Keeps on comparatively well with other musicals in present going and should last into spring; $25,000 and over.

"The Mystery Man," Bayes (3d week) (D-860-$3.30). Looks like another cut rater on this roof theatre; moderately geared and can get by to small money; $5,000, maybe.

"The Optimists," Century Roof (2d week) (R-422-$5.50). Off to light start; estimated $9,000; first seven performances not impressive.

"The Queen's Husband," Playhouse (3d week) (C-879-$3.35). Chance for moderate run; class draw, agencies reporting call for front rows; first full week approximated $11,000.

"The Racket," Ambassador (12th week) (C-1,067-$3.30). Can go along into spring; making some money at average takings, claimed better than $10,000 weekly.

"The Royal Family," Selwyn (7th week) (C-1,067-$3.85). Still out in front with two close contenders; little difference in gross of previous week; $24,500.

"The Shannons of Broadway," Martin Beck (20th week) (C-1,198-$3.30). Making better run of it than first expected; holding to around $10,000, more or less, but satisfactory.

"The Silent House," Morosco (last week) (D-893-$3.30). London mystery play reported presented by the Shuberts, although not so billed; opened Tuesday.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan," National (21st week) (D-1,164-$3.85). Still prime dramatic favorite and runner-up for high gross honors among non-musicals; $23,500 last week.

"We Never Learn," Eltinge (3d week) (C-892-$3.30). Final week; business indicated under $3,000; followed by "These Modern People" next week.

"White Eagle," Casino (1,477-$5.50). Closed Saturday after playing six weeks to losing business; averaged around $13,000; house went dark for first time in seasons.

Outside Times Sq.—Little Special

"The Merchant of Venice," Broadhurst (4th week). Doing some business, but not exceptional; quoted starting at $18,000 and dropping to $15,000 and under.

Sir Harry Lauder, Knickerbocker (2d week). Dated for four weeks here as starter for tour.

Stock, with a number of name players, opened Cosmopolitan Monday.

"Taming of the Shrew," Garrick (16th week). New play.

"Twelve Thousand" started rehearsal and will soon follow.

"Caponsacchi," Walter Hampden's (3d week).

Civic Repertory, 14th street. Repertory.

American Laboratory Theatre. Repertory.

"Meek Mose," with an all-colored cast, opened Monday, Princess.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," Triangle.

"The Prisoner" closed at Provincetown Playhouse.

"The International" will be followed next week by "Hoboken Blues," New Playwrights.

"The Ivory Door" still playing extra matinees, Hopkins.

"Parisiana," intimate revue, opens Edyth Totten Thursday.

"Passing of the Third Floor Back," Davenport.

Shows in Rehearsal

"Hot Pan" (Provincetown Playhouse).

"Hoboken Blues" (Playwrights' Theatre).

"The Wrecker" (Guy Bates Post).

"The Sharlet Fox" (Willard Mack).

"Mulligan and Garrity" (Donald Gallaher).

"Rope" (James W. Elliott).

"Furies" (John Tuerk).

"Napoleon" (James W. Elliott).

"Jungle Fever" (Paige-Janis Productions).

"Roulette" (Leon De Costa).

"Please Stand By" (Gibbs Productions).

"Three Musketeers" (Florenz Ziegfeld).

"Our Betters" (Messmore Kendall-Gilbert Miller).

"Gentlemen of the Press" (Jackson & Kraft).

"Taza" (William J. Wilson).

"The Medicine Show" (Thomas McElphany).

Minneapolis Legits

Minneapolis, Feb. 7.

"King of Kings" (picture) started slowly at the Metropolitan, but built up. It got around $8,500 for the 14 performances at $1.65 top nights and $1.10 matinees. Held over for second week.

The public did not take very kindly to "The Devil's Disciple," although the George Bernard Shaw play was given a splendid production by the Bainridge Players (dramatic stock) at the Shubert. Gross just topped $5,000.

A tabloid musical comedy version of "Give and Take," by the McCall-Bridge Players at the Palace, brought about $5,400 into the box office.

Aided by boxing and wrestling nights, "Parisian Flappers" grossed around $4,000 at the Gayety, United burlesque wheel house.

Financiers in "Sally" Sued by Madge Hart

High finance in backing the road tour of "Sally" by George H. Nicolai, Joseph DeMilt and Jack Welch, was brought out in Mrs. Max (Madge) Hart's suit for 25 per cent. of the profits.

Welch's examination before trial, as well as that of the other defendants disclosed that the Harts and Mrs. Hart were to invest $2,500 each, in all $10 000 for the road rights to "Sally."

What Welch did was to sell Mrs. Hart two-fifths of his own 25 per cent. interest for $3,000. All Welch was to pay was $2,500, so he was $500 in on the deal and still retained 15 per cent. equity in the show.

Mrs. Hart got back $2,400 on the venture, being still out $600 on her original $3,000 investment. Welch admitted that she was entitled to $1,800 profit but Mrs. Hart insists her profit totals $6,000, for which amount she is suing through O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll.

Mrs. Hart has gone to Miami to dispose of some of that Florida real estate she acquired three years ago in the boom season and which has deflated in value. She is south on a mission of salvaging whatever she can out of it.

"FLAT" PRODUCERS MAY TRY AGAIN

"Joan of Arkansaw" Prospect for Frisco If Coin Is Secured by Carleton and Sheridan

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Will Carleton and Kenneth Sheridan, who produced "Joan of Arkansaw" at the Figueroa Playhouse some time ago and flopped with it, may put the show on again in San Francisco with a change of title and some rewriting.

Carleton and Miss Sheridan made known their intentions to Chief Deputy Labor Commissioner Thomas Barker in connection with a group of wage claims yet unpaid for the local showing. These claims were filed by the stage crew. Actors were covered by an Equity bond.

The producers stated in writing to Barker they had hoped to have the re-financing of the play completed by now, but have found conditions in San Francisco in a peculiar state.

Carleton and Miss Sheridan go on to say that they would gladly pay off the standing wage claims now but admit being flat at present as they had thrown in their all in the show.

Another Bloch Ticket Bill

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 7.

Assemblyman Maurice Bloch, Democratic minority leader, took a slam at gouging by ticket speculators in a bill he introduced in the legislature Thursday increasing the yearly fee of ticket agencies from $100 to $500. In addition every sub-office maintained by an agency would be compelled to pay an additional yearly fee of $100.

The main protective provision of the bill would require that ticket brokers post conspicuously the box office price of the ticket alongside with their prices.

Another bill introduced by Edward J. Coughlin would prohibit the sale of tickets for standing room unless there is a local law authorizing such sales.

Miss LeGallienne's Next

"Improvisations in June," by Max Lahr, German playwright, is next on Eva Le Galliene's production program for the Civic Repertory theatre. Susan Beh and Cecil Lewis will make the adaptation.

The German play will cause a switch in plans at the downtown house. It had announced Jacques Bernard's "Invitation Au Voyage" with Clare Eames as guest star. Miss Eames' success abroad has left her unavailable for the French play and caused the substitution, with the shelving of Bernard's play until next season.

MISS BLINN IN "NIGHT STICK"

Beatrice Blinn has been engaged by Louis Werba to play the girl lead in "Night Stick" on the subway circuit and the road.

Miss Blinn, who supplants Lee Patrick, was slated for the title role in Crane Wilbur's "Molly Magdalene," but its production has been indefinitely postponed.

2 DRAMAS IN CHI CLOSE TOGETHER

"Cardboard Lover," $22,000 —"Constant Wife," $21,000 —"Peggy Ann," $13,000

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Chicago legitimates are continuing their steady run, with little deviation from last week's figures. Perfect theatre weather helped.

Ethel Barrymore in "The Constant Wife" is a sensation, easily leading the non-musical group. With the entree of the "Cardboard Lover" and Jeanne Eagels the "Wife" is experiencing some competition, but not to an uncomfortable extent.

Jeanne Eagels should enjoy a very successful four-week run. Chicago is a city faithful to its favorites.

Chi's seven musicals are all holding up well, and "A Night in Spain" is holding over for a longer run. The "Vanities," in third week, is enjoying increasing business. "Peggy-Ann" at the Selwyn lost a grand last week, but with the weather holding as it is may take it up again next week. Glenn Hunter in "Behold This Dreamer" still problematical but bettering last week and may surprise 'em.

Estimates for Last Week

"Constant Wife" (Harris, 7th week).—Gained $1,000 over last week's figure. Competition from the "Cardboard Lover" may be felt but not noticeably. Take near $21,000.

"Criss Cross" (Erlanger, 7th week).—Fred Stone and daughter, much advertised and publicized, carrying show to good steady business at around $34,000. Engagement extended to Feb. 25.

"Cardboard Lover" (Adelphi, 1st week).—Jeanne Eagels apparently a Chicago hit. Doing nice business around $22,000.

"Kongo" (Central, 5th week).—Holding into its established groove at $6,500, a bit better than last week.

"Hit the Deck" (Woods, 14th week). Still holding its own and doing remarkably well in face of stiff competish. Dropped $1,000 below last week's figure. Advertising says it must soon bid Chicago farewell. Did $23,000.

"Peggy-Ann" (Selwyn, 3d week).—Averaging nicely enough, with plenty of parties and specials. This week around $13,000 and pick up looked for. Good for two weeks more.

"Two Girls Wanted" (Cort, 7th week).—Leaving the Cort for the Princess Feb. 5, to make room for the "Wooden Kimono." Built fair business and rep while at the Cort. Chalked up $10,500, bettering previous week by $1,500.

"Vanities" (Illinois, 3d week).—Doing nice biz. Still pulling at the hotels and conventions and a reasonable resident business. Took $31,700.

"Just Fancy" (Olympic, 5th week).—Business warranted this play extending its stay. Well liked and cleverly advertised. Repeated figure of $26,000.

"Behold This Dreamer" (Blackstone, 7th week).—Glenn Hunter piece productive. Despite a few doubting, looks good for a fair run at a weekly figure varying between $10,000 and $11,000. His latter figure, betterling last week by $500.

"A Night in Spain" (Cohan's Grand, 11th week).—Still pulling 'em in. Was booked to leave Feb. 19, but looks as though a holdover would be possible. "Good News" was set for the house but will go to the Selwyn. Doing around $33,000 weekly.

"Desert Song" (Great Northern, 23d week).—Difficult to predict departure date. Oldest show in town and still hitting high and bettering previous figures. This week went to $27,500, topping last week's take by $1,500.

L. A. GROSSES

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Operetta again dominated the town when a week of "The Prince of Pilsen" at the Shrine Auditorium grossed $15,000 and "The Desert Song" at the Mason climbed in its second week to $17,000.

"Connecticut Yankee" opened Friday at Mayan and in four performances got $11,000.

"Two Girls Wanted" at the El Capitan opened to $6,200, substantial at $1.25.

"Kongo" is building at the Orange Grove. Around $5,000 reported last week, the sixth. A one-week engagement of "Oh, Mama" at the Morosco not so fancy at $4,200.

Music Box holds "Who?" mystery play worth $3,700 last week at the box office. The Playhouse (downtown) reopened with "The Triumphant Bachelor" and got $2,700 in five performances.

The individual standout of the town is "Chauve-Souris," smash at the Belasco at $23,000 in its third week.

MANAGERS FINANCING SHOWS TO KEEP BROADWAY HOUSES OPEN

Extraordinary Means Resorted to—No Other Solution to Present Dark House Problem—Some Grosses Went Up Last Week

No solution to the problem of dark theatres on Broadway has been found. There is but one—production.

When leading managers fall down in that respect they look elsewhere; but seeking isn't finding.

It explains the extraordinary measures now being used to develop success prospects by encouraging independents via financial backing. It is hoped to keep the number of tenanted houses down to a minimum.

Business seemed to ease off again last week, but in some cases there were better figures, and generally where a drop was noted it was for the in-between or mediocre attractions. Leaders held to form, generally speaking.

This week the number of attractions in cut rates jumped to a total of 30, not a record at this time of the season, but still a perceptible increase over the number for the past month. Some of the newer shows, including several which arrived last week, are among the cuts. They, too, were accepted as buys by the agencies, but that does not always indicate strength.

"The Royal Family" held its position at the head of the non-musicals, topping $24,500; in the contending position were "Paris Bound" and "The Trial of Mary Dugan," both better than $23,000; "Burlesque" eased off to $19,000; "Coquette," at the same figure, means capacity, however; "The Doctor's Dilemma" at $15,000; "Porgy" and "The Command to Love," $14,000, were next; "Interference" and "Dracula," $13,000 or slightly less; "Excess Baggage," over that and "Strong," "Escape," $11,000; "Shannons of Broadway," $10,000; "The Racket," about the same; "Behold the Bridegroom," bit under $10,000; "Baby Cyclone," $9,000; "A Free Soul," "Cock Robin" and "Diversion," approximately $8,000; "And So to Bed," $7,000; "Jimmie's Women," $6,000, with the others straggling downward to as low as $2,000.

"Show Boat" and "Rosalie" are away out in front with each better than $48,000 again last week; "Good News" still capacity at $40,000; "Five o'Clock Girl" close to the mark; "Manhattan Mary," $38,000; "Funny Face," $38,000; Rio Rita, $31,000; "Golden Dawn," $30,000; "She's My Baby," $27,000; "Merry Malones," $25,000; "Connecticut Yankee,55 $23,000; "Artists and Models," $22,000; "Lovely Lady," same; "Hit the Deck," $21,000; "Take the Air," $20,000; "Revels," $19,000; "My Maryland, $18,000.

Interlude

"Strange Interlude" by far is the most likely fresh success since the holidays. It got over $11,000 at the John Golden in six performances (no matinees). That figure is exceptional since a goodly portion of the house goes to subscribers at this time, such tickets being prices at $2.75 as against the regular lower floor scale of $4.40. There were some dissenting critical reviews but most were of the rave kind.

Nothing else which arrived last week started anything. "The Optimists" at the Century Roof (Casino de Paris) drew but mild business, estimated at $9,000; "Salvation" got $8,000 in seven performances at the Empire, light trade coming after the premiere; "The Madcap" around $11,000 also in seven performances, not so good for a musical comedy; "La Gringa" at the Little won some good notices, but little business after midweek start.

Several entrants opening late the previous week are of the same rating, although "The Queen's Husband" has a fair chance at the Playhouse. It got $11,000 for the first full week; "57 Bowery" got very little at Wallack's; "So Am I" at the Comedy and "We Never Learn" figured to be little better. The latter is due to stop this week and that may apply to the others.

Among the special attractions Max Reinhardt's German players closed with a rush, getting $26,700 for the final week at the Cosmopolitan; "The Merchant of Venice" around $15,000 at the Broadhurst.

"Broadway" ends a run of a year and a half, leaving the Century, which gets "The Shanghai Gesture" for a repeat (four weeks); "Mongolia" closed the Mansfield, which offers "Atlas and Eva" this week; "We Never Learn" will close at the Eltinge, which will present "These Modern People" next week; "The International" down in the village will make way for "Hoboken Blues" (New Playwrights); "The Prisoner" stopped down there, too, last Saturday, while "It Is to Laugh," revived for five days, stopped at the Forrest Friday night. "Hot Pan" and "Marriage on Approval" may be added to the few premieres of the coming week.

The Buys

Three of the newer shows were added to the buys list, which jumped to 25 attractions. Two, "Salvation" and "The Optimists," did not start very well. The third, "Rain or Shine," does not open until Thursday, the deal being an advance buy. The list "Funny Face" (Alvin), "Manhattan Mary" (Apollo), "Hit the Deck" (Belasco), "The Optimists" (Century Roof), "Good News" (Chanin's 46th St.), "Salvation" (Empire), "The Merry Malones" (Erlanger), "The Five O'Clock Girl" (44th St.), "Rain or Shine" (George M. Cohan), "She's My Baby" (Globe), "Golden Dawn" (Hammerstein's), Harry Lauder (Knickerbocker), "Interference" (Lyceum), "Rio Rita" (Lyric), "Coquette" (Maxine Elliott), "Paris Bound" (Music Box), "The Trial of Mary Dugan" (National), "Rosalie" (New Amsterdam), "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse), "Excess Baggage" (Rits), "Lovely Lady" (Sam H. Harris), "The Royal Family" (Selwyn), "A Connecticut Yankee" (Vanderbilt), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "Show Boat" (Ziegfeld).

30 in Cut Rates

No less than five of the newer attractions went into the bargain agency this week. All opened last week or this. A major musical was added, too, it being "Artists and Models." The list: "My Maryland" (Jolson), "Harry Delmar's Revels" (Shubert), "Take the Air" (Waldorf), "Lovely Lady" (Harris), "The Madcap" (Royale), "Baby Cyclone" (Henry Miller), "Jimmie's Women" (Frolic), "The Shannons of Broadway" (Martin Beck), "The Ivory Door" (Hopkins), "Taming of the Shrew" (Garrick), "And So to Bed" (Bijou), "Atlas and Eva" (Mansfield), "The Racket" (Ambassador), "Interference" (Lyceum), "Cock Robin" (48th Street), "Broadway" (Century), "A Free Soul" (Raw), "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" (Davenport), "Diversion" (49th Street), "The Mystery Man" (Bayes), "57 Bowery" (Wallack's), "The International" (Playrlght), "Behold the Bridegroom" (Cort), "La Gringa" (Little), "Salvation" (Empire), "Happy" (Daly's), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "We Never Learn" (Eltinge), "The Optimists" (Casino de Paris), "Mrs. Dane's Defense" (Cosmopolitan).

Playing Out of Town Contract Interpreted

A decision handed down by the American Arbitration Society is that an Equity contract amended for out of town use is to be construed in the light of a regular contract, with the exception that instead of a week's rehearsal without pay the actor must be notified within three and a half days.

Florence Johns was engaged to play the feminine lead for a Sandford Stanton production. In the addenda of the regular contract it was provided that Miss Johns would play the lead if the play came to New York, with the regular two weeks' notice provided.

Within three days of rehearsal Stanton notified Miss Johns that she did not meet with his approval in the role. Miss Johns applied for a weeks' salary.

Before arbitration Searles and Gillmore, for Equity, contended that if an addenda had been added to the regular Equity contract the addition was a contract in itself and that Miss Johns ther orc had a right to at least one weeks' salary. This contention was ruled against by the society.

Abner G. Rubien appeared as attorney for Stanton.

Whiteside's New Piece

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

"The Hindu" will be revived by Walker Whiteside for a special two-week engagement at the Columbia. Whiteside will then go on tour with his new play "Sakuri."

After whipping it into shape he will return to the Columbia for an additional two weeks starting March 12.

BLUM'S 14-DAY SHOW

A record for Broadway legit production is "The Mystery Man," produced by Gustav Blum at his Bayes roof theatre in 14 days. Blum read the scrip on a Thursday, signed for it Friday, cast it independently of an agency Saturday and presented it 12 days after.

It opened cold at the Bayes as with all Blum plays, some of which are handicapped for critical premiere performance through lack of out-of-town break-in.

F. FARNUM'S STAGE PLAY BOSTON BRODIE

Chi Civic Opera Does $100,000 —"Sidewalks" Up to $25,500 —'19th Hole" Forced Out

Boston, Feb. 7.

One flop and generally high receipts for other houses marked the first week of snowless February. "Come Back to Erin," Irish-American comedy at the Arlington starring Franklyn Farnum and a cast of Bostonians went under Saturday night after two weeks. It was stated that all members of the cast had been paid in full. The piece marked Mr. Farnum's first venture on the speaking stage after seven years of the movies.

"The Road to Rome," continuing at the Wilbur, ran close to capacity for the second week and advance sales point to continued business at close to $20,000. At the Colonial "The Sidewalks of New York" climbed to $25,500 and seems to be in for a run. Nellie Revell spent a week with friends in the cast, saw a half dozen performances and drew a lot of attention to the show by her presence in Boston for the first time in 10 years.

The Chicago Civic Opera Company at the Boston Opera House ran capacity all but Tuesday night and Wednesday matinee. Hit $100,000. Greenwich Village Follies in last week dropped off two grand, but did $30,000. Holbrook Blinn's last week in "The Play's the Thing" started poorly, as did all shows last week, but picked up last four days.

Last week of "The Desert Song" at the Majestic built up from Tuesday on. Frank Cravan picked up very well in his final week with "The 19th Hole" at the Hollis. Grossed $15,000, which is high for the season in this house, and his piece was the first show of its type to register here. Booked out when he appeared to be "in." "Wings" holds on at the Tremont, replacing legit.

Last Week's Estimates

"Scandals," Shubert (first week). Closing week of "Greenwich Village Follies "fell off from strong opening, but was high at $30,000.

"The Road to Rome," Wilbur (third week). Jane Cowl looks like sell-out. About $400 from SRO each week so far. Total of $19,000.

"Yours Truly," Majestic (first week). In two weeks' run "The Desert Song" did well, closing at $23,000.

"Four Walls," Hollis" (first week). Frank Craven in his final week with "The 19th Hole" struck his pace and a record for the Hollis for the season. Jinxed house all year but Craven made $15,000. Booked out when it appeared set.

"Sidewalks of New York," Colonial (third week). Ray Dooley, Eddie Dowling comedy, old timers hit the usual pace of Dowling shows for a gross of $25,500.

Chicago Civic Opera Company Botson Opera House (last week). Almost sold out, excepting only two performances. Did $100,000.

"Wings," Tremont (picture). Still filling the house; $16,220.

"Straight Through the Door," Plymouth (first week). Holbrook Blinn closed in "The Play's the Thing" with close to a capacity run $19,000.

WEATHERLY, -INDIE

Tom Weatherly, resigned p. a. with Brady & Wlmans, is turning Indie producer.

Weatherly was to have started an advertising agency but changed his plans.

John Peter Toohey is the B. & W. publicist.

WILLETTS WITH "RIO"

Clarence Willetts is with "Rio Rita," as company manager. Jack Dillon has been in charge since the show moved from the Ziegfeld to the Lyric.

"Rio" is due to go on tour late this month with "Three Musketeers" slated to follow at the Lyric.

Future Plays

"Roulette," comedy, by Leon le Costa, with Ruth Shepley and Peggy Allenly in the cast. De Costa is producing.

"The Man on the End," by Bide Dudley and Fulton Oursler, sold to Albert Lewis for production.

"G....'di," by William Podmore accepted for production by new partnership composed of Richard Rothman, Lewis Cohen and Martha Frazee. Author will play leading role.

'DIPLOMACY'S' PHILLY $44,000

Ames' Troupe, $24,000— "Spider," $16,000

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.

With generally better weather conditions legit business was slightly more regular and normal last week. Only two smash hits, though.

The Erlanger being dark, due to the cancellation of "The Follies" booking, there were just three musicals, and two were of the light opera variety. Business of Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan company, in its fourth and final week at the Walnut, was again remarkable and reported at around $24,000. Friday night was $3,700, which for a $3.30 top is little short of amazing. Ames company could easily have stayed another two weeks.

"The Love Call" took a turn for the better at the Chestnut after being noticeably hurt by the storms of the previous week. Romberg operetta did about $22,000 and looks set to ride for another month or so. The third musical, "Yours Truly," at the Shubert, being the only light and girly show in town, responded a little by boosting $2,500 from the previous week, making about $18,000. Its engagement here can hardly be considered a success.

Outstanding dramatic smash of the week was "Diplomacy," at the Garrick. Giving four matinees, this George Tyler all-star revival got about $44,000, thus smashing the record of "Trelawny" last year. There wasn't a seat at any performance, even for the two added matinees. Tough that Tyler wasn't playing in the Erlanger, which was dark. He could have clicked to well over $50,000 there. However, he was undeniably satisfied.

"The Spider" held up nicely at the Lyric for about $16,000, or a little over. The two other non-musicals didn't fare so well. "Silent House," playing its seventh week in town, but first at the Adelphi, got a scant $7,500, while "Tenth Avenue" was around $1,000 better than that. This last-named melodrama closed for good Saturday night.

This week found four openings and a roadshow picture. The former were "Chicago" at the Walnut, the Irish Players at the Broad, "The Nineteenth Hole" at the Garrick, and the "Greenwich Village Follies" at the Shubert. This last-named should mop up plenty, having only one musical opponent. The Erlanger has a picture, "Patent Leather Kid," in for what is expected to be about four or five weeks. The Adelphi is dark this week, leaving only two holdovers, "The Love Call" and "The Spider."

Estimates for Last Week

"Plough and the Stars" (Broad, one week only). Irish Players opened a two weeks' engagement to fairly good house Monday night; next week "Juno and the Paycock"; last week "Tenth Avenue" got a little over $9,000.

"Greenwich Village Follies" (Shubert, 1st week). Revue should have soft pickings with little or no musical opposition; "Yours Truly" claimed about $18,000 in last week, a slight gain.

"The Nineteenth Hole" (Garrick, 1st week). Craven comedy started three weeks' stay with some promise; "Diplomacy" broke last year's record of "Trelawny" at same house; with four matinees and a $4.40 top gross was about $44,000.

"The Love Call" (Chestnut, 5th week). Romberg operetta a surprise hit; came back last week to almost $22,000; ought to stay another month anyway.

"Chicago" (Walnut, 1st week). Melodrama in for two weeks only; surprisingly short booking for the Broadway hit here; Winthrop Ames company again a sensation last week with about $24,000; "Mikado" leading the trio of operettas given.

"Patent Leather Kid" (Erlanger, 1st week). Feature film shoved in when "Follies" cancelled; booking probably four weeks; nothing in sight definitely.

"The Spider" (Lyric, 3d week). Announces last week, but was reported staying an extra week carrying it up to Feb. 25; business fine with better than $16,000 last week.

Adelphi. Dark this week, with Irene Bordoni's "Paris" next Monday for four weeks. "The Silent House" down to $7,500 last week.

So. "Abie" Closing

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7.

"Abie's Irish Rose" closed Saturday after three weeks at the Temple.

It was booked for Havana but cancelled after the Cuban people demanded a percentage.

Three other "Abie's" continue on tour.

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

ATLAS AND EVA

Harry Delf presents his own play; staged by Ira Hards. At the Mansfield, Feb. 6; $8.30 top.

THE CAST

Nobblepredders—
Pop ..... George Marion
Ma ..... Helen Lowell
Herbie ..... Tom Brown
Aunt Emma ..... Lotta Linthicum
Cousin Bessie ..... Sara Floyd
Eva ..... Leone Hogarth
Elmer ..... Harry Delf
Josie ..... Dorothea Chard
Al Sprecket ..... Donald Dillaway
Mrs. McGorky ..... Clara Thropp
Bill Donahue ..... Charles Hanna
Dr. Parker ..... Arthur C. Morris
Mr. Mullen ..... Herbert Fortier
A Gatekeeper ..... A. C. Henderson

Harry Delf, one excellent actor who when he authors and produces his own show doesn't star himself—though he had been prematurely starred before by a less tactful impresario. Delf features himself, and he is worth all of that.

For a song-and-dance comic, Delf has turned serious both as a performer and playwright. While there are many laughs in this piece, most of it is grim—modern grim—because it bitterly and sanely exposes the life most of us live at this time. It treats with the tribulations of neither the lofty or the lowly—the in-between's that we sometimes call "white collar men." Harry plays a floorwalker.

Between a querulous and sickly aunt, a sweet sister he wants to marry off, a cranky mother, a hard-boiled old man (played by George Marion and played perfectly, but not the size or type this endearing veteran should essay) the young fellow's life, and hopes but not optimistic, is as drab a combination of fireless hell as has been seen in many a month.

Delf perhaps helps defeat himself because he is too good at his racket. The first two acts are so gray, hopelessly pathetic—and so awfully true—that he has neither the emotional sorrow that makes people cry nor enough of the cup of laughter which makes them choke aloud.

One thing is certain. This young man will some day write a real drama. He has a touch of Eugene O'Neill already. If he could write fiction as he wrote this play, he would leap to the front, for those things are palatable between covers where they rarely are behind footlights.

The direction is perfect—as perfect as the play is perfect, if it is, because it is in perfect vibration with the spirit of the script. In casting and in acting it is superfine, such as one will hardly find matched in the great Broadway marketplace.

The piece was originally called "The Nebblepredders," the name of the family, and most of what farce and comedy there are comes from the difficulty of pronouncing the name. It is inconsequential. If this one remains on the earth's level (it was also named "Six Feet Under") it will do so as a tragedy, not as a laugh show.

Its drab theme scarcely promises for it an extended run. But it has revealed an intensely promising dramatist, and nothing more important can happen in the theatre. Lait.

LA GRINGA

Comedy drama in three acts by Tom Cushing. Presented by Hamilton McFadden at the Little February 1. Staged by the producer with Claudette Colbert featured. Settings by T. Dodd Ackerman.

Soror Felicidad ..... Arline Francis
Madre Superior ..... Isabel Irving
Pedro ..... William Lovejoy
Capt. Aaron Bowditch ..... George Nash
Carlota D'Astradente ..... Claudette Colbert
Sarah Bowditch ..... Clara Blandick
Belle Spinney ..... Eva Condon
Charity ..... Marie Haynes
Bertha Renles ..... Cecil Kern
Mrs. Nott ..... Jessie Graham
Capt. Jabez Spinney ..... Frank Sylvester
Dr. Caleb Sprague ..... Paul Wright

"La Gringa" is the first production effort by Hamilton McFadden, who was in charge of the Theatre Guild's school when that was an actuality last season. But it isn't Tom Cushing's first play. That he has evolved a success is doubtful for "La Gringa" is an uneven play.

It is first seened in Mexico and later in New Bedford, Mass. Captain Bowditch, middle aged master of a whaler, snatches Carlota D'Astrente, young and fired with the passion of her people, from the rose garden of a convent at La Rincoma and transplants her amid the chill and fog of the Massachusetts seaport as his wife. Bowditch, after throwing her amid the he-bustled spinsters of his narrow-minded family, sails immediately for Spain, where he believes her father had owned an estate of considerable proportions.

The May-December union doesn't mean anything to the lonely girl spied on and hated by his people. She easily falls in love with Caleb Sprague, the school master, but the latter withholds his feelings. Their relationship is a clean love.

Carlota learns her marriage to Bowditch was not a marriage. The man says that himself, when upon returning from the voyage he flies into a rage because he found the estate gone while Carlota has run up bills. The girl rushes to her young lover with visions of marriage and happiness. An old salt, about to sail the southern seas, again points out that such a marriage would mean injury to the boy, the loss of his school in the cold-hearted town. She arranges with the old sailor to board his ship, which will touch Vera Cruz.

The climax is the killing of Bowditch by the girl, half native and half Spanish. The act comes after the bestial Bowditch threatens to kill Sprague. Carlota stages a native dance before the drunken captain and places poison in his grog after promising to leave with him on his ship.

Cushing's in and out drama is not entirely a loss, for it will make a pretty good picture. The first act is colorful, but too quiet when the latter portion becomes a duolog. The second starts amusingly with the New England types. However, that stanza and the last act are hurt by slow changes of scene. Even where only a costume need be changed the curtain seems down too long.

Claudette Colbert, a coming star, and the featured player, does everything for "La Gringa" that can be done. Her brunette beauty lights up the dismal New England home and she has the fire of the Mexican girl she portrays. Her speech never loses its dialect.

George Nash, as the villainous Bowditch, turns in another crack performance. Marie Haynes is the old maid of all work who gets laughs in the second act. Clara Blandick and Eva Condon, one a spinster and the other married, but of the same trend, seem faithful types. Paul Wright may be the right type, but he does not impress as a fiery lover, such as would attract Carlota.

P. Dodd Ackerman's designs are good, the convent garden scene being particularly fine.

"La Gringa" will be a moderate money show at best. Indications are it isn't there. Ibee.

THE OPTIMISTS

Cast includes 10 principals and no others: Gideon, George Hassell, Richard Bold, Sally Starr, Flora Le Breton, Luella Gear, Bobby Watson, Fred Hillebrand, Evelyn De Latour, Elinor Powell.

Opened Jan. 30 at the Casino de Paris (Century Roof), New York. $5.50 top.

"The Co-Optimists," a British institution as an intimate musical revue, has been imported by Melville Gideon for American consumption. The cast is a hybrid British-native affair, all 10 players gambling with Gideon on the production, hooked up with the Shuberts in an endeavor to lure the smart trade to Central Park West, where the Casino de Paris, atop the Century, is situated. The effort will prove in vain as "The Optimists," sans the prefix, as it is identified on this side of the pond, is nothing to grow excited about, and more particularly at a $5.50 top.

Opening novelly and intimately enough, it soon becomes patent that the proceedings will bore before long. The idea of the same group of 10 players performing through two hours of skit and number sequence is a foolhardy one at this late date when a native public has become fed up on the intimate revue stuff.

"The Optimists," as Gideon paces it, reminds of the now antiquated Harry Carroll and Anatole Friedland style of presentation, with the songwriter entrepreneurs seated at the baby grands and motivating everything from the ivories. That was a novelty at one time, but with Broadway knee-deep in songwriters tunesmiths are no raving attraction for cash trade.

Gideon's players strive so hard to please, and some of their material is so engaging one is predisposed to favor them, but a desire to accept does not par actual acceptance and approval.

"The Optimists" open minstrel fashion with the troupe introducing themselves individually and broadly plugging themselves in tuneless fashion. After that it's a succession of specialties and numbers, not unlike a glorified vaude entertainment. And vaudeville can't draw 'em enough at the Palace at $2 top.

George Hassell starts well, Richard Bold tenors "Rolling Stones," Sally Starr, impressing on personality, offers a novelty trayolog number, with a hokum female chorus of four, "Amapa," one of the several catchy tunes, is a nonsense South Sea ditty sung by Gideon from the piano and "productioned." To offset the meagreness of all the sets, set pieces and black drops, such comedy annotations as "this is a stupendous production number," or "tremendous-spectacular-copyantic in which will be seen the combined artists of Petrograd, Vienna and Paris, Texas," are included on the program. For a time this naieve manner of poking fun at themselves is pleasantly accepted, but it soon palls as does the rest of the entertainment.

Flora Le Breton, the personality blonde who has been seen before in America in straight comedy-drama, evidences a fine flair for musical divertissement. She handled "Dreamy Days" in good voice.

Luella Gear and Bobby Watson, expert native musical comedy people, had their innings from the start, opening with "Practically True to You" as a double. Miss Gear was the fulcrum also of a tokedramatic recitation which her confreres interrupted in a stage squabble to collect the "ten bucks" somebody owed somebody else, with all leaving the stage and descending through the auditorium to the box office. That, too, may have been from the English original of "The Co-optimists," with which Gideon was connected.

A good number was presented in the form of a parody medley on familiar airs. The same idea was employed for Fred Hillebrand's specialty, and on another occasion. While the parodies and the medleys were excellent and humorous individually and in combination, it was a discordant note in a class musical comedy production, expected to offer exclusive song material. Still the golf thing got some laughs, through the ludicrous parodies, such as "Tea for Two," which becomes a golf tee version; "Kiss Me Again" was metamorphosed into "Missed It Again," etc.

To the air of "John Brown's Body," a syncopated mellerette, of familiar pattern and idea, was reeled off by the troupe, and "Russianata" was a hokum vodka finale including "The Song of the (very) Vulgar Boatmen," et al., as the numbers.

The second stanza was an improvement on the first. It had a couple of study skits, one of which could be incorporated in the first half to good purpose as a relief from the song and dance and general nonsense specialties.

A pugilistic marriage round and the Newlywed episode stood out particularly. "Lacquer Lady," offered by Gideon from the piano, was another outstanding tune. Elcanor Powell didn't belong with a mediocre acrobatic specialty of a type below the general par of those seen on any cafe floor and in vaude. It paved the way for Watson's encore as a clown Savoy doing a vampire, with Hillebrand straighting and clowning.

These two were teamed in a phantom double utilizing phosphorescence in the ghost dance double. Gideon finaled with some of his own songs, a satisfactory specialty. The composer possesses a sympathetic tenor that should register well on the recording wax via the ether, having that confidential quality that is so popular with the public today.

"The Optimist," despite much of the individual merit, is a mediocre presentation and will not linger long, no matter how favorable are its auspices. That takes in the 10 people who are understood gambling on a co-op basis, the almost negligible "nut," and the hook-up with the Shuberts, who have a number of dark houses on their hands and are eager to keep something going as long as possible.

Production meant nothing here. Whatever equipment there was shouted storehouse, and as there is no chorus the principals backing up one another as required, the overhead looks to be nil, since the Shubert don't figure the rent of the roof.

This will last as long as Joe Leblang can plug it and that won't be long, either. Abel.

SALVATION

Arthur Hopkins production starring Pauline Lord, in three-act play (three sets) by Sidney Howard and Charles MacArthur; settings by Robert Edmond Jones; staged by Hopkins. Opened Jan. 21 at the Empire, New York, at $4.40 top.

The same public psychology that killed "Bless You, Sister" (Alice Brady), infinitely better play collaboration than the Howard-MacArthur inside stuff on the big time Evangelical Circuit, counts against "Salvation." The laity in brief is scared off by anything religious when linked with the theatre.

Religion is a delicate topic to almost everybody, and cannot be treated lightly or frivolously or almost in no manner on the stage, excepting as a corrolary theme as the Rev. Davidson in "Rain."

"Bless You, Sister," like "Salvation," dealt with the commercial aspects of a gospel tent show. Unlike the Riskins' Alice Brady show, the heroine of "Salvation" is unconcerned with the financial aspects of her sky-piloting tour. Her mama and her mama's heavy lover, who collates as the manager, take care of that.

A convincing press agent, Joe Whittaker, is on the payroll for the printer's ink contacts, and Bethany Jones rates high in the Evangelical League until the sheik (Victor) (Donald Gallaher), tenor, Victor's wife, mimics an impression, and persuades Bethany to obey the call of the world and partially forsake her dedication to the Lord. After a session in prayer, Bethany is convinced she wouldn't be out of order becoming Victor's wife.

When the commercial phase of her general tour is brought to Bethany's attention she forsakes everything worldly, including her husband, her mother and her troupe, preferring retirement to the money-grubbing side of her mission. That's the finale.

"Salvation" lacks drama from curtain to curtain. Each act falls on three of the quietest finales seen in a long while. If not for Osgood Perkins' effective interpretation of the p. a. role it would die altogether.

Pauline Lord is unconvincing as the young and saintly evangelist, and Donald Gallaher's characterization is a muddle. One doesn't know whether to sympathize or not, a direct fault of the authors.

The general uncertainty of the writing, and the ineffectiveness of the cast, will force "Salvation" to an early demise. Abel.

MEEK MOSE

Comedy-drama in three acts by Frank Wilson; presented by Lester A. Walton at the Princess Feb. 6; staged by George MacEntee; spirituals directed by Alston Laurie; high, $3.30 top.

Ezra ..... Arthur Ray
Nathan ..... J. Lawrence Criner
Josephine ..... Laura Bowman
Penolla ..... Ruth Ellis
Mose ..... Charles H. Moore
Claribel ..... Ruth Carl
Elmos Green ..... Sidney Kirkpatrick
Madam Jones ..... Olyve P. Hopkins
Miss Minnie ..... Susie Sutton
Geo. Roberts ..... Richard Gregg
Cole Turner ..... Alston Harleston
Dr. Slaughter ..... Thomas Moseley
Rev. A. F. ..... J. (Onion) Jeffry
Blind ..... Joe Chapman
Stanley Brown ..... William Edwards
Policeman ..... Oliver Sanderson
Mr. Harmon ..... George MacEntee

"Blessed are the meek, for they will inherit the earth," read Mose Johnson from the Scripture when the troubles of his people were lightened, after hardship and suffering in the little town of Mexia, Texas. That might give some idea of what "Meek Mose" is all about.

However, it isn't any more religious than "Porgy," the first drama made by and with a virtually all-colored cast on Broadway. The new all-colored cast play (save a minor character) is of the arty kind, highbrow in its own circles, a commendable effort though one that, if drawn, stands a chance as a box office draw.

"Meek Mose" has been authored and presented by colored people. Its sponsor is Lester A. Walton, editor of the "Negro Age" and a special writer for the New York "Sunday World." He is also a civil service commissioner appointed by Mayor Walker.

His Honor was presented Monday night when the error of not having the little house filled was made. Mayor Jimmy made a speech before the curtain, and he hoped attendance would jump over capacity before the week is out.

Other notables in immaculate duds out front, Otto H. Kahn was there with Max Reinhardt, the German stage master, and several from the premiere. Most effective were "Go Down Moses," "Don't Let This Harvest Pass" (Burleigh's own contribution with an effective humming accompaniment and one or two others, none other credited save one by Alex Rogers and Will Marion Cook.

"Meek Mose" is interesting. The colored community of Mexia is ordered by the white to vacate their homes and move to the part a strip adjacent to the town dump. There are protests, but the poor negroes move into the new shacks, receiving little money and deeds to the land thereabouts. This is in payment for their own land upon which a new cotton gin is to be erected.

Some of the people become ill, and the feeling turns against Meek Mose, religious and head of the church faction. A babe dies, and the mob tried to wreak vengeance on the old man. His wife falls ill of the misery, and with the swampy land the hut is on it looks bad for Mose and his people.

But a Mr. Harmon whom Mose considers his friend discovers the gut is oil land. The colored people's downheartedness turns into joy. Praise to the Lord, the curtain falling on the spiritual, "Who'll Be a Witness."

Laura Bowman as the ample wife of Mose stood out as a sincere actress, sincere in her speech and faithful leader of the singing. Charles H. Moore in the title role was very real as the old man. J. (Onion) Jeffry supplied most of the humor as "Prof. A. P.," calcamine "expert" addicted to gin. J. Lawrence Criner contributed something as the hotheaded youth from Black Bottom, Miss., who referred to the opposition negroes as "jigs." There were a number of other characters of a more or less picturesque nature by Sidney Kirkpatrick, Olyve P. Hopkins, Arthur Ray, Ruth Carl and Ruth Ellis.

Notice was sent out that Jasper Deeter had directed the show in but 10 days. His name did not appear on the program. Stagine was credited to George MacEntee, the only white player in the show. He flashed a wig that seemed wrongly marked on the forehead.

"Meek Mose" as a colored play by colored players is questionable for necessary support. Looks like it has its best chance in the little Princess, with no chance of moving to a regulation sized house. For $3.30 top the average playgoer demands more. Ibee.

THE MADCAP

Shubert production starring Mitzi in three-act musical comedy, adapted from the French by Gertrude Purcell and Gladys Unger; lyrics by Clifford Grey; music by Maurie Rubens. Staged by Duane Nelson, dances by Harry Puck; musical director, Bernard Smith. Opened Jan. 31 at the Royale, New York.

Deauville Girls—Madeline Morley, Peggy De La Plant, Edna Paris, Theresa Sadowska, Virginia Sharon, Helen Newton, Marie Paris, Genovieve Brown, Olga Grannis, Sally Saunders, Eleanor DeVlane, Bert Winner, Madeline Marier, Agnes Kiley, Marie Price, Betty Barclay, Marian Grozan, Moravia, Constance Ford, Gene McGee.

Boys—William Bartly, George Mason, D. Edwards, Thomas Graham, Harry Phelps, Clifford, Smith.

What price criticism when a glorified turk like this one has been out 44 weeks on the road and can go a similar stretch in the eastern territory around Boston, Philly, etc., which stands it is slated following the admitted brief sojourn on Broadway.

"The Madcap" is all Mitzi. Without her there'd be no show. The petite Hungarian comedienne, bit heftier for some additional avoirdupois, although this may be only noticeable to a Mitzi addict.

Book is one of those impossible musical comedy plots where mama, desiring to marry the rich nobleman, endeavors to pass off her 20-year-old daughter (Mitzi, as Chibi, the Madcap) as a 12-year-old. The pseudo-adolescent accordingly, of her own volition, as a gesture to help mama into a b. b., pulls a Baby Peggy and cavorts through the three stanzas in rompers and considerable misunderstanding.

Other complications, such as a movie comedy satellite who has a crush on Chibi, and meets him after dark because of the cinema serviceable but not pretentious, utilizing 20 girls and six boys, and 12 song numbers, not counting the finales. Not a song hit and if "Tell You a Story" and "Odle De O" Do" had a chance, they'd have asserted themselves in the past 40-odd weeks.

Mitzi will do trade on Main street for a few weeks, but the show is otherwise not there for any substantial takings for any length of time. Okay for the road, however, where the star is always a draw and the show costs little to operate. Abel.

It is doubtful if any purely mechanical mystery play, no matter how well done, could get very far in a town where there are nearly four score competing. On that basis the prospects of this newcomer, labored and artificial in its form and acted indifferently, may be guessed at. Call it six weeks of forcing on the picture rights and stock gamble.

The play reminds of a cut out puzzle. It is ingeniously made and has a first act that achieves its purpose of arousing the curiosity of the audience. After that it drags a bit, awakens to a thrill climax at the

50 STOCK MGRS. IN NEW ASS'N

Plan Meeting in Feb. to Fix Organization

More than 50 stock managers have either joined or signified intention of joining the newly organized United Stock Managers' Association, according to a statement by Lester Al Smith, organizer of the association.

Smith is canvassing the remaining 100 stock company operators and is planning to call a meeting of the stock men in New York the latter part of the month.

United has come into being after several futile efforts to organize the stock field. Its purpose, as laid out now, aims at exchange of ideas among the stock men and better royalty terms from the play brokers, among other things.

Smith has a tentative draft of by-laws and other regulations, which will be submitted for ratification at the forthcoming conclave.

Officers will be elected at the meeting and a $10 yearly membership fee will be discussed.

Organization of the stock men is figured to cure many previous abuses in this branch and also curtail unfair competition angle that has prevailed in spots. With the growth of the popularity of the resident branch of show business, it has been felt by most of the reputable producers that organization was most desirable, the stock field being practically the only branch of show business without an organization.

Zieggy's "Fun" Thought Starts Suit for $3,000

F. Walter Rowe, Jr., U. S. Military Academy alumnus and a lieutenant in the U. S. Naval Reserves, has retained Victor K. D. Ross in a $3,000 claim against Florenz Ziegfeld for assisting on the military drills and dances of "Rosalie." Rowe is a theatrical publicity man. He was with Vincent Youmans as office assistant before joining the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency. Rowe now has his own agency.

Because of his military knowledge, although an Annapolis man, Rowe was called in for the West Point regulation stuff. He accompanied the show and Ziggy to Boston, where the latter is said to have told Rowe he would pay his expenses and that Stanley Sharpe would take care of the rest. After the show's opening, Ziggy opined "I thought you were doing it for the fun of it."

"Gri Gri" in English

"Gri Gri," Paul Lincke's operetta, which had its American premiere Jan. 26 at the Yorkville theatre, New York, in the original German, may be done in English. Andreas Fugmann is behind the German musical rep at the Yorkville.

A London production of the Lincke operetta is being negotiated for, and with Lincke's impending visit to America the piece may be done in English.

FIXING "QUICKSANDS"

"Quicksands," second production of Anna Held, Jr., which tried out the first half last week, laid off for additional rehearsals the last half of the week through special agreement of Equity. Layoff period is not permissible unless the production has played two weeks when Equity permits the layoff on the third week for fixing.

The piece resumed at the Westchester, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., this week (Feb. 6), and plays the Playhouse, Wilmington, Del., next week, with New York to follow.

HAZZARD AROUND

Jack E. Hazzard, comedian and Great Neck newspaperman, came back to Broadway after a five weeks' siege with pneumonia.

Hazzard has been in virtual retirement from the stage in the past two years. He has been the critic for the Great Neck "News," that spot being a tryout point for purported Broadway productions.

Hazzard also contributes a column to the weekly.

Maybe He Knows Now

An actress, engaged for a stock company, recommended an actor who had been in a production with her.

The actor was sent for and terms agreed upon. It's not known if the actor knew the circumstances.

But informed he was to play the lead in the opening bill opposite the actress who had recommended him, he said to the manager:

"Of course, you know Miss G——— was only the understudy in the last company."

Bouncing Check to Stage Crew Quickly Wound Up Play "It Is to Laugh"

"It is to Laugh," the Fannie Hurst comedy which flivved at the Eltinge and was revived last week under supposed East Side backing, finally closed at the Forrest Friday when Bill Lang of the stage hands union gave orders that the curtain was not to be raised.

The direct cause was a bouncing check given the crew on account, but up to the time of closing the takings were quoted at $766 for five performances. The Shuberts were to get the first $3,500, plus other expenses.

The show was originally presented by Barbour, Crimmins & Bryant, who tossed it aside quickly. The East Side bunch came up with a proposition to bankroll the attraction, claiming to have raised something like $20,000. There was to have been splurge advertising in the Yiddish papers. The show was turned over to them for 50 per cent of any net earnings.

The stage hands were advised of the change in management and a bond was asked. Murray Agid, who was to have financed the "revival," gave a check for some $280, or one-half of the crew's salary for the week, the union people taking a chance for the balance. The check came back, was re-deposited and bounced again. Then Lang spoke.

It was said the b. r. talked about was really something like $2,500. The actors are understood to have waived the usual salary guarantee.

Stock Leads Married

Denver, Feb. 7.

Immediately following the Denham management's announcement that Victor Jory, leading man, would be succeeded by John B. Litel, Jory announced his secret marriage to Jean Inness, leading lady, Dec. 21, in a small Wyoming town.

Jory, whose health has been failing, will spend several months resting up before undertaking further stock work. His wife will continue at the Denham. Litel comes from production work in Los Angeles.

Lew Fields' Daughter

Dorothy Fields, daughter of Lew Fields and sister of Herb, is following the family into show business. With Jimmie McHugh of the Jack Mills office, Miss Fields has written a unit show for Publix, she doing the lyrics.

Miss Fields wrote the lyrics for the current floor show at the Cotton Club, including "Broken Hearted Blackbird."

"Deck" Next in Boston

"Hit the Deck" is figured to close at the Belasco Feb. 25, going from there to Boston for a run.

Louise Groody, at present in Palm Beach, will rejoin the company in Boston. Her understudy, Florence Patti, will continue in the part until the Boston engagement, when she may take over Bobby Perkins' role.

LA GALLIENNE REP ON ROAD

Eva La Gallienne's Civic Repertory company is due to take to the road about the middle of April. Six weeks of eastern time has been booked, the program as current to be presented.

Early this season "Cradle Song," which stood out in last season's program, was sent to the road for a time.

Mrs. Harris' "Romance, Inc."

H. H. Van Loan, novelist, and Crane Wilbur are collaborating on "Romance, Inc.," which Mrs. Henry B. Harris will produce.

CUT-RATE DAMAGE ACTION IS STARTED

Leblangs Served in $100,000 Action by Doyle's Ticket Service

The formal complaint in the $100,000 damage suit for conspiracy was served yesterday by Julian T. Abeles, attorney for the National Theatre Ticket Service, Inc. (C. Vincent Doyle) on Joseph, Hugh and Tillie Leblang, Matthew Zimmerman and the Public Service Ticket Office, Inc., the Gray drug store cut-rate emporium.

Doyle's National Theatre Ticket Service sets forth that it had evolved a system and built up good will and an organization for the sale of theatre tickets at cut rates at the box-office windows of certain attractions. Leblang's enterprise is charged with intimidating the producing managers with whom Doyle did business that the Public Service would refuse to handle tickets for such attractions at their cut-rate offices.

Several managers, it is alleged, fearing to ignore Leblang's threat, called off their arrangements with Doyle. Among other things the complainant alleges that Leblang's cut-rate ticket office is a monopoly.

Doyle had arrangements whereby retail merchants and other merchandizing syndicates would sell privilege tickets for cut-rate tickets at 10c. each. This investment entitled a patron to half-rate on all tickets purchased at the box-office windows of the several attractions interested. The available shows at this cut-rate system of patronage were denoted in the daily paper advertisements through a peculiarly marked rule underscoring the name of the house, a cue to theatregoers that the house so marked did business at half-rates.

Majestic, Paterson, Closed By Demands of Union

Piqued by the musicians' union's insistence that the Majestic, Paterson, N. J., engage six musicians, Harry Berg, house manager, will bow out of that theatre in two weeks. He closes the Majestic Feb. 18.

Berg took over the house as an out-of-town and pre-Broadway legit stand. Insisting that musicians were extraneous to dramatic attractions and citing the custom on Broadway, where legit houses have dispensed with orchestras, the union nevertheless insisted on the local custom of a band of six men per theatre.

WASHBURNS DIVORCING

Both Professionals and Married 13 Years—2 Children

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Mabel Forrest Washburn, stage actress, filed suit for divorce from Bryant Washburn, film actor, married 13 years. They separated Jan. 16, last.

Mrs. Washburn charges desertion and mental cruelty. She asks for the custody of their two children.

A property settlement has already been made and no alimony is asked.

Syracuse Wieting Sold

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 7.

Sale of the Wieting block and theatre by trustees of the estate of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Wieting Johnson, who died several months ago, to Dennis P. McCarthy, of this city, for approximately $800,000, is announced.

The Shuberts, controlling the Wieting Opera House, with the lease having at least two years to run, were also in the market for the property.

Two other propositions are now said to be interesting the Shuberts. One is the Empire theatre, which for 10 years was K. & E. opposition to the Wieting. The other is the Empire House, old hotel, on the other side of Clinton Square from the Wieting.

UNDERSTUDY'S CHANCE

Daniel Haines, understudy to Julius Bledsoe in "Show Boat," and who stepped into his role when Bledsoe became ill of appendicitis, is slated to have the same role in the London production.

Third act: Pick George Jean Nathan's or Alan Dale's seat, as they generally blow after the second stanza.

5 SHOWS OUT

Three shows on Broadway suddenly closed Saturday, not unusual. The same thing is likely to happen this week-end. At that time another trio is carded to depart or fold up.

"Broadway," presented by Jed Harris, leaves the Century after a fine run of 73 weeks. Most of that time was played at the Broadhurst, where it was established as last season's melodramatic smash. It topped the non-musicals for months, grossing $24,000 and more weekly. It held over during summer and fall successfully, receiving a percentage of the house profits, a condition of the original booking, a six-week period that became indefinite. Lately the show was moved to the Century and cut-rated.

"BROADWAY"

Opened Sept. 16, 1926. Nothing but raves. Woollcott ("World") said: "completely and heartily entertaining play." Hammond ("Herald Tribune") went the limit, saying, "the most completely acted and perfectly directed . . . seen in 30 years of professional playgoing."

Variety sent three of its near-critics, including Old Man Oscar Samuel from New Orleans. He decided "Broadway" was a hit. Jack Conway predicted Jed Harris and the authors would "spend the rest of their lives counting up." Abel Green reviewing the first from the night club angle passed "Broadway" as authentic and okay. And even all that couldn't kill it.

"Mongolia," presented independently, was taken off at the Mansfield Saturday after a flop engagement of six weeks. It opened in Greenwich Village.

"We Never Learn," presented by William B. Friedlander, will close at the Eltinge Saturday. It will have been on two weeks and three days. The play drew some good mention, but very little trade, perhaps $3,000 last week.

"The International," one of the New Playwrights' efforts will be taken off. It opened recently in the Village house named after the group of experimental playwrighters.

"The Prisoner," another independent Village show, was taken off Sunday at the Provincetown Playhouse.

"THE PRISONER"

Opened Dec. 28. Not covered by major scribes.

Variety thought it better than Village average but doubtful commercially.

"It Is the Laugh," brought from storage last week after closing at the Eltinge, stopped suddenly last Friday at the Forrest.

Lyle Andrews' Drama

Lyle Andrews, heretofore identified as a producer of musicals will make a try at sponsoring a non-musical "Life Is Real" by Elmer Rice which he will produce next month.

PAULINE FREDERICK BACK

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

After an absence of over a year Pauline Frederick tonight made her reappearance on the spoken stage, opening at the Geary in "The Scarlet Woman," comedy by Zelda Sears and Reita Lambert.

"Musketers" Principals

Principals so far engaged for "Three Musketeers," Ziegfeld, are Denis King, Vivienne Segal, Lester Allen, Yvonne D'Arle, Lewis Hector, Douglas Dumbrill, Harrison Brockbank, Delmar Poppin, Joseph McCauley, John Clarke, Reginald Owen.

YOKEL'S ATTACHMENT LIGHTLY LIT ON $189

Way They Do Things Sometimes—Couldn't Collect $330 From Flopping 'Silver Box'

When Alex Yokel, accompanied by Marshal F. J. Herman, visited the Morosco Saturday night to levy a $465 lien on "The Silver Box," the Henry Baron show which closed Saturday at that house, the press agent found $189 to attach. Yokel is suing for $330 for services rendered as p. a. and $150 for a printing bill which money he advanced personally on Baron's behalf.

He also found that although up to Wednesday the attraction had only grossed $1,800, $1,500 of this had been given to Baron. That was Ed Giroux, the Morosco house manager's statement. The show did $4,700 on the week, $700 of this going for operating expenses, and the $4,000 being split between the house and attraction.

Giroux is known on Broadway for his conservatism in advancing moneys. It surprised Yokel and his attorney, Samuel Schwartzman, that with only $1,800 in the till, $1,500 of this should be given Baron on Wednesday, according to the receipt. This ante-dated Yokel's lien by two days.

Yokel Talked Out

Yokel wanted to halt the show Saturday night by attaching the scenery, knowing that Baron needed that last performance to comply with the consecutive performances for the movie and stock rights.

David Finestone, general factotum for the Shuberts, told Lee Shubert of the press agent's plan and the latter issued instructions to protect Yokel as much as possible. It was also attested by Al Woods and Lee Shubert that between them they owned the scenery, and not Baron nor his backer, William Birns, the big antique and rent-me-out furniture man from 37th street. This left nothing physical for Yokel to attach.

So after it was all said and done, after the count-up, there was $189 left which Sidney Kaye of the Shubert legal staff is holding for Yokel until it can be released by formal court order.

Meantime Baron is understood to have gone to Saranac to recover his health.

Reinhardt Returning; First Making U. A. Film

Max Reinhardt has severed relations with Universal in favor of directing a picture for United Artists. Reinhardt has not yet been able to choose a suitable book but has Fanny Hurst's "Lummox" under consideration.

Reinhardt wants Greta Garbo as the star of the production. Miss Garbo may be loaned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for this purpose. She intends to sail for Sweden in March unless Reinhardt succeeds in finding a story that he can approve of when she will remain over to make the picture.

Reinhardt is coming back to New York next autumn with another production, having already secured an option on the Cosmopolitan without the knowledge of the Shuberts. The Shubert lease on this house expires in three months.

The German producer is understood to have already turned down over twenty scripts submitted by Universal and U. A. executives.

Conrad "Baggage" Suit

Charles Conrad has retained Julian T. Abeles to sue E. L. Barbour and Lester Bryant, and Barbour, Crimmins & Bryant, Inc., producers of "Excess Baggage," for a one-third interest and for a receivership to protect his (Conrad's) interests. The complainant, formerly of Barbour, Conrad & Bryant in several legit production ventures, alleges he withdrew from the combination; that they refused to make any definite business arrangements; also that Conrad was instrumental in aligning Crimmins as the financial sponsor in the new corporation.

Having not been formally bought out in the copartnership, Conrad is of the opinion he is entitled to a third of "Excess Baggage," Barbour, Crimmins & Bryant's lid at the Ritz, New York.

PLAYS OUT OF TOWN

Greenwich Village Follies

Boston, Feb. 3.

English edition of G. V. Follies staged by J. C. Huffman. Sketches by Harold Atteridge. Music by Ray Perkins; lyrics by Max and Nat Lief. Dialogue staged by Charles Judels; dances by Ralph Reader, ensemble ballets by Jan Cyra. Arnold Johnson, musical director.

Blossom Seeley	Dr. Rockwell
Benny Fields	Ronie Riano
George Sweet	Ben Dova
Arthur Brown	Eddie Lambert
Eddie Shubert	Florence Misgen
The Merediths	Graham Tyle
Grace Brinkley	Jans and Whalen
Laura Lee	Annie Pritchard
Sheila Barrett	Sylvia Carol
Matty and Tillie	Arnold Johnson's Band

What a pip show this ought to be. As it now stands, nobody is satisfied except the people who pay to see it. They seem to like it, so maybe it's good, regardless of the paternalistic apprehensions of the Shubert outfit which seems to be benevolently worried over the affairs of Bohemians, Inc.

Dr. Rockwell, at present, is the bright spot. He is doing all his old banana stalk and other comedy classics of vaudeville days, but in addition is a howl as he is not only during stage changes but in working from the right proscenium box kidding acts.

This show opened in Newark, Jan. 17, in apparently a chaotic condition. During the two weeks in Boston heroic measures were taken to cut for a planned New York opening. It was then decided to make some cast changes and play Philadelphia before Broadway. A judicious move as the show is building and looks like a popular musing and needs to be that with the nut it is carrying.

Arnold Johnson's band, formerly a California night club outfit, is carrying the music. Johnson works unobtrusively, the band is good, and their imitation of what you get from a radio while idly turning the dials is going big with audiences. Other than this the band minds its own business and does not intrude into routine.

Blossom Seeley is working hard and her big scene is given to put over. Her one big scene is a spiritual revival, "Kickin' a Hole in the Sky," set in a negro church with the chorus hidden in pews. She works up to a real frenzy in which she finally drives the devil out of the church. Okay and will stay in.

There are two well-staged ballets, using Florence Misgen, formerly soprano with the Chicago Opera Company, and production numbers are fair, one being a bridge parade and the other a Little Boy Blue and Mother Goose setting.

Outstanding sketches are Dr. Rockwell in a rough ballroom hokum bit and a syncopated travesty on "The Trial of Mary Dugan," in which the time-honored jazzing of all action is done surprisingly well, particularly in a town that has not seen the original, Cohan's revue.

The two novelties are Mitty and Tillie, dancers who are not going across despite featured billing, and a weird team of three youngsters billed as "The Graham Dancers" who do classical frieze posture dances that some of the house laughed at but the majority went goofy over. They are different, and are about the only spot on the bill where the public gets what it thinks Greenwich Village revues should have.

Out here, where they still believe in Paul Revere's ride, even the $4.40 patrons think that this "Follies" should reflect what the yokel looks for and never finds in the village, and every year Jones and Green are getting further away from the profitable illusion. But these three kids have it and the hand their grotesque interpretation receives proves that the public wants to be Bohemianed by the Bohemians, Inc.

The score simply isn't, but costuming and chorus are up to standard. Libbey.

THE SHOWDOWN

Seattle, Jan. 29.

Three-act drama written by Olga Printzlau; presented b Henry Duffy, at President theatre, Henry Duffy Players, management William B. McCurdy; direction, Louis Dean.

Rose Cady	Leona Powers
Joe	Robert Keefe

Looks as though Olga Printzlau has a success that's going to make the grade on Broadway, where early production is said to be planned. It needs some polishing, there being an over-abundance of language in some spots. The dramatic value of silence and pantomime could well be marshalled in several tense moments.

The theme is powerful, running the gamut of emotional reaction. It has organic unity and orderly progression that hold interest at knife edge. More than this, it has the elements of real greatness and one is inclined to compare it with such war epics as "What Price Glory."

A comic strain crops out here and there, but melo holds sway and in the main thoughtful, masterful philosophy prevails. It's a man's play in that it deals almost entirely with men, women taking minor, though effective roles. Its appeal is universal. This man's story is loaded with religion; rather odd, since men are said to be getting away from the church in this age. It's nicely loaded and it takes hold down deep. It preaches faith in a way that is easy to take. The playwright knows her Bible, too.

After-war problems confront cripples confined in a base hospital. That so much of heart interest is developed with such delapidated human material is astonishing. Peter Linden has faith. He is an optimist and cheers up the others although he is chair-ridden.

A peculiarity is that he writes Scripture on bits of paper, throws them out of the window or hands them to the boys. They scoff, but

Sergt. O'Brien has hate in his heart; all shot to pieces in the war, he had lost his cafe, located in the same town; he is cynical, hard-boiled and rails against religion, women and everything. He thinks his wife has been unfaithful and suspects a scoundrel, Carewe. A third soldier presents the problem of getting back his old job.

A "dictionary" contest is unique and breaks dull care in the hospital. O'Brien pulls a good one when he hurls this at the helpless Peter: "When I look at you I wonder why they hang wall paper."

Prolonged applause after second and third acts. Howard Miller rises to his best in the heavy role assigned to him. Entire company capable.

WHO?

...es ... les, Feb. 1.

Mystery melodrama in three acts by John P. Kiewerts. Produced by the author. Staged by George Rand. At the Hollywood Music Box, Jan. 30, at $2 top.

Frank Host	George Rand
Florence Walter	Ruth Saville
Dr. De Former	George Cleveland
Mr. Wise	Herbert Heyes
Jasper	John De Weese
Stranger	Howard Macy

Another spooky thriller patterned after others of the ilk. The author, a San Francisco boy whose father owns the States restaurant there disposed of a pretty good sized bankroll in getting his brain child started. The parent kicked in with the finances. Lou Graf, brother of Max Graf, picture producer, was declared in on the show, the angle being that brother Max is eying it for the screen. Doubtful, however, for that purpose. For the stage, the same in its present shape.

It needs plenty of doctoring in dialog, situations, cast and what not. The plot is admittedly baffling. But that goes two ways. It out-hokums itself to the extent of even becoming sheer farce at times.

Too many stage waits and not enough concentration in planting punches. Staging is also decidedly crude. Becomes so tangled up in the plot that the average brain will soon tire in trying to place each individual. Too bad more attention was not paid to details. "Who is the Weasel?" That' the sticker. That shadowy individual is the nemesis of Dr. De Former, who calls in the police to help nab him before he does away with everybody and everything. The doc himself does not look to be any too Kosher, and the cops have their suspicions. Action takes place between midnight and morn in the study of the doc's home, which overlooks a body of water from a cliff. The doc is the first person introduced. He is moping around in darkness, adjusts things here and there, picks up the telephone receiver, listens in, nods his head knowingly, and finally does a vanishing act. Enter Mr. Wise from headquarters accompanied by Jasper, the doc's colored houseboy. Radio in the room begins to talk of its own accord and messages of the Weasel are tuned in. Evident that something terrible is going to transpire before long, but what it's al' about no one seems to know. Things begin to happen in a way to defy description. The doc reappears to keep on bobbing in and out. Connected with this business is Flo Waller, lady crook, and her boy chum, Frank Host, also a dabbler in nefarious dealings and accused by all of being the Weasel. After that everybody plays hide and seek with each other. Of course, there is the mysterious stranger. This guy pops out from anywhere. Persons in the room running afoul of him are stabbed, knifed and shot, chloroformed, and when apparently dead are brought back to life again. "Then came the dawn." Also the debacle.

In the course of a few short minutes everything is put in shape, every one is discovered to be some one else and pick your spots. As for the Weasel, he is somebody, but try and find out.

For a short cast this one is not so good. A possible exception would not point directly to any one in particular. Ruth Saville as the femme schemer stands out—in the opposite direction. Her role should be important, but not the way she handles it. The job of both directing and acting must have been trying on George Rand. His crook on the stage spells more like a yeg who got his info on the racket in a correspondence school. George Cleveland plays the doc with some astuteness, but fails to put it over in the right spots. Herbert Hayes starts out okay as the "wise" Mr. Wise, but then falls into line with the rest. The colored servant of John De Weese evoked some comedy passages, but not enough to offset the rest. Howard Macy is the stranger and remains that way.

Show is in the Music Box for two weeks only. Providing it gets a break the producers intend to arrange for some more time, either here or in another house. It doesn't matter.

QUICKSAND

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 1.

Good old long arm of coincidence works rather hard in Warren F. Lawrence's new melodrama, "Quicksand," given its first performance here at Parsons' theatre. It is another of those plays with a lawyer whose happiness depends upon a verdict he fights to obtain in a murder trial. But the play puts a new twist in the case, in that after the lawyer has won he isn't any too happy. He finds that the man he has saved from death is the crook who caused the conviction and execution of an innocent boy, the lawyer's younger brother, and that the criminal's wife, with whom he has fallen desperately in love during the progress of the case, is the woman who was used to lure his brother to destruction.

This turn is prefaced by a four-scene first act (one being a cut-back showing the murder) and a divided second act, the second scene, of which is in a court anteroom just before and immediately after the verdict is brought in.

The lawyer's love for the accused man's wife is changed to hate in an instant, and he plans to give her up to the police. In the last act he nearly kills her in his rage, only to be overcome with pity, and he attempts to aid her escape. As the play now stands the woman returns to accept her punishment, and there is imminent another trial in which the lawyer may show his skill as a defender, with a satisfactory contingent fee in the offing.

Early scenes are commendably brief, the writing being terse and direct and the characters carefully drawn. Granting the possibility of the coincidence that brings the people responsible for his brother's shameful and undeserved fate into the hands of the trial lawyer, there is excellent drama in the situations. It is possible that the author may experiment with some changes in his last act and that later audiences may get some other slant on the future of the principal characters. However, the local version held the attention of those present closely, and there was plenty of applause at the close of the play.

Anne Forrest is admirably cast as the heroine of the story. Seth Arnold portrays a homely, rather commonplace and sensible young doctor with the humor of entire seriousness and the value of sincerity. To him fall most of the lines that lighten the melodramatic tension. He obtained, and earned, that much desired actor's reward of a burst of applause following a quiet exit.

Robert Ames plays the young lawyer whose skill and perseverence serve to free the man whose life he gladly would have seen forfeited. At times he seemed rather young in the character, but his performance had his usual ease and naturalness. Minor characters are very minor indeed, but efficient.

Play is rather simply mounted in several scenes, but needs no more elaborate environment.

PARIS

Atlantic City, Feb. 7.

Take the engaging personality of Irene Bordoni, combine it with the versatility of Irving Aaronson's "Commanders," add a capable cast, a fair plot, good comedy and you have "Paris," which, in this instance, is a synonym for a corking night's entertainment. It opened at the Apollo last evening to an enthusiastic audience.

In this production, described as a musicomedy, Gilbert Miller has the makings of a hit, although the plot is not one that requires any great mental exertion to fathom. However, it is sufficient background for the clever lines and efforts of the small but competent company.

Action of the play takes place in gay Paree, where Andrew Sabbot, scion of an old, socially prominent New England family, runs wild and falls in love with Vivienne Rolland, idol of the Parisian stage. His mother, just over from America, frowns on the alliance and refuses to sanction it. Guy Pennel, Vivienne's partner, realizing that her marriage would interfere with his own stage career, begins a little plotting of his own. Mrs. Sabbot, given a first drink of brandy to revive her from attack of illness, suddenly acquires a taste for firewater and, with this little start, commences to change her entire viewpoint of life. She becomes a night rounder, aided and abetted by Guy, who sees in this a chance to break up Vivienne and Andrew.

Andrew, noticing the complete change in his mother's nature, reverts to his own quiet self and endeavors to induce his mother to do the same, without avail. With a flirtation being carried on between Mrs. Sabbot and Guy, Vivienne awakens to her own love for him. After breaking her engagement with Andrew, she is acquainted with the forthcoming nuptials of Mrs. Sabbot and Guy. Feigning a collapse at this disclosure, she discovers that it was all a frame-up between the two as a subterfuge to discourage her own affair. With this turn of events, Vivienne and Guy acknowledge their love and fall into the inevitable clinch.

Miss Bordoni still retains her delightful mannerisms and is in a vehicle that brings forth her ability to the utmost. Her songs were all well rendered and each clicked. Arthur Margetson lent admirable support to the star and a bit of the comedy in the role of Guy the flirtatious dancing partner.

Louise Closser Hale scored a personal triumph as Mrs. Sabbot. To her falls the main burden of the comedy. Pleasing performances were also given by Eric Kalkhurst, as Andrew, and Elizabeth Chester. The songs are written by Cole Porter with "The Land of Going to Be" and "Don't Look at Me that Way" striking the popular fancy.

Aaronson's "Commanders" proceeded to wow with their half-hour on the stage and lent the added punch that served to bring the show from mediocrity to much higher levels. This versatile band immediately got over with their jazz singing and dancing.

Plenty of work to be done, as the first act is entirely too long, with the final curtain not down until

I LOVE YOU

(CIRCLE)

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 24.

Revamping the old Circle stock company left here three weeks ago by Matthew Meiklejohn and Percy Dunn, Joseph D. Miller introduced new trouble with William Le Baron's three-act comedy, "I Love You."

Dorothy La Vern and Milton Byron were supported by a cast including James Donlan, Patricia Snowden, Marian Sutherland, Josephine Hudlow, Ross Forrester and Boyd Cummings. Byron and Donlan easily topped the affair, which did not move the opening night audience into ecstasies.

Miss La Vern made a weak showing, probably due to the fact that the localities have been sold on the idea of having a flapper for a heroine. Her role was against her, too.

Story has a complicated plot, featuring a big butter and egger who thinks his cash can buy anything. He finds love and an electrician who is rabid on labor troubles and keeps things in a mix-up. Byron did the electrician, and Ross Forrester the butler. As the doughboy James Donlan furnished the bigger portion of the laughs.

JOAN OF ARC

New London, Conn., Jan. 27.

Dramatization of Mark Twain's "Joan of Arc." Presented by Paragon Productions, Inc.

Joan	Clara Clemens
Louis de Conte	Theodore Hecht
D'Arc, Joan's father	William Franklin
Tavary, Joan's uncle	Perry Ivins
Sieur de Metz	Courtney White
Robert de Beaudricourt, Governor of Vaucouleurs	Robert Noble
French Soldier	Daniel E. Grant
Beaupere, doctor	Robert Noble
English Officer	Jack B. Daniels
Charles, Dauphin of France	Perry Ivins
Count de Vendome	Jack B. Daniels
De la Tremouille, king's minister	Daniel E. Grant
La Hire, field marshal	Ralph Sprague
English Soldier	Mitchell Bilstein
Manchon, the court recorder	Ralph Sprague
Cauchon, Lord Bishop of Beauvais	Courtney White
Father Ladvenu	William Franklin

The sentimental value of the name Mark Twain, coupled with the personal appearance in the title role of his daughter, Mme. Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch, may be enough to carry this production on the road. It should have a draw if not lingering long in one locality.

With Mme. Clemens appearing on the side at civic meetings for a publicity plug, the show has fared pretty well so far.

Joan of Arc is too cumbersome from a physical standpoint for convincing presentation. Four acts and 34 scenes, with rarely a duplicate, so that to speed up set changes they use drops for the sets almost entirely. With the royal throne in a king's castle a linp cloth for a background, you have to use a lot of imagination.

Company of 11, with seven doubling and half of the spectators' job is keeping them straight. These few difficulties prove foes of concentration so much of the impressiveness otherwise possible is lost.

Histrionically a few players strive for effectiveness. Mme. Clemens, while not a great actress, puts a deal of trueness into the Maid of Orleans part, inspired by her father's understanding of the character when he wrote the book. She is a bit mature and her voice husky for the opening scenes, which show the maid's early life, but as a military campaigner, with the cross as her standard, she gives quite a remarkable performance.

Perry Ivins in the difficult role of imbecilic King Charles clicks. Theodore Hecht deserves credit for the devoted lover role. He made the most of what he had.

Ralph Sprague gave a good picture of the blasphemous field marshal. The others were of minor significance or poorly handled. Bailey.

Nothing More Friendly

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Recently a stage star brought suit for a divorce against her husband, now in pictures and formerly with her in legit.

About 10 days ago a friend happened to step into the house and saw the couple with their arms around each other going over the different complaints filed by the wife.

The husband seemed to object to many of the allegations, asserting "Why did you say that when you know it wasn't true?" And the wife said: "Well, as long as we are being divorced I think that the complaint I made against you should be one to hold water in court."

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

second act curtain and then slumps sadly, while the authors explain what it was all about. From the middle of the second act an expert guesser can come near solving the mystery.

Here's the start: Young man comes home to Park avenue apartment pretty drunk, to find a dead man on his davenport, shot through the heart. He summons a pal from upstairs. Pal seems to know something. Police come and start inquiry. Hero's fiancee comes in also. She appears to know something, but keeps it to herself. Everybody is off while hidden police watch entrance of hero's Japanese valet. Jap looks at dead man in gloom, then switches lights on and off twice, meanwhile peering from window as though signaling somebody outside.

Finally, man visitor from Chicago arrives, making it plain that he knows a good deal about what has happened, but won't tell. In the end, he unexpectedly confesses to the killing, although the audience knows he had nothing to do with it.

On that curtain was laid the basis of a sizzling mystery. Only it doesn't go on from that point. Instead, it is talked to death for the next half hour, the only thing that happens being the comedy supplied by two Japanese servants. This is funny, and the two real Japs do some of the best acting in the cast. Everybody is examined and examined and everybody ties the situation into new complications. The trouble is that instead of the auditor getting interested in a real situation, it just becomes a game of watching playwrights clumsily trying to keep the customers from guessing the answer. It's just a trick play, artificial and make believe and nobody is a living character. This may have been as much the fault of indifferent players as inept writing, or it may be that a theatrical play served to make stagey actors more so.

Anyhow the proceedings never create or maintain an illusion. At the second act curtain, when everybody has been put under arrest, and a new person is accused (maid employed by heroine), lights go out and there is a pistol shot. Last act takes up action where it left off, and when lights go up again, the maid lies dead, shot through the heart with the same gun that killed the stranger.

Suffice to say that the explanation is laboriously made in the final act, which has no action whatever. It might as well have been told in a curtain speech for all the interest it creates. The outcome is allowed to leak earlier because the authors have been clumsy in leading the attention away from the right character, while still keeping that character in sight.

PARADISE FOR TWO

(YIDDISH)

Musical comedy in two acts, co-starring Aaron Lebedev and Samuel Goldenburg. Produced by Aaron Lebedev. Book by Joseph Lateiner and William Siegel. Lyrics by Jacob Jacobs. Music by Alexander Oshanetsky. Dances arranged by B. Veldon. At the National, January 14. $2.75 top.

David Gottlieb	Samuel Goldenburg
Sholem, his father	Simon Wolf
Lalbke, his cousin	Aaron Lebedev
Braindel	Yettn Zwerling
Fanny	Bella Meizel
Lenh, her sister	Bella Nudolsky
Chane Tzippe, their aunt	Betty Jacobs
Serke, her daughter	Goldie Eiseman
Chaim Jonah	Jacob Jacobs
Benny	Max Wilner

From the viewpoint of the patron of a national theatre, to whom entertainment in any other language is but meager fare, this production supplies approximately three hours of continued, uproarious laughter, skillfully blended with a slight touch of melodrama.

This is one of the fastest musicals produced on the East Side in several seasons. There are more laughs than in the average musical comedy hit on Broadway. The comedy situations are handled in a manner surprisingly clever for productions of this district. The melodramatic color, though delivered with restraint, is definite and effective.

With the two stars accounting for about $1,200 weekly, and a cast of approximately 35, the house is working under a terrific nut in the neighborhood of $12,000 to $14,000 a week. It is doing capacity business with Mollie Picon's "Some Girl," the only other musical on the street.

Opening is slow. The usual set of Yiddish chorus girls, looking more like ludicrous caricatures than actual players, squawk noisily at intervals. In this case the chorus boys should get first mention. Two are pot-tummied gents, a third is bald, while the fourth wore his stiff shirt front crumpled half way over his belt. The "boys" look as if they averaged well over 40. They are probably all relatives, so it must be okay.

However, they aren't the only relatives. Betty Jacobs is related to Jacob Jacobs, half owner of the house, through a legal ceremony of long standing. Bella Meizel, prima donna, admits a husband in the person of the orchestra leader, Olshanetsky, who also wrote the music.

The only principal who doesn't seem to have any blood ties in the show is Goldie Elseman, deriving the first half of her name from her hair. Goldie, playing in Yiddish stock in Harlem for the past three years, is on the East Side for the first time in her youthful career. She led several numbers gracefully, putting every ounce of her 90 odd pounds into her vocal numbers. Given flashier, more appropriate clothes and better spotting she should register more effectively. She has appearance and stage presence not yet fully developed. Her hoofing effort, unless intended as burlesque, should be confined to private showings.

Aaron Lebedev leaves a poor impression at the beginning. Getting into stride with the tempo, he soon outstrips his co-starring partner for results as a musical comedy ace, stealing the show in the last half.

Goldenburg is hardly in his proper sphere. A big draw as a dramatic actor, strong enough to carry his audience with him into musical comedy, he can attempt anything without danger to the box office.

Lebedev can wear clothes, delivers capably through a pair of powerful pipes and hoofs like a No. 2 act. They refuse to recognize their limitations in this part of the world.

The hit of the show is the rendition of "The Little Old School" with Hebrew synagogue cantations, by Lebedev and Goldenburg. The roof-splitting response that greeted this attempt should prove that the producer's occasional flights into English are not needed. There is, however, a question as to the advisability of chanting sacred hymns on the stage by men not wearing headgear of any kind; a violation of good taste and Hebrew custom.

As a whole the production harbors a strong cast. Jacob Jacobs and Betty Jacobs are a team of expert funsters, dispensing carloads of broad and clever wit adjusted to the likes of their customers. Bella Meizel, prima donna, is more or less satisfactory. Simon Wolf and Max Wilner are assets.

Story is about a wealthy bachelor, disappointed in his first love, failing for another gal half his age. The aunt tells him the girl is unattached and frames the match, though she knows Fanny and Lalbke have been childhood sweethearts. The gal becomes engaged to Gottlieb because his wealth would pay for a cure for her lame sister. Mori.

SOCIETY ACCEPTS THEREMIN, WHO PICKS MUSIC OUT OF AIR

Public Demonstration at Met.—Freak Concert Attraction—Makes Melodies Out of Squeaks—Demonstrator Rates as "Russian Edison"

Professor Leon Theremin, Russian physicist, gave a public demonstration Jan. 31 of his "Music from the Ether" invention at the Metropolitan opera house, New York. He thrilled a capacity audience that filled the spacious auditorium in expectation of a musical novelty.

Under Arthur Judson's recital management, Theremin should clean up as a freak platform attraction in the larger concert halls. The picture houses then might go for him like a visiting fireman for a couvert charge.

Prof. Theremin's invention, simply explained by a commonplace parallelism, is a variation of the everyday occurrence when one's hand touches the knobs of the average radio receiving set. The human body's natural radiation causes the loud speaker of the receiving set to squeak. What Prof. Theremin has done is to control this ether squeak and graduate it into musical volume.

By making magical passes in the Press Rules Milwaukee's Air; Has WGWB, WISN

Milwaukee, Feb. 7.

George W. Browne radio station, WGWB, forced to close duo to the low wave allotted and tying up a huge sum in apparatus, has been taken over by the Wisconsin "News."

Wisconsin "News" recently took over the School of Engineering station, WSOE, and changed the call letters to WISN. It will hook up WGWB on the same call letters. This gives the newspapers here, "Journal" and "News," the two major stations in Wisconsin.

Only one other station, WHAD, operated by Marquette University, now exists here and it is drowned out by the other pair.

No Lucky Strike Hour

Reports of a Lucky Strike radio hour are cold, despite the attempts of an organization to sell the American Tobacco Co. a broadcasting entertainment.

The reason given by Lucky Strike is that they were among the pioneer radio advertisers, as well as pioneers in other forms of advertising and exploitation such as sky-writing and testimonial ads.

Hence, they do not repeat on themselves or their competitors in publicity stunts.

'Satevepost' and Radio

Radio and the "Saturday Evening Post" are being discussed by advertising men and radio sharps. The deflation in the "Satevepost's" advertising gross and the increasing popularity of the ether form of exploitation are given as the reasons.

Whether under instructions or in line with the best deemed advertising campaign, copy appropriations for the "Satevepost" seem to have fallen off in favor of new radio "time."

The stunt of getting a daily free ad in the radio columns of the national press is the best selling idea of it, in addition to the actual radio broadcasting. The constant mention of Hoover Sentinels or Stromberg-Carlson Hour, among the many others, which tips off on the Hoover vacuum cleaning product, and the Stromberg-Carlson radio set, without any charge whatsoever, is a daily free ad in every radio program in every daily newspaper.

Morris-Adams Bureau

William Morris and John T. Adams, head of the Wolsohn Musical Bureau, concert management, will form a separate corporation on Adams' return from Paris for the booking of commercial radio talent.

Morton A. Milman of the Morris agency and Adams have a booking hook-up as the Adams Art Service, Inc., for radio talent, but the growth of the business will result in a separate entity.

Adams sailed Feb. 3 on the "Paris" for France on secret business.

No Time Saturdays

With the National Broadcasting Company's "time" oversold on certain days, curiously enough Saturday at no time has WEAF, the major station, got a commercial hour.

The N. B. C.'s twin station, WJZ, has two commercial hours Saturday in the RCA (Walter Damrosch and N. Y. Symphony) hour and the Philco Hour, which are the most popular features from WJZ.

This refutes the WEAF radio advertisers that Saturday is not a stay-at-home time, with everybody coming to town all over the land.

CONGRESS PLAN AIMS AT AIR COMMERCIALS

Another House Proposal Is to Limit Amount of Jazz in Programs

Washington, Feb. 7.

Senate Interstate commerce committee has approved the Watson bill continuing the Federal radio commission for another year. Senator Dill's amendment to limit all licenses to six months was incorporated in the measure which kills, should the bill pass, the present right of the commission to grant licenses for two years.

Radio question is again beginning to work itself to the floor with many proposals set to be put forth as amendments. These include one from Senator Smith of South Carolina to limit the extent to which "jazz" orchestra programs may be broadcast.

Another question in connection with control of programs, which is expressly denied the commission because of the censorship angle, is being discussed. This to control the amount of advertising. Congressman White, sponsor of radio legislation in the House, has a plan to control this by classification of the various type stations. Chairman Sykes, of the commission, is backing the Congressman in this suggestion during the hearing that direct advertising programs be confined solely to the daylight hours.

Committee and witnesses all agreed that advertising stations consistently offering good programs should not be disturbed. That policy, it was pointed out, has prevailed during the past year.

Meanwhile Wired Radio, Inc., of New York City, has applied for a license to erect a New York transmitting station in Manhattan. H. D. H. Connick, representing the company, stated that several large companies had agreed upon combined patents and that shortly wired broadcasting would be on the air.

The alleged tie-up between Commissioner O. H. Caldwell and the National Broadcasting Co., and his acceptance of $7,000 from the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, brought about a controversy on the floor between Senators Wheeler (D), Mont., and Couzens (R), Mich.

Senator Wheeler said this was "buying off" the commissioner. Senator Couzens said it was the same as a "retainer fee" paid to a Senator when acting as an attorney.

Loew-Hearst Radio Hook-Up Called Off

Loew's is understood out of the radio network hookup with Hearst, although retaining a Hearst alliance over WHN, New York, which station is Loew-controlled.

Its legal department talked Loew's out of the proposed network when finding that the wire line charges for the network would come too high and that the linked stations refused to underwrite the tolls.

Paramount's proposal for an ether hookup with Columbia Broadcasting System also had much to do with this change of plans.

Listen-in Charge

Washington, Feb. 7.

With a $10 fee for membership from the listeners the "China Broadcasting Association" is being formed, reports the American trade commissioner at Shanghai to the Department of Commerce.

Purpose of the fee is to pay for programs and the rental of a station for certain hours weekly. This to improve the standard of broadcast programs in China.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION IS BRINGING OUT RADIO OPPOSISH

Columbia and N. B. C. Will Send Out K. C. Proceedings in June—Columbia Getting Edge in Boston—Columbia's Net Now 17 Stations

Kansas City, Feb. 7.

Looks like the Columbia Broadcasting System is out to give the National Broadcasting Co. stiff competition. Both chains will radiocast the Republican Convention from Kansas City in June. It will be an announcer-for-announcer set-to for the purpose of commanding the most attention.

This will be the first time announcers have been thus brought to the fore with so much national prominence in view of the political aspect of the broadcast theme.

The Columbia chain has KMBC (Midland Broadcasting Co.) on its network, giving it 17 stations, as against the NBC's elastic 14 to 28, or more for extraordinary ether events.

Columbia in selling its "time" will not add anything to the advertiser because of the additional station.

Morning Ballyhoos

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, former U. S. Senator from New York, is said to be getting $25,000 a year for his Monday morning radio ballyhoo for endorsed pure food products. The Royal S. Copeland Hour on WJZ is underwritten by a food trade industry combination which pays for the facilities, radio "time" and Dr. Copeland to plug themselves.

Dr. Alfred W. McCann via WOR is doing a similar stunt.

The a. m. radio spiels go great with the housewives and have proved their commercial value, it is claimed. The Radio Household Institute, contracted for by Young & Rubicam for WEAF, intermittently exploits baking powders, cooking spices and essentials, etc. The Betty Crocker Home Service Co., plugging the Washburn-Crosby Co., manufacturers of Gold Medal Flour, is another etherized household sales talk.

Another Broadcasting Stills

Close on the heels of Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson's demonstration of broadcasting still photographs by radio, utilizing the National Broadcasting Co. facilities, WOR performed a similar stunt with a Cooley Ray-Foto receiving apparatus.

This photographic transmitter via radio through the ether is the invention of Austin G. Cooley. While the tests were similar to Dr. Alexanderson's, the apparatus differs, excepting that the average radio set can be used in either case.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, chairman of the board of engineers of the General Electric Co., at whose home, 450 West End avenue (82d street), the WEAF tests were received, was situated 25 miles from the Bellmore (L. I). broadcast central of WEAF. The WOR tests were received in Queens Village, at a distance of approximately the same mileage.

DeForest's Tube Decision Against R.C.A. and Others

The De Forest Radio Corp.'s legal victory by injunction against the Radio Corp. of America, and others, handed down Monday in Wilmington (Del.) Federal court, is expected to show a strong stock market reaction for De Forest. The curb stock has been a "tip" of several weeks' standing on the strength of the outcome of the litigation. It was up to 3¾ Tuesday morning.

The R. C. A. is enjoined from enforcing its agreement with the General Electric Co., Westinghouse Co. and about 25 other corporations in which the R. C. A. prohibits those whom it licenses from using, buying or selling any radio tube but those made by the Radio Corporation of America.

The court ruling is that this arrangement would give the R. C. A. a monopoly on the tube industry, and is a violation of the Clayton and Sherman acts against restraint of trade.

With De Forest's products afforded an open market, the curb stock reaction was thus anticipated.

DISTANCE RADIO REVIEW

(ATLANTIC COAST TO CHICAGO)

By F. E. KENNY

(Variety's Correspondent at Mount Vernon, N. Y.)

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Feb. 4.

PWX, Havana, Cuba, shows great strength these nights and once in is staying in. Caught a hour's program from the Seville Biltmore played by Victor Rodiquez and orchestra, well selected presentation of latest American numbers. A corking good unit.

The Maytag feature, commercial, at WHT, Chicago, clicks. May and Tag, piano and vocal, offer a neat program advertising the machine company.

Wayne King and his orchestra handled things well at WQK, Chicago, Borden Brothers sang and gagged. Talk off and old.

WCSH, Portland, Me., strong, bringing the WEAF program. Also WWJ, Detroit. Likewise from the latter station the Hollywood frivolities, features at a local theatre, not badly handled.

Jack Denny's orchestra was in the good good style at the Mount Royal, Montreal, through CFCF last night.

WJAX, Jacksonville, Fla., through early with program by Gardner orchestra.

WEAF, Cincinnati, set to be ready on or about to start a 62-hour broadcast in celebration of its seventh birthday apparently. Picked up here frequently during the special presentation and thoroughly enjoyed.

Up at WBZ, Springfield, Mass., Ross' orchestra played "Sidewalks of New York" with vim.

WAIU, Columbus, and WGHP, Detroit, are trying a new stunt of broadcasting on the same wave at the same time, using a new plan to prevent interference. Quite successful when we picked it up and Columbus came through without a whistle, Columbia program. Also heard at WEAN, Providence, two points away on the dials.

Miles Haskell, vocal, summed well at KMOX, St. Louis, and WSM, Nashville, was filling in with records at the same time.

A Musical Night Club is being used at WSAI, Cincinnati, for something a little different, with the Reuter-Tag orchestra furnishing the music.

Waddie Wadsworth, Terrace Gardens, Chicago, makes a specialty of playing ballad comedy numbers from WBBM, a feature introduced by that station as a novelty in the broadcasting line. Wadsworth has a good hand.

CONTINUOUS RADIO

Early a. m. dance music from the small outlying New Jersey stations permits for a constant marathon of radio entertainment from 6:45 in the morning until after midnight. It is possible at the present schedule to tune in every hour and half-hour, so that something comes through the air from sunrise to long past the witching hour.

Earliest of the jazz purveyors is the I. R. Nelson Co., radio dealers, station, WAAM, Newark, N. J., which offers an hour of dance music from 7 to 8 a. m. off phonograph records.

The 6:45 setting up exercises through WEAF and WOR precede WAAM by only 15 minutes, but for jazz, the Newark station has the record.

At 8 p. m. WEAF broadcasts a banjoine or charity talk; WODA, Paterson, has dance records broadcast 9 to 10; WGL, ditto, 10 to 11, followed by WAAT, Hotel Plaza, Jersey City, and WAAM, Union City, also with a "canned" dance program before noon.

Afternoon.

From noon the larger stations come on. The Woodside Radio Lake Copies' station, WWRL, Long Island City, is another early bird, but not consistently, splitting its time with several other stations by turns.

Many of the Federal Radio Commission WWRL broadcasts on a 199.9 metres, the lowest wavelength.

The same Jersey stations are forced to broadcast long after midnight through practically no "circulation" during the height of the evening's ether programs, the larger stations either drowning out everything or commanding the most attention on merit.

Must Mention Cans

The use of phonograph records is not prohibited where it is so announced. Federal Radio Commission recently ruled that the "canned" source must be mentioned. Heretofore the hinterland stations indiscriminately announced Paul Whiteman or George Olsen, creating comment as to how these artists could be in several places at the same time, much less play in Paterson or broadcast from such a small station.

The announcers further carried this duplicity to a degree where they addressed the pseudo-directors as Paul and George, and kept talking until the music was under way for camouflage. The scratch of the needle, which was amplified and possible detectable, lending the illusion the band cut in on the announcer played, and not vice versa.

INSIDE STUFF

ON MUSIC

Song Writer Yearns for Acting

It's not generally known that Walter O'Keefe, author of the DeSylva, Brown & Henderson novelty song hit, "Since Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," was formerly a South Bend "Tribune" columnist. He's also a Notre Dame alumnus. O'Keefe can write but has a stage yearn. O'Keefe has been around in the nite clubs singing his own novelty ditties.

Organist vs. M. C.

When masters of ceremonies write songs, it's kinda tough on the organist. Particularly when the master of ceremonies stands kinda high with the bosses and when the organist has been getting bux on the side for plugging songs for publishers. So now there's a bitter conflict on in Chicago between an organist and an M. C.

The M. C. demands that his songs be the only ones "plugged" and the organist sees a considerable cut in the accustomed side-money.

Freak Saxophonist

Phil Fabello, now bandmaster and presentation feature at Loew's 7th Avenue, New York, returned two weeks ago from South America with reports of a sensationally freak Portuguese saxophonist who hits three notes higher and two lower on his reed instrument than any other known saxophonist.

The Portuguese youngster's freak elasticity is the sensation of South America, and Fabello contemplates importing him north.

Spending $100,000 on Par's Organ School

At an estimated cost of $100,000 construction of the new Publix organ school to occupy the entire eighth floor of the Paramount building has been started. This school will ultimately be in charge of Jesse Crawford, who will only perform in the downstairs theatre for his solo specialty, and otherwise confine himself to the tutoring of new circuit organists.

The heavy investment is because of the necessary sound-proof qualities of the studios, to be equipped with several organs. It will also be used as a recording laboratory for Crawford's Victor recording and Krumgold's Okeh discs, both of which, particularly the former, are a great free ad for the theatre.

Publix is hungry for desirable organist material and is constantly on the alert for suitable prospects. Rival circuits and independent houses are regularly reviewed with this in view. Morris Press has charge of this division.

Copyright's 100 Percent Increase Bill by House

Washington, Feb. 7.

Yesterday the House passed the Vestal bill, increasing by 100 per cent present copyright fees.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where Mr. Vestal believes it will be as favorably acted upon.

Some opposition was voiced yesterday against the bill. Last session it was passed in the House, but did not reach the Senate.

Google Vs. Forster

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Barney Google, Spark Plug and the rest of the DeBeck comic family will appear this week in Judge Carpenter's branch of the Federal Court. They are to support the claim of their creator, Billy DeBeck, that in the publishing of "Horse Feathers," a popular song, the Forster Music publishers have infringed the copyrights of the King Features Syndicate.

Cue Sheets for Organists

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Hal E. Roach Studios with all of its pictures have been supplying musical effect cue sheets to the exchanges distributing them. These sheets in the past have been for orchestras only. Now at first run houses playing the pictures as well as at many houses which have no orchestras the same cue sheet is being made for the organists.

The Roach organization is the only one of the comedy concerns which scores its own pictures in this way.

Warings in Paris

One week before opening for Keith-Albee at the Palace, New York, Waring's Pennsylvanians engaged through the William Morris office to open in April at the Ambassadeurs, Paris.

K-A is paying the band considerably more than the figure first offered and without protection for an option.

The Pennsylvanians have played the Strand, across Times Square from the Palace, over and over.

Publix's Musical Dept. Now in 2 Divisions

Nathaniel Finston's musical department of Publix has been divided into sub-divisions, creating two new posts for Irvin Talbot and Boris Morros.

Talbot is no longer conducting the Paramount theatre house orchestra, succeeded by Adolphe Dumont, but is supervising all Publix house orchestras.

Boris Morros is the supervising executive of the Publix stage bands and their personality leaders and masters of ceremonies. Morros, first musical director with Balieff's original "Chauve Souris," won his spurs on merit, first as a house conductor, then as a unit maestro and later as a field scout for personality bandmen.

The organists' division continues in charge of Morris Press, chief assistant to Finston.

"The Tower of Fire"

Paris, Jan. 26.

It is not often the Paris Opera offers its habitues a novelty, but this national academy of music seems to have made an exception in presenting the 3-act lyrical drama "La Tour de Feu" by Sylvio Lazzari.

Score, inspired at time from Brittany folk lore, is somewhat mournful, yet quite appropriate to the triste story of the tragedy.

Yves is the lighthouse keeper (or the tower of fire as they dubbed it in those days), and has just married Nale.

Yann, pilot, is jealous and pays court to the bride, but Nale falls in love with a rich traveler, Don Jacintho, and consents to elope with him.

Yann is to carry them away in his smack, but warns the husband, who extinguishes the lights and the ship strikes the rocks with all aboard drowned.

Yves is mad with grief, sets fire to his tower and is burned to death.

Fanny Heldy is the unfaithful Nale, with G. Thill singing the role of Yves, and Claverie that of Yann. Marcel Journet is the tempter.

Ruhlmann conducts with authority.

There is a village-like ballet in the first act and the tempest in the third is by moving pictures on two screens with the scenic effect excellent.

NON-BREAKABLE DISC

The World Co. is marketing a celluloid composition phonograph record of the non-breakable quality.

Guy Robertson of "Lovely Lady" is making a recording for the new disc, featured by the recording artist's photograph super-imposed on its face.

PARKS AS U. A. ORGANIST

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Henry Francis Parks has been appointed first organist of the new local United Artists theatre. Parks was conductor of a musical department for the Chicago "Daily News." Articles on musical subjects by the organist have appeared in several national magazines.

Carlin One-Nighting

Bill Carlin and his orchestra closed at the Arcadia ballroom, Providence, and will barnstorm through Pennsy.

Arthur Spizzi is handling Carlin for vaude and pictures.

Popular Air Single

Little Jack Little, exclusive Columbia recording artist, is rated as the biggest radio "single" on the air, from WSAI, Cincinnati. Little is credited with a greater regular audience than any other single entertainer, through being centrally located and covering a wide radius.

Resents Organ Comment

Portland, Me., Feb. 7.

An article, printed on the "Evening News" theatrical page, has started a small-sized hornet's nest about the writer, who defined two classes of organists as: First, the "commen sense" organist, and second, the "squeaks and squawks and grunts and groans" organist.

The dramatic editor receives an anonymous reply, which savored of having been written by a local organist, recently imported, taking exception to the criticism against the organist who does nothing but sit at the console in the dark and finger the keys—no melody, but lots of wierd sounds.

The anonymous communication took a rap at "small town newspaper reporters who are instructed by their superiors" to write theatre reviews a certain way. This letter drew a reply from the d. a., and the odd part of it is that he revealed that he formerly had had actual experience in the management of theatres, saying hence he believed he knew enough about that business to speak authoritatively in his theatrical columns.

Beaut With Wallop

Milwaukee, Feb. 7.

Tennys Burdick, 20, model and winner of second prize in Universal's beauty contest here two years ago, may not make much of a housewife but she packs a powerful wallop.

This charge, coupled with others of similar nature, won an annulment of marriage for Roy Hessler, 19-year-old roadhouse orchestra member. Hessler got his annulment because he lied relative to his age on marrying Tennys two years ago.

According to Hessler's testimony, his wife became angry when he remonstrated with her over money matters and she clipped him on the chin with her right, knocking him out for several minutes.

$25,000 Band Trip

Albany, Feb. 7.

Some idea of the expense involved in operating a big band of the Sousa type can be gained from the fact that it would cost $25,000 to take the prize-winning band of the New York State Department of the American Legion to Texas for the national convention at San Antonio.

The band is the Erie County Bugle, which was awarded first prize, after keen competition, at the State convention in Troy last year. Buffalo legislators are seeking to have the state defray the expense of the trip to San Antonio and have introduced a bill for this purpose. Its passage is problematical.

"BOHEMIA" FOR REMICK

W. C. Pollas, the arranger, has turned over his "Bohemia," composed by himself and Phil Ponce, to Remick's.

Pollas worked the same stunt as with his "Dancing Tambourine," now a Harms publication, publishing and exploiting the tune on his own and thus creating a demand for it.

FILM SCORING BOOK

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld is placing his film music scoring knowledge between covers for publication in book form by the Robbins Music Corp.

Abel Green (Variety) will collaborate as ghost author.

"Music for the Motion Picture" is the title.

Mrs. Davis Hostess

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.

Pierre Monteux, the French conductor here to direct the final concerts of the Philadelphia symphony, is, with Mme. Monteux, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis.

Mme. Monteux is the sister of Mrs. Davis.

Studio Adds Orchestra

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

Radio station KFRC (San Francisco "Call") has added an eight-piece orchestra under direction of Frank Moss to its studio staff.

Average Organist Needs Coaching; Big Demand for Specialists

The need for presentation organists rivals the demand for suitable masters of ceremonies in front of stage bands. Like the average musicianly orchestra leader who cannot qualify as a personality maestro and introducer, the console artists are not always satisfactory soloists for presentation numbers with song slides, etc.

While rehearsing by themselves at the house organ before and after theatre hours is a help, the average organist cannot get away from the fact he or she needs coaching on showmanship. Whatever the trick is, be it in the "glissandos" of the console technique, or the knack of proper song interpretation, which includes shifting tempos to hold the interest, the average organist needs the aid of a seasoned mentor.

Publix and Stanley are two circuits ever on the alert for suitable organ specialists. Publix has Morris Press, associated with Nat Finston, in charge of new recruits. Jesse Crawford was to have taken control of a Publix organ school to further this purpose.

In Boston, Del Castillo, who built a rep for himself at Loew's State there, resigned all theatre work and cannot find time to accommodate his present pupils at the Castillo School for the Organ. Castillo has a waiting list of scores of would-be pupils.

In New York, Lew White, the chief organist of the Roxy, has just opened a similar institution with three Kimballs installed.

No other branch of the presentation theatre business has created a greater demand for specialized musical talent than the organists who have proved themselves unquestionable drawing cards.

Sam Katz is particularly known for his favorable opinion regarding the organ and builds or acquires new houses with the organ among the first thoughts.

Ken Whitner Replaces Art Landry in Dallas

Dallas, Feb. 7.

Art Landry, who replaced Lou Forbes at the Palace (Publix) as stage band leader and m. c., is leaving after two and a half months, replaced by Ken Whitner.

Whitner, who has been touring Loew's eastern houses with Irene Swor and her dance act, closes at Pittsburgh, Feb. 11. He opens here at the Palace, Feb. 18.

Landry will go back to New York to do some more recording for Victor.

The policy of the Palace during Forbes' regime was to feature the stage band director as a drawing card. At present, he acts merely, more or less, as a master of ceremonies.

Sigmund Boguslawski remains in the Palace pit as musical director for the house.

Kahn's 4-Week Claim

Art Kahn, who closed at the Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y., after four weeks, is seeking to recover an additional four weeks' salary through the American Federation of Musicians from the picture house. Kahn is proceeding on a minimum eight weeks' contract at $600 a week as master of ceremonies of the Brooklyn Strand.

Tempermental differences between the m. c. and Edward L. Hyman, the house manager, resulted in Kahn leaving prematurely.

Pat Casey is arbitrating the claim.

M. C.'s Alternating

Omaha, Feb. 7.

Jimmy Ellard leaves the Riviera after three months as m. c. He returns under a new plan in which he and Paul Spor will alternate here and at the Capitol, Des Moines. Ellard came h[illegible] from the Capitol. They will shift every 12 weeks.

Bargy Replaces Perella

Lured away by concert offers guaranteeing him $1,000 a week, Harry Perella, first pianist with Paul Whiteman's orchestra, is leaving.

Roy Bargy, erstwhile band leader, joins Whiteman in Perella's place. Bargy is a recording pianist of prominence.

Abram W. Lansing Dies

Abram W. Lansing, organist, pianist and orchestra leader and instructor, died at his home at Cohoes, N. Y., Jan. 26.

He was stricken with apoplexy while playing the organ at the Albany Masonic temple the week before.

NEW LEADER AND ORGANIST

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

Will Prior, musical director on tour with "Ben-Hur," film, in Australia, is conducting the orchestra at Grauman's Chinese. He succeeds Arthur Kay.

Also a new organist for the house is Wells Hively, who replaces Will Davis.

HAROLD LEONARD, M. C.

Harold Leonard has gone Publix as a m. c. and band leader. He left the 54th St. Club last week to visit his home in Chicago prior to the picture house proposition.

Ask Extra Royalties on Music Roll Lyrics

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 7.

A complaint charging infringement of copyright was filed against 18 Milwaukee and one Racine music companies, in the federal district court here.

The action, brought by the American Society of Composers and Publishers, charges that the music companies manufactured and sold player piano rolls upon which were printed the words of songs written by members of the society. Each of the defendants is cited for five infractions with damages of $250 and an injunction asked in each charge.

According to attorneys for the composers' society, the suit will be a test case to determine whether manufacturers of player piano rolls can print the words to copyrighted songs on their product without paying additional royalty or if they are required to pay separate royalty and obtain special permission for this printing. If the composers are upheld, the complaint sets forth that they will demand an accounting on all player piano rolls made and sold thus far.

The owners of the copyright contend that regardless of whether royalty is paid on the music, if the makers of rolls desire to print the words on the strip they must make an additional contract. In other words, payment of royalty to play the music does not carry with it the right to print and use the words.

4 Chinese Eating Places On B'way Radio Bands

Paul Specht and his orchestra succeed Jimmy Carr Feb. 15 at the Jardin Royal, on Broadway.

Specht may bring in a WJZ radio wire instead of the present WOR broadcasting outlet which Carr employed.

Four Chinese restaurants on Broadway are now featuring their bands and radio, among others including Rolfe at Palais d'Or, Al Friedman at Yeong's (WJZ) and Nat Martin at Chimaland.

Specht is in at $1,800 a week.

Sunday Concert Out

Washington, Feb. 7.

Leon Brusiloff, formerly conducting the Columbia (Loew pcts.) orchestra but more recently associate conductor at the New Fox, has succeeded Adolphe Kornspan as director of the latter orchestra.

Leaving of Kornspan, who was transferred here from the Fox in Philadelphia, also marks the discontinuance of the Sunday concerts of the 40-piece symphony which have been broadcast through WRC.

BAYHA QUITS FLA.

Charles Bayha, after three years' retirement from the music business as a Florida realtor, is back in the field with Jack Mills, in charge of exploitation and orchestra departments.

Bayha was an executive with Shapiro-Bernstein before leaving for Florida.

Russ Morgan at Brooklyn Strand

Russ Morgan is slated for the Brooklyn Strand as m. c. and leader of the regular house orchestra.

BLANKET RAID COVERS CHI CAFES WITH NO SEARCH WARRANTS USED

Report Action Is Start of Political Campaign—Cafe Owners Decry Hotels Untouched—Padlock Proceedings on Sites Totaling $6,000,000 in Realty

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Chicago cafes were raided about 1:30 Sunday morning in a blanket raid covering practically every cafe in the city. The affair had political earmarks and included the largest cafes in and out of the loop. Among the better known victims were the Blackhawk, Alamo, Samovar, Rainbow Gardens, Jeffrey Tavern, Parody Club, Hollywood Barn, Midnight Frolics, Ansonia, Rendezvous and the Chez Pierre.

For the first time in the history of local prohibition enforcement no search warrants were used, and every guest that had a highball glass, ice, ginger ale or charged waters at their tables were given the once over. Names and addresses were taken and verified before the people were permitted to leave.

It is understood the hip-carriers will not be prosecuted, but that they will be required to testify that they purchased drink accessories at the cafes. About 75 percent of the cafes included in the raid were absolutely in the clear. No booze on the premises and known by patrons to be straight-laced "non-sellers."

Places affected by the raid would probably total to a net realty value of close to $6,000,000 and their combined rentals should aggregate about $400,000 annually. Padlock proceedings are to be instituted immediately against all when there is evidence of violation.

Political Angle

Proprietors of the cafes charge favoritism, inasmuch as not one hotel dining room, or cafe operating in a hotel, was included in the early morning raid.

Mann's Rainbo Gardens involves $2,000,000 in buildings alone. It is here that Jai Lal is played in an adjoining building, the Rainbow Fronton. The cafe seats 2,000 and has dancing accommodations for 1,500. It is probably the largest cafe in America conducted strictly on a dine and dance basis.

It is said by those reputed to be on the inside, that this is simply a beginning of a presidential and senatorial fight for control of Illinois. The government is also interested in ferreting out gangland's hand in connection with the cafe business. It is further stated that the government has 20 men from the Department of Justice investigating the beer and rum traffic, bombing, blackmailing and labor racketeers.

Cafe owners will unite to combat the Federal padlock proceedings. In combining to fight, the cabaret men have selected Fred Mann, of the Rainbo Gardens, to head the defense committee and the legal force is now being selected. Mann, it will be remembered, was the leader in a movement to organize a protective council of Chicago cafe owners. The move was unsuccessful, however, and the newly planned body is endeavoring to expedite organization "now that the horse is stolen." Fred Mann, at present in Florida, will return immediately.

Squads which visited the Blackhawk and the Midnight Frolics reported that no liquor had been found on the premises. In a statement issued to the press, Pierre Nuyttens, part owner of the Chez-Pierre, said "Everyone knows that we never sold a drop of liquor. There's nothing we can do except wait for what's coming."

A new show opened at Madrid Cafe, Philadelphia, Feb. 6, booked by Sam E. Collins.

Entertainers will be Chic Barrymore, Cliff O'Rourke, Velos and Yelando, Jean Wallins, Peggy O'Neill, Ann Woods and Joe Candullo's Orchestra.

BILL BARNES' ROAD HOUSE

Bill Barnes has taken over and is now running the Blossom Heath Inn on the Merrick road, at Lynbrook, L. I.

Some years ago Barnes conducted the Pre-Catalan cabaret on West 38th street, then a more favorite place with college students, especially of Princeton, than Jack's.

BLACK AND TAN MELEE; THREE PEOPLE SHOT

Cotton Club of Minneapolis Holds Bad Row—2 Policemen Injured—Many Arrests

Minneapolis, Feb. 7.

As a result of a shooting affray in the Cotton Club cafe, local black-and-tan frequented by whites and negroes, and following receipt of complaints against other places, the city council license committee here has started an investigation of all Minneapolis night clubs.

Revocation of licenses is threatened in cases where "looseness" among patrons is permitted and where questionable characters are allowed to congregate.

Two policemen and one patron were wounded in the Cotton Club scrape. One of the policeman is

LE PARADIS

(WASHINGTON)

Washington, Feb. 2.

This Meyer Davis dancing and eating place ranks almost as a Washington institution. It has stood up while competition has come and gone.

Many of the regulars say there is nothing like it in Manhattan for real charm and actual outlay in cash. Every season some change is made in the general layout. That keeps everything bright and new. This is supervised by Mrs. Meyer Davis.

At the present time all business, day and night, is going through a slump heresbouts. Davis is feeling it, naturally, but instead of letting down he goes out to get 'em.

A floor show and the return to the original, instrumentation of Davis' Le Paradis orchestra starting. Nathan Brusiloff is directing, succeeding Milton Davis (no relation to his former boss) and the band is now one of the sweetest hereabouts. For the waltz series, two-a-night, Brusiloff goes in heavy for careful playing and much subdued quality. For the pop stuff all is bright with excellent rhythm, special arrangements in the main and of the general brand that makes the customers want to dance.

Phelps Twins, Al White (not Al B.) and Margaret McKenzie constitute the imported entertainers. All are class and clicking. Each week another set of three acts is scheduled.

Food is always excellent, and though at the present time attempt is being made to padlock the place for serving cracked ice with ginger ale, Davis has never sold anything. The publicity is naturally bad, but he is not running into the red.

COLLEGE INN

(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Feb. 1.

The College Inn, downstairs in the Sherman, has blossomed out with almost a cabaret show. Line-up includes Bee Palmer, Ted and Betty Healy ("Night in Spain"), Al Segal and Eddie Smith's Alabamians, four-piece colored orchestra. For regular dance music there's the Maurice Sherman All Star College Inn orchestra of 12.

Ted Healy is m. c. Considering the inn gets all the good-time Charlies from in and out of town, it's a revelation to watch Ted keep enthusiasts under control. He is distributing a mixture of gagging, clowning, dancing and table-talk, at all times himself and a good comedian at that.

Bee Palmer, now billed as the Bernhardt of song, is singing special numbers backed by the Alabamians with Segal at the piano. She finishes with a condensed composite of Charleston, blackbottom and shimmy, always her forte.

That "Bernhardt of Song" billing! Speaking of other things with the same idea, when Betty Healy comes out for crossfire with Ted, she informs she can sing and dance equally as well. Ted suggests she tell a story, and hearing a few suggests singing as an alternative. Finally, he suggests dancing as a last resort. Bee Palmer likewise is a good dancer.

Healy has a straight man from "Spain," working fast, short and snappy gagging and cashing in on it extensively. New York would like it even more, with Healy made-to-order for any Broadway pleasure joint. His flip stuff caught on here surprisingly well.

The show is closed by Surway and Norway, speedy dance team well suited for cafe work. Norway does one of the fastest spins ever accomplished on a dance floor with his partner's rigid body held above him by her legs and neck.

Maurie Sherman, whose previous orchestras have been so-so, now has a line-up ranking with the best in the country. Six of the men formerly were with Isham Jones, and the rest were culled from the local field as the best in their respective departments. The outfit specializes in hot music developed from a basically lowdown element of jazz. The trimmings have made it quite respectable (witness two pianos), but there remains a wicked rhythm. The band also has a heavy air following through regular broadcasting over WLS and is regarded extensively as the local air favorite. Maurie Sherman warbles the vocal bits in a mild way. Personnel: Carroll Martin, trombone; Herb Quigley, drums; George Mender, banjo; George Frewert and Ferdinand Steindel, pianos; Herman Reily, James Fallis, Joe Bulgel, reeds; Eddie Kooden, Vine Neff, trumpets; John Kuhn, tuba, and Maurie Sherman, director, fiddle.

College Inn is doing well with a $1 evening cover charge, going to $1.65 holidays. It's getting a heavy separate tea dance trade of gigolos and lonesome gals who pay 75 cents to meet inside.

CIGARET GIRL'S JAMS

Florence Smith, Discharged on Spite Charge, Rearrested for Bigamy

When Florence Smith, 25, 321 West 42d street, cigaret girl at the Maytime Club, 23 West 49th street, was arrested for burglary her troubles only began.

No sooner had Magistrate McQuade dismissed the burglary charge in West Side Court than Florence was again in custody on a bigamy charge. Florence was so flabbergasted when informed of it she fainted.

It was charged that on Feb. 22, last, she married Lawrence Druss, 3737 Warren street, Elmhurst, L. I., while still the wife of Sol Lowe, violinist, Hunter, Greene county, N. Y., without having obtained a divorce.

Immediately following the discharge of Florence, Detective Stepat, West 68th street station, went to the 42d street house, arresting her. Florence says the burglary charge was spite work on the part of Frank Seyfang, 321 West 42d street.

Despite this she was held in $1,500 bail for further hearing. The young woman had been living in Seyfang's apartment and decided to change apartments. When she went to get her clothes she found the door locked. She climbed through a window, and later Seyfang caused her arrest. Magistrate McQuade refused to entertain the complaint and dismissed the charge. Her arrest on the bigamy charge followed.

Dallas' Nite Club With No Opposish

Dallas, Feb. 9.

The latest in Dallas is a real cabaret, opened here by J. T. Brennan, former roadhouse operator, under the title of La Boheme. It's a second-story affair, at $1 couvert, with regular entertainment in cabaret fashion.

Jack Sullivan is m. c., with Mildred Holmes featured, together with a dancing team.

Bills changed each Saturday. Three performances nightly, beginning at 10 and ending after 12, with the place open from 8:30 to 2.

Maroney's "Bohemians," local six-piece jazz band, going over well.

Opening week drawing the money crowd of the city. Rainbow Gardens, only other night place near here, is 32 miles away, toward Ft. Worth and has a well established patronage. J. C. Martin owns it.

TOO MUCH WORK

Ben Bernie states his Club Intime (nite club) interferes too much with benefits and he's quitting the place to concentrate on the Hotel Roosevelt.

The relaying between the hostelry and the cafe nightly, plus deb dances and parties, is too tough for Bernie.

SPYING INVESTIGATORS GET OWNERS IN JAIL

Hotel Men Looked for Evidence Against Spider's Web Cafe —Trio of Sleuths Beaten

Chicago, Feb. 7.

Ted "Spider" Meyers and Frank Covellie, joint owners and proprietors of the Spider's Web cafe, night club in the basement of the Claridge, theatrical hotel, were sentenced last week by Judge Lyle at Grand Crossing court to serve a year and a day in jail and pay a fine of $300. The pair were found guilty of beating and kidnapping a Mrs. Betty Rubinstein, her husband, Harry Rubinstein, and his friend, Al Atkin.

Owners of the hotel had retained the Rubinsteins as private investigators to visit the night club and ascertain whether or not the club was permitting the sale of intoxicants to show people. The management of the hotel declares that the investigation was instigated with an eye to forcing the voiding of the lease on the hotel basement, held by the "Spider."

INSIDE STUFF—MUSIC

Fabello, who was the general musical director for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (Loew's) 18 picture houses in San Paolo, Brazil, introduced down there musical themes and scores to film accompaniment. Heretofore they played anything and everything for flicker musical motifs, with hybrid native and American jazz music, performed without any thought to propriety and conformance to the screen situations. As a result Fabello cleaned up in the wholesaling of musical scores to native musical conductors, who purchased Fabello's extensive libraries in huge lots.

Song Hit Despite Obstacles

George Gershwin's "The Man I Love," from the flop "Strike Up the Band" show, which Edgar Selwyn produced and folded up out-of-town, is catching on of its own accord by the dance orchestra, who are plugging it a-plenty. The excellence of the fox-trot prompted this spontaneous plugfest which has spread westward, and the song has reached the proportions where Gershwin asked Selwyn to release it for general use, or for another show.

Selwyn refused on the statement he contemplates reviving "Strike Up the Band" next season and wants the song intact.

Tito Schipa's Ballad

Helen Goodman, an unknown in songwriting, has engineered a classy feat in having Tito Schipa, operatic star, plug her waltz titled "You Only" in his coming concert tour.

This accomplishment is all the more surprising in music publishing circles because Schipa never before has sung pop stuff. He will use Miss Goodman's number as the exclusive ballad in his repertoire.

Statler as an Overlooker

One of those coincidental meetings occurred at the Miami Biltmore last week where Earl Carpenter and his orchestra are the features. George Olsen, vacationing with a Broadway gang in Florida, paid Carpenter a visit simultaneous with E. M. Statler, the hotel man, also being in the place.

Olsen asked Statler for whom he worked at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, whether he ever heard Carpenter's band before. Statler was surprised when told that Carpenter was a year at the Hotel Statler, in Buffalo, booked there by Olsen.

At the Paramount, New York, during Jesse Crawford's three-week absence in Chicago, the latter returning this week, Sigmund Krumgold was the relief console operator, built up for two weeks with a wow specialty for his blow-off week. This was to have included a special film illustrating on the screen how a "pedal cadenza" is played, referring to Krumgold's foot manipulation of the organ.

It was an opportunity that could have made Krumgold, who merited this featuring, when on the eve of his Saturday opening he was advised by his folks in Jersey City that his father was dying. Krumgold, pere, died the day of his son's scheduled featuring at the Paramount. It threw the program last week out of kelter, with Henry Murtagh impressed into service while he was hanging around doing nothing, pending his debut at the Capitol, New York, as feature organist.

Variety's review unwittingly credited Murtagh's performance to Krumgold, because of program billing.

Hotels Taking Publicity Angle

Taking its cue from the Hotel Pennsylvania, which now bills its dance orchestras as the Statler Pennsylvanians, the Hotel McAlpin's new dance band is identified as the McAlpineers. It opened Monday simultaneously with Ernie Golden, long the McAlpin's maestro, opening at the Knickerbocker Grill.

The Pennsy got tired of building up name bands only to have them walk out on them, after benefiting from the hotel affiliation and the attendant radio exploitation, and the McAlpin is similarly building up a name, so that no matter which band poses as the McAlpineers it won't make any difference.

The Pennsylvania is giving Johnny Johnson and his Statler Pennsylvanians equal billing, which the McAlpin is reserving only for its trade name. The fault may be a lack of personality.

Golden, after many years at the McAlpin, had a row with Arthur L. Lee, the managing director of the hotel, over salary increase, and accepted a proposition to control his own nite club.

Golden will radiocast thrice weekly via WOR. The opening festivities are on via WRNY. William Schmiedel is running the room for Golden.

COLUMBIA'S SHOWMEN

In line with Variety's plug for radio showmanship, the Columbia Broadcasting System states that it predicates its business existence on that very thing, and enumerates its permanent staff of radio showmen.

Columbia states it has a corps of experienced showmen, headed by Harry C. Browne, producing manager; Channing Collinge, libretist; Jacques Byrne, continuity writer; Major J. Andrew White, executive general manager and a veteran radio announcer; exclusive booking channel in the Arthur Judson Bureau; and a permanent 22-piece symphony and concert orchestra headed by Donald Voorhees, as well as a permanent operatic stock company.

Columbia builds its commercial hours weekly from this organization.

BLACK AND TAN MELEE

dying with bullet wounds in his abdomen. Despite a bullet wound in his leg, the less seriously injured of the policemen succeeded in arresting 30 patrons and employees.

The trouble started at 4 o'clock in the morning, after Jack Sacketer, white, attempted to flirt with Valencia Nay, one of the colored entertainers, known as "Shuffle Along," when she came to his table where he was seated with Joseph Becker, taxicab driver, whom he had engaged for the night.

A white "friend" of the girl resented Becker's familiarity and a fist fight ensued. Guns were drawn. After being beaten up, Becker left the place and returned later with the two policemen.

The policemen had been informed by Becker that there was "a mob with guns" in the club. As they entered they drew their own revolvers and commanded the patrons to line up to be searched for firearms. While one policeman began the search and another went to the phone to call the patrol wagon, a patron suddenly drew a revolver and opened fire on the officers.

In a second other pistols were drawn in the crowd and bullets filled the air. As the policemen returned the fire, screaming men and women scurried to cover. Despite their wounds, the policeman took control of the situation and rounded up everybody who had remained behind.

Society Accepts Theremin

air around an almost inconspicuous antenna, the professor produces musical sound of a sonorous vibrancy that rivals the beauty of the most resonant violin. What the professor lacks is musical skill, but since he is guided solely by the ear in the musical pitch to draw from the ether, his performance is well-nigh sensational. Were he a skilled musician, the effect might take the musical world by storm. A private exhibition at the Hotel Plaza a week preceding his initial public demonstration won him columns of space.

Gimmick Suspicion

Sigmund Spaeth read the carefully worded introductory, explaining Theremin's steps. This part of the ballyhoo became boresome after a while, but necessary to the best explanation and for the desirable scientific impressiveness. Otherwise it might be suspected a gimmick was in it, which suspicion still persisted with some, although the showmanly manner of the diffident and aesthetic appearing young man's presentation was generally impressive.

It thrilled the audience and pitched their interest to higher points with each succeeding number, once the concert proper got under way, opening with Schubert's "Ave Maria."

Prof. Theremin used Kurt Ruhrseitz as piano accompanist to his ether music.

At times the pitch was not as true as the musical sharps would have liked it, but that was secondary for the immediate purpose to the novelty of the etherized musical presentation.

Prof. Theremin's pupil, J. Goldberg, contributed several numbers, with as good and sometimes better technique than his master.

The volume and pitch are controlled by electrical apparatus and capable of throwing at a distance such as back of the orchestra floor, the sides, as well as from the stage.

Prof. Theremin uses both hands for the demonstrations, the right hand apparently giving quality to the tones, while the left hand produced the actual melody.

The character of the tone as demonstrated can become like that of strings, wood-winds, brass or reeds, as desired.

Theremin is being taken up by society as a fad. Brig.-Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt chucked a reception and dance at their 640 5th avenue hut in honor of the professor who demonstrated his stuff Wednesday night. It was the first private, non-scientific demonstration by the vodka Edison.

The underlying scheme of the professor's stunt is commercial. It is to sell the air-music thing to every home, with a notated set of rules on how to do it, same as the zither, pronounced without the "z."

Big House's Sole Organist

At the Keith-Albee Chester theatre, Bronx, N. Y. C., Eddie Schwartz is the sole organist at the huge instrument.

CARNIVAL MAN INFORMER FOR BOOZE COPS; COURT ON METHOD

Lee Benjamin Spotted Liquor Sites in Summer, Returning with Feds in Winter—Got $9 Daily and Expenses—Comm. Disapproves D. A.'s Tactics

Milwaukee, Feb. 7.

How a carnival concessionaire used his knowledge of the habits of show workers for "side cash" by turning stool pidgeon for over-zealous Wisconsin county prosecutors, was disclosed here last week in a hearing before U. S. Court Commissioner Harry L. Kellogg.

Lee Benjamin, who gave his occupation as carnival concessionaire and "special investigator," was called by the Government as a witness in the preliminary hearings of 27 Kenosha county roadhouses, cabaret and saloon keepers nabbed in a clean-up staged by the Kenosha authorities aided by the feds.

Benjamin testified that for eight years he has been a carnival man and for the past two years has worked the carnivals in the summer and then offered his services to the various county attorneys through Wisconsin and northern Michigan to spot booze joints, the places he had pegged while working the town with carnivals or fairs. His winter work consisted, he said, of hiring out to the counties, getting the dope on the booze peddlers and turning the info over to the feds.

Explaining how he got the dope on Kenosha county violators, Benjamin told the court he had gone into bars and asked proprietors if they wanted to buy "alchy." When told that none was needed he would ask for a drink "to compare the barkeeps supply with his." The drink served, he would sop it up with a syringe, or if the barkeep was watching too close, hold it in his mouth, go out and empty the booze into a small bottle which he later turned over to the authorities.

Benjamin's tactics were rapped by the commissioner, who said:

"While the evidence here is sufficient to prove probable cause and bind these defendants over to trial, I disapprove vigorously with the tactics employed by the Kenosha district attorney's agents."

Benjamin testified that he received $9 per day in addition to living expenses and cash to make his liquor buys.

Parks' Free Acts and "Gentlemen's" Agreement

Free acts will be in a minority next season in the amusement parks of northern New Jersey if last week's meeting of the park men can be taken as a harbinger.

The northern New Jersey park managers, who previously were pitted against each other in heated competition for outdoor patronage, met in Hackensack, N. J., and discussed the free act. At the wind up a "gentlemen's agreement" was reached wherein competitive park managers will not enlarge their free show program next season.

Last season Arcola Park, pitted as opposition to Palisades Park, increased its free act program to eight acts, with no results save the heavy expense in competition against the show at Palisades. Several other small parks plunged similarly on the free acts and all chopped later to two and three-act programs, upon finding the longer shows were not bringing them in.

Farmer Sues World Service for $10,000

Spencer, Ia., Feb. 7.

E. W. Zieman, farmer, has brought suit for $10,000 damages against the World Amusement Service Association, South Dakota corporation, for the death of his nine-year-old daughter, who was instantly killed the last day of the Clay County Fair last fall when a racing car plunged through the fence and struck her. The auto races were staged under an agreement with the fair association by which the two organizations shared in the gate receipts. The fair is not made a defendant to the action, but has been holding $2,795 of the amusement company's share of the receipts in anticipation of the suit.

WILD ANIMAL FARM FOR HAGENBECK HERE

Germany's High Tax Forces Circus Man to Change Market Plans

Hudson, N. H., Feb. 7.

Herr Hendrick Hagenbeck, circus magnate, of Hamburg, Germany, on a visit to his wild animal farm here, indicated a sweeping change by his company.

Rising overhead and tax on headquarters in Germany, from which many circus animals are sent to the United States, may result in the Hudson plant being greatly enlarged for reception of animals which will not pass through the headquarters in Germany.

H-W Circus Gets Break In Kan. Free Fair Tie-up

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 7.

One of the immediate results of the Hagenback-Wallace tieup with the Kansas free fair next fall was the elimination of all city license fees. City hall officials co-operating with the fair association, issued permission for a daily parade by the circus on downtown streets with no charge attached. The city water department also issued orders for free water connections.

"Blind" Ticket Prices

Minneapolis, Feb. 7.

A. G. ("Buzz") Bainbridge, veteran local stock impresario and former circus man, has evolved a novel ticket selling stunt for the three-ring indoor circus which he is running for the Shriners at the local auditorium the week of Feb. 13.

The several thousand members of the order and many of their friends are equipped with ticket books. The purchaser draws one or as many tickets as he desires from a book and pays for each ticket the amount specified on its back. The amounts run from 1c to 50c.

A chance to see a three-ring circus for 1c appeals to people who ordinarily would not be interested in buying circus tickets. The tickets are going fast and the show promises to be the most successful ever staged here by the Shriners.

CIRCUS QUESTIONNAIRES

Washington, Feb. 7.

Questionnaires have been sent by the Circus Fans' Association to 55 tented outfits as to their lot requirements. Purpose is for the membership to make survey and report back so that an incoming outfit will have all such data in advance.

Library of Congress has appointed an expert in the bibliography section to compile complete data on all writings in the library on the circus. Copies of this are to be circulated to newspapers, etc.

PARIMUTUEL BILL IN ALBANY

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 7.

Parimutuel betting on all race-tracks in the state would be permitted under a bill introduced in the legislature, by William Breitenbach, Democrat, of Brooklyn. It opens the way for the parimutuel machine by making it a misdemeanor for any person to make or record a bet or wager unless such a bet is made by the purchase of parimutuel shares or tickets issued by the corporation conducting the race meeting.

It provides meetings be limited to 30 days and requires racing associations to pay in advance a license fee of $6,000 for each racing day. The state would receive 10 per cent. of parimutuel sales.

LOMSKI WINS EVERY ROUND OVER McTIGUE

Battle of Four Bloody Eyes Keeps Fans on Edge—Kaplan Loses to Rosenbloom

By JACK PULASKI

Leo Lomski, of Seattle, whom they refer to as a prototype of the famed Stanley Ketchel, won another fight on his way to the light-heavyweight crown. He was about a 3 to 1 favorite over Mike McTigue at the Garden last Friday night and the odds were about right. He gave the veteran what is known as a shellacking.

It was a battle of four bloody eyes. Rarely has such a bout been staged in that respect. First, Lomski's left peeper went. He had entered the ring with a plaster on that spot. Suddenly Mike's port lamp spilled blood. Then his other eye became damaged, but this was evened up when Mike opened a cut on Leo's cheek under the right lamp.

Louis Magnolia, referee, went to both corners and peered into the damaged optics of both men. Louie is a fellow who stops fights when serious injury is threatened. Satisfied, he let the boys continue.

Leo the lion-hearted, tried his best to topple the old master. The bell saved Mike more than once it seemed. And it looked like Lomski copped all of the 10 rounds. Fans figured on Mike going out like he did against Mickey Walker in Chicago about a month ago. But the Irishman was under orders and he was sent in to stay. That was evident in the first round.

Lomski refused to let it go at that. He was continually trying to get out of Mike's embrace. Leo got tired late in the fight from his efforts in that direction and his tireless arm swinging. McTigue proved the better boxer but it was no use trying to tame a wild cat.

McTigue, one of the best bicycle riders that the ring ever knew when he wants to be, did not stay on the defense all the time. He bent his right on the Coast boy's map plenty. It was a problem whether Leo could take Mike's socks. He did and late in the milling when Mike landed on the button, Lomski crossed with his right like lightning. Mike didn't try it any more. They were saying after the fight that Mike was about through as far as the Garden is concerned. Maybe that's true, but doubtful because they like the old boy.

Maxie's Easy Win

The semi-final was another wow of a scrap. K. O. Phil Kaplan and Maxie Rosenbloom, old Harlem antagonists, again met with Maxie the winner—easily too. That was something of a surprise, because Kaplan has been showing plenty of stuff of late. Maxie outpointed him almost all the way.

Rosenbloom has not turned in so good an exhibition for some time. He let go with the right plenty and if some of those swings were not slaps it might have been a tougher night for Kaplan. Both men have ambitions for the middleweight title, and both are yet something of contenders.

PONIES' $2,853,969

Belmont Tops Tracks for Year With $784,859—Saratoga, $467,812

Albany, Feb. 7.

Galloping ponies drew $2,853,969.25 for the five racing associations in New York state last year, according to the racing commission. The commission estimates that there were approximately 1,000,000 paid admissions.

Belmont Park was far ahead on attendance, its receipts amounting to $784,859. Aqueduct was next with $606,326. Jamaica took in $533,-105.50; Saratoga, $467,812.70, and Empire City, $461,866.

The state receives no revenue from racing.

SINGER'S $334,892

financial announcement was a "gross breach of confidence."

In his letter to the "Star," Coppicus in giving the amount of the net earnings as $334,892, stated the amount resulted after deducting expenses for management, traveling, advertising, photographs, assisting artists, pianists, taxicabs and all the other items of expense for which a concert singer must make allowance.

To this net amount must be added, he says, Marion's income from her Metropolitan engagements and her royalties from the discs.

In his letter he also says: "On her recent tour the music critics of many cities suggested in their reports of the respective concerts that Miss Talley should retire for a year or two in order to study. I made the same suggestion to her."

In her wire to the "Star," Miss Talley added: "I cannot explain his actions in any way excepting that he must be angry because I threw him over for personal reasons and refused his many requests and pleas for renewals of his management contract. Seventy-three concerts in 1927 and more offered than I can handle this year after I return from Europe show what the public thinks."

Her mention of the European trip was the first confirmation that she was going abroad.

Miss Talley's rapid rise to stardom after her New York debut a few years ago was the talk of the musical world, and her premiere appearance in New York was given wide publicity.

Sam Kaplan, president of Local 306, M. P. O., was tendered a testimonial dinner Jan. 28. About 1,000 persons were present. Roxy acted as master of ceremonies.

OBITUARY

TED McNAMARA

Ted McNamara, 36, of the featured comedy film team., McNamara and Sammy Cohen (Fox), died Feb. 3 at the Ventura Hospital, Ventura, Cal., of pneumonia. He went to Wheeler's, Hot Springs, to treat a cold and was later moved to the hospital.

Four days before his death he completed work in "Why Sailors Go Wrong" for Fox. McNamara came to prominence through his work in "What Price Glory" (film), which won him a contract with Fox. He was playing in vaudeville when seen by Winnie Sheehan, who placed him in the "Glory" cast. From that time on he remained in pictures.

McNamara was an Australian, coming to the United States 20 years ago as a member of the Pollard Juvenile Opera Co. He was in "Battling Butler" for George Choos, and is survived by a wife and four-year-old daughter, living in New York.

THOMAS W. MUSGROVE

Thomas W. Musgrove, 40, noted international organist, died Jan. 13 in Montreal after a three weeks' illness.

Musgrove received his musical education at Trinity College and when a child was regarded as a phenomenon at the pianoforte. Prior to coming to the United States he had achieved a reputation in England, and at one time had been accompanist for Mme. Melba and other famous singers.

He had been connected with the Rivoli, New York, as organist prior to going to Montreal some years ago, where he first played at the Palace and later at the Midway theatre.

Funeral conducted in Montreal under the auspices of the Montreal Musicians' Protective Association.

His wife and a sister survive.

EVA C. LANCASTER

Eva Collins Lancaster, 43, died in Cooper Hospital, Camden, N. J., Jan. 31, following an operation.

Mrs. Lancaster was the wife of Tom Lancaster, manager, Queen theatre, Wilmington, Del., and was a niece of the late George Bunnell, owner, Hyperion theatre, New Haven, for many years.

Mrs. Lancaster was professionally known as a banjoist, having appeared in lyceum and vaudeville and then later turned her attention being the Rullman Ticket Agency. When Mr. Rullman died, Carl organized the Rullman Co., handling the librettos which were sold at the Met Grand Opera house.

LUCIE KIESELHAUSEN

Lucie Kieselhausen, charming dancer, was still in her prime when the terrible accident in Germany which caused her death overtook her. She was not a great technician but a delightful personality and registered her effects through the individuality of her work.

The dancer was cleaning gloves in the bathroom with a bottle of to organ playing. At the time of her death Mrs. Lancaster was organist at the Queen theatre, Wilmington.

JOHN W. CARL

John W. Carl, at one time an advance agent for the old Barnum & Bailey circus and later a ticket seller, died Feb. 2 in Polyclinic Hospital, New York.

Carl had been attached to a number of theatre ticket agencies, one gasoline when a burning gas flame ignited the fumes and caused a terrific explosion. Before help could reach her she was so severely burned as to be beyond medical aid.

MYRA REED

Mrs. Myra Reed, 50, at one time in vaudeville, was found dead, her body slumped in a chair in front of a stove in her home at Portland, Me., Jan. 30. Death was caused by heart disease.

Mrs. Reed was born in New Harbor, Me., but went to Portland 40 years ago, where she had made her home following her retirement from the stage.

Herbert Blood, 56, many years director of Burk & Blood's Orchestra, died recently in Rome, N. Y.

FOREST GEORGE WINANT

Forest George Winant, 36, legit actor, died suddenly at Hotel Alameda, Alameda, Calif., Jan. 30, while visiting his mother, Mrs. Charles T. Holman. Winant had but recently left the Alameda Sanatorium. He was a New Yorker by birth, and favorably known in legit circles. Burial was held in San Francisco.

Five companies and three singles at the Palace this week. No matter how you arrange a bill like that it can't get hot. And not a name in the lineup that can draw in Chicago.

First was Galetti, Kokin and an unbilled dancer who had an act featuring two monkeys. Monkeys get a few laughs, one doing a wooden soldier dance and being announced as the only dancing monkey. Okay as an opener.

Buster Shaver and his Tiny Town Follies followed in full. Shaver has five midgets in a song and dance revue that can score on novelty. You can't figure this for the deuce spot, though. It was followed by another in-full act "Yesterthoughts" featuring Reggy B. Merville with four men and two girls in support. After cleverly burlesquing modern pop radio concerts, the company changes to old-time costumes for more refined vocalisms. As a surprise finish, all double in brass on a few numbers, working as good instrumentally as they did vocally. Recommended for picture houses.

Ethel Davis, singing special songs, fourth as the first act in one and made a moderate impression. Nare Lockford Company closed the first half in great style with a dance revue that's a setup in picture houses. Lockford carries four girls, all with wow figures and none reluctant about showing 'em. Combined with Lockford's dancing these figures are legitimate reasons for giving the act feature spotting in any house.

Joe Browning, satirizing reformers in song and talk, had the comedy end practically to himself and took a few deserved encores. The house went nutty over his gag about the woman who had a theatre program attached to the back of her skirt reading: "This curtain goes up at 8:15 on the biggest show in town." Also they gobbled one about children looking more like their fathers since we have frigidaires. Browning's stuff is pretty racy but gets results.

Lily Morris, English comedienne, has not localized her material and most of it is alien to America. She does three comedy character numbers, thoroughly English, received with less enthusiasm than desired. With her numbers adapted somewhat to American credence Miss Morris would hit solidly. At it is, it's a halfway affair, with the act carrying along on her brilliant personality. She was featured at the Palace, next to closing.

Marie White and the Blue Slickers, novelty musical and dancing act, closed. Business about three quarters. Loop.

Business just fair at the Majestic's Sunday matinee. A group of standard small-timers kept the house in its customary position among loop attractions. Britt Wood, the Sutcliffe family, and the Jimmy Allard company, were the more meritorious offerings, with "The Gorilla" (F. N.) furnishing laughs and thrills from a cinema standpoint.

The Sutcliffe Family opened in kilts, dancing, tumbling and acro work neatly done. Conlin and Hamilton have a bad opening. A hard boiled dissertation on women, by a male speaker of no great strength, serves to introduce a piquant young lady who doffs her kicks and goes through some rhythmic dances, ending up with some toe work minus shoes. Occasional comments from the h. b. male are out of place during her dance. Both make attempts at singing that should be dispensed with. A duo dance or so that is fair. Archer and Belford, heavy straight mama and a comic tramp, have a bit of comedy involving the moving of a piano that neighbors will laugh at. Knox Comedy Four is a fair quartette for the same class of time.

Jimmy Allard Company do their stuff in a California type roadhouse, special scenery providing a nifty flash. Some comedy that is handled well enough centers about the two couples who are occupying private dining rooms at the inn. One felow has the other fellow's wife and vice versa. The waiter, a lad with a distinct southern accent, is the actor of the outfit. His sweetie, a cigarette girl, has a very fair voice. Britt Wood, gag man, mouth organ manipulator, and blessed with personality, manages for some real laughs and deserves 'em. Shuron DeVries revue is simply a flash and specialty skit for the small time, although a featured girl dancer does one number involving some contortionistic wrinkles, in a black and silver costume, that is A1. Loop.

An all-girl show was at the Belmont last week. It comprised 24 girls, two sister teams, one girls' orchestra, the ballet and a young woman who, acting as master of ceremonies, was a sensation.

Vera Post, attired in masculine full dress, silk topper and all, assumed the role of magician, as she gestured with her walking stick, causing the curtain to swing back and reveal a huge prop hat, with flights of stairs on either side. As the orchestra tuned in a galaxy of girls poured out of the hat, and down the steps to the stage. All pretty girls, too, in black and white costumes.

Of the specialties the first was Brooks and Rush (sister team), dancing, and that well. Shorr Sisters, a petite duo of voice, followed with some vocal material that was exemplary. Next were the Gibson Navigators, girl orchestra with a knowledge of music, attractive personnel and a sense of humor. The women were grouped on the steps leading from the brim of the hat, while the ballet went through some intricate steps.

Four girls in police uniforms appear and find four others, obviously hobos, asleep. The ballet cops escort the ballet "tramps" off stage, only to reappear with the "tramps" wearing prison stripes and attached to their guards by nickel-plated leg irons, which clink musically as the eight do a cleverly devised dancing bit.

Then the girl orchestra appears in sailor uniforms of silk, working in front of a drop depicting the deck of a yacht. The girls pep things up. Vera Post, m. of c., was the hit of the show. Off to rather a cold start, she walked away with the show. Her tap dancing, eccentric dancing, songs, character bits and general versatility carried her far. All her work was done in male attire.

Everything at the Belmont this week is A1 material for presentations. The entire show could move into picture houses and register effectively.

Business, d spite good show, was poor. Lack of attention to detail is obvious in the front of the house. No credits were given acts, no billings, no stage announcements. Loop.

Acts individually all right at the Tower the last half last week, but as assembled weren't impressive. Burt and Lehman, dispensing the only humor, were in next-to-closing with insufficient results. The gags are topical, some asking for applause rather than laughs. The straight foils pretty good and sings the customary ballad with clear pipes.

"Radiana," mystical novelty, held the feature position. Through electrical control the man in the act claims to make the hands on a dummy write, play piano and shave a gent. The dummy is a bust figure, resting on a glass case containing numerous colored lights and a load of machinery. The stuff was rated interesting, although received rather dubiously.

Ben Barton and his band (New Acts), closing, were actual headliners. Barton has 10 men, a girl fiddler and a girl dancer. He's a capable talker and directs his men well in a routine of pop orchestrations. The act is reliable for vaudeville and great for picture houses. Three Good Knights, novelty musical trio, had no luck with a few attempts at comedy, but got along on their unusualness. Joe St. Onge Trio, two men and girl on rings, opened. The tricks include a unique toe-to-toe catch after a double back somersault. "Wild Geese" (Tiffany) feature. Business climaxed at 8 p. m. Thursday with a two-thirds house. Loop.

Ben Tidwell, now with Premier booking office, represents George Bentley's St. Louis office.

Benson has placed Ferdinand Steindel's orchestra with the Bal Tabarin, Hotel Sherman, and Jack Chapman's Victor Recorders with the Hotel Stevens.

Billy Stoneham replaces Harry Hume as Chicago professional manager for Shapiro-Bernstein.

Ramola Remus, daughter of George Remus, who was acquitted of charges of murdering his wife and consigned to a psychopathic institution is playing several weeks of vaudeville in northern Ohio, booked by the United Bureau of Attractions, Chicago. Previously she was in a Chicago cafe.

Boris Petroff's "Leap Year Fancies," first Publix unit produced in the mid-west, started a 16-week tour at the Norshore this week.

Tex Austin here promoting the 1928 rodeo in Soldier's Field, conferring with Mayor Thompson and George Getz of the park board.

Balaban and Katz will open the ninth of their string of Chicago theatres early in October, upon the completion of construction work on the $3,000,000 Paradise. The Paradise construction job was started in 1926 for the National theatres, Lubliner and Trinz have just purchased it, and will complete the job. Balaban and Katz are to operate 4,500 seats.

Cornella Otis Skinner, appearing in a series of dramatic sketches at the Harris theatre, has been signed for an Australian tour by R. C. Gravestock, Australian impresario, early in May.

C. L. Carrell (Carrell agency) has a new department to handle club and fair bookings with Ray Feldman, formerly W. V. M. A., in charge of the new books.

An effort to settle the strike which has delayed the construction of the Fox theatre, at Grand and Washington boulevards, was made when A. M. Frumberg, attorney for William Fox; Henry Kiel and Bert Boas of the Boas-Kiel Con. Co., which has a greater part of the subcontracts, met with the building trades council at the Carpenters' hall.

Members of the International Bridge and Structural Steel Workers' union, representatives for Fox and sub-contractors had previously made a futile attempt to reach an agreement. Construction was delayed about three weeks ago when the strike was called. The meeting broke up at midnight. Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the building trades council, said the council took no action on the Fox plea, but would stand on its action when it hacked the striking iron workers.

Following changes reported Joe Owen opening theatre in Clarksville, Mo., Owen theatre in that city transferred to D. Middleton; Illmo, Mo., Opera House, transferred from John Dohogne to J. P. Lightner; Majestic, St. Louis, from Popular Amusement Co. (Charles Goldman), to A. T. Pappas; Swan theatre, Wickliffe, Ky., from C. B. Wickliffe to Gill Pace.

"The Beggar's Opera," as London revived it and as it was sung here in November, will be presented at the Odeon Feb. 10-11.

Effingham, Ill., a thriving little city on the St. Louis-to-Chicago highway, let the reformers know how they stood on the Sunday shows. Vote was 1,218 for and 600 against pictures on Sunday.

MORRISON HOTEL
CHICAGO

The Most Central Location in Town
Atop the Tallest Hotel in the World

CLOSE to the top of the gigantic Morrison Tower, and surrounded by the purest air ever breathed, the 40th and 41st floors are set apart entirely for theatrical guests. Out of earshot of street noises, you can sleep undisturbed until a late hour of the morning. You can also entertain your friends in perfect seclusion, secure against interruption.

1,944 Outside Rooms—Each With Bath

Rates, $2.50 Up

Every room is outside, with bath, running ice water, bed-head reading lamp and Servidor. The last named is particularly appreciated by professional guests. It completely prevents contact between patrons and hotel employees when laundry, shoes, etc., are sent out or returned.

Nearest Hotel to Downtown Theatres

The Morrison stands closer than any other hotel to theatres, stores, and railroad stations. Yet, at this central location, rooms are rented for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel. Store sub-rentals here are so valuable that they pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

The Terrace Garden and Boston Oyster House

At these two famous restaurants, the intimate, carefree atmosphere has won international celebrity. In the Terrace Garden the light, vivacious dance music and sparkling entertainments have made it a favorite rendezvous for lunch, dinner and after-theatre parties. The programs are broadcast from WBBM.

MILWAUKEE

Davidson—"Blossom Time."
Empress—German stock.
Gayety—Burlesque (Mutual).
Alhambra—"Wine."
Garden—"The Dove" (2d week).
Majestic — "Racing Romeo"-vaude.
Merrill—"Student Prince" (2d week).
Miller—"Red Raiders."
Palace—"The Harvester"-vaude.
Strand—"Serenade."
Wisconsin — "Rose of Golden West."

Frank Miller, former press agent, Davidson, is handling the program and signboard contract for the Milwaukee baseball team.

Fritz Fischer, director of the German stock Co., announced last week that he will keep the company intact and not disband, as previously announced. The German plays will be staged at the Empress (burlesque), now being reconditioned for the stock company. The German shows have been playing the Davidson for the past week.

The Shorewood (neighborhood) has gone into the stage band policy for two nights weekly. A local band, recently recruited, is furnishing the show and rotates to other neighborhoods other nights.

Police ordered the cashiers at the Majestic to stop selling tickets last Sunday night when the line outside the theatre threatened to overflow into the street. A local made kid movie caused the jam.

Emil R. Franke, manager Universal's State, has been transferred to the Venetian.

Oriental, one of the newest neighborhoods built for Saxe by M. L. Anneberg, formerly Hearst's circulation manager, and taken over in the Fox deal two weeks ago, is going to drop movies, according to semi-official reports emanating from headquarters.

The house is a 2,500 seater and Anneberg is collecting $75,000 per year rental on a 25-year lease. The house has not been making money since it opened. Stage shows, vaudeville and all manner of entertainment has been tried in addition to the movie bills. The house opened July 3, 1927, and cost around $1,000,000 to build and equip. It is in the "gold coast" neighborhood.

Doped dished out here has it that the house will play drama and concerts. It is said that Fox and Milwaukee officials have already begun negotiations to book in attractions other than pictures, and "The Beggars' Opera," originally slated for the Pabst, closed as unsafe, is scheduled for the Oriental March 5.

With the Davidson the only legit house and an old structure dating back to the '80's, the Oriental is seen as opposition with its big stage and the fact it is handy to the money people who live close by. Although about five miles from the downtown sector, the Oriental is on three street car lines, bringing it into easy access.

NEW ORLEANS

Tulane—"Able's Irish Rose."
St. Charles—"The Noose" (Saenger Players).
Crescent—Musco Italian Players.
Loew's State—"Latest From Paris"-vaude.
Saenger—"The Circus."
Orpheum—"East Side, West Side" and vaude.
Palace — "Yours to Command"-Danny Duncan musical.

"The Barker" is at the Tulane next week with Richard Bennett. Bennett in a curtain speech panned the southern public at Atlanta because of its neglect of legit attractions. Just a little flurry, but Richard is himself again.

While "The Noose" was turning them away at Loew's State last week, the St. Charles, where the stage version is being offered currently, distributed handbills to the people standing in line, reading: "You will see 'The Noose' in pictures this week. Compare it with the stage version at the St. Charles next week."

When the Silver Slipper night club burned to the ground last week Jules Bauduc and orchestra lost $3,600 worth of musical instruments. "Smilling" Henry Berman, formerly at the Slipper, is now master of ceremonies at the Victory Inn. George McQueen is the new floor master at the Little Club.

"Abie's Irish Rose" got over $12,000 at the Tulane last week at $1.50 top.

Flappers around are now referring to their sweethearts as "their thrill."

The Lyric, long the South's largest theatre catering to negroes, passes into the hands of the wreckers shortly. Colored people around New Orleans prefer to have their entertainment dispensed by white folks.

Chicago Civic Opera Co. appears at the Masonic Temple auditorium three days, beginning Feb. 16.

Detroit theatres are being checked to discover the whereabouts of Catherine Munro, 15-year-old high school student, who disappeared a week ago.

The noted Selden cabaret and eating place at 33 Selden avenue, went under the w. k. padlock at an official ceremony last week. The place was closed down after a raid in November. Proprietors are awaiting trial on prohibition violation charges.

The Robert Mantell-Genevieve Hamper Shakespeare rep follows "Lulu Belle" in the New Detroit Feb. 13 with "Merchant of Venice."

The population of Detroit, as estimated on July 1, 1927, is 1,745,788, according to figures released in the directory of R. L. Polk & Co., regarded as the foremost authority. This number exceeds the last U. S. counting by almost 200,000, but the government estimate did not include several suburbs encompassed by Polk's.

When enumerating population affected by Detroit theatres, the 50,000-odd inhabitants of Windsor, Can., across the river, should be included. The number of Windsorites attending Detroit theatres daily is large.

A close estimate places the colored population of Detroit proper at 50,000.

Film exchange managers now in Detroit are Jack Goldhar, U. A.; Frank Downey, M-G-M; Lester Sturm, Fox; Otto Boley, P-F-L; Fred North, First National; Ray Moon, Universal; Jim Allen, Warner Bros.; Oscar Hansen, Pathe; Art Elliott, FBO; Harlan Starr, Educational; Carl Shallette, Tiffany, and Al Bowman, Columbia.

With opening set for Sept. 1, 1928, work on the new Fox theatre is progressing. The house, seating 5,547, surpassed in size only by the Roxy, A 10-story office building is included in the project.

Among legits booked here is "Peggy Ann," now at the Selwyn, Chicago, due Feb. 19 at the Shubert, following the two-week stay of "Countess Maritza." The musical is getting a play in Chi and if business continues the local date may be set back.

The Lafayette has a trio of one-week stands dated. "The Jazz Singer" (Jessel), plays week Feb. 12, while "Excess Baggage" and "My Maryland" follow in order.

Police raided a stag party at 3230 Gratiot avenue after arresting Joseph Comella, 1537 E. Jefferson, on a charge of possessing indecent picture film. The cops relieved Comella of the pictures and gained entrance posing in his role. About $20 and a register went to the government when no one would admit proprietorship of the hall. Also three barrels of honest-to-goodness beer and a quantity of liquor.

Karl Hagenbeck, of the famous Hamburg, Germany, zoo, has been engaged to draw plans for the new Detroit city zoo, to be located at Ten Mile road and Woodward.

Supreme Court Justice Leon C. Rhodes denied a motion which would have granted a posthumus decree of absolute divorce to Emma Olga Harrington, actress, murdered mysteriously in New York some weeks ago. Counsel for Mrs. Harrington sought the final decree in Binghamton. Mrs. Harrington had won an interlocutory decree from Guy Harrington, stock leading man, who rewedded shortly after his wife's death.

Representatives for Shubert, Harris and Woods were in Utica last week to size up "Jealousy," new drama by Lincoln Osborn, given a tryout by the Myrkle-Harder Players at the Majestic.

The lights didn't work when Boar's Head Dramatic society of Syracuse University produced "The Changelings" at the Regent theatre last week. The foodlights failed as the curtain went up for the first act, and the student cast played the act in semi-darkness.

Tom Linton is producing the "Utica Follies," with 30 Utica girls next week at the State, Utica, in conjunction with the regular combination bill.

The Lyceum, Ithaca's oldest theatre, will increase its seating capacity 1,400 and be converted into a picture house.

Winifred Anglin will be in the Wilcoxian opposition company at the Temple this season. In private life Miss Anglin is the wife of Dewitt Newing Wilcox's former partner, who will operate the Temple. Newing has also signed Jim McHugh, who has been playing in "Broadway" this season. The Temple's new juvenile will be Gilbert Squarey of the Jacques stock, Waterbury.

Lyceum turned to the movie field again with "Wings" this week.

Canandaigua preachers plan an organized protest, it is understood, against contemplated action of the Common Council in abiding by decision of a referendum, when Sunday movies were favored by a majority of 19 votes in 2,404 cast. Sponsors of the Sunday films say the council ordered the referendum and is bound to abide by the result.

Raymond Kelly, 18, Hornell high school lad, tried to qualify as a "pusher-in-the-face," according to Viola Gregory, usher at a theatre there. She says he pushed her down a flight of stairs Jan. 22 when she remonstrated with him for his actions in the balcony. Next time he came to the theatre, she had him arrested and he will face trial Feb. 11 for assault, third degree.

The Corinthian, recently abandoned when the Mutual moved over to the Gayety, was used for the Yiddish opera, "The Rabbi of Caucasia" last week.

Nikitas D. Dipson (Batavia) and John R. Osborne, officers and directors of some half-dozen theatre corporations, have organized the Vendome Theatre Corporation, with 1,000 shares of no-par stock. They plan to take over a number of upstate houses.

The old Liberty Theatre building in Corning, wrecked by fire December 2, 1924, must come down, Building Inspector J. W. McCarthy has ordered. The ruins constitute a menace to public safety, he told the Schine Theatrical Enterprises.

ATLANTA

Erlanger—"Rose-Marie" (road show).
Howard—"The Circus" (film) and Publix unit, "Jazz a la Carte."
Capitol—"Finders Keepers" and five acts Pantages.
Loew's—"Man, Woman and Sin" and five acts, Loew.
Keith's Georgia—"The Night Flyer" and five acts, Keith.
Metropolitan—"Women's Wares."
Rialto—"Grandma's Boy."

The operas selected for Metropolitan Opera company here April 23-28 are "L'Africaine," "The Barber of Seville," "Hansel and Gretel," "Pagliacci," "Die Walkure," "Norma," "Carmen" and "La Bohema."

First string Met singers include Rosa Ponselle, Galli-Curci, Bori, Martinelli, Tibbett, Easton, Grace Moore (the Tennessee phenom), Gigli and Scotti.

The week of Metropolitan opera in Atlanta is the biggest entertainment event of the year and draws patronage from all the southern states.

MONTREAL

In spite of pictures a long way better than anything showing the first months of last year, the slump in theatrical business here takes a lot of lifting. "Beau Geste," "Ben-Hur" and "The Circus" should command attention but they took only around $50,000 between them.

Unemployment here has been bad this year and is not getting any better until the opening of navigation in April. Although very heavy tourist traffic has crowded the hotels to turning-away point, this does not quite make up for the drop in local patronage.

Six hundred thousand cars will use the highways of the province of Quebec the coming season, according to the provincial motor car conference held this week in Quebec City. In 1927 there were 330,000 United States cars using Quebec highroads; this year the estimate is for 400,000. They are expected to leave around $50,000,000 of Uncle Sam's money in the province.

Robert B. Mantell in Shakespeare rep at the Nixon last week did the largest week's business ever done by Mantell in Pittsburgh in many years. The business was capacity every show and that included the gallery. The gross was $21,553.

Ziegfeld "Follies" cancelled and Manager Brown of the Nixon replaced it with George C. Tyler's star revival, "Diplomacy."

Thurston did his usual master trick of filling the Pitt theatre three weeks.

Molly O'Day got the biggest break on the screen here, appearing in three pictures within two weeks—at the Grand in "Shepherd of the Hills" and "Patent Leather Kid," and at the Aldine in "Lawful Larceny," starring her and her sister, Sally O'Neil.

Belasco (Shubert)—"Broadway" (Joe Harris); next, "The Letter."
National (Rapley-Erlanger)—"Diplomacy" (Tyler all-star revival).
Poli's (Shubert) — "Student Prince" (Shubert).
Keith's—Vaudeville.
Gayety (United burlesque) — "French Models of 1928."
Pictures
Columbia — "Last Command"; next, "The Circus."
Earle—"Love Mart" and presentation; next, "The Gorilla."
Fox—"Old San Francisco" and presentation.
Little — "Merry-Go-Round" and Chaplin's "Easy Street."
Metropolitan—"Jazz Singer" (return); next, "Helen of Troy."
Palace—"Two Flaming Youths" and presentation; next, "The Dove."
Rialto—"The Spotlight" and presentation; next, "Hero for a Night."

Wesley Eddy is back on the job as permanent master of ceremonies at the Palace with a new two-year contract with the Loew organization.

Rialto is doing a condensed version of George M. Cohan's "Mary" as stage presentation.

Fox is introducing a new effect locally by using a loud speaker to announce various acts in its presentation. Innovation received favorable reaction in the dailies.

Joe Bombrest is the first of the local orchestra leaders to announce the next summer contract. He is to go to Chesapeake Beach.

Reports of a new legit house in the uptown section on Connecticut avenue are persistent. Shuberts are said not to be connected with the venture though Poli's, now leased for a net figure of $5,000 annually from the government, is to be torn down shortly in the new plan for official buildings.

City Central Corp., a Boston company with many holdings here, is said to have been approached to finance the new house.

New policy at Meyer Davis' Le Paradis with the imported floor show of three acts and a master of ceremonies is proving a business builder.

"Times" (Hearst afternoon daily) has increased, without advance notice, its dramatic rate from 35 cents a line to 38½ cents a line.

BUFFALO

Great Lakes—"The Jazz Singer" (second week).
Loew's—"The Divine Woman."
Lafayette—"The Devil Dancer."
Gayety—"Nite Hawks."
Court Street (stock)—"The Midnight Rose."

A bill providing for admission to picture theatres during afternoon performances of children between the ages of 10 and 16, providing the films have been approved by the State Licensing Bureau and marked by them "for family use," will be introduced into the State Senate at Albany by Senator Charles Freiberg of Buffalo.

Payment of $200 damages and $138.50 costs by the defendant was ordered by the Federal District Court here in suit between Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., Inc., vs. Winthrop's Rendez-Vous, a local dance hall. A similar order assessing the same damages was awarded to Leo Feist, Inc., against Oscar Larson of Greenhurst, Chautauqua County, near here.

At the same time four suits were filed by publishing companies in Federal Court this week alleging copyright infringements.

Three legitimate attractions which played the Shubert-Teck this season were among the current film offerings at local moving picture houses here last week. The plays were "The Student Prince," "The Jazz Singer" and "The Noose."

Herbert M. Addison, manager of Fox's Great Lakes, was elected president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association here this week, succeeding Al Beckerich, former manager of Loew's. Other officers elected were William E. Saxton of Loew's, vice-president, and William W. Bradley of the Elmwood, secretary and treasurer. The board of managers is composed of Jules Michaels, Regent, chairman; Robert L. McNabb, Teck; Vincent R. McFaul, Buffalo; William H. Raynor, Lafayette; Robert V. Murphy, Kensington, and Roy E. Van, Gayety.

Apollo—"Paris."
Stanley—"Home Made."
Virginia—"The Gorilla."
Earle—"Wolf Fangs"-vaude.
Colonial—"Forbidden Woman."
Strand—"Love."
Capitol—"Ben-Hur."
City Square—"The Red Raiders."
Globe—"The Firefly."

"It is rumored that United Burlesque had been dickering for the City Square theatre. It would be a good bet for them, as the house is right in the center of the resort, but the chances are nil, as the theatre comes under the jurisdiction of the Stanley company. Property has been sold to a large department store concern here and is now on a rental basis.

William L. Clendenning, an employee of the Palace theatre, was seriously scalded last week when a valve blew off the hot-water heater as he was banking the fire for the night.

Three premieres in a row for the Apollo, with Irene Bordoni in "Paris" making its bow this week, followed by David Belasco's "The Bachelor Father" and "The Wrecker," the latter an English mystery drama, to be presented by Guy Bates Post.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

By JO ABRAMSON

Majestic—"The Letter."
Werba's Brooklyn—"Whispering Friends."
Cort (Jamaica)—"The Play's the Thing."
Teller's Shubert—"Spring 3100."
Strand—"The Circus" (film).
Loew's Metropolitan—"The Divine Woman" and vaude.
Momart—"Brass Knuckles."
E. F. Albee—"The City Gone Wild" with vaude.
St. George Playhouse—"The Snob."
Fulton (stock)—"The Monster."

Promoters, politicians and civic leaders of the borough of Brooklyn have hopes of landing the 200th anniversary celebration of the birth of George Washington and the proposed International Exposition in 1932 at Marine Park.

Marine Park boasts of some 2,200 undeveloped acres of land near Jamaica Bay. The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce is interested in the idea, and an assemblyman has already introduced a resolution in the Legislature for holding the national exposition and celebration in Marine Park.

The police reserves had to be called out to quell a riot at the Jamaica theatre, where Peaches Browning was featured. A couple of doors and several railings were broken in the rush to get in the theatre. Fifty cops set the crowd in its proper place.

The Half Moon Hotel in Coney Island, which opened last May, is now being managed by the owners of the hotel. They were dissatisfied with the lack of "personal touch" shown by the lessees, the American Hotel Corp. Coney Islanders built the hotel, costing about $2,500,000.

"Spring 3100," now rewritten, is at Teller's Shubert before its Broadway bow. George M. Cohan's new comedy, "Whispering Friends," is at Werba's Brooklyn.

Next week is a bright one here, with "Gay Paree" at the Majestic and "Diplomacy" coming to the Brooklyn. "Tommy" comes to the Cort.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

Bob Blair, local city manager for Publix, has resigned and is due to leave for Chicago or the west in a few days. Blair has been here for two years.

A new manager has not been decided upon, but O. Hare is temporarily in charge.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has the town's attention. The well known story is playing the Palace's stage, and the Texas' screen. Gene Lewis and the Palace Players, with Helene Millard in the leading role, opened Saturday at the Palace to turnaway business. The Paramount picture also opened Saturday to capacity. This is the first time in the theatrical history of the city that two versions of any story has ever played day and date. Some weeks ago, "Seventh Heaven" was playing at the Palace, and the Majestic gave a midnight show of the picture on a Wednesday of the Palace date. Nobody hurt.

Movietone is in the Majestic and apparently there for good. Tied with Fox news it is creating favorable attention. Business good.

Maxine Flood, second woman with the Gene Lewis players, has returned to her home in the east. Sam Flint and Ella Ethridge have joined the company.

Victor's Harlendale theatre opens this week. It is the first of a string of neighborhoods this company is opening in this city. "Rose of the Golden West" opening picture.

Business in the southwest is good. Nothing sensational but holding its own. Great things are expected this year with the American Legion convention here and the Democratic convention in Houston. The new stadium for the Stock Exposition is nearing completion and will be ready for the First Annual Stock Show in the spring.

Texas open golf tournament is under way, to be followed by a polo tournament with 17 teams competing.

Pantages—"On Your Toes"-vaude.
Loew's—"Becky"-vaude.
Gayety—"Red Hots."

The Westminster Glee Singers on their trans-Canada tour will join church and theatre, playing under the patronage of Bishop Mathison, primate of all Canada, and management of Lawrence Solman.

L. H. Dilling has bought the Royal, Whitby, from Mrs. Frank Curl.

Oriental Amusement Co. has applied for charter to erect and operate a picture house in London, Ont. They will start with a 1,000-seater, with pictures and independent vaude likely policy.

George Bradley, producer of small revues for the Ontario tall timber circuit, went on a bread and water diet for seven days Thursday. He also handed Magistrate Robert Browne ten new ten-dollar bills. The charge was assaulting an applicant for a place in the chorus. Bradley had a black eye to show the girl hit back.

Postage stamp size dance floors will have to close when a new police ordinance becomes effective next week. Unless lawyers find a way around it this means the end of cabarets here. The new law forbids dancing except in a licensed place. Licenses are not issued unless the floor is so big.

An Arctic travel picture, "Sunset and Sunrise," has just been completed by the Anglican Church in Canada in co-operation with the Dominion government. It took several years to be made and will not be released for theatre programs.

An old-time Orpheum show last week at the stellar local house of that circuit. Many a moon since they had one, and the almost capacity house appreciated the fact. As headliner they had Fanny Brice. It's several years since Miss Brice worked for the circuit. Last time she turned them away from the old Orpheum for about four weeks. The new Orpheum is much larger, and if she does it here it will be accomplishing a miracle for her two weeks' stay.

Sunday night was a pushover for Fanny. Her friends were there and she was on the stage for 46 minutes, closing the first part. She opened with the telephonic duel on figures with Albee. Her "sacha" number was a wow, as was "Mrs. Cohen at the Beach." An encore was "My Man."

Balance of the bill was smooth and fast. First turn was Peggy MacKechnie, a youngster who memorizes cards in the deck and does multiple concentration. This girl is smart and sells in convincing fashion. Too bad she had to start the show, but okay, nevertheless. Dick Henderson, deucing, knocked them over. This boy, with his fast patter and song, had some 75 scenario writers, gag men, directors and title writers making notes. Spotted too early.

Tom Terris did "The Three Shadows," a playlet adapted by himself from Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." Terris plays Scrooge, the miser, and did well. However, turn and supporting cast are hardly adequate for the two or three-a-day vaude houses. Art Henry, aided by a "doll" whom he calls Callahan, told gags, mugged, danced and musicalized prior to Miss Brice. Tough spot for Henry, but he did nicely.

Opening second part were Brennan and Rogers in their conversational banter, programed as "You Slay Me." To the wise ones the turn was a neat dish. To those who could not keep up with it the turn was just too bad. But enough of the mob on hand to make the stay on the rostrum for the boys worth while. How they'll fare in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Indiana is another matter.

Next to closing was Roy Cummings with a new bimbo, a looker, too. Roy did his regular routine of falling and tearing, only letting up on the fall into the pit, which did not smack as $600 worth. Cummings had remarked to the house leader that he did not know whether he could go through the week doing his batting routine for $275. Despite it all, he was a panic. Closing were a quintet of jugglers listed as the Mongadors. Though after 11, they held the bunch. Ung.

Ruth Elder headlined at Pantages last week. The flying femme winged it here from San Francisco, got into a little jam on the way and the time table Monday was jockeyed around. Four shows were scheduled, but with Miss Elder late the first frolic was chalked off and the vaude went on at three, as per usual. The aviatrix appeared in street clothes. She did not stay on the stage very long. Probably tired and a little nervous. A fair-sized trailer of her exploits preceded her.

Rest of the bill was not average for the house. Bob Larry's Entertainers are a nine-piece band who play good music and use effective settings. Scenic accompaniment makes quite a flash. Closing on this bill, the turn was a standout. Rubin and Malone, blonde and brunet song and dance gals, were openers. Fair-haired one does the stepping, while her darker-hued companion warbles a fair note. She scored best with a ballad, also doing several quick changes neatly.

Paul Kirkland Co., next. Girl assistant handling props is the rest of the act. Kirkland starts off with some hoofing, then a variety of things, including a dancing ladder, chair and paper cone juggling and also falls. Ray Huling put a trained seal through usual routines in the trey. The kids went for this. Screen feature, "The Small Bachelor" (U).

Walter Myers, of the William Morris office, has booked the Gaucho Marimba Band, which closed last week at Grauman's Chinese, for 14 weeks with Fanchon and Marco, opening Feb. 23 at the Metropolitan here.

Al Cohen will adapt "The Butter and Egg Man" for First National. Jack Mulhall featured.

Tom Mix would rather his daughter Ruth, 15, does not embark on the theatrical career outlined for her by her mother, Mrs. Olive Stokes-Mix, from whom the picture star has been divorced for over 10 years.

The occasion for Mix's attitude in his daughter's welfare came up in court, where Mrs. Mix No. 1 brought suit to have the girl's allowance increased from $50 to $1,500 a month.

Mix told the court he was willing to take care of his daughter and provide every means for her, suggesting she be placed in an exclusive school. However, if her mind is made up to go on the stage, Mix will not raise an objection, he said, though he prefers she wouldn't.

Action on the suit was deferred until a guardian is appointed for Ruth.

Burton King will produce "Women Who Dare," an original by Langdon McCormick, for Excellent.

Helen Chadwick featured, and starting Feb. 10.

Alan Hale will play another featured role in William Boyd's next picture, "The Cop," for Pathe-De Mille.

Byron Morgan has a new one-year contract to write originals and adaptations for M-G-M. During the past year Morgan wrote the originals of "Rookies," "Smart Set" and Buster Keaton's first for M-G-M, besides adapting "Fair Co-ed."

At the Hollywood Playhouse, "Interference," mystery play by Roland Pertwee and Harold Dearden, now current in New York, will open Feb. 27. Leslie Pearce will put it on. "Undertow" goes out either Feb. 25 or 26 after four weeks.

"No, No, Nanette," is the musical production at the Shrine Auditorium this week under auspices of Al Malaikah Temple. This is the seventh of a series of 10 to be given.

When the "Scarlet Woman," new play by Zelda Sears, opens at the Belasco March 4 the cast supporting Pauline Frederick will be Thomas Holding, Hope Drown, Henry Hall, Norman Peck, Frank Raymond, Marie Shortwell, Tina Marshall and Gertrude Elliot.

Tilly Homer, assistant secretary to Henry M. Henigson, general manager at Universal City, is engaged to marry David C. Lane, local bond and mortgage broker.

Buddy Fisher, m. c. at the Avalon in Chicago for a year, is now on the coast with his family. Fisher is expecting a visit from the stork any day now and intends to remain here for quite some time.

Winona Winter has been given a route over the Pantages circuit.

Competition is worrying a lot of small independent picture exhibitors about Los Angeles so much that they resort to trick and device. One exhibitor was known to bill a rather salacious film as sensational and no one under 16 would be admitted. This meant that if a minor was 14 and said he was 16, there was no further questioning.

Beaux Arts Playshop presented "Scrubbing Brushes," by Roger Quayle Denny, with cast headed by Lillian Rivers. It included Birdie Ray, sister of Charles Ray; Charles Gillman and others. The play ran for four nights and a matinee. Ralph Herman and Joseph Duochowny are directors of the playshop.

Thomas Meighan returned to the coast from New York and will wait four or five weeks, while his next story is being written for his first Caddo - Paramount production. Lewis Milestone will direct.

"Speedy," Harold Lloyd's latest comedy now being finally edited, will be pre-viewed this week. It is scheduled to have its world premiere in New York on Easter day.

Finis Fox, accompanied by Albert Benham, his assistant, left for the San Jacinto mountains to work on Dolores Del Rio's next story for United Artists. It is "The Bear Tamer's Daughter," by Konrad Bercovici. Edwin Carewe will direct.

Bob McHale, assistant manager at Loew's State, has been sent to Seattle and Portland to install and train the service staffs in the two new Paramount houses to be opened in those cities.

George Riley moved over from the Metropolitan to take over McHale's job in his absence. Bert F. Naus, chief usher at the Metropolitan, was made assistant manager.

Jack Coogan, Sr., accompanied by Jackie's business manager, Arthur Bernstein, sails from New York Feb. 24 on the "Olympia" to conclude pending deals for Jackie's further career and education in England.

"It's All Greek to Me," featuring Charlie Murray and Louise Fazenda, will be dressed up with a set of titles by Ralph Spence.

Los Angeles Society of Magicians stage their annual show at the Gamut Club Feb. 7. Frank Fewkins is president of the society.

Max Shagrin, twin brother of Joe Shagrin, who has been managing the Park, Youngstown, O., with the latter spending his annual winter vacation in Hollywood.

SEATTLE

By DAVE TREPP

Metropolitan—"King of Kings" (road show).
President—"Cradle Snatchers."
Fifth Avenue—"Man, Woman and Sin."
United Artists—"Student Prince."
Columbia—"The Cohens and Kellys in Paris."
Blue Mouse—"The Jazz Singer" and Vita (6th week).
Pantages—"The Wizard"-vaude.
Orpheum—"On to Reno"-vaude.
Palace Hip—"The Down Grade"-musical.
Winter Garden—"My Best Girl"
Strand—"London After Midnight"

Stage folks of Seattle went to midnight church again last week, going to the Trinity Parish Episcopal Church to listen to Rev. Charles Stanley Mook, chaplain of the Episcopalian Actors' Guild of America.

W. S. Pertuz, manager, United Artists theatre, won first prize for greatest percentage of business gains during three months period of any house in West Coast circuit of the Northwest, including Oregon, Washington and Montana. His theatre went from 27th rank to the top of the list. Good pictures were a factor, but good management played an important part.

"King of Kings" played two weeks at Met, opening Jan. 31, to fair biz. Price scale 50c. to $1.10., mats, 50c. $1.65 evenings.

City Theatres Company, Inc., has leased the old President theatre (3rd and Madison) opening Feb. 17 at pop stock prices, 30 cent top. Calvin Heilig is president, with Mr. Madell, formerly in Tacoma, resident manager. The house resumes its old name, the Heilig.

Ralph Pender, manager, State theatre, has been doing well, getting the house out of a long streak of red. Pender is former university lit teacher. He was recently married to Ruth White (non-professional).

Mae Tibbetts (Palace Hip) last week was operated upon for appendicitis. She will recover.

L. L. Peterson, former manager West Coast houses in Bremerton, and recently manager at Broadway, Tacoma, has come to the Fifth avenue as assistant to Manager Jim Cleminer. Arnold Flink, former assistant, has been transferred to the Broadway, Tacoma.

When Oliver Wallace gets on the Wurlitzer at the new Seattle, opening Feb. 24, for 12 weeks, a daily feature from 11.30 to 12 will be his organ concert on the air. Opening night, midnight, mat will be broadcast from the stage.

Edward J. Keighley had his revue booked for two engagements night of Feb. 6 at Olympic hotel, before the annual butter and egg men's banquet and General Tire & Rubber banquet. The eggmen also used seven vaude acts, and the tire boys three.

John W. Nelson, former feature writer for Star, now free lance publicity, has been engaged to whoop'er up for Chicago Civic Opera, to be at Fifth avenue, March 19, for three nights and one matinee. Scaled up to $10. Advance looks like sell-out at $64,000.

SAN FRANCISCO

Raymond Lucas, treasurer at the Curran (legit) and Lauretta Barry, non-professional, will be married in the spring.

Installation of Movietone has been started at the Embassy, San Francisco home of Vitaphone. The new talking device will not be used for about 30 days, according to present plans.

K. P. Walton, Sr., has just placed his fifth coast quartet, Varsity Quartet, with the road company of "Hit the Deck." Another of Walton's quartets is "The Cheer Leaders" at the Warfield for Fanchon and Marco.

Gaston J. Ley has been appointed manager of the Alexandria, Ackerman & Harris house, recently taken over from George C. Oppen.

"Arms and the Man" will be given by the Little Theatre of the University of California in Wheeler Hall, Berkeley, Feb. 10. Cast will include Houghton Furlong, Elizabeth Bates, Frank Ferguson, John Grover, Louise Craviotto, Claude Anderson, Alton Williams, Emily Lowry and Rhea Radin. Michael Elwyn C. Raffetto is directing.

Doakes and Doakes, male comics, left the Warfield after the opening day, due to unusual length of show. The boys had no trouble getting over on the Warfield bill, but in view of eastern bookings were glad to be able to get away six days earlier, with full salary being paid.

Two issues of theatre stock have been offered by local brokers. Lehman Bros. are offering $10,000,000 of convertible preferred of the new Keith-Albee-Orpheum stock, while other brokers are announcing an issue of $4,550,000 Theatre Realty Company first mortgage fee and leasehold 6½ per cent sinking fund bonds. This latter issue is for William Fox, intended to finance his new St. Louis house, now under construction.

At the Lurie, Pauline Frederick debutted in "The Scarlet Woman," a new drama by Zelda Sears and Reita Lambert, Feb. 2. "Sunny" (operetta), another new one, got under way at the Columbia. Cast includes Helen Patterson, in fem lead; William Valentine, Harry Miller, Nicky Pitell, Ernest Woods, Elmira Lane, Fred G. Holmes, Peggy Fear, Wendell Marshall, Morgan Williams, Crosby Brothers.

Pasadena Community Players (Little Theatre group) presented two plays, "Shaw's Getting Married" and "Cake" (Witter Bynner) at the Lurie.

G. E. Rosenwald, branch manager for Universal in Los Angeles, has been named assistant sales manager, Western division. Mrs. Louise Weinstein, former secretary of W. J. Heineman, local "U" branch manager, has been named secretary to Rosenwald.

Maurice Diamond, former vaude dancer, sailed from here on the Tahati for Australia, to produce for Moss Empires, Ltd.

With arrest at the Granada by House Manager Frazer of Francis Long, a talented singer, dressing room thefts at the Granada, the Lurie, Princess, Wigwam and others are explained. Long confessed to ten dressing room burglaries. They included the theft of about $100 from several Fanchon and Marco chorus girls several months ago, the theft of about $90 from Jack Durant, of Mitchell and Durant, playing in "Hit the Deck" at the Lurie, and others. Long several years ago was prominently featured on local stages by Paul Ash. Big things were predicted for him.

Clifford Wayne Trio, Indian singing, talking, dancing act, had a salary dispute with Alexander Pantages and upon closing at the local Pan house signed immediately with the Orpheum circuit, opening at Oakland.

DENVER

By HARRY M. FORWOOD

Aladdin—"The Fortune Hunter."
America—"The Irresistible Lover."
Broadway—Dark.
Colorado—"Wild Geese."
Denham—"Sally" (stock), second week.
Denver—"Student Prince."
Empress — "A Hawaiian Romance" (musical comedy stock), and "What Price Glory" on screen.
Orpheum—Vaude.
Rialto—"Under the Tonto Rim."
Victory—"Grandma's Boy," first half.

Jack Krum, for several years local manager for United Artists, has been succeeded by H. Bradley Fish, who comes here from Kansas City, where he worked in the Fox branch office. Fish was one time exchange manager for M-G-M in Denver. D. Bershon, western sales manager for U. A., came to Denver from Los Angeles to install the new local manager. Krum has not announced his plans for the future.

A theatre catering to the negro population will be built at Five Points (black belt) in the near future. Promoters plan to use pictures and vaude entertainment by colored talent. New house, to be known as the Cosmopolitan. Officers and incorporators include E. G. Goldsworthy, president, and M. M. Dickerson, Frank E. Hickey and John Brown.

Mabel Normand joined her hubby, Lew Cody, last week, while he was winding up his fifteen-week Orpheum tour here. He was being partied to death before he had the ball and chain excuse. Will soon start new picture for M-G-M, he reports.

Babe London, rotund comedienne, also visited in Denver last week. Stopped over here (where she used to live) to see her hubby, Billy Green, also on the Orpheum bill. Babe is en route to Hollywood to resume free-lance comedy work.

With business tough, the America theatre (U.) is cutting down on help. Frank Pratt, assistant manager who came from Portland, leaves this week for other fields, and several other payroll reductions are being made.

KOA, General Electric broadcasting station situated here, has been cut in on the National Broadcasting Company's "red" hookup, giving Denver radio fans with even crystal sets all the more reason to stay at home every evening and catch New York programs. Theatre men love the arrangement!

Sydney Cohen will enlarge his Bronx Strand theatre to 2,500 seats, the work to start early in the summer. Cohen has extended his lease on the property for another 21 years.

Ben Marks, who relinquished the Alhambra, in Harlem, recently, has acquired the Pantheon, picture house. The theatre has been on the debit side of the ledger since the opening of Loew's Burnside, a few blocks away, about two years ago. Marks will introduce new features to build business.

A 3,500-seat theatre is to be built at 161st street and Walton avenue, a block from the Yankee Stadium, by I. Robinson and a group of others. The property was purchased some time ago from Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees. The theatre, which will cost about $1,500,000, will be operated by one of the large vaude circuits.

The Inwood section is to get a new picture house, to be located at 207th street and Sherman avenue. It will be of 2,000 capacity.

Abe Cogut and Louis Hirschhorn reopened the Bensenson, former picture house, with Yiddish vaudeville and pictures, Friday.

A report that the Intimate Playhouse, former legit playhouse, may reopen soon with art films. The house played films at one time.

Palace (Publix)—"The Dove"; stage, Art Landry and band with "Florida."

Majestic (Interstate)—"The College Hero"; stage, Eddie Pardo.

Melba (Publix)—"The Gaucho."

Circle (stock)—Miller Players in "White Cargo."

Old Mill (Saenger)—"Breakfast at Sunrise."

Capitol—"The Divine Woman."

Arcadia (Dent)—Vita.

Pantages (tab)—Buddy Morgan Revue.

Bob O'Donnell, booking chief for Hoblitzelle's Interstate, has a "conferencier," or a master of ceremonies. Eddie Pardo is the boy selected for the job and has been proving himself a drawing card for the Majestic.

Dick Penny, local representative for Bert Levey and independent booking agent, started a new racket in movies on the Hickman case. His proposition includes news reels of the boy, together with a lobby display of a manikin, a dummy electric chair and photos.

Joseph D. Miller, head of the Miller Players at the Circle, encountered difficulty with the city censor, Mrs. Boyce, when he announced production of "White Cargo." The play has been given here twice before and each time caused trouble. Censor's objection is that the play depicts a love affair between a white man and a mulatto girl.

MOVIETONE OUTDOORS

Movietone may be put to at present without the sight attachment is unknown. It could be operated as a campaign spieler.

Up to the present Fox has mainly employed its Movietone for newsreel interest, though Fox has made many Movietone short film subjects, comedy and otherwise.

Majestic, Paterson, N. J., which recently scrapped its stock burlesque policy, has reverted to legit.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

uel, young Jewish heavyweight of San Francisco.

Emanule was to have gone to New York this month for several fights under auspices of Tex Rickard, but Dempsey has cancelled the program, and intends keeping the boxer away from Madison Square Garden for several months.

When Theodore Von Eltz, stage and screen actor, failed to show up in court on a traffic charge, Judge Valentine issued a bench warrant for his arrest. The charge was for speeding.

Sheriff's office nabbed two of the four men alleged to have robbed the California theatre, Pomona, where $1,500 was taken. The pair in custody are Porter L. Clark and Curtis Carwille. Other two are still at large.

Jack Dempsey and his former manager, Jack Kearns, were sued for $26,700 by Adreana F. McPhee, tenant in an apartment house owned by the pair. She charges she was injured when falling on a cake of soap in the corridor of the building. Case came to trial, but was continued to Feb. 29.

CHICAGO

Walter J. Harmon, who some time ago represented himself to Hazel Siemers as Walter Donaldson, writer of popular songs, and induced her to invest $195 with which to publish his latest song, was sentenced to serve one year in the county jail last week.

He was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. Miss Siemers gave him her savings with which she had expected to attend school.

Doris Hemphill, ex-chorus girl, better known as Marion Kirk, who has been facing murder charges here for the past month, was dismissed from custody last week due to lack of evidence.

Doris will return to her home at Estherville, Ia., where her father will finance a music shop which she will operate.

Frank A. Peska, city prosecutor, has announced a campaign against bunco parlors. He states the amusement places will either have to close their doors or operate under a city license costing $25.

William Joslin, former cafe cornetist, was arrested last week on a charge of wife desertion. He was found playing his cornet in a prayer meeting at Murphy's mission. Joslin told the cops that his wife had given him $2 and told him to "clear out."

Free motion pictures are shown to guests of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. hotel every Saturday night. "Mockery" (M-G) was last week's feature.

Glencoe, a suburb of Chicago has just authorized Sunday movies. The town has no theatre. David Nelson, north shore business man who has been contemplating the erection of a house, may proceed with his plans, now that the ban is lifted, with a presentation policy likely.

Fire Department officials are investigating a complaint from T. J. Reynolds, head of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators' Union. Reynolds claims that films of nitrocellulose material are being shown at some of the schools. Questioned in the matter, Dudley Grant Hays, director of visual education, stated that some of the school principals had been exhibiting films without the sanction of his office, and that the practice would stop.

Harry Duffy, manager of the Triangle cafe, is being sought by Chicago police on a charge of having shot and wounded two women at the cafe last week.

LONDON

For the first time one of E. F. Benson's novels is to be staged. This is "The Luck of the Valls," an early mystic work which Archie de Bear will present. In the cast will be Lady Tree, Felix Aylmer and Donald Calthrop, who will also produce the piece.

Miles Malleson has written a new play, "Ladies and Gentlemen," more or less a sequel to "The Fanatics."

A new play by H. F. Maltby, called "Our Countess," comes to the Strand Feb. 5.

A wedding of considerable interest to circus people took place Jan. 26 when Poppy Ginnette, famous horsewoman of Ginnette's Circus, married George Sanger, trapeze artist, and nephew of the late "Lord" George Sanger. Bride will join her husband's circus.

Matheson Lang's "Such Men Are Dangerous," from the Russian by Ashley Dukes, will have a few weeks' try out commencing at Edinburgh, Feb. 6.

It is definitely decided that Nigel Playfair will revive "The Beggar's Opera" at the Lyric, Hammersmith, when he resumes managership there Feb. 13. Cast will contain most of the original players who appeared at the same house a few years ago.

"Lumber Love," the musical play by Leslie Stiles, with music by Bert and Emmett Adams, has a cast including Joan Lockton, Dorle Sawyer Mai Bacon, Joan MacDonald, Fred Kitchen, Frederick Leicester, Basil Howes, Jamieson Dodds, Arthur Finn and Conway Dixon.

Purchase of the London Theatre of Varieties by a new syndicate will result in the retirement of its managing director, Charles Gulliver, at the age of 46.

spacious room, the class element being present in large numbers for the first time in many years. Under the management of John and Christo who have successfully catered to Long Island and Saratoga society, the Gardens is taking on tone, but the couvert remains two bucks, with a slight tilt on Saturdays, and the natives are not being scared off. Drawing society to a former hotsy totsy is no easy matter anywhere, but to do exactly that in Palm Beach where the book most widely circulated is the Palm Beach Social Register, is a feat for which Downey deserves much of the credit.

Ralph Wonders, Grace Kay White and Murray Smith's orchestra still remain, and each has a considerable local following. Wonders is a past master in working up the special night gag, having been recreational director of Hollywood, Fla., for three years.

The result is that Lord ond Lady Hemingway of England and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Zilch, from West Palm Beach, are subbing elbows on a Palm Beach dance floor while stepping on each ther's dogs. So John and Christo have another money maker, the only night club here not in the red at present.

Even the federal raid the other evening is not expected to dent trade.

Meyer Davis' orchestra units are at the Breakers, Jack Lube, director; Everglades Club, Irving Weiss, director; Whitehall, Lon Chassy, director, and Patio Lamaze, Ben Glasser, director, and Gus Lazaro, vocalist, with the Honolulu Serenaders also.

Harry Frazee is occupying the Duke of Alba suite, the most expensive and luxurious apartment in the Alba Hotel.

Harry Rosenthal and his orchestra opened at the exclusive Bath and Tennis Club Monday. Rosenthal, society favorite, is in his 11th Palm Beach season.

Irving Caesar, songwriter; Louise Grody, Clare F. "Jay" Gold and his wife (formerly Lorraine Manville), Walter Reade, Sam Scribner, Nat Evans, owner of Brook Club, Saratoga, among arrivals this week.

Valencia Gardens, new night club, has closed, owing everybody.

Benny Fields opened as master of ceremonies at the Vineta Hotel Thursday, coming here from the Silver Slipper, Miami. Others there are Olive Hill, the Marvelous Miller and Paul Specht unit, under direction of Al Payns.

Markel's Melodians, singing trio, are due to play private party engagements.

Flo Ziegfeld spent two days in Palm Beach this week, bringing Billie Burke and daughter, Patricia, for the season. Flo will return here after "Three Musketeers" premieres in New York.

David Bernstein, treasurer of Loew's, is at the Alba hotel. Sam Williams is at the Royal Poinciana and Lee Shubert is expected Thursday (9th).

ner. The standees sat, presumably, for their dinner.

The show was regarded pretty much as a freak before it opened and all the Broadway gagsters went the limit on it. Every wit and dimwit pulled a line about it. Those that landed in the main Stem columns were accounted successes by their makers. Here were some of them:

"Yea—they can stand up at the end of the seventh act and stretch."

"Strange Interlude? Yeah—that's the dinner hour."

"It's about a Eugenic O'Neill baby."

"Where are you going this week-end? To see the long O'Neill play."

Woollcott, who was not allowed to review the show by "The World," through Bayard Swope, executive editor, objecting to Woollcott's having expressed a previous opinion on it in "Vanity Fair," came back Sunday and wrote a piece saying he didn't like it, but giving no reasons.

Business for the show has been capacity. Seats were put on sale for the first 10 weeks the day after the opening. This batch was well eaten into by the steady and long window sale, which began at 9:30 A. M. and ran until that time at night. Guild subscribers do not take up the entire supply at each of the six weekly performances.

That dinner intermission is funny.

Good for Hotels

Most of the people go out to eat, the Park Central on Seventh avenue getting the heaviest play. This hotel, along with a flock of restaurants, advertises in the theatre program, while every other restaurant leaves its cards for distribution on the back rail.

Dinner hour begins at 7:45 and nearly everybody is back on time. The head waiter at the Park Central reported that they were feeding a good portion of the audience in their dining rooms, giving them quick service.

Some of the people remain in the theatre and send their escorts out for sandwiches. On the opening night three women stayed in the orchestra and sent out for coffee. Some of that is being done in the balcony. But most leave the theatre and get back on time. Those who don't have to start until the end of the act.

With the six performances weekly the Guild's worry is whether the actors can stand it.

'SUCKER MONEY' FROM 'ANGELS' DISAPPEARING FROM SHOW BIZ

Near-Producers of Legit Plays With Short B. R. Find Former Fertile Field Nearly Dried Up—Outsiders Now Investigate First, and Then Don't

"Sucker money" that the "angels" previously provided for the production of legit shows has nearly disappeared. It also lessens the number of shoestring and short bankroll near-producers who have hitherto depended upon their suavity and the guile of the theatre to tempt outsiders to invest.

Finally Getting Known

A vaude songster was asking for requests from his audience, and one of them was for "Kol Nidre," the Hebrew hymn. Because of the unusualness of the request, the title did not impress right off and the performer asked that it be repeated.

It was: "You know, 'Kol Nidre' from 'The Jazz Singer.'" (The hymn is part of Al Jolson's song repertoire in the Vitaphone version of "Jazz Singer," although it's a chant that is centuries old).

15,000 Learn by Mail—Women 50 and Over Take Ballet

Ned Wayburn's Dancing School, with the largest enrollment of pupils of any dancing school in the world, estimates that fully 60 per cent. of its pupils take up stage dancing with no thought or intention of appearing professionally.

This percentage has been arrived at by a check-up of the average of 2,000 pupils who daily attend the 23 different classes in the Wayburn Building and 15,000 "corresponding" pupils who study dancing by mail.

Many take up dancing for their health; some for the love of it; others so they can "show off" in parlors or amateur shows. Women of 50 and over are among the pupils studying ballet. The enrollment is almost exclusively feminine. At

CATHOLIC FILMS ON PERCENTAGE

Preparing "Hidden God" on Roadshow Basis—In Theatres and Public Halls First Year—Nat'l Film Producers Co. Providing Churches with Training on Management — Own Censor Board

73 BISHOPS ENDORSE

Performance of a gigantic circuit of Catholic churches exhibiting films in their halls and schools and the production of features and shorts for the 18,000,000 Catholics in the United States, as well as for countless millions in other countries, is now under way with the support of a distinguished group of ecclesiastical figures.

The idea was first suggested by John Whitsor, president of the National Film Produce:, Inc., during the International Eucharistic Congress held at Chicago in 1926. A picture of that celebration, attended by thousands of Catholics from all parts of the world, was released through the courtesy of Fox, and out of it came the plan to make a big picture with the Eucharist itself as the theme. Miami Can't Get Jury To Try Federal Men

Miami, Feb. 14.

Miami just won't be friendly with Uncle Sam's coast-guardsmen. This was forcibly brought to attention last week when—in a trial against eight coast-guardsmen for the alleged killing of two "runners"—a jury could not be secured in or about "The Magic City." During the trial it was necessary to go to the jury boxes at Jacksonville and Tampa so the men would have a fair trial and because of this marked ill feeling.

Anyway, you can buy better liquor cheaper in Florida than any other state, despite that the government has let loose a flock of federal men to stop the flow.

Balcony business in the numberless Broadway legit theatres has been hurt so far this season by the picture palaces.

FRENCH FLIERS IN N. Y. WANT SHOW WORK

LeBrix and Costes, Self-Maintaining, After Flying 20,000 Miles

LeBrix and Costes, famous French fliers, reached New York after seeing 20,000 miles pass beneath them from the day they left their native Paris. These airmen, who support themselves, ship and trip, want to see some incoming coin—they want a show chance.

It is expected they will be submitted to the Locw Circuit bookers for the opportunity the fliers appear to feel they need before flying across the American continent.

During their long flight over many countries they had to go above the Andes mountains at a height of 18,000 feet, alighting at Lapas and taking off from there at 4,000 feet. The two men reached New York from Washington, which they made from New Orleans over the U. S.

LONDON AS IT LOOKS

By HANNEN SWAFFER

London, Feb. 4.

This was a week of excitements. Dr. Harold Dearden, who helped to write "Interference," was the first author to submit himself for inspection. Terrible things were said of his comedy, "Two White Arms," before it came to London.

"Owen Nares will be dreadful," people said.

The truth was that what was written as comedy succeeded as farce. Owen Nares, who would be considered a much better actor, were he not so good-looking, fell into a sudden mood of joyousness and put the play over.

Noel Coward and Myself

I cannot write about Tuesday's first night for I was not there.

Noel Coward, returning to the stage as an actor, requested that I should not be asked to the performance. He had no feeling against me. He had a long and trying part to play and he says quite frankly that he felt that if I were in the house he could not do it.

Better Actor Than Author

It was in S. N. Behrman's play "The Second Man" that Noel acted the other night. Rudolf Mayer, of Daniel Mayer, Ltd., part owners of the show, was furious when told the other half did not want me present. After all, I went to his wedding.

The author, I am told, was also upset. He had read me in Variety. There is no feeling in the matter It is just a matter of nerves.

The extraordinary thing is that, on the last occasion I criticized Noel as an actor—that was on the first night of "The Constant Nymph," I was so flattering that he thanked me. I dislike his plays. I admire his acting. I have always said so.

When I Piled It On

"The Amazing Noel Coward," I screamed across a page after "The Constant Nymph," saying that he definitely challenged Gerald du Maurier's supremacy as "master of the casual, naturalistic modern school."

Bunk About Venice

Why on earth Alban Limpus staged "The Masque of Venice" by a high-brow platitudinarian called Gribble, I do not know. Sydney Carroll, the retired critic, implored him not to put his own money into the show when he read the published play. Marie Tempest had cold feet, a week before the show. There were nerves shown at rehearsal.

Actor Makes Up As Me

Then, on the first night, amid all the dreary talk about Lord Byron's love letters and Casanova and a lot of other people they won't bury in Westminster Abbey, J. H. Roberts made the grave error of coming on the stage in the part of a descendant of Casanova and looking exactly like me. I did not notice it, because Roberts is rather like me and we laugh about it. The gallery saw it at once, however, and began to shout "Swaffer."

When, in the second act, Roberts sat at Marie Tempest's feet and recited long love passages from a dull diary, they shouted, "Swaffer making love!" That was the end of it.

Billy Merson as a Baby!

The night after, Billy Merson, appearing in a farce called "Lord Babs," in which he had to pretend to be a baby of twelve months or so, behaved like one of those baby-boy critics, in his attempts to be infantile in manners. Some of the dialogue reminded me of Gordon Beckles's criticisms.

This is the play that Donald Calthrop was announced to appear in at Brighton two years ago, but he walked out, or something, and never did.

This is a touring proposition. Whether Merson is West End money as a farce actor, remains to be seen. Anyway, the play, which is by Keble Howard, is very well written for a farce.

The Challenge of "Lumber Love"

I have been to Birmingham this week to see "Lumber Love," the all-British musical play which I have been trying to make managers produce for two years as a challenge to the American supremacy.

The story behind the play is the greatest romance of any musical play I know—a story of heart-broken composers, despised British people, the knockers, money that fell down suddenly, Lee Shubert saying "No," and then losing the book, oh, lots of that.

Well, my judgment, in spite of all the theatre managers of London, has been abundantly justified. I knew "Lumber Love" would be a success. I have just heard that at Birmingham this week, where it had its first try-out, "Lumber Love" broke the records for 38 years!

I shall write more about this, as my views on it are very important to the American theatrical industry.

When a Man Knows

The moment I heard the music, two years ago, I knew "Lumber Love" would be a success. I never had a doubt. I cannot understand how managers can be such fools. Music, you cannot mistake.

If you play a beautiful tune on a tin whistle, outside a public house, everybody knows—except the managers, I suppose. They are tone-deaf, stone blind, flat-footed.

I think I have broken the cash registers of every London play-taster's mind.

CIRCUIT OF CHURCHES

olic Welfare Council, and the Rev. Thomas M. Schwertner, has been appointed. Father Husslein, a Jesuit priest, was entrusted with the task of preparing the scenario.

The synopsis, and with it the project of producing further pictures suited for Catholic audiences, was submitted to and obtained the written endorsement of 72 bishops of the United States, the major part of the Canadian Hierarchy, and of 58 provincial heads of religious orders and congregations, as well as of many pastors. Cardinal O'Connell of Boston was one of those approving the project.

Later it was decided to modify the scenario, on the advice of non-Catholic experts, to make the appeal more general, and to exhibit the picture in theatres and public halls the first year. A director, described as "one of the most experienced and successful film and theatre supervisors of Europe," was engaged, and plans made to produce it on a road-show basis. Its title is "The Hidden God."

With the assistance of Catholic authorities, the National Film Producers (said to be composed of experienced business men chosen without regard to religion) has fallen steps to organize a circuit of Catholic churches to place the project on a sound financial basis. An exhaustive survey was conducted in 50 dioceses and other investigations were later made, as a result of which it was found that in many Catholic halls and schools there were not proper projection facilities, inspection and maintenance of them.

Play on Percentage

Accordingly, it was decided to offer circuit members, who will take pictures from the company on a percentage basis, the following service: A survey of conditions and needs in each parish desiring and warranted by local conditions in showing films; adaption of available auditoriums; installation of necessary equipment at cost on a time payment basis; a permanent supply of complete picture programs approved by a board of censors of the Church; provision of plans for attracting audiences; training in the execution of such plans: training in mechanical operation and business management of operations, and a settlement of differences by a committee on legal and industrial relations.

Three Purposes

The company stands ready to provide permanent supply of releases as well as to make each year one complete religious drama, together with shorter films on the life of saints, educational features, etc. The work of organizing the circuit is still under way, the promoters desiring to have everything set before going ahead.

The plan is three-fold in its purpose: Religious, educational and financial (local parishes are expected to profit).

The Catholic Church is the largest single denomination in the world, and is generally conceded to be the strongest in organization.

NO MORE "ANGELS"

when a show production is mentioned for their check book. Fraud bureaus are consulted and the career of the producer looked up. Few can stand the scrutiny.

Publicity on the fallen fortunes of many an angel-backed Broadway play, with some others similarly financed that never saw Broadway, has been the general educator.

Some see it in the lesson now being taught by Edgar B. Davis, the millionaire gift maker who has nearly reached the first million with his loss on "The Ladder," now on sight and sound for nothing at the Belmont theatre.

Other moneyed men from reports find that more money may be lost on a single show than they had believed and are now a bit wary over making a minor investment for a theatre play in fear they may be drawn into the Davis class.

Don't Want Outsiders

The chumps also have learned that the recognized Broadway producers are all over the money-taking day. No longer is the show girl informed that if the boy friend will come across, she will find herself a principal. Instead the producers of standing, when believing they have something in script or play form, sell a share or more, if any, to their confreres in production.

Several current shows on Broadway have more than one interest at the head, but all of the associates are also in the theatre business. The outsider is no longer needed, for a show with possibilities can easily find its own financing within the ranks of the show business.

Stopping at Source

A producer on the verge of starting a musical was importuned last week by a close friend in a commercial line to give him a piece of the show. The producer replied he wanted no partners and needed no money. But the friend persisted, "just to have a bit of it," he said, with the producer surmising another objective. So the producer said:

"Listen, I'll let you in and take your dough now, but if I ever catch you talking to one of the girls or hanging about the stage, I shall declare your money forfeited."

The legend of "angel" as a disguise for the more explanatory word, "sucker," is that in the olden days when a producer "took" a layman, he would exclaim with the money, "Sent from Heaven."

This was reduced to the word "angel" as taking in more territory and indicating what a sweet and liberal man the provider was estimated to be and also from the same place, Heaven.

RITZY

Out-Britishing the British

At home Ernest Truex has long been known as a clever comedian. He is now starring successfully in London in "Good Morning, Bill." That he is capable of good character work, including a mastery of dialects, is proved by his faultless "English" accent, now assumed off-stage as well as on.

As a rule women are better at this sort of thing than men, and Americans nowadays, encountering Dorothy Dickson, Edythe Baker, Ethel Levey, Maxine Elliott and a score of other American actresses who have settled in London, note that these ladies out-British the British! Tallulah Bankhead now says "cairn't" and "sharn't," but combines this adaptation with distinct traces of her original southern drawl.

Apropos of Truex, he is ably supported by Lawrence Grossmith, who married Coralie Blythe, sister of the late Vernon Castle.

Happily Married

Although sensational publicity was given the rumor that his title was doubtful, Nicholas is indeed a cousin of King Alexander of Yugoslavia. The couple first met a year ago in Capri, where the then Mrs. Cochran was residing while writing a novel. She had divorced Dr. George Gilfillan Cochran, Jr. Originally Dorothy Snyder, daughter of Mrs. Susie Snyder, of Brooklyn, a wealthy grandmother, Mrs. Susie Cruickshank, recently died, leaving more than $1,000,000, of which the Princess inherited only $1,000. However, in 1921 she inherited $500,000 from the grandfather, and will presumably eventually come into her mother's share of the fortune. The Princess has appeared in various Broadway productions.

Stage-Peerage Union

A happy alliance between the peerage and the playhouse was that of Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Sackville-West and Anne Meredith. She had been on the stage for years, including some productions of David Belasco. Then she married and divorced Stephen S. Bigelow, a Boston society man. Sir Charles had also been married before.

In 1925 he was appointed governor and commander-in-chief of the Channel Islands of Guernsey, of Alderney and of Sark. Sir Charles was the principal British representative on the Allied War Council at Versailles, and also at the headquarters of the entente military supreme command at the front, where he was intimately associated with Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, the United States representative.

Exclusive Dorothy

When Dorothy Clark was dancing at the Club Lido, in 1925, various society people applauded her efforts, her partner being Billy Reardon. Nowadays, when Dorothy dances, it is as one of the smart guests at private entertainments, as she has become not only fashionable, but quite exclusive. A year ago she married, out in Los Angeles, Bradford Norman, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman, of Newport. Her wealthy father-in-law is head of the water works in the Rhode Island community, and her cause has been taken up by her mother-in-law, a pillar of conservatism. Last summer the young Normans occupied a villa, and this winter they have been of the permanent colony.

Gertie and Bertrand

Interest is expressed, in London and New York, in the eventual marriage of Gertrude Lawrence and Bertrand Taylor, Jr., New York society man and Yale '15. Miss Lawrence, originally Gertrude Dagmar, was recently divorced from her husband, an English theatrical man, Francis X. Howley, known professionally as Francis Gordon, and has a daughter, Pamela.

Taylor is the brother of Dorothy Taylor, who divorced Claude Grahame White, and then married Count Carlo Dentice di Frasso. Grahame White then married Ethel Levey, who had divorced George M. Cohan. Di Frasso had been divorced by the daughter of Mrs. Henry Siegel, of New York. Bertrand Taylor, Jr., was divorced by Mary Bovee, who then married Francis H. McAdoo, son of William Gibbs McAdoo. A crossword puzzle!

Versatile, These English

The Hon. Lois Sturt (not Stuart), is soon to marry the Hon. Evan Morgan, son and heir of Lord Tedegar. He has published a novel and a volume of verse. He is also a painter and an aviator. She is the sister of young Lord Alington, and has acted in stage and screen productions. She owns a racing stable, and is also a painter. Versatile, these English.

New York remembers Lord Alington as the house guest of the senior Cornelius Vanderbilt. Later he moved to a studio in Greenwich Village, and went about with Teddie Gerard, Tallulah Bankhead and Leonore Harris, actresses. Finally he returned to London, and there continued the friendship with Tallulah, Miss Bankhead, now a favorite with English playgoers, has been starring in "The Garden of Eden," and is soon to be starred in "Blackmail." "Eden" only lasted a week in New York, produced by Arch Selwyn and directed by Edwin Knopf. Knopf divorced from Mary Ellis (now co-starring with Basil Sydney), has been rather ritzy and high-hat, in the past. He is now directing a stock company in Baltimore.

Jessica Brown Remarrying?

When Jessica Brown, the dancer, married the young and handsome Earl of Northesk, all seemed rosy. But his friends in English society did not enthuse over the Countess, and there were other developments.

So now they are being divorced, and it is rumored each will speedily remarry, she choosing a dashing attache of the diplomatic service. Northesk is much in evidence at St. Moritz, recently hobnobbing with the King and Queen of Belgium.

Jimmy, the Well Dressed Man

Several tailors and haberdashers on the main thoroughfares of London now display photos in their windows of the Mayor of New York, with wordings indicating that they can fit out customers so as to compare with His Honor, James Walker, "the best-dressed man in America!"

New York establishments have been known to similarly advertise the Prince of Wales! "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours!"

"Interference's" Part Author

Harold Dearden, an Englishman, who is a physician as well as a dramatist, is known in America as part author of "Interference," running simultaneously in New York and London. This playwright-nerve specialist is also the author of "Two White Arms," recently produced in London.

He and his wife have been visiting the American millionaire, Howard Gould, at his villa at Monte Carlo, a fellow-guest being Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn, of New York, known to playgoers as generation ago as Edna May.

First Glass Style

Recently observed at Cannes were Mr. and Montague Glass. The author of the "Potash and Perlmutter" series has gained fame and fortune, and now lives in luxury, or as one expressed it, "in first-glass style."

Wilda Bennett's Return

The return to Broadway of Wilda Bennett finds this actress still good looking and attractive. Hailing from Asbury Park, she first acted in "Everyman" in 1911, appearing in London with that production. Then she was in "A Good Little Devil," David Belasco's fantasy starring Mary Pickford and providing a bit for Lillian Gish as a fairy who flew off on a wire.

After Hope Hampton opened in Philadelphia in "Pompadour" Wilda had the role in New York, which led to a lawsuit.

Mrs. Charles Frey was awarded $37,500 damages when she sued Wilda for alienating her husband's, Charles, affections. This amount was later reduced to $25,000. Frey then attended Texas Guinan, but was finally barred from Tex's club.

Wilda married "Peppy" de Albreu, a South American dancer, but they have separated. After she had occupied a mansion in East 90th street, rented from Charlotte King Palmer, the owner was awarded $4,000 damages for injuries to the premises.

Mrs. Palmer was the victim of a sensational robbery in that house a few years ago, when she was beaten and stripped of jewels valued at $650,000. A generation ago Charlotte was a well known showgirl and appeared with De Wolf Hopper in two shows. Then she divorced the late James Cresson Parrish, Jr., a new York society man. During the past year Mrs. Palmer has broken into the society columns

NO ENGLISH BOYCOTT AGAINST AMERICAN ACTORS AT ANY PAY

Foreign Professionals With Bonafide Contracts can Obtain British Labor Permits—But They Must Apply Before Entering Country—N. Y. "World's" Story

London, Feb. 14.

Labor permits for foreign professionals to appear in this country must be applied for before entering. When the foreigner holds a bonafide English theatrical contract, the permit is granted, if there is no exceptional cause why the player should not enter.

Low or high salary is not an exceptional cause and the salary is immaterial to the Labor Ministry.

Alden Gay (American) appears to have made a statement to the New York "World" and printed in that daily yesterday, to the effect foreign professionals earning under $100 weekly on the British stage are discriminated against, to afford English actors that employment.

It's the same bunk that foreign actors who flop in this or any other country tell what a tough country it is upon returning home.

Herbert Wilcox and Nelson Keys, heads of the newly formed British Dominion Film Company, have secured the English stage rights to "Burlesque," paying $10,000 bonus and 50 per cent. of the profits in addition to royalty.

Keys will play the principal role. He sailed for New York on the "Olympic" tomorrow (Feb. 15) to see the play.

Keys is reported to have said that the cost of securing the piece was of small consequence compared to his desire to advertise the film company.

Adele Astaire Engaged

London, Feb. 14.

It is believed on inside show circles here that Adele Astaire is engaged to marry Billy Gaunt, son of William Gaunt.

Gaunt, Sr., is the Bradford woolen magnate and principal stockholder in the six Shubert West End theatres.

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.

Rumor of the engagement of Elizabeth Altemus, socially prominent here, and Fred Astaire is emphatically denied by Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman, the girl's mother.

Mrs. Eastman declared that her sons and daughters have known Fred and Adele Astaire for some time, and entertain them a great deal when they are in Philadelphia, but that the engagement report is without truth.

Miss Altemus is at present in Aiken, S. C.

'Yellow Mask' and 'S.O.S.' Liked, but Handicapped

London, Feb. 14.

A new musical melodrama and a straight drama may only be around for a short time.

In the musical-melo, Edgar Wallace's "The Yellow Mask" at the Carlton, it's mostly a matter of small capacity. Played competently and cordially received, the piece is an undoubted success but the theatre only can seat 1,100 making it tough for the management to "get out." The cast has been requested to give an additional matinee to relieve the pressure.

Well presented dances staged by Max Rovers, Chinese settings and several views of the Tower of London rate as the most attractive stage effort in this vein seen here in many years.

At the Saint James "S. O. S.," drawing room plot starring Gerald Dumaurier, was politely listened to in the stalls, but the pit and gallery became slightly restless.

Piece is splendidly acted and produced with an obvious attempt to duplicate the success of "Interference." Effort is unlikely to attain that mark because the story, while interesting, will not stand analysis.

Dumaurier's personal draw and the library "buy" figure to carry the play for a time.

Gibbons' Son in N. Y.

Sir Walter Gibbons' son is in New York and has been at the Fox offices. It led to a report the youth was following his father's instructions in a possible deal with the Gibbons houses (Gulliver) of England and the Fox chain.

That report was dissipated, however, by recalling a story in Variety of some weeks ago when it was stated that Fox had turned down the proposal, through his position of requiring houses shall be of 3,000 or over capacity.

At about that same time the proposal was broached to other picture chain operators, without having it considered.

Foreign Bookings

T. D. Kemp, Jr., has booked Morton Downey to open at the Cafe Anglais and Cafe de Paris, in Paris, April 2 for a run; Johnny Marvin in British vaude doubling with Kit-Cat, London, starting May 14; Carola Goya and Carlos de Vega, concert dancers, open March 26 at the Kit-Cat, also for a run. Summer bookings by Kemp include the Giersdorf Sisters, Mollie O'Doherty and Hal Kemp's orchestra.

Kemp is also financially interested in the new musical revue, "Will of the Whispers," starring Jack Smith, whom he manages.

Mistinguette Tour Off

Paris, Feb. 14.

Mistinguette has relinquished her proposed tour of the central European capitals. Explanation is that it has been found almost impossible to hook up consecutive dates through dealings with separate and often rival managements in different countries.

She has signed for re-engagement with Moulin Rouge revue, due in April, with Earl Leslie interested.

"Name" Male Quintet

London, Feb. 14.

A new quintet is being lined up for night club work. They are: Roy Royston ("Girl Friend" Co., Palace), Chick Endor (American, "Clowns in Clover," Adelphi), Caryl Gibbons (American, late leader Savoy Hotel band), Dennis Cowles ("Clowns in Clover," Adelphi) and George Metaxa.

With their West End reputations, the boys are asking for big money.

WILL MAHONEY

Joseph Mulvaney, Sunday's N. Y. "American," said: "This is the heydey of hoofers. But it is a highly specialized hoofer that Broadway demands. He must be subtly funny, sympathetically humorous, . . . he must sing or tell stories, and Will Mahoney of "Take the Air" is probably the greatest find of this kind."

Direction Ralph G. Farnum, 1560 Broadway.

Pollock Picks 'Em Good

London, Feb. 14.

Channing Pollock wrote a column article for the "Evening News" Friday entitled "The Stage Is Anaemic."

Bernard Shaw, Sir Alfred Butt, Fred Terry and Winston Churchill's private secretary right away jumped into print with replies.

None of these men work for Pollock—on salary.

Gibbons Delays Payment; Palladium Reopens Mch. 1

London, Feb. 14.

Payment of the remainder of the purchase money by the Gibbons syndicate for the Gulliver circuit, due yesterday Feb. 13) was postponed until later this week.

Queried by Variety, it was stated there is some hitch in the wording of certain clauses and that payment would be made not later than tomorrow (Wednesday).

Palladium, former Gulluver house, closed Saturday (Feb. 11) as scheduled and is due to reopen March 1, although its policy is still uncertain. It is reported there is some difficulty in securing a suitable film feature to inaugurate the policy change. It is circumstantially rumored the house may get a revival of "The Student Prince," but insiders declare the policy of the house will be films and vaudeville.

Memorial Services

Sunday next, Feb. 19, at 2:30 in the afternoon, the Jewish Theatrical Guild will hold its annual memorial services at the B'Nai Jeshurun Synanogue, 257 West 88th street, New York, Rabbi Israel Goldstein officiating.

The guild has lost 70 members by death since its organization.

On Feb. 22, in the afternoon, at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, the guild will hold a reception for the Catholic Actors' Guild and the Episcopal Actors' Guild.

KERN-CLIFF SHOW

London, Feb. 14.

"The Love Broker," by Jerome Kern, will be the next Laddie Cliff show. It shortly starts for a tour out of town.

Cast, besides Cliff, includes Phyllis Monkman, Stanley Lupino, Cyril Ritchard and Madge Elliott.

LONDON CRITICS' CIRCLE SETTING VARIETY RIGHT

London, Jan. 27.

Editor Variety:

With reference to the paragraphs which appeared in Variety of October 5 and November 9, 1927, in which the name of the Critics' Circle and its members were mentioned, at a meeting of our executive committee exception was taken to these remarks, since they are incorrect.

The writer of the articles insinuated that the Critics' Circle afforded protection to members against breaches of professional conduct. So far from this being the case, the Circle refuses to accept candidates who have not signed a declaration, copy of which is attached.

My committee therefore requests that, in common fairness to the Circle, you will kindly publish this letter.

Yours faithfully,
John Parker.

Paris Nite Life Starving

Paris, Feb. 14.

Paris night life is starving, principally from lack of patronage by the tourist trade.

This is normally the dull season for the cabarets, but there is usually some activity in the night resorts. Not so this year, the places complaining that they are getting no trade at all from foreign visitors.

Jane Dillon's Speeches And Winnie's 6 Mins.

London, Feb. 14.

Jane Dillon's initial London appearance, at the Victoria Palace (vaudeville) yesterday resulted in her completely stopping. She made two speeches.

At the Coliseum (vaudeville) Winnie Lightner, relegated to fourth feature in lights, is only doing six minutes, although scheduled for 12.

Guitry Role Revived

Paris, Feb. 14.

The Theatre Antoine has revived Maurice Donney's five-act comedy "Les Amants," the sentimental love story created 30 years ago.

Andre Brule played the role created originally by Lucien Guitry, with Jean Provost playing the part of the amorous middle aged woman originated by Jeanne Granier.

"White Arms" Shown

Paris, Feb. 14.

Harold Deardens' three-act farce, "Two White Arms," was presented successfully at the Theatre Albert in English, with Edward Stirling playing a sea captain bored by his wife's excessive caresses.

QUIET NIGHT CLUBS

Paris, Feb. 5.

Caucasien Club, now renamed Chateau Club Americain, is featuring Harry Reiser's band. Also on the bill are Olive and Margie Vernell, Elaine Kendall and Alfred Arnold. Business is quiet.

Zelli's has closed for cleaning purposes, listed for reopening in March

Josephine Baker has left for central Europe, but will return here next season at her own club.

Wayburn's organization will eventually include schools in 12 principal cities. Schools in Chicago and Los Angeles will be open by this summer. In addition, Wayburn has seasonal schools for society women in Palm Beach during the winter, and Southampton, Long Island, in the summer.

The school is operated under the supervision of the Board of Regents of the State of New York, being the only dancing school so rated. Everything is standardized as in an academic school. One, three and six months' courses are offered and must be taken in full. Make-up, stage department and kindred subjects are also taught.

50 TO 100 AMERICAN FILM ACTORS ABROAD

Playing in Foreign-Mades—Mostly British—Not Much Selection Over Here

From 50 to 100 American film players who have found themselves no longer in strong demand by the major producing companies and the more important independent on this side will be coming back on the screen via foreign made productions, mainly British within a year or two.

The gold rush is on in Great Britain. With $50,000,000 of public money subscribed for film production the English producers are reported offering top salaries for American talent. Directors, actors and technicians, unable to get acceptable engagements here are getting big salaries and on contract.

British producers figure they may have a better chance to sell the American market with American players. Native independent companies are willing to sign almost all players and directors of merit who drop out of the first runs over here. Originally of little box office appeal they will be handicapped with foreign production standards and will have to compete against stars with international following.

Some are making what are referred to as "quota" pictures abroad. While officially in the employ of continental producers they are actually making the pictures for their own companies abroad so that permits may be obtained to import American made productions. Among these are Syd Chaplin and Dorothy Gish, producing in England. Ben Lyon will appear in one or two pictures to be released here by First National. Reginald Denny is also going abroad to make a picture scheduled for release here by Universal.

Buchanan's Next

London, Feb. 10.

"That's a Good Girl" is the title of Jack Buchanan's new show. Book by Douglas Furber, score by Philip Charig and Joseph Meyer (both Americans) and lyrics by Ira Gershwin.

The cast, besides Buchanan, consists of Elsie Randolph, Kate Cutler, Mabel Sharp, William Kendall, Raymond Newell, Rita Colere, Eight Tiller Girls, Debroy Somers and his band will also be in the cast. The show opened Feb. 6 at Cardiff, will be on the road for eight weeks and then comes to town.

Selwyn Buys Picture

London, Feb. 14.

Arch Selwyn has bought "Dawn," the Nurse Cavell film, for release in America.

Selwyn states he will road show the picture in his own theatres.

KENNEDY WORKING OUT PATHE PROBLEM, WITHOUT F. B. O. GOING IN MURDOCK DEAL

Cecil B. DeMille Sticking to Pathe-P.D.C.—Kennedy in Full Charge of Pathe Without Title and Also Directing His Own F.B.O.—Future Developments Governing Any Present Smouldering Intentions—Economies on Pathe's Distribution and Production

Joseph P. Kennedy has assumed entire charge of Pathe, without official title. He will attempt to work out the problems of that picture producer and distributor. It's a mutually reached understanding between Kennedy and John J. Murdock, president of Pathe.

Cecil B. DeMille will remain with Pathe, for the present at least, and during the term Kennedy is experimenting.

Kennedy continues as the head of F. B. O., another film concern of the two divisions. F. B. O. retains its individual identity and will, unless future developments for Pathe under the Kennedy guidance suggest to Kennedy and Murdock the advisability of moulding Pathe and F. B. O. into a single concern. At present that idea may be smouldering in the minds of both men but it has not been expressed.

All Agreeable

All interested including the bankers, Blair and Company of New York, are said to have agreed upon the Kennedy insertion into Pathe, for practicability.

A prime cause for Murdock inviting Kennedy to take charge is said to have been Murdock's conviction that Kennedy can hold down cost of Pathe productions, to the line Kennedy has made for his own firm, F. B. O., and also that Pathe distribution cost can be materially cut, even during the Kennedy experimental period.

It is reported that the bankers under this new arrangement have approval of the Pathe request for funds to proceed with its '28-'29 program, that may be started when Kennedy reaches the coast upon behalf of Pathe. Until his departure from New York, Kennedy will go thoroughly into the Pathe business organization in the east.

DeMille with Murdock

DeMille is reported to have been on the fence, standing with Murdock during all of the negotiations, pro and con. The account says Murdock believes DeMille should remain in his own unit, turning out two or more special films as leaders for the Pathe program, with DeMille and Kennedy concurring. DeMille on the coast is working on "The Godless Girl" for Pathe and it is reported he will shortly start or resume with "Tenth Avenue" as another Pathe feature.

It is not yet positive that Elmer Pearson is out of the Pathe or-

Ian Keith's Interview on Marriage to Ethel Clayton

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.

Ian Keith is to be quoted in a forthcoming issue of "Screen Secrets," a monthly magazine published here, as having stated in a local interview that in Ethel Clayton he has found his "soul mate." In this interview, Keith stated further, according to the article, that he and Miss Clayton have been married. He refused, however, to divulge the time and place of the wedding.

Blanche Yurka just obtained a divorce from Keith a few weeks ago. Miss Clayton played in stock here before going into the movies.

The Keith interview was given out while he and Miss Clayton were playing an engagement in a playlet at the local Hennepin-Orpheum (vaude).

REJECT MACKAYE APPEAL

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Arguments presented to the Superior Court on behalf of Dorothy Mackaye gained nothing for the actress. Court refused to reopen the case.

SOL WURTZEL RESTING

Sol Wurtzel is sailing from New York this week for Europe.

Mr. Wurtzel is general factotum at the Fox Coast studios.

ART THEATRE NEEDS GOOD NO. 2 PICTURES

So Says New Yorker—But English Author Tells A.M.P.A. Boys What to Do and Make

Problems of the picture art theatres were openly presented by Joe Fleisler of the Fifth Avenue Playhouse at the A. M. P. A. meeting last Thursday. It was admitted, perhaps for the first time publicly, that the art theatre is dependent on American-made product which cannot make the grade of the better class picture houses.

Fleisler said that the 52 pictures needed annually could not be picked from among the foreign productions, of which "One or two are good and the rest are foreign," he stated.

The speaker mentioned there is something good about foreign pictures because it assures the house of a nationality draw. "A Swedish film brings the Swedes," instanced Fleisler.

Fleisler, following R. Wingate, head of the State censorship bureau, claimed that there should be a spot for adult pictures free from the molestation of censors.

F. W. Hoffman-Edgeman, an English author who experienced grave difficulty in handling a monocle, supplied comedy in abundance. He told the boys what kind of stories to get. "First there is always sex," he hawed. "That must be remembered. More and better sex pictures is what the public wants," cooed the speaker, innocently. He predicted that if the boys went out and made pictures based on these themes all would be well within the picture industry.

Metro-Gaumont Paris Alliance at an End

Paris, Feb. 14.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Gaumont Paris distributing system has been dissolved by mutual consent on handling of product.

The local distributing concern for the American producer will assume its own name of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, beginning in September, continuing to function in offices in the Gaumont building, which is controlled by the Loew-Metro interests. At that time Gaumont will be directed from its studio in the Rue Plateau, Paris.

The report is heard that Metro has under consideration a distributing proposition with Cinemonans, directed by Jean Sapene, but nothing definite on the subject is to be had here. Mr. Lawrence, representative of Metro, declares he has no official information as to such a deal.

Ben Lyon's Info

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Ben Lyon abandoned a proposed airplane trip to New York this week. He says there is no engagement between Marilyn Miller and himself.

He also offers the opinion that Marilyn will not marry Jack Warburton.

Houstone Ellis Killed

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Houstone Ellis, 34, picture actor, was instantly killed yesterday when his car careened off the road at Delana, Cal., and plunged over a 300-foot embankment on the Kern River Highway.

Two male companions, riding with him, were seriously injured.

Copping Names

How the states' right market dresses up a picture for box office draw is instanced by "Lights of Paris," foreign made and handled in the United States by Hi-Mark.

The "stars" are Doris Costello, Robert Coleman and Dolly Davies. The author is "H. B. Wright."

Each name bears a striking similarity to American "names."

WEATHER FORECAST

The weather outlook for the week beginning tomorrow (Feb. 15), based on information secured at the Weather Bureau, has it fair and colder in the East Gulf, South Atlantic States, Ohio Valley and the southern portion of the middle Atlantic states.

Light snows and colder in the lower lake legion and the extreme north portions of the other Middle Atlantic and New England States on Wednesday (today).

Thursday will be mostly fair from the Mississippi River eastward, followed by unsettled weather Thursday night or Friday, with snow or rain over western districts and rain over southern districts.

Fair and considerably colder weather is indicated at the end of this week or the early part of next week.

Weather conditions throughout the country during the past week beginning Monday, Feb. 6, are compiled from data furnished by the U. S. Weather Bureau:

Western (Wash., Ore., Calif., Idaho, Nev. and Utah). Opened with storms prevailing in northwest, gradually working northward into Canada, leaving the section clear from Wednesday on through to beginning of current week. Temperature varying in numerous locations, but not unseasonable.

Central (Mont., Wyo., Colo., No. and So. Dak., Neb., Kans., Minn., Iowa, Mo., Wis., Ill., Western Mich., Ind. and Western Ky.). High pressure, with rains and snow in southern portion, swiftly going northward and not clearing until Thursday night. Remained clear until Monday (Feb. 13), when high pressure again recorded, though confined to southwest corner of section. With exception of Wednesday, when drop was recorded, temperature rising throughout week.

Southern (Ariz., New Mex., Okla., Tex., Ark., La., Miss., Tenn., Ala., No. and So. Car., Ga. and Fla.). Week started with rains and thunderstorms throughout most of section, with exception of marked strip of territory from Texas Gulf coast line northward, east and then south to include Florida. Cleared by Thursday for balance of week, but with rains recorded on Texas Gulf coast. Temperature throughout section rose considerably with abatement of storms.

Eastern (Eastern Mich., Ohio, Eastern Ky., W. Va., N. Y., Penn., Va., Me., N. H., Vt., Mass., Conn., Del., N. J., Md. and D. C.). Rains in southern end of this section worked northward, until by Tuesday entire territory was under rain. Storms continued working northward, changing to snows in New England. By Monday morning of current week section practically clear. Storms working northward were preceded by exceptional rises in temperature, again dropping at end of week.

War Dept. Designates Nat'l Guard Unit for Films

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Word received from the War Department implies that members of the 160th Inf., California National Guard, will be able to appear in future pictures where military equipment is used.

This means that hereafter when the equipment is rented to the producing companies, it will be in the nature of a demonstration and the necessary number of guardsmen will accompany the guns, rifles, machine guns, etc.

ROSCOE AILS

Just completed return dates of the Fox houses. At the Savoy last week, all available standing room was occupied daily, and the cashier had to stop selling tickets five different times during Roscoe's engagement. Roscoe thanks the Fox executives for their confidence in repeating him so quickly.

No 3rd-Handed Hubby

The mother of a picture star, speaking of his reported marriage, said: "My son is too good a boy to be any woman's third husband."

WEALTHY DIRECTOR'S MYSTERIOUS ACCIDENT

Howard Hughes in Hospital—Reported Crashed While Doing Air Stuff

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Howard Hughes, millionaire oil man who took up the megaphone for air scenes of "Hell's Angels" when Luther Reed, directing the picture, concluded the interior work and returned to Paramount, is confined to St. Vincent's Hospital here.

No information as to the reason for Hughes' confinement is available. Fred Fleck, assistant to Reed, is finishing the interior sequences.

Hughes, it is said, suffered internal injuries recently when he crashed to the ground with his plane while directing.

Reputed worth around $35,000,000, Hughes is head of Caddo Productions which will release this picture through United Artists.

Hughes has acquired the habit of taking over unexpired terms of contract players from other companies. His first was that of Thomas Meighan, and his latest is Ben Lyon.

Lyon's contract with First National expires after a five-year period July 1. Hughes takes over the contract until that time under an arrangement whereby Lyon receives an increase in salary.

Breaking Up 2-Men Teams; Par Thinks Better Alone

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Due to the difficulty of securing suitable stories for two-men teams and in comparison to individual value, Paramount is breaking up Beery-Hatton and Conklin-Fields as hoke twosomes.

Beery will be featured in "Beggars of Life," by Jim Tully, and Hatton will serve to give comedy relief to the emotional stars.

W. C. Fields has been working on a five-picture yearly contract at $40,000 per flicker. It expires with the present Conklin-Fields picture.

Vivian Moses, Par's Story Dept. Head

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Vivian Moses, former publicity and advertising head for Fox in New York City, becomes head of the Paramount story department, replacing Fanny Franks.

Ervin Kelsey, assistant to Ben Schulberg, slated for the post, resigned from the company upon his return last week from New York.

Moses is expected here next week.

9 'TITULAR BISHOPS' FORMED BY WRITERS

Exclusive Organization Has One Member to Elect—Pledge Gratis Aid

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Plenty of mystery about the lunching together for the past three weeks of a number of title writers of the first degree. These gentlemen consider themselves the upper strata of the boys who do things to pictures so the audience knows what the producers, supervisors and directors are driving at. After a number of meetings they have decided to band themselves together as an organization which they officially call the "Titular Bishops."

For their president they elected Julian Johnson (Par); vice-president is Ralph Spence, free lance, and secretary and treasurer is Malcolm S. Boyland (Fox). Besides the officers there are five other members who include Joe Farnham, M-G; H. J. Mankewicz, Par; Garratt Graham, F. N., and Randolph Bartlett, F. B. O. There is one other member yet whose name is unknown. Besides this one, provisions of the constitution provide that only one other member can be added to the list.

This organization will only list among its membership men who have qualified in titling roadshow pictures and who are post graduates at the art of titling. They told one producer that the club was strictly social so far as intent was concerned, but that they would endeavor to accomplish things for their mutual good and in turn would stand good for the ability of any member of the body. This to the extent that should a member become sick while titling a picture other members will complete the job gratis.

There are about 300 recognized title writers on the Coast, with several holding equal recognition, so far as the producers are concerned, with any of the members of the "Titular Bishops." Noticeable on the roster of the organization is the absence of the name of George Marion, Jr., considered the king pin of title writers.

The organization will only add the other member they desire in their organization by unanimous invitation. To date the boys have not been able to agree as to who it should be.

Bullheaded Cuban Major Annoyed News Reel Boys

Havana, Feb. 14.

Fine young rumpus going on here over the newsreel boys and Lindbergh's arrival. Major Ortega, of the Cuban military, is very apt to take the official slap when the fuss clears up.

Cameramen had passes signed by the army and police chiefs. Major Ortega refused to recognize them at the landing field because his signature was not also featured. The photographers insisted the cards were valid, the windup being that the major sicked his underlings on the camera toters.

It wasn't exactly funny, either, as some of the boys took a bad beating, especially the Cuban "still" men and the Fox Movietone disciples.

In the latter outfit several thousand dollars in damage was done to the equipment.

Major Ortega may be court-martialed for his conduct. It was the one discord in Cuba's good will demonstration revolving around Lindbergh.

3 Coast Weddings

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Three filmland couples have made known their intentions to marry in the near future.

Mary Astor and Kenneth Hawks, production supervisor at Fox, have set Feb. 23 as the day, with a honeymoon in Cuba to follow. Mrs. Athole Ward, sister of Norma Shearer, is engaged to Howard Hawks, writer, and brother of Kenneth. Their marriage date is not definite.

The last pair is Yvonne Howell, actress, and Lex Neal, director and gag man. They will have the knot tied some time in June. Miss Howell is the daughter of Alice Howell, one of the screen's early comediennes.

THE CHANGES WITH YEARS

SAXE ACCUSED BY YOUNG GIRL

Theatre Man Denies—Girl Previously Picked Up

Milwaukee, Feb. 14.

Thomas Saxe, amusement man and former president of Saxe Enterprises, was named on a serious charge in a warrant sworn to by a 16-year-old Milwaukee girl. She charges Saxe with attacking her.

Announcement of the girl's charges was made by Harry McCrory, captain of detectives, and John Bauschek, superintendent of the bureau of identification, after the girl had been subjected to a long grilling. Warrant was issued after District Attorney Wengert had been informed of the nature of the case.

Several weeks ago this girl and a 19-year-old friend were picked up by police for questioning. The older girl was held as a vagrant and is now confined in the county jail pending trial. The younger girl was sent to the detention home where she unfolded her story of an attack by Saxe. Repeated questioning failed to break down the girl's statements, and an investigation was ordered with the result that Saxe was named in the warrant.

"Because of the prominence of the man involved," Dist. Atty. Wengert said in issuing the warrant, "and because I realize an order for his arrest will probably mean that I will have the fight of my life on my hands to gain a conviction, I am moving carefully in the matter."

Saxe denied the charges and was released under $1,000 bail.

FRENCH CENSOR POWER ON ALL IMPORT FILMS

Paris, Feb. 5.

What is considered as serious discrimination against American films, is a French government proposition to replace the suggestions of the recent cinematograph commission here and to establish an official censorship board which control all importation of foreign pictures. Instead of the quota measures to limit the entry of foreign films, which the commission voted, the Government censors will have power to license only a few of the pictures imported. It will therefore be possible for the authoritics to refuse any films presented.

It is supposed the bigger French producing firms are behind this proposed legislation as the smaller firms would profit more from the quota.

Menjou's $8,500?

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Adolphe Menjou is making his last picture under his present Paramount contract. The picture is "The Super of the Gaities," being directed by Hobart Henley. Menjou's contract expires May 1 and he leaves here for Europe May 10.

It is said he is now getting $75,000 a picture and that the next option, which runs for a year, calls for $100,000 a picture on a basis of around $8,500 a week salary.

Sheehan Wants "Boat"

Winnie Sheehan has been reported negotiating within the week with Universal to secure the picture rights to "Show Boat."

Report was Sheehan heard U is undecided about starting the film, although it's on the U list to commence in May.

From accounts Sheehan can easily place "The Show Boat" on the Fox schedule at almost any time.

"CHAMPAGNE" ABOARD

London, Feb. 14.

First sequence of "Champaigne," starring Betty Balfour, is to be shot this coming Friday at sea, on board the "Berengaria."

A Famous Producer

E. V. Richards, the famous producer from the Southland was in New York last week, accompanied by Bill Geringer.

Mr. Richards is the father of eight children, and he's still young. His side line is as an executive of the Saenger Circuit.

CRANFIELD & CLARKE GIVE UP IN U. S.

English Distributing Firm of Short Films Find Overhead Over Here Too Heavy

Cranfield and Clarke, Canadian distributors of short subjects, are dissolving and retiring from active business so far as the United States is concerned.

The firm has moved from its offices in 729 7th avenue, and pending settlement of their affairs, has office space at 130 West 42nd street.

R. T. Cranfield, the president, is in charge, with Col. W. F. Clarke, ice-president, and Bill Brotherhood, sales manager, reported in Canada.

Cranfield and Clarke, Englishmen, came over about four years ago with the trade understanding that they had the backing of London capital. They operated exchanges in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, London, Paris, Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, concentrating upon short subjects. The Canadian affiliations were understood to be separate in operation and policy, but all exchanges carried the Cranfield and Clarke name.

Sold Stuff on Hand

The original product consisted of a large assortment of one and two-reel negatives produced in England. To this were added some Swiss product, Canadian government scenics, a series of Sketchographs and a series of Boy Adventure stories. Their last listing mentioned 12 dog and children pictures, 12 Al Joy comedies and 6 Shot and Powder comedies.

For the past year or so they have acquired no additional product, all sales being on subjects already on hand. With the heavy overhead through operating their own exchanges they were unable to hold their producers.

Cranfield and Clarke are associated with the Canadian International Film Company, which is not effected by the passing of the partnership in the United States. C. I. F. is now making a five-reel subject in Ontario entitled "Carry On, Sergeant."

KEITH DAYTON STOCK ORDERED OFF STOCK EX.

Cincinnati, Feb. 14.

The common stock of the B. F. Keith's Dayton (O.) Theatre Co. has been ordered stricken from the trading list of the Cincinnati Stock Exchange, "as a result of the company's failure to submit a financial statement," said Richard Seeving, secretary of the Exchange.

No announcement or comment on the movement so far has been issued by the theatre company, a subsidiary of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit.

"Collegians" Making Films Abroad for U's Quota

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

In order to meet film quota requirements of several European governments, Universal is planning to send the Collegian series unit abroad this summer to make pictures in England, France, Germany and other countries.

Present series will be completed about May 1. Stories for the trip abroad will be lined up before the troup leaves here.

FILMS' OLDTIMERS OF THEN AND NOW

(A periodical resume by Variety, usually incomplete and necessarily so, of those of the picture business who have left it for one reason or another.

Present story contains many hitherto unmentioned names from the executive division of film of long ago.)

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Pathfinders who pioneered the picture business, contributing their share to lifting the industry above the penny arcade and nickelodeon levels in most instances, have nothing but unpleasant memories of what might be today had they remained in the business.

Some of the men and women who aided in making motion picture history have survived in good standing. Yet the majority crowded out by a perpetual state of competition are compelled to work in some other line to eke out a living. Following is what some of the famous people of yesteryear are now doing which proves that fame and fortune in the picture business is mostly a bubble.

Harry R. Raver

Harry R. Raver, organizer of the All-Star Feature Productions and the first man to present a $2 movie on Broadway, New York, at the Knickerbocker by showing "Cabiria," was the first man to buy the screen rights to a famous novel and produce it on the screen. It was Upton Sinclair's "Jungle," a story of the Chicago stockyards and the best seller at that time. He was further responsible for inducing such men as Adolph Zukor, Arch Selwyn and Augustus Thomas to enter the lowly picture business. Today Mr. Raver is conducting a small antique shop adjoining the Vine street theatre in Hollywood.

Gene Gaunthier

Gene Gaunthier, well-known figure in the old Kalem company, was the first woman dircetor, cutter, star, writer, scene painter and exhibitor. She was the first woman to star and make a picture in Europe.

Miss Gaunthier was last heard of a year ago, reported to be managing an apartment house in St. Louis.

Charles Greene

Charles Greene, one of the first picture actors to appear before the camera, is now in Hollywood engaged in the shirt business because casting directors think he is a newcomer. Charlie can tell how he grub staked many of the big picture moguls now riding around in high-powered cars, and who won't give him a nod.

Edward McManus

Edward McManus, who induced William Randolph Hearst to go into the picture business and later organized the International News reel, is now a newspaper editor in the Middle West.

Herbert Blache

Herbert Blache, in association with Madame Blache, was one of the pioneer directors who turned out more pictures than a leopard has spots. He was considered the most artistic in days of the Solax and old Metro companies, and is now conducting an art lamp shade store in Hollywood, where he does his own decorating.

George D. Baker

George D. Baker is another pioneer director who commanded the highest salary of any director in the business during the postwar period.

He is now retired in Hollywood, passing away his time by writing novels. He can be seen riding about the town in a Chandler limousine that he purchased when Harrison's Surprise!

Pete Harrison, whose native heath is Greece, is putting together a history of the Irish in the picture business for the "Irish World."

It's understood that Pete has dug up 40 or 50 Irishmen connected with the film industry, which may be as much of a general surprise as it was to Pete.

U. A. AFTER REG. DENNY; U'S $60,000 LIMIT

All "Jewels" Under Same Budget—$150,000 Limit on Reg. —Cutting Scenario Staff

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Negotiations between Universal and United Artists are on for the transfer of Reg Denny's contract.

Universal is said to be losing money on the Denny pictures due to heavy negative costs. If the deal goes through, William Seiter will go with Denny as director.

U will cut its studio scenario staff in half this week, eliminating practically all but contracted writers.

When the studio resumes full time production in April, it is planned to keep the cost of "Jewels" down to $60,000 per picture, with the exception of the Reginald Denny series which will carry a production budget of about $150,000 if he doesn't go with U. A.

Hines in George Cohan Plays for "Talkers"?

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

With one more picture to go on his present First National contract, Johnny Hines is being approached to do a series of George M. Cohan plays for one of the talking picture concerns.

The list of possible plays include "The Little Millionaire," "45 Minutes from Broadway," "Yankee Prince," "Little Nellie Kelly" and "The Merry Malones." Hines was a former song and dance man on the stage. When entering pictures he was identified as the "Yankee Doodle" comedian.

Am. Directors Didn't Connect in England

London, Feb. 14.

Albert Parker and John Robertson, film directors, sailed from here Saturday on the "Celtic."

The boys were here several weeks without making any arrangements to produce for British picture concerns.

P. C. T.'s Big Issue

London, Feb. 14.

Provincial Cinematograph Theatres issues this week a $4,267,460 preference stock in $5 shares carrying 7½ percent, and further shares in dividends up to 15 per cent. as a limit on stock.

This money is believed to be destined for building of new theatres.

ROACH DIVIDEND

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Board of directors of Hal Roach Studios declared a special dividend of one-half of one per cent, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of two per cent on preferred stock. The dividend is for three months ending Feb. 29 and will be paid March 1 to stockholders of record Feb. 15. This is the fourth consecutive extra dividend declared by the corporation.

As a result of the releasing agreement with M-G, the net earnings of the corporation for last December amounted to $24,780.

W. B.'S FIRST TALKING CAST

Foy Secretly Making 5-Reeler for N. Y. at $2

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

First of the full length Vitaphone features with an entire talking cast is being secretly made at Warner Brothers studios under the direction of Bryan Foy. Picture is a five reeler and at present entitled "The Roaring Forties," a story of Broadway life by Hugh Herbert and Murray Roth.

A cast of 50 people is being used with the principal players Gladys Brockwell, Helene Costello, Cullen Landis, Tommy Dugan, Wheeler Oakman, Tom McGuire and Guy Dennery.

Foy has been working on the picture for about two weeks with nobody but members of the cast permitted on the set.

Film is to start with a $2 showing at Warner's, New York.

HAYS BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE IN MARCH

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Will Hays, accompanied by Maurice MacKenzie, leaves March 15 for New York. He will go from there to Washington to answer subpoena in the Tea Pot Dome Inquiry into Liberty Bonds given to the Republican Party in 1920, when Hays was chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Washington, Feb. 14.

Democratic Senators are predicting that the Senate oil investigating committee's call to Will Hays will be but the beginning of a lot of questioning, and on other matters, of the picture "Czar."

How the Democrats propose to bring about this questioning was not disclosed.

Basil Manly, Scripps-Howard reporter, assisting the committee, sent out a copyrighted story that the G. O. P. campaign deficit in 1920 was paid from oil profits through Hays.

Playing Organ by Control

Des Moines, Feb. 14.

Playing a pipe organ by remote control proved diverting to the patrons of the Capitol, Publix house, here. The organ was played by Herbie Koch, solo organist, without his presence—a wierd light being thrown on the performing, though man-less organ.

Then the trick was explained, with Herbie going up and down the aisles play the organ on a portable board strapped around his neck—the board being attached to the pipe organ by cable.

Griffith's Remake

D. W. Griffith left New York for the Coast last week to make "The Battle of the Sexes," a picture he turned out 14 years ago for $12,000. The new effort will run in the neighborhood of $300,000 for U. A.

It is understood that Griffith's intention is to do the remake with Mary Philbin, if he can secure her release from Universal for it. It is reported Carl Laemmle not long ago offered Griffith $250,000 to direct "Show Boat" for U.

Griffith is still playing around with the idea of making "The White Slave."

POUCHER TO COAST

Ralph Poucher is leaving the Consolidated Laboratories to go to the coast as representative of Richard Rowland and he will also be the latter's assistant at the First National Studios. He will go West this week.

STATE, $23,000, 'COHENS-KELLYS'; "CIRCUS," $30,000, HOUSE RECORD

Loew House Actual Downtown L. A. Leader—Met, $25,500 With "Rose-Marie"—Jannings Out After 2 Weeks to $13,450—"4 Sons," $5,385, 2 Days

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Pop., 1,450,000)

Trade was much better last week at all the first run houses. "The Circus," after breaking a house record on its second week at Grauman's Chinese by doing $30,000, repeated again by doing a bit more last week. Picture has been playing to capacity matinees. Another of the road show films which improved in business was "Wings." This one did about $700 better than the week before.

Metropolitan got a lucky break. Title of the picture brought them in. Screen version of "Rose-Marie" is nothing to brag about, and dailies declared themselves that way, too. Al Lyons and Jimmy Lyons, heading stage show, gave customers satisfying entertainment.

Though about $2,500 behind the Met, Loew's State, with two-thirds the capacity, was actually the downtown leader on the "Cohens and Kellys in Paris." Trade was about $2,000 better than week before.

"Four Sons" got away to a $4,300 start at $5 a copy for its premiere at the Carthay Circle. Notices in dailies with one exception were favorable, but second day figures of $1,068 were bit disappointing. "Sunrise," on its final week, had great exit at $13,300, $5,000 more than the week before. "Jazz Singer," in sixth week at Criterion, dropped $400.

Second and final week of "The Last Command" at Million Dollar was better than expected. However, seems as though Jannings is not the bet locally that he is in other key centers and abroad. "Student Prince" is now in that house.

Final two days of "The Dove" at United Artiits were quite disappointing at an average of about $1,300 daily. House operating expense, without picture, is around $1,800 a day. "Sorrell and Son" also got an inauspicious start on the first day. However, gives indications of improving.

"Love," brought out to Hollywood after its sensational business at the Million Dollar, did not create any boxoffice panic. This was due to poor exploitation and handling by the Egyptian management. Boulevard held up in great shape with "Spotlight" and Gene Morgan. Broadway Palace did not score a coup in playing Harold's Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy." This picture has been played plentifully locally.

Estimates for Last Week

Grauman's Chinese (U. A.). "The Circus" (U. ...) (1,958; 50-$1.50). Town is Chaplin mad; selling out in afternoon and at night; house record broken for second successive week. $30,150; follows $30,000 opening.

Biltmore (Erlanger). "Wings" (Par) (1,661; 50-$2.20). Air opus gets stronger as it goes along, fourth week an even $18,000.

Carthay Circle (Miller-W. C.). "Sunrise" (Fox) (1,500; 50-$1.50). Final week one of best of engagement; $13,300; "Four Sons" (Fox) opened at $5 to $4,317; first two days, $5,385.

Criterion (W. C.). "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,600; 50-$1.50). Trade a bit off in sixth week; $8,200.

Loew's State (Loew-W. C.) "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U) (2,200; 25-99). Anything George Sidney is in surefire for this house; with Peabody on stage great combination; $23,000.

Metropolitan (Pub.-W.C.). "Rose-Marie" (M-G) (3,595; 25-75). Balance of show outside of screen feature gave satisfaction, picture's title brought them in; $25,500.

Million Dollar (Pub-W. C). "Last Command" (Par) (2,200; 25-99). Locals would not go frantic over this one, but bowed out at end of second week to $13,450; good trade for that stanza.

United Artists (U. A.-W. C.). "The Dove" (U. A.) (2,100; 25-$1.10). Final two days for the Talmadge picture only scored $2,600; "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) off to poor opening day, but with great notices looks will probably build.

Boulevard (W. C.). "Spotlight" (Par) (2,164; 25-50). Healthy week as $7,500 was realized.

Egyptian (U. A.-W. C.). "Love" (M-G) (1,800; 25-75). Poor salesmanship cost picture at least $2,000; final count, $8,150.

Broadway Palace (Orpheum). "Grandma's Boy" (Pathe) (1,540; 15-40). With no first runs in sight, house thought it could put over old Harold Lloyd film, but didn't; around $2,800.

R. G. PROCTOR WITH HAYS

R. G. Proctor, non-showman, is a recent addition to the Will Hays organization.

CENTURY-STANLEY ARE $1,000 APART IN BALTO

$18,000 and $17,000—'Dove,' $13,000 at Valencia—'Jazz Singer' Holds for 6th Wk.

Baltimore, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 850,000)

One of the few remaining downtown picture parlors, dating from the pioneer days, is apparently destined to soon pass out as a result of the transfer of the North Howard street property occupied by the Idle Hour. This is one of the rectangular small seaters of the one and two-reel era. Another property that was intermittently the home of feature pictures will be rebuilt as a commercial stores structure. This is the old Lyceum theatre property.

While these two properties are definitely out as movie house possibilities, the Embassy, dark since last spring, may reopen. Les Sponsler, formerly of the vaude team Les and Clara Sponsler, has been mentioned as the possible proprietor.

The Sunday midnight show vogue is growing here. While the courts and grand jury are wrestling with case on the archaic Sunday blue law, many of the big downtown exhibs are putting on Sunday night shows, opening the ticket sale one minute after midnight. The racket started New Year's Eve.

Business in general was off last week, weather being partly to blame, but failure of certain pictures to get the expected response also figured. "Beau Sabreur," at the Century, pleased but failed to hit any b. o. high spots, and this went for "Wife Savers" at the Stanley. "The Dove," at the Valencia, was another film that didn't come up to expectations. This was Norma's debut at the upstairs house and much was expected. Reissue of "Grandma's Boy" at the New also failed to click as expected.

"The Jazz Singer," played a fifth consecutive week with nightly turnaway. The Parkway had every reason to be pleased with the business done by "West Point." The Palace, running on a new policy of picture plus tab burlesque, is still crowding 'em in.

Estimates for Last Week

Century (Loew-U. A.). "Beau Sabreur" (Par) (2,074; 25-60). Average satisfactory week, but not outstanding; "Tokio Blues" on stage pleased; about $18,000.

Stanley (Stanley-Crandall). "Wife Savers" (Par) (3,600; 25-60). Hatton-Beery team failed to duplicate "In the Air" figures; does not mean business was bad, however; after slow start built nicely; about $17,000.

Valencia (Loew-U. A.). "The Dove" (U. A.) (1,500; 25-60). Norma Talmadge, long surefire in this town, failed to equal her former performances here; business big for this moderate sized house, but not remarkable; about $13,000.

Metropolitan (W. B.). "Jazz Singer" (W. B.) (5th week and Vita) (1,400; 25-60). Outstanding sensation here; scheduled as final week, but after Monday was a nightly turnaway with Saturday night biggest jam of engagement; held for sixth week; about $10,000.

Rivoli (Wilson Amusement Co.). "Smile, Brother, Smile" (Par) (2,500; 25-60). Weather affected somewh't, but intake above average.

New (Whitehurst). "Grandma's Boy" (Par) (1,800; 25-50). Lloyd reissue failed to ring b. o. bell for outstanding gross; below average with about $5,000.

Parkway (Loew-U. A.). "West Point" (1,000; 15-35). This one kept up the high average of b. o. potentiality that it displayed for two weeks downtown; about $5,000.

STAHL FINDS ONE

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Myrna Hoffman has been signed to a long-term contract by Tiffany-Stahl after playing in extra parts for over a year.

Miss Hoffman was discovered by John Stahl while playing a bit. Stahl plans to groom the girl for stardom.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

Estimated gross on the Oriental, Portland, Ore., for $30,000, issue of Feb. 1, was a typographical error.

Figure should have read $13,000 for "The Fighting Eagle" (Pathe).

U. A., $24,000, DETROIT; MICH., $39,600, LEADS

"Sadie" Calms Down After Fast Start—"Blondes" Helps Cap. Jump $1,000

Detroit, Feb. 14.

General depression in film takings last week, slight but noticeable. The two best attractions, from a draw standpoint, were repeaters. The rest of the street was radically off in flicker value. Bad weather, too.

The Adams is practically certain to be the town's comparative topper this week with Chaplin present after three weeks of "Love," the final being forced. Gilbert-Garbo picture failed to take the expected rise after getting off to an unexpected slow start.

After grabbing $16,000 on its first three days, the United Artists hit the slide to see about half as much in the following four days. "Sadie Thompson" looks somewhat tired going into a second week, and there is a possibility she will be withdrawn unless bracing for "The Gaucho" on the next furlong. Natural attraction of the new theatre was the chief medium the first week.

The Michigan took on nothing extra to offset the U. A. opening and slipped a bit, though showing few ill-effects of the newly created opposish. The stage stuff, in addition to pictures, will be relied on to retain the big one's regular patronage against the straight-filmed U. A. Capitol had kicks on stage and screen in "Blondes," and Lewis and Dody, improving on the previous week by almost $2,000. Another to leap was the Washington with "Sunrise," and a strong movietone bill. Results here were not particularly surprising, in view of a great improvement in screen quality.

Strong continuance is holding "The Jazz Singer"-Vita at the Madison for eight weeks, establishing a run record for the house, again illustrating strong drawing points of the singing picture when played at pop prices. State and Oriental were both about normal. Price cutting war, accentuated in advertising, carried on by these vaude-films houses still rages.

Estimates for Last Week

Adams (Kunsky) "Love" (M-G) (1,770; 50-75). Closed after three mediocre weeks; "Circus" supplanting Saturday; romantic film mild here; never really got started; location might have been a factor; closed to $10,000.

Capitol (Kunsky) "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) (3,448; 50-75). Attractive bill gave presentation pioneer nice week; $25,600, up about $1,000.

Madison (Kunsky) "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W.B.) (1,976; 50-65-75) (7th week). "Les Miserables" (U) shelved for the time being while Tinker's run is extended another week, screen adaptation running with stage outfit also in town this week; film down another notch, but still on its pins at $15,000.

Michigan (Kunsky-Publix) "Latest from Paris" (M-G) (4,100; 50-75). Large house dropped some weight; U. A. opening felt, but not to any great extent; $39,600 enough to lead town.

Oriental (Miles) "Shield of Honor" (U.) and Pan vaude (2,950; 25-90). Police theme in film gave chance for extra exploitation; partially covered weak vaude bill; around $16,000.

State (Kunsky) "Two Flaming Youths" (Par) and Loew vaude (3,000; 25-75). Rumor this house is returning to presentations; is losing from $3,000 to $4,000 weekly at present rate, with grosses of $12,500 and thereabouts; looks for jump this week with Ruth Elder.

United Artists (U.A.) "Sadie Thompson" (U.A.) (2,000; 50-65). After $16,000 on first three days, down to finish week with $24,000; "Gaucho" held in readiness pending "Sadie's" likely departure at end of two weeks; if Swanson can stick three weeks, precedent might be set; U. A. house running against self-created opposition this week ("The Circus"), and will find similar situation next week with Gilda Gray at Capitol.

Washington (Fox) "Sunrise" and Movietone (Fox) (1,778; 35-50-65). House now in good shape after string of low weeks; "Sunrise" getting attention, and Mussolini on tone kicking in with new business; house claims almost as good as "Glory," at $10,500.

"HEAVEN'S" LOOP REPEAT

Chicago, Feb. 14.

The Monroe, Fox's Loop house, is playing "Seventh Heaven" this week, the first repeat booking the house has ever had.

"Heaven" played the house late last year for five weeks, the picture since doing so well in the neighborhoods it was figured worthwhile to bring it into the Loop again.

"BLONDES" $10,000, PROV.

Majestic $6,500—Fay's Okay at $5,000—Uptown, $3,000

Providence, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 300,000)

Healthy biz on every street in the city. Nothing outstanding in any house except the Strand, which went for another win with "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." After a fall-off last week, picture brought the grosses back to the records started by "Ironsides."

"San Francisco Nights" helped some snappy vaude bring them into the Carlton, while Fay's took an even pull with "The Pioneer Scout" and some vaude that rates mention. "Wife Savers" gave them a few laughs at the Majestic and served as a splendid running mate for "Freckles," which drew forth much praise. The Rialto and the Uptown, both second run houses, received a play, with the Uptown on the heavier side.

Estimates for Last Week

Majestic (Fay) (2,500; 15-50)—"Freckles" (F. B. O.) and "Wife Savers" (Par.) and Movietone, featuring Press Faunce of Brown. Big college draw here and good for about $6,500.

Strand (Ind) (2,200; 15-50)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) and "Isle of Forgotten Women." Another win for the Strand; box showing about $10,000.

Carlton (Fay) (1,474; 15-50)—"San Francisco Nights" (Goth) and five acts vaude. Lucky to break at about $4,000.

Fay's (Fay) (2,000; 15-50)—"Pioneer Scout" (Par.), with vaude. Usual strength, with a little better than $5,000.

Uptown (Ind) (1,500; 15-25). Two changes on second-run pictures with stage show. Good biz for across town house; $3,000.

Rialto (Fay) (2,000; 10-25). Carrying on valiant struggle and hitting about $1,500.

CAPITAL FALLS OFF; FOX CUTS SCALE AGAIN

New House Down to 50c—Jolson's Repeat Date, $8,000—Jannings, $11,000

Washington, Feb. 14.
(Estimated White Pop., 450,000)

Many upsets last week. Foremost was another cut in prices by the Fox, getting the house down to rate with the others at 50 cents top. Business has been improving, but takings were not up to expectations, hence the cut effective yesterday (Monday).

Next was the licking the Palace took with a Publix presentation, "My Lady's Fan," and "Two Flaming Youths." Drop not unexpected, however, as W. C. Fields has never meant a dime here. Management tried to avoid it by plugging the title and using pictures of boys and girls in advertising.

Meanwhile, the Earle featuring good stage show and "The Love Mart" flashed upwards and got its second biggest week since switching from five acts of K-A vaude and a feature first run. Al Jolson "Jazz Singer" was brought back into the Met for an additional week (fourth) after an interruption to show "Patent Leather Kid." "Singer" got several thousand above the figures rung up by the house just prior to the switch to run policy. Business done by the Jolson picture conceded from all sides as remarkable.

Locw's mint, the Columbia, lost its assured $4,000 weekly flapper trade with the advent of "The Last Command," but is cashing in on the following of this foreign star with enough to get in a second week.

Rialto is not getting them with the new stage policy of a former popular musical comedy boiled down, with reports another change is ahead. "Mary" it was last week while the picture was "Spotlight."

All houses suffered through storm early part of week.

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia (Loew) "Last Command" (Par) (1,232; 35-50). Excellent business but minus the usual flappers; $11,000.

Earle (Stanley-Crandall) "Love Mart" and stage show (2,300; 35-50). Both screen and stage got them in for second best week since switch; maybe $13,000.

Fox (Fox) "Old San Francisco" (W. B.) and stage show (3,432; 30-40-60-75). Started okay, dove with storms and recovered to just above $24,500, new lowered scale current Monday.

Met (Stanley-Crandall) "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,618; 35-50). Back for repeat after three weeks run and over $8,000 mark; excellent.

Palace (Loew) "Two Flaming Youths" (Par) and Publix unit (2,363; 35-50). Not so hot and when this theatre skids everybody knows; it; liberally estimated at $14,000

Rialto (U) "Spotlight" (Par) and "Mary" (musical tab.) (1,917; 35-50). Stage end nicely done but still off; maybe $5,000.

FILMS AND BATHS SAT. NITE FIXTURES IN TOR.

Loew's Lowest for Year, Under $10,000—"Sadie" Fair, $9,000—Hipp $11,000

Toronto, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 700,000)

Starting out like a record breaker, the past week fell away to a mere trickle after wash day and the result was flops all around except at Mike Shea's Hippodrome, where a unit vaude show helped "The Wizard" (Fox) got better than $11,000. This house invariably gets the toughest breaks in town on pictures because it was pretty late giving up K-A two-a-day. However, they know how to handle a picture when they get it and have built the average up from $6,500 to better than $9,000.

Fred Schafer took second money in his giant Pantages house with "On Your Toes" and a fair stage show, about $10,500. They make a play for real cash at this one next week where Creatore's Band, 50 strong, will headline with "Old Ironsides" on the screen. The band gets $5,000 for this engagement.

Loew's took it on the chin with "Becky" and went under $10,000 for the first time this year. Emil Boreo, on the stage, didn't mean much either and Sally O'Neill is zero in Toronto.

"Sadie Thompson" opened to a corporal's guard at the Regent, but built steadily to $9,000 after notices that could never be clipped for advertising. No mention of "Rain" in any publicity.

Picture held another week when U. A. gives up the house to Universal for "Uncle Tom" at $1.50. U. A. took the house for one month, then doubled the lease with intentions to go 15 weeks. When Mary Pickford flopped in "My Best Girl" notices went up and "The Dove" and "Drums of Love" went into the general release class.

Second payment has just been made on the house by a syndicate which will tear it down to make way for office buildings, and it is likely to go dark after "Uncle Tom" unless Fox comes back with "Sunrise" and "Mother Machree," originally booked here. Leon Victor, former local Fox chief, was in town this week.

Tivoli surprised with better than $8,000 on "Ben Hur" in its third week. That gives about $27,000 on the three which just about breaks records for this 1,400 seater. Opened to turnaway biz with "The Circus," Saturday, and looks set for few weeks at a 40-cent top. Chaplin's "Gold Rush" has the all time record in these parts, 11 weeks at better than $11,000 each.

Jack Arthur gave "Beau Sabreur" neat exploitation, on the "Beau Geste" hookup, but the weather helped to drag him under $9,000. Movies and baths are Saturday night fixtures here. "Gaucho" opened big Saturday.

Neighborhoods fell off this week.

Estimates for Last Week

Hip (F. P.) (2,600; 30-60) "The Wizard" (Fox). Comfortable biz; no turnaways but steady; over $11,000, above average here; vaud outfit helped, but radio plug didn't mean much.

Pantages (F. P.) (3,400; 30-60) "On Your Toes" (U). Opened big but fell away midweek when weather became sloppy; between $10,000 and $11,000; held its own.

Loew's (2,300; 30-60) "Becky" (M-G). Sally O'Neill no draw here; under $10,000, lowest this year; shoppers deserted stores and this always hurts here.

Regent (U. A.) (1,400; 50-$1.50) "Sadie Thompson (U. A.). Opened very weak, but built to around $9,000; held over with taking over house Feb. 20; censors made practically no cuts; critics all said "No."

Tivoli (F. P.) (1,400; 35-60) "Ben Hur" (M-G). Better than $8,000, on third week means a real draw; "Circus" (U. A.), next.

Uptown (F. P.) (3,000; 30-60) "Beau Sabreur" (Par). Opened to SRO, but faded badly; less than $9,000; stage show excellent.

"Sunrise" Breaks House Record at Newark, 75c

Newark, N. J., Feb. 14.

Fox's "Sunrise" at Fox's Terminal last week is a test at popular prices broke the house record for a week without a holiday.

Terminal's top is 75c, with mats at 50c and loges 99c. It was the first time "Sunrise" had played to under $1.65 top, and is now at the Times Square, New York, at the legit scale.

"Sunrise" started off to smashing business in the 1,700-seater. Its reception here was most agreeable to the Fox people, who do not intend to generally release the special for the regular picture houses until September next.

"SADIE" VERY BIG AT $48,500 AT RIVOLI—RAVES BY N. Y. CRITICS

Nothing Marked Elsewhere on Street Last Week—Paramount Got $69,700 With Colleen Moore—Roxy Did $91,000, Off—"Kid" at Strand, $42,600

Evenly, if not fluently, marked the progress of the Street last week. Nothing startling at any point along the line, although "Sadie Thompson" poured herself a $48,500 glassful at the Rivoli.

"Last Command" took the expected drop on its third week, getting $39,650—slip of $8,700—but still substantial.

None of the big first runs splurged with oversized grosses. "Patent Leather Kid" gave the Strand $42,600, very good. Picture stays a second week but this was scheduled. Film is running a full two hours and giving 11.30 p. m. performances to get in seven daily screenings.

"Student Prince" eased down to $62,500 on its second week at the Capitol, good, but a slide of $12,700. House is currently playing "Rose-Marie" and its initial Publix-Loew stage unit. Colleen Moore held the Paramount even on its "Old Ironsides" week with "Her Wild Oat," gathering $69,700, while "Love Me and the World Is Mine" couldn't get more than $91,000 into the Roxy.

"Helen of Troy" practically held even with its first week at the small Cameo, again going around six "grand" at $5,800. Universal was playing with the idea of holding "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" over at the Colony but called in Chaney's "Unholy Three" after $13,500 had passed the gate—more than this house has been doing of late.

"Chicago" closed its seventh week at the Gaiety to $5,700, succeeded Monday (holiday) afternoon by Fox's "Four Sons," and "Uncle Tom" went back but $100 in running up $8,200. "Love" remains extremely active at the Embassy, claiming $10,700 for its 11th week, and "Drums of Love" didn't cover much ground one way or the other in hanging around $9,000 again.

"Simba" fell away about $1,000, but was well pleased with close to $15,000. "Wings" pounded along on its uninterrupted journey at $15,-$00. "Jazz Singer" felt its first real drop since the pre-Xmas period at $17,700, and "The Enemy" is still trying to get friendly.

Estimates for Last Week

Astor — "The Enemy" (M-G) (1,200; $1-$2) (8th week). Amongst those running and that's about all; "Trail of '98" here by March 1.

Cameo—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (549; 50-75). Holdover week for Grecian babe about equal to first display on this site; $5,800 only slightly off from initial session; the boys like; British made historical war film now in here for two weeks.

Capitol—"Student Prince" (M-G) (4,620; 35-50-75-$1.65). Big first week, but fell to $62,500 in taking extra bow; total okay and about same sized slip, $12,700, as Garbo took when held over in preceding picture; first Publix-Loew unit this week with show running one minute shy of two hours and half.

Carroll — "Simba" (997; $1-$2) (4th week). Doing all right, has house for six weeks and may stay longer if business warrants and Carroll's new show not ready; first dip last week but solid at close to $15,000.

Central—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) (922; $1-$2) (15th week). Center of rumors concerning Fox, but splitting reports with Colony on side; "Tom" quiet but steady at $8,200; advertising last weeks.

Colony—"Cohens and Kellys" (U) (1,980; 25-50-75). Had chance to stay second week but management decided against; drew $13,500, much better than house has been doing.

Criterion—"Wings" (Par.) (973; $1-$2) (27th week). Little deviation here for the film; again consistent at $16,300.

Embassy—"Love" (M-G) (596; $1-$1.65) (12th week). Clocked many fast furlong and last week no exception; claimed $10,700.

Gaiety—"Chicago" (Pathe) (808; $1-$2). Passed on after seven weeks, finishing to $5,700; "Four Sons" (Fox) opened Monday (holiday) matinee indefinitely.

Liberty—"Drums of Love" (U. A.) (1,234; $1-$2) (4th week). Neither up or down; around $9,000 not satisfactory, but about equal to first full week.

Paramount—"Her Wild Oat" (F. N.) (2,400; 35-50-75-90). Gave house $500 more than "Old Ironsides," which preceded; $69,700 all right, but not exceptional.

Rialto—"Last Command" (Par.) (1,960; 35-50-75-90) (4th week). Jannings tumbled in third week, but not alarmingly and to be expected; at $39,650 quite okay and not asking for favors.

Rivoli—"Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) (2,200; 35-50-75-90) (2d week). Away to big first week with "raves" from dailies; $48,500 excellent; house has added midnight shows.

Roxy—"Love Me" (U) (6,205; 50-$1.65). Couldn't do much for cathedral, which fell to $91,000; $3,000 less than week before.

Strand—"Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (2,900; 35-50-65-75) (2d week). Away briskly to $42,600; full two-hour picture doing seven daily with 11.30 p. m. performance; "Shepherd of Hills" (F. N.) next, then "Chicago" (Pathe), followed by "Heart of a Follies' Girl" (F. N.); may hold "Kid" for third week.

Warner's—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,360; $1-$2) (19th week). First noticeable drop since before Christmas, and not so bad at that; $17,700 causes no grief in 18th week.

MIRACLE THAT CENSORS O. K. "GARDEN"; $16,000

Barthelmess, $13,000, 8 Days—"Circus" Off 2d Week, $9,000; Loew's $14,000

Montreal, Feb. 14.

Special presentation of its feature picture, coupled with the hold over at the Palace, may have accounted to some extent for one of the best grosses of recent months at the Capitol, where "Garden of Allah" was a near smash with $16,000. It was also a near miracle that our censors passed it. However, beyond mauling the film where it didn't call for it, it got by.

The Palace ballyhooed a wire from Chaplin congratulating the management on the big business done opening week with "The Circus." That didn't save it from being a flop the second week. The Princess got away with a good eight-day showing of "Patent Leather Kid" and collected $13,000 at $1 top. Only other legit house, "His Majesty's," was dark.

Estimates for Last Week

Princess (1,900; 50-$1)—"Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.). Played eight days to fair audiences; $13,000.

Capitol (2,700; 40-85)—"Garden of Allah" (M-G). With prolog and special music; $16,000, excellent.

Palace (2,700; 60-85)—"The Circus" (U. A.). Fell off badly second week; $9,000.

Loew's (3,200; 45-75)—"Serenade" (Par.). With good vaude this show turned in fine gross of $14,000.

Imperial (1,900; 35-80)—"Coney Island" (F. B. O.). Filler for vaude; $4,500.

Strand (800; 30-40)—"Rush Hour" (Pathe); "Jesse James" (Par); "The Sheik" (Par). and "Ladies Must Dress" (Fox). All together, $4,000.

OVER $50,000 AT MET

"Last Command" Stirred Up Boston Last Week

Boston, Feb. 14.

Metropolitan right back last week, grossing $50,900 with Emil Jannings in "The Last Command." Whether the stage presentation is good, bad or indifferent, it matters little, but what of the picture? Jannings is the answer after some tough breaks. Steps and Steppers good stage show.

At Loew's State another good week was chalked up with "West Point" (M-G-M) close to $22,500 and stage show negligible. "The Loves of Carmen" (Fox) at the Orpheum ran behind previous billings, about $19,000, below expectations after the start at the Back Bay Loew house.

"The Lovelorn" (M-G-M) at the Olympia and Fenway, not above average. "The Rush Hour" (Pathe) at New Boston with vaude only average. "South Sea Love" at Scollay Square Olympia did good business. The Modern and Beacon screening "The Fortune Hunter" (Warners) and "The Haunted Ship" (Tiffany) maintained customary patronage.

"Wings" got $16,000.

"CIRCUS," $20,700, N. O.

Saenger's Best for Winter—"Cohens-Kellys" H. O. 2 Days, $5,200

New Orleans, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 450,000)

Important item in film circles last week was "The Circus." Chaplin is still the same keen box-office factor here, as proven by the Saenger going above $20,000.

Loew's State had only an average week with "The Latest from Paris." House went above $15,000, which meant a healthy profit.

The doddering, slumbering Liberty came back to life with "Cohens-Kellys in Paris." So good were the returns picture was held over two days additionally, getting over $5,000 in nine days. Strand showed a spark of life with "The Garden of Eden," but the Orpheum with "East Side, West Side," and the Palace with "Yours to Command," dropped materially. Tudor had class C bix with "The Bush Leaguer."

Estimates for Last Week

Saenger (3,568; 65)—"The Circus" (U. A.). Best business of the winter; final check, $20,700.

Loew's State (3,218; 50)—"Latest from Paris" (M-G). Managed to get $15,200, due to good surrounding show.

Liberty (1,800; 50)—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U). Did $5,300 in nine days.

Strand (2,200; 50)—"Garden of Eden" (U. A.). Corinne Griffith still in the running here; got $5,000.

Orpheum (2,400; 75)—"East Side, West Side" (Fox). Lucky to do $7,300.

Palace (2,300; 40)—"Yours to Command." Gross $5,500.

Tudor (800; 40)—"The Bush Leaguer." Failed to hit at $1,100.

"Sporting Goods," $23,000 Not So Good at Buffalo

Buffalo, Feb. 14.

Business on and off at local picture theatres last week, exceptionally heavy attractions, but nothing excited more than passing interest.

Estimates for Last Week

Buffalo (Publix) (3,660; 30-40-65)—"Sporting Goods (Par), "Havana." Off to rousing start, but slipped rapidly. Stage bill good all round show for mediocre returns. $23,000.

Hip (Publix) (2,400; 50)—"Spotlight" (Par) and vaude. Well balanced bill on even keel for average week's gross. Over $16,000.

Great Lakes (Fox) (3,400; 50-75)—"Jazz Singer" (Warners) and vaude. Second week of feature preserved peculiar situation. Opening Sunday off materially and business good the forepart of 2d week. Takings built substantially for week-end with capacity at close. Increase of prices had much to do with keeping returns from any records. Under $17,000.

Lo's (Loew) (3,400; 35-50)—"Divine Woman" (M-G-M) and vaude. Picture got away to heavy opening, but off thereafter. Around $13,000.

Lafayette (Ind) (3,400; 35-50)—"Devil Dancer" (U. A). Gilda Gray in person, Vita and vaude. Personal appearance brought business up somewhat with night takings averaging about three-quarters of capacity. Gross short of expectations. $15,000.

Freaks Outdrew "Kings" In Topeka for $3,900

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 85,000)

A three-legged man, a giantess and a midget, got more business here the first three days of the week than did "King of Kings."

"Kings" was Topeka's biggest road show picture flop. With about a half house opening night business then slid off till it was hardly worth while Wednesday night. At the Novelty the town's first big freak act got all the big business, doing almost on the half week as much as the house usually does for six days.

Estimates for Last Week

Grand (1,400; $1.50) (National). "King of Kings" (Pathe). First half of week disappointed; special matinee sold out to the Rotarians for school children didn't help much; $2,900.

Jayhawk (1,500; 40). (Jayhawk). "Serenade" (Par) first half; got a good play on Menjou's name and because they liked it; "Love and Learn," last half, got an average play; about $3,100.

Orpheum (1,200; 40) (National). "When a Man Loves" (W. B.). House management chopped film because some of the scenes were "too gruesome"; did $1,400.

Cozy (400; 25) (Lawrence). "The Desired Woman" (W. B.) first half, not so much nd business the same; "In Old Kentucky" (M-G) last half, filled with the same racing hokum that always gets them, and did; week's total about $800.

Novelty (1,100; 40) (Crawford). Freak act first half stacked 'em and piled up record breaking gross; ordinary billing last half, including a local orchestra; not so good, but business for week went to $3,300.

$62,100 BIG FOR MAE MURRAY AT CHICAGO; 'GAUCHO,' $26,000

"Wife Savers" Helps Hold Oriental to $39,000—"Blondes" Opens Good, $18,000—"Jazz Singer" Nearing End—Monroe Off, $3,400

AUTO SHOW HELPS AND WEATHER HURTS MINN.

Of 3 Holdovers, Barthelmess Best, $10,500—"Student Prince" Dives $6,000

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 470,000)

Out-of-town visitors attracted here by the auto show swelled attendance last week. Favorable factor, however, somewhat offset by the regular weekly stretch of bad weather. Grosses failed to attain exceptional proportions, but business was very fair.

No less than three holdover attractions—"King of Kings" (road show), at the Metropolitan; "Patent Leather Kid," at the Strand, and "Student Prince," at the Garrick. All bowed out at the end of their fortnight runs.

"Kid" led the trio by a wide margin, doing almost as well on its second week. After a sensational week that almost set a house record, "Student Prince" dropped with a heavy thud, but came through with a moderately good gross. First week led that of "Seventh Heaven," "Big Parade," "Ben-Hur," "Beau Geste," "Cat and the Canary" and "Underworld" at this same house, but its second week fell behind that of the aforementioned attractions. "King of Kings," at $1.65, flopped miserably its second week, getting only around $4,000, after an $8,000 first week.

With a jump of fully $4,000, the State came back after last week's surprising decline. Thanks to splendid exploitation in connection with a Ford auto show tie-up, house enjoyed a fairly good week in spite of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," lacking pulling power and failing to provoke much enthusiasm amongst the customers.

A strong vaude line-up enabled the Hennepin-Orpheum to lead the city. The picture, "The Desired Woman," had nothing to do with this showing, although it was above the average of this theatre's film attractions. First time in a blue moon the Orpheum has been out front.

With Janet Gaynor in "Two Girls Wanted," Pantages held its own. Miss Gaynor has built a local following.

Estimates for Last Week

State (F. & R.) (2,500; 50) "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) and stage offerings. Picture apparently too sophisticated for fans who didn't take to it enthusiastically; "Official" Ford revue, tied up with independent Ford auto show and involving gift of new Ford car to lucky patron, boosted takings; around $14,000.

Garrick (F. & R.) (2,000; 60) "Student Prince" (M-G). Well liked picture apparently drained its patronage first week; dropped $6,000 to $8,000; okay.

Strand (F. & R.) (1,500; 50) "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.). Big hit here and business held up splendidly second week; around $10,500—nearly as much as first week.

Lyric (1,300; 35) "Open Range" (Par.). Westerns not so forte in this town; picture okeh, however; about $2,200, fair.

Grand (1,100; 25) "Love" (M-G). Second loop showing; around $700.

Hennepin-Orpheum (2,890; 50-75) "The Desired Woman" (W. B.) and vaude. Picture above average at this house, but first class vaude accounted for big draw; about $15,400, led town.

Pantages (1,650; 50) "Two Girls Wanted" (Fox) and vaude. Janet Gaynor a magnet; around $6,700, good.

Seventh Street (1,480; 40) "Red Riders of Canada" (F. B. O.) and vaude. Satisfactory at $5,400.

Anger Quits as Theatre Head; Stays With Schenck

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Lou Anger, formerly Dixon and Anger, vaudeville, will abdicate his post of general manager of United Artists Theatres March 1.

Anger has just returned from the east with Joseph M. Schenck and is now winding up his affairs as operating head of the theatre organization. No successor for the job has been chosen as yet.

Anger will remain with Schenck and return to handling the latter's realty interests, a position he held before joining the U. A. ranks.

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Playing to sensational business throughout last week, Mae Murray on the Chicago stage completely outclassed other loop attractions with $62,100. The house record is $63,400.

At the Roosevelt, "Blondes," followed "E. O. T." after two weeks and copped a strong $18,000. The latter picture did exactly the same in its first week. "Blondes" got a good sendoff from the press, and is regarded locally as extra choice stuff.

Paul Ash collapsed on the stage of the Oriental last Tuesday, and was out for a few days, with the final gross of $39,000 showing the boy's absence makes a difference. "Wife Savers" on the screen probably helped quite a bit in keeping the gross respectable.

Jannings' "Last Command," at McVicker's, exited after a noteworthy four weeks, followed by 'Student Prince." A unique booking was at the Monroe, "Seventh Heaven" coming back this week after five weeks in the same house during November-December, and in the neighborhoods since. Heavy grosses in the family houses prompted the return booking.

"Jazz Singer" is scheduled to close at the Garrick in two weeks, making a total of 15 weeks for this film at $2.20 top. "The Gaucho" leaves United Artists Feb. 16, with "The Circus" coming in.

Estimates for Last Week

Chicago (Publix) — "Love and Learn" (Par.) (4,100; 50-75). Picture received little notice through heavy exploitation of Mae Murray on stage; near house record with $62,100.

Garrick (Shubert)—"Jazz Singer" Vita (W. B.) (1,293; $2.20). Only legit scaled film in town; held up well in 13th week; two weeks to go; $11,000.

McVicker's (Publix)—"The Last Command" (Par.) (2,400; 50-75). Dropped $7,000 in fourth week after doing continued strong business; $20,000; "Student Prince" in.

Monroe (Fox)—"Soft Living" and Movietone (Fox) (975; 50-65). Not so hot at $3,400; not sort of title Monroe street boys go for.

Oriental (Publix)—"Wife Savers" (Par.) (2,900; 35-50-75). Paul Ash out part of the week after collapsing on stage; comedy feature helped somewhat; $39,000.

Orpheum (Warner)—"Across the Atlantic" and Vita. (W. B.) (778; 50). Picture favorably received, although transient trade showed little deviation from customarily nice figure; $7,500 okay.

Playhouse (Mindlin)—"Adventure Mad" (Ufa). Little art theatre played world premiere, served with coffee and soft seats at $3,600.

Roosevelt (Publix) — "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) (1,400; 50-60). Greeted warmly and getting sizeable initial week of $18,000; should continue profitable on short stay.

State-Lake (Orpheum) — "The Night Flyer" (Pathe) (2,800; 25-50-65). Film and Florentine Choir headlining on stage; fair at $17,000.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,702; 25-75). All right in fourth week at $26,000; leaves Feb. 16 after satisfying run.

"KID" H. O. IN PITT

$21,000 at Grand—"Dove," $32,450, at Penn—"Lovelorn" Big, $15,300

Pittsburgh, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

Talk of the town was the business at the Grand with "Patent Leather Kid." The picture holds over for a second week. Presentation will change, however, as planned.

Penn did a little below average with "The Dove," picture not pleasing fans, while the Aldine and "Lovelorn" turned in a great week's gross. Davis did nothing unusual with everything else quiet.

Estimates for Last Week

Aldine (Loew) (2,000; 25-35-50). "Lovelorn" (M-G) and vaude. Hearst angle helped plenty as story ran in local paper; big at $15,300.

Cameo (U) (600; 35-40).—"Cohens-Kellys in Paris." In for three weeks and started slow; capacity end of week.

Grand (2,700; 35-50) (Stanley).—"Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.). Over $21,000, and likely another week.

Olympic (Stanley) (1,200; 35-50). "Serenade" (Par.) and Vita. Average week; "Jazz Singer" in for run next week; same show, with Jessel, here this week.

Penn (Loew) (3,600; 35-60). "The Dove" (U. A.). Just all right; $32,450.

ELECTRIC CHAIR BALLYHOO FOR HICKMAN "SPECIAL" KILLED IT

Cheap Denver Grind House Puts Dummy in Chair, With Metal Headpiece in Front of B. O.—Quits After 2 Days—"Student Prince," $18,000

Denver, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Pop. 400,000)

Business slid back last week, only one or two places reporting anything near satisfaction.

The Palace, a cheap grind, made good money with "Pitfalls of Passion," the sex drama, for two weeks, then, last week, followed it in with another thriller, "Hickman, the Fool," which flopped hard, being pulled off after the second day with "Pitfalls" put back for a two-day repeat.

The most spectacular brand of out-front ballyhoo seen here in years was unfolded for the "Hickman" run. Palace management had a dummy strapped in an electric chair, with metal headpiece adjusted for the "burn," sitting in front of the b. o. Large crowds of kids and passersby stood before the object all day, but few ventured inside.

A fair company of traveling players appeared at the city auditorium under the auspices of the Decimo club, presenting Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." This two-night stand netted close to $2,300.

Estimates for Last Week

Aladdin (Inde) (1,500; 35-50-75). "Fortune Hunter" (W. B.). Syd Chaplin's latest aroused no stampede here; with Vita prolog and Movietone newsreel, takings around $6,200.

America (U) (1,500; 15-25-30). "Irresistible Lover" (U). Did a brody over the weekend and was pulled on Tuesday; Hoot Gibson rode in on "A Trick of Hearts" (U), which made the week a complete financial bust at $1,300; butting in the western gave first real indication that house is slowly falling into an ordinary sort of grind; daily change of bill may go into effect soon.

Broadway. Now housing Walker Whiteside, great local favorite, who presented "The Hindu" first half and closed with "Sakura."

Colorado (Inde) (2,450; 30-40-50). "Wild Geese" (Tif.) and stage show. Business off and takings slightly over $5,500.

Denham (Inde stock) (1,732; 25-$1). "Sally" (Ziegfeld) closed its second week to around $6,000; way above average; Victor Jory, leading man, left company Sunday, succeeded by John B. Litel, from the Coast; curiosity trade caused by Jory's withdrawal, and by his announcement of marriage to leading lady, Jean Inness, bolstered musical; show creditably presented.

Denver (Publix) (2,500; 35-40-60). "Student Prince" (M-G) and stage show "Moonlit Waters." Kept this big palace at good pace; M-G plugged the picture in addition to theatre's newspaper play; good at $18,000.

Empress (Inde musical stock) (1,800; 15-30-50). "Hawaiian Romance," stage attraction, and "What Price Glory" (Fox) for third local showing. Only slightly better than average at $5,600; High Jinks company, with a little more weeding out, will soon be in pretty fair shape; "Flaming Youth" chorus, under direction of Jess Mendelson, getting good.

Orpheum (vaude) (1,600; 15-50-$1). With Harry Carey headlining, dropped slightly below previous weeks; $8,300, or thereabouts; "Not for Publication" (F. B. O.) a weak one.

Rialto (Publix) (1,050; 25-30-40). "Under the Tonto Rim" (Par). Did less than usual, closing around $3,900; house will hold several big screen features during the coming season, however, and should do well.

Victory (Publix) (1,140; 15-25-30). "Dead Man's Curve" (F. B. O). last half was around usual at $1,000.

SPECIAL STILL CAMERA

Eastman Working on Plan Upon Studios' Request

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

At the request of many picture producers, Eastman Kodak is now working out an especially built still camera that can be attached to the motion picture camera and used by the same operator.

Size of the new camera negative, will be four times larger than motion picture negative, and will be made in rolls to facilitate easier loading and operation.

Need for this new type of camera comes about through the failure of a process to print stills in a practical way from motion picture negative worked upon by Paramount newsreel.

ALL MALE STARS FAIRLY IN K. C.

Jean Hersholt Billed Over Pola Negri, but "Secret Hour" Did but $2,400, Newman

Kansas City, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

Annual Food Show cut into the regular amusements last week. Had the support of the grocers, and some 400,000 free, and cut rate, tickets were given out.

Downtown picture houses, however, made a game stand with male stars. Every one featured a man star, and the girls were second best. Midland had "West Point"; Newman featured Jean Hersholt over Negri in "The Secret Hour"; Jack Holt in "The Warning" was the Liberty's star; Rod La Rocque in "Stand and Deliver" occupied the Mainstreet's screen; Edmund Lowe fooled 'em in "The Wizard" at Pantages, and Bill Boyd was at the Orpheum in "The Night Flyer."

Starting Friday the Midland changed to Friday openings on account of the routing of the Loew-Publix units. This makes three of the downtown theatres opening on that day, others being the Pan and Liberty. The Newman continues with its Saturday opening day, and the Mainstreet starts its new bill on Sunday.

For the current week Mainstreet is showing "Patent Leather Kid" for a single week with no advance in prices. Understood this is the first time picture has been shown for 25 cents.

Estimates for Last Week

Loew's Midland—"West Point" (M-G) (4,000; 25-35-60). Those who saw "Dress Parade" just about equally divided as to merits of two pictures; stage show furnished by first of the Loew-Publix units to reach here; unit was "Listening In"; picture and show drew good notices and one of the best entertainments of new year. $21,000 on 6 days.

Mainstreet (Orpheum) — "Stand and Deliver" (Pathe) (3,200; 25-50). Vaude bill. $12,000.

Pantages—"The Wizard" (Fox) (2,200; 25-30-50). Pan bunch like all pantages vaude one of the best bills of season. $7,600.

Newman (Loew's)—"The Secret Hour" (Par.) (1,890; 25-35). Billed Jean Hersholt over Poli Negri; reviewers split completely on Miss Negri's performance and picture; business far from satisfactory; at $2,400.

Liberty (Ind)—"The Warning" (1,000; 25-50). Jack Holt fought his way through detective yarn to delight of the youngsters; okay at $2,000.

Orpheum's picture, in connection with its regulation vaude bill, was "The Night Flyer," William Boyd featured. Globe, featuring Vitaphone in connection with Loie Bridge Musical stock, offered "Harp in Hock" as film.

"HAM AND EGGS" LIKED

"Old Kentucky" Called Just a Picture in Tacoma

Tacoma, Feb. 14.

"Seventh Heaven" sent them past the Pantages turnstiles in goodly numbers.

Rialto had "Sadie Thompson," and nothing so slow about that, either. Broadway seemed to be content with "Serenade" and the Blue Mouse had a pushover in "Ham and Eggs at the Front." This Vita scored blackface laugh clicked well above the flop of the preceding week.

Just another week at the Colonial, where "In Old Kentucky" tried to entice the innocents.

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (W. C.) (1,600; 25-50). "Serenade" (Par), $7,400.

Pantages (1,450; 50). "Seventh Heaven" (Fox). $11,000. Very big.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (650; 25-50). "Ham and Eggs at Front" and Vita. (W. B.). Biz getting better; $4,000.

Rialto (W. C.) (1,250; 25-40). "Sadie Thompson" (U. A.). Gloria liked in this; improved to $4,400.

Colonial (W. C.). "In Old Kentucky" (M-G). Just a picture; $1,250.

'M, W & S' TO $17,000; 5TH AVE., SEATTLE

"Sadie" Drops Off on 2d Wk. —$10,200 for "Cohens and Kellys"

Seattle, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Pop., 450,000)

Final date set for opening of new Seattle theatre, March 1, and the Portland, March 8. West Coast brings Publix unit shows for opening, with plan to use Publix presentations indefinitely. Fanchon & Marco will continue at the Fifth avenue.

"Sadie Thompson" fell down the second week, after the big opener. "King of Kings," at Metropolitan, road showed, is getting only fair biz, although satisfactory. "Cradle Snatchers," stock, at the President, admirably presented.

Blue Mouse broke an all-Seattle record by completing six weeks for a feature picture at a run. "Jazz Singer" did it and lined 'em again nights during the final week. Not bad for a pow of 450,000.

Columbia was up nicely with "Cohens and Kellys in Paris." Ushers were in dandy uniforms to add to piquant atmosphere, and very Parisian around front of house.

Estmates for last week:

Fifth Avenue (W. C.) (2,700; 25-65). "Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G). Gilbert interested 'em; so did Hermie King and "Lace Idea"; $17,000.

United Artists (W. C.-U. A.) (2,100; 25-65). "Sadie Thompson (U. A.), second week weak; $8,000, 1st week, $13,000.

Columbia (U) (1,000; 25-50). "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U). Improved nicely; good comic and laughs solid; $10,200.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (950; 50-75). "Jazz Singer" and Vita. (W. B.). Sixth week new Seattle record; held strong for finish; $10,000—big.

Pantages (1,500; 25-60). "The Wizard" (Fox). Well liked; George Lipschultz, violinist, helped draw; $7,500.

Orpheum (2,700; 25-75). "On to Reno" (Pathe). Well balanced program to fair returns; $13,000.

President (Duffy) (1,650; 25-$1 "Cradle Snatchers" (Duffy Players). Good biz. $5,300.

STANLEY AND FOX EACH DID $28,000

Jolson at Fox and Chaney at Stanley for Dead Heat— "Love" Quite Well

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.

Town's two biggest houses fared well although not exceptionally last week. Stanley, with Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" as the film and Donald Brian as the presentation headliner, got around $28,000.

Fox had Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," and clicked to a fare thee well. Previously at the Fox-Locust proved it O. K. for the lower price policy and gross $28,000, or perhaps more, the best in two or three months. Stanton, with the second week of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," coaxed about $11,500 to the box office —surprisingly good considering dreary first week. Much credit is given to a tie-up with a local tab on a "Blondes" contest. Even then, two weeks not so hot for this highly touted film. The Arcadia had "Sorrell and Son," moved down from the Stanley, and got about $4,500, exceptionally good.

Estimates for Last Week

Stanley (4,000; 35-50-75)—"London After Midnight" (M-G). This Lon Chaney not given reception of some of his. Donald Brian on stage, meant something. $28,000.

Fox-Locust (1,800; $1.65) — "Sunrise" (Fox, 5th week). Fooled wise boys. Without being sensational, held up well. Bit under $11,000.

Stanton (1,700; 35-50-75)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (1st N) (2d week). Disappointment for second week, but held up satisfactorily over first, due to contests and exploitation. $11,500.

Aldine (1,500; $2)—"Wings" (Par, 11th week). This special still strong despite rumors of removal. Over $16,000.

Karlton (1,000; 50-75) — "Love" (M-G) (2d week). Experiment changing house policy to feature picture appears to have been successful although not set yet. Last week over $9,000 for this one, with another and perhaps two weeks to go.

Arcadia (800; 50)—"Sorrell and Son" (U. A.). Moved from Stanley and did well, with $4,500 claimed.

Fox (3,000; 99)—"The Jazz Singer" (Warner, 1st week). After $1.65 run at Fox-Locust moved here with splendid results. Stays two weeks. Beat $28,000.

AFTER THE SHOW

Barrels of fun.

No wonder! Ever see any of those big boys in action?

Meyer Davis now owns 58 bowling alleys in Washington and is building 70 more.

The profession has lots of fun and health awaiting them at the King Pin Alleys whenever they play the Capital City.

WARFIELD DOES $24,000 WITH "ROSE-MARIE"

San Francisco, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 756,000)

San Francisco picture fans refused to be bunked. So far as they are concerned, westerns are ended. When they are of the mediocre type, as "Open Range," they refuse to bite. Despite the presence at the Granada of the old reliable Kolb and Dill, Granada business last week was a distinct disappointment. No denying that what business did come through was in large measure attracted by the German comics. With Kolb and Dill the house expected $28,000 to $29,000 and was lucky to reach $23,000.

One block away, at Loew's Warfield, they had "Rose-Marie" and a pleasing stage show. The house clicked merrily to the tune of better than $24,000. Not a record-breaker by any means, but healthy business. Across the street the St. Francis closed "The Gaucho." Doug continues to be surefire and his opening week had no difficulty topping the 20 grand mark. Further down the street, at the California, "The Last Command," on its second week, held up remarkably well.

One dark spot along the main stem last week, the Embassy, where Warner Brothers' "A Sailor's Swectheart" clicked dismally. Quite disappointing, in view of Louise Fazenda's popularity. It's different there currently, with "The Jazz Singer." Business started with a jump Thursday and indications were the house record would be topped.

Estimates for Last Week

Warfield — "Rose-Marie" (M-G) (2,672; 35-50-65-90). House consistently strong for past month, in fact ever since Rube Wolf returned here from L. A.; screen feature liked and result passed $24,000 mark.

Granada—"Open Rangle" (Par.) (2,785; 35-50-65-90). Indications were for a capacity week, especially when week-end $11,000 mark, but sagged terribly; Kolb and Dill couldn't drag 'em in alone; near $23,000.

St. Francis—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,375; 35-65-90). Best business house has had in months; Fairbanks a "natural"; opening week betered $20,000.

California — "Last Command" (Par.) (2,200; 35-65-90). Second and final week of Emil Jannings feature garnered around $15,500; most satisfactory; "Student Prince" replaced.

Embassy — "A Sailor's Sweetheart" (W. B.) and Vitaphone. One week plenty for this one; customers just wouldn't come; $7,500, however, left a little to distribute.

Missouri, With No Stage Show, Fell Behind

St. Louis, Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

"Wings" is playing at the American and doing all right.

Al Jolson is currently at the State, playing against his picture at the Grand Central.

Estimates for Last Week

Grand Central (Skouras) (1,700; 50-75)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita. (W. B.). Still going strong in seventh week;

Ambassador (Skouras)—"Ladies' Night" (F. N.) (3,000; 35-65). Called rather thin comedy, starring Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill; on stage Ed Lowry celebrated his 500th performance; $36,600.

American (legit) (1,400; 50-$1.50) —"Wings" (Par.). First week of limited engagement; $15,400.

Loew's State (3,300; 25-35-65)—"Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G). On the stage; Pat Rooney's Family; $22,400.

Missouri (Skouras) (3,800; 35-65) —"Old Ironsides" (Par.). First time at pop prices and for first time in two years house had no stage show; $27,300. Week before with "Noose" and stage show, house did $28,100.

St. Louis (4,280; 35-65)—"The Leopard Lady," photoplay and vaude. Got

Orpheum (2,200; 15-25-35-50-65). Downtown vaude house splurged with stars and good picture to launch first week of continuous, no-reserved-seat policy; picture was "Home-Made" (F. N.), with Johnny Hines;

Capitol (Skouras)—"Pitfalls of Passion." "For men only" last week; bandbox theatre set out to break all records; said to be packing in $2,000 every 24 hours early in the week.

PORTLAND'S TANGLE WITH NEW PUBLIX

Town Badly Hit by Indie Oriental—Terrible Grosses Last Week

Portland, Ore., Feb. 14.
(Drawing Population, 310,000)

Opening of Tebbett's Oriental, the town's largest cinema, seems to have temporarily, at least, affected the big first runs. Weather and general conditions may also be responsible for the slack in business downtown, but one of the biggest factors is keen competition.

The Broadway, which until the opening of the Oriental was piling up grosses anywhere from $15,000 to $18,000 weekly, has now gone to a comparatively smaller grosss. While mats at the Oriental are rather light, evening trade is heavy. House has been averaging $14,000. This condition is due in part to the theatre being situated on the east side of the city where parking of automobiles is a convenience. Another stimulant at the Oriental is the low admission, a 35-cent top with a weekly overhead of $7,000, exclusive of film rental. Pathe and Tiffany-Stahl are the backbone of the picture end at that house.

However, local showmen are of the opinion that as soon as the new Publix theatre opens it will become the key of the town.

United Artists seem to be up against it locally, as far as bookings with local houses is concerned. It is becoming very tough for U. A. to break in some of the local first runs. The result is that U. A. and J. J. Parker, allied with the picture concern, may be forced to either buy or acquire a house for an outlet.

Business at the picture emporiums had many of the theatre managers getting out their tin cups and pencils, ready to embark upon a new career. Tebbett's Oriental connected to a terrible intake with "The Forbidden Woman." The Broadway also fell down, although profitable with "Wife Savers." Ollie Wallace, m. c. at this house, is to start a Sunday noon organ concert.

Columbia sailed along but fairly with "Cohens and Kellys" in its second week. This comedy did record business the first week. The Rivoli starved with "Helen of Troy" in its second week. Picture scarcely got through first week. Pantages had an excellent week, leading the town by a close margin, with "Woman Wise" as the feature and an excellent vaude program, headed by Francis X. Bushman.

Estimates for Last Week

Oriental (Tebbetts) (2,700; 25-35) —"Forbidden Woman" (Pathe). House took a big drop as picture was not strong enough to connect; Jetta Goudal does not mean a thing locally; $12,000, lowest yet.

Broadway (W. C.) (2,000; 25-40-60)—"Wife Savers" (Par.). Beery-Hatton picture registered fairly; Fanchon and Marco's "Follicttes" and Ollie Wallace in Sunday noon organ concerts and m. c. okay; $13,000.

Liberty (W. C.) (2,000; 25-40)—"Spotlight" (Par.). Esther Ralston picture increased intake; vaude just average; new policy rumored; $4,000.

Columbia (U) (850; 35-50)—"Cohens and Kellys" (U). In second week Irish-Jewish picture fair; $5,000.

Rivoli (Parker-W. C.) (1,210; 35-50)—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.). A real flop in second week; Santaella's orchestra and Cowell Teague, organist, life savers of bill; $4,200.

Pantages (2,000; 35-50)—"Woman Wise" (Fox). House registered excellent week; leading the town; vaude headed by Francis X. Bushman was real magnet; over $15,000.

Music Box (Henry Duffy Players) —"My Son." Bang-up week with the register showing nearly $7,500; "Tommy," "Night Stick" and other New York plays announced for future.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (765; 25-50)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita. (W. B.). Looks like natural could keep on playing indefinitely; packing 'em at all shows; held for sixth week; way out of ordinary for Portland; $6,500.

NAT'L AD MEN FOR 'TALKERS'

FRANKLIN ON COAST; LITTLE NEW IN FOX

No Personal Agreement Is Yet Reached Between Wm. Fox and Harold B. Franklin

Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of West Coast Theatres' circuit, is due to leave for his Los Angeles offices this week. No personal agreement has been reached, it is said, between William Fox and Franklin, although the utmost friendliness exists between the two.

Franklin is returning to resume his coast post, after closing his deals with Fox, excepting the Finkelstein & Ruben (Minnesota) addition. An announcement of the F&R annexation is daily looked for.

Members of the Fox staff expressed themselves indifferent to reports of any Fox desire to secure control of First National, or to any report of anyone else going after it.

One important Fox man said on the subject:

"What would we do with First National if we got it? Eliminate a producer?"

Contractors Must Give Detail in Loew's Suit

Loew's, Inc., scored a point before the Appellate Division, which ruled that Mellon-Stuart Co., general contractors, furnish an extended bill of particulars in its suit against Loew's.

A $100,000 claim is involved for commission and services in arranging the financing and underwriting for $1,000,000 of the new Loew house in Pittsburgh at Penn avenue and 6th street.

Fox Movietone's "4 Sons" Premier for Other Screens

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

For the first time at a film premier, Fox put Movietone to work on screen personages and executives at the opening of "Four Sons" here. The Fox staff picked their people and had them do their stuff before the lense and say a few words about the opening.

Understood that Fox will use this stuff as advance propaganda for this picture throughout the country. Most of those who spoke are connected with competing concerns.

Ramish's $178,000 Suit

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Jack Bennett, concerned in the Julian oil fiasco, has filed suit against Adolph Ramish in the U. S. District Court for a total of $178,000.

Bennett charges in his complaint he paid out $44,500 to Ramish as an alleged bonus for the loan of $250,000 which Ramish made to him in December, 1926. Bennett is suing for treble damages on the ground that the bonus was usurious interest and in violation of the State usury law.

CLARA BOW'S OPERATION

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Clara Bow went to the Hollywood Hospital last week to have her appendix removed. Miss Bow has been suffering with this chronic ailment for more than a year.

As a result of her illness production on "Ladies of the Mob" has been indefinitely postponed. There is a possibility that when Miss Bow comes out of the hospital she will appear in a story based on vaudeville.

Miss Bow is reported rallying and is expected on the lot in two weeks.

SCHILDKRAUT'S CITIZENSHIP

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Rudolph Schildkraut is now a full citizen of the United States. Federal Judge McCormack granted the naturalization papers.

HOLIDAY NEXT WEEK

Owing to Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, falling on Wednesday, Variety will not be on the newsstands of Greater New York until Thursday.

WISCONSIN, $18,000; 2 H.O.'S DROP $6,000

Milwaukee, Feb. 14.

Drawing Population 650,000

Old Man Winter is treating theatre men and other mortals kindly this year. With spring temperatures prevailing, movie racket is holding its own against the advance of the army of unemployed.

While it is claimed that the jobless in Milwaukee are diminishing daily, the theatres show that the effect, if any, has been nil. Grosses continue to hit about the same, the drop in business placed at 10 per cent below last year. Local Orpheum is the least affected of any of that chain's houses in the nation, it is said.

Wisconsin is still setting a merry pace here, thanks to the stage band policy, while the Alhambra surprised mightily last week with better than $9,000 for Clara Bow's "Wine," reissue.

A sad surprise was the second week of "The Dove." It flopped terribly. "Student Prince," another second week picture, failed to bring in the results hoped for after a monstrous opening week.

Estimates for Last Week

Alhambra (U)—"Wine" (U) (1,800; 30-50). Reissue was a surprise; expected to flop after opening day, it picked up and with a crack stage program, house piled up better than $9,000.

Garden (Brin)—"The Dove" (U. A.) (1,200; 25-50-75). Hit a snag second week despite heavy plugging and fair first week; below $7,000.

Majestic (Orph)—"Racing Romeo" (F. B. O.) and vaude (15-25-40). Back to usual after two great weeks with special; close to $7,500.

Merrill (Midwesco) — "Student Prince" (M-G) (1,200; 25-50). Second week sharp let down; $7,000.

Miller (Midwesco)—"Red Raiders" (F. N.) (1,600; 25-40-50). Stage band show helped to keep house around $6,600.

Palace (Orph)—"Harvester" (F. B. O) (2,400; 25-50-75). Vaude bill and usual run of cash around $17,000.

Strand (Midwesco) — "Serenade" (Par) (1,200; 30-50). Menjou has a pulling power here; house coasted along close to $7,000.

Wisconsin (Midwesco)—"Rose of Golden West" (F. N.) (2,800; 25-35-50-60). Wow of a stage band with house vocalist featured; picture had big kick with fans and gross climbed accordingly; better than $18,000.

Like It or Not—D'Arcy In for Divorce Suit

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Roy D'Arcy, Roy Guisti off the screen, changed his mind about the divorce suit he started a month ago against Mrs. Laura Rhinock Duffy Guisti and called off the action. Meanwhile, Mrs. Guisti filed a divorce suit of her own and will go through with it.

Mrs. Guisti is the daughter of the late Joseph Rhinock, eastern theatrical manager and one time Congressman.

HANGER'S SENTENCE

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Luther Hanger, 19, who operated a scenario agency under the name of Zano DeMille, pleaded guilty to misusing the mails, before United States District Judge Henning and got six months deferred sentence.

Hanger admitted accepting fees from $10 to $50 from embryo authors, with the understanding he would sell the stories to movie producers.

Now "Kid of Kids"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Australian and New Zealand censors banned the title of "Sting of Stings," Hal Roach comedy, and changed it to "Kid of Kids."

Reason for change was that it was deemed sacrilegeous since "King of Kings" was being shown in that country at the same time.

RADIO INFERIOR TO SIGHT-SOUND

$1,000,000 Offered to Talker for Commercial Rights for Five Years—Not Enough Theatres Equipped Yet — Chains Could Charge on Capacity Basis

NAMES TO PLUG GOODS

Talking pictures loom up as a big commercial advertising medium of the near future. Manufacturers of nationally advertised commodities have already approached the makers of other "talkers" for use on the screens.

In the case of one of the newest talkers a selling agency offered manufacturers of the equipment $1,000,000 for the exclusive sales rights for five years for commercial purposes, this sum to be paid in addition to the price of equipment.

Producers of talking equipment, who also operate theatre chains, like Fox, if accepting commercial advertising, may be in a position to get almost as much revenue from this source as from admission receipts.

15,000,000 Circulation

Talking equipment in 1,000 theatres throughout the country could give advertisers a direct appeal to at least 15,000,000 or more people weekly.

This advertising angle figures to make equipment installation profitable for all chain operators, since revenue from this source is expected to exceed $10,000,000 a year as soon as enough theatres are equipped.

At present the firms wanting to use talking films find equipment has not yet been planted in centers where the advertising will do the most good.

Talking picture publicity is expected to cut mostly into radio advertising appropriations since, in addition to the vocal effect, there will also be an impression of a physical presence.

Cigarette advertising, for example, instead of being plugged by theatrical stars solely in print, will try for the "names" to endorse vocally via the "talkers."

Movietone's Song Picture

James A. Fitzpatrick, independent producer of "Music Master" films, has been engaged by Fox and will start on a one-reel movietone subject based on the song, "In Old Kentucky," by Stephen Foster.

The subject will have a plot with dialog and music. It is the first experiment of its kind yet attempted by any of the mechanicals.

Fitzpatrick will not abandon his present short subject business.

Par-F.N.'s Baseball Swap; Scenarist for Girl Lead

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

A good scenario writer is an even trade for a leading woman, according to Paramount, which wanted Jack Kirkland, scenarist for First National, and the latter company which wanted Thelma Todd, Paramount cutie. The swap is the first of its kind ever reported in Hollywood.

Baseball stuff.

LAEMMLE CONFINED

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Carl Laemmle was stricken with a stomach ailment last week and will be confined to his home in Beverly Canyon for several days.

His illness is said not to be critical.

LAKE'S "BUCK PRIVATES"

In Variety's review of "Buck Privates," favorably commented upon, the reviewer did not mention Stuart Lake, who wrote the story.

Mr. Lake says he can't understand how Variety could overlook a guy who had paid his subscription three years in advance.

ITALIAN MADE BIBLICAL FILM FOR STATE RIGHTS

"Jesus of Nazareth," an Italian-made six-reeler, has been purchased for the United States by E. S. McConnell, of Screen Classics, State right organization of Minneapolis, and Bertram Willoughby, non-theatrical distributor, of Chicago. Jack Connolly, formerly mid-western sales manager for Columbia, will go on the road to place it in the various districts.

4 "Gang" Members Thru; Roach Closing March 24

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

When Hal Roach studios close down for five weeks, March 24, four members of the "Our Gang" troupe will be off the payroll. These juvenile prodigies have served their apprenticeship and outgrown their usefulness to the "Gang."

Roach has made arrangements to have this quartet do a vaude skit over the Orpheum and Keith-Albee circuits. The youngsters to go are Jackie Condon, Mildred Cornmen, Bobby Morton and Jay R. Smith. Those to continue on the payroll for next season's output are Joe Cobb, Farina, Jean Darling, Harry Speer and Wheezin. Four new members will be added.

As a result of the early shutdown the Roach lot will not close during July as formerly.

Jetta Goudal Sues DeMille For $42,250 on Contract

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Jetta Goudal has instituted a suit in Superior Court to collect $42,250 from DeMille Pictures Corp., which she asserts is due her for back salary.

Miss Goudal charges a breach of contract. Under her agreement with DeMille, Miss Goudal affirms she was to receive a sliding scale salary ranging from $750 to $1,750 a week. Her attorney is W. I. Gilbert.

Miss Goudal walked off the lot some months ago.

Writers' Code

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Members of the writers' branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences have appointed a special committee composed of Charles Logue, Bess Meredith, John Goodrich, Benjamin Glazer and Agnes Christine Johnston to recommend a code of ethics for screen writers.

The code will suggest certain practices to be followed in relations with producers. It will not interfere with the writers' standard contract now being drafted by a committee of writers and producers through the academy.

Mrs. Kerrick Cleared

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

The jury in Judge Fricke's court cleared Mrs. Sarah Kerrick of manslaughter charges in connection with the death of her husband, Tom Kerrick, picture cowboy. Kerrick was killed last year during an affair in his Hollywood home.

Originally, five persons were accused of the crime and convicted of manslaughter. Later the conviction was reversed on appeal and all but Mrs. Kerrick were cleared by the district attorney's office.

33⅓% OF BRITISH ARE PICTURE HOUSE GOERS

Best English, German and American Films in Britain During 1927 Named

Washington, Feb. 14.

Summarizing 1927 as the "most significant in the history of the British film industry," Grant Isaacs, American assistant trade commissioner, London, reports the development of the Film Quota Bill, to the Department of Commerce, as now reaching the stage of centering around the naming of the committee to administer the law.

Films censored by the British board from January through November, 1927, gives the following representation to the larger American picture makers: Paramount, 104; Fox, 89; Jury-Metro-Goldwyn, 70; First National, 58; Warner Bros., 43; Pathe, 96; and F. B. O., 23. United Artists is not named, but "Allied Artists" is and with nine pictures.

"Ben-Hur" was the greatest money-getter of the year, says Mr. Isaacs. Others which drew above the average were: "Chang," "7th Heaven," "Way of All Flesh," "My Best Girl," "Under Artic Skies," "Kid Brother," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

German box office successes were: "Faust," "Cinderella," "Metropolis," and "The Student of Prague."

Outstanding British successes were: "Madcmoiselle From Armentieres," "Roses of Picardy," "Flag Lieutenant," "Flight Commander," "The Ring," "The Lodger," "Hindle Wakes," "Palaver," "Downhill," "Nelson," "Somehow Good," "The Somme," and "The Battles of Coronel and the Falkland Islands."

British production in 1928 is forecast by the trade as doubling that of 1927 with its official 47 and its trade claim of 60.

Conservatively the American official sees an actual 57 productions for the year. Fifteen of these have already been trade shown, it is added.

Approximately 100 new super houses were established either through construction or conversion in 1927 giving the total estimated seating capacity for the British Isles as between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000. Population is estimated at 42,000,000, with it reckoned that there are a steady 14,000,000 picture goers.

Miss Del Rio's Minor Poisoning Halts 'Dancer'

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Production on "Red Dancer of Moscow" is being held up for 10 days due to the illness of Dolores Del Rio.

Miss Del Rio was allowed last week to return to M-G to finish some scenes in "Trail of '98." Immediately after she completed this work, her eyes and back began to swell. Doctors said that she was suffering from poisoned oak and it would take about 10 days or more before she would recover.

In the meantime Raoul Walsh, directing "Red Dancer," had completed all the other scenes and was forced to suspend activity.

PATHE STOCK, BONDS RECOVER SHARPLY; "A" SHARES AT 16

Short Covering Speeded by Kennedy's Entrance Into Situation—Clique Again Aggressive in Paramount—Looks Like Move in Warner Bros.

Hasty covering by shorts in Pathe "A" stock on news that Joseph P. Kennedy of F. B. O. had taken charge of the concern moved that issue from 8⅛ Friday to 16, yesterday's top. The retreat of shorts began Saturday and carried through until noon yesterday.

With the bear lines taken up, it was obvious that no buying was in sight and prices eased more than a point. While the stock was rallying under bear profit taking, a parallel move was on in the 7 per cent bonds, which yesterday got back from 50 to nearly 70.

Since this result could not well have originated in technical short covering, the inference was something was on foot on the part of the banking interests concerned in Pathe, and this swift recovery contributed to the betterment of the stock. Ticker players are not interested in Pathe around 15 just yet.

After its sensational collapse and recovery, it is the view that anything is possible, with the consensus tending to belief that on precedent it is likely to go below 14 before it goes far on the up side. Recovery from so severe a market smash is likely to be a slow process (ticker prices at one time discounted everything, including receivership), and that leaves the way open for pool manipulation. For the first time in nearly four years there is talk of bear pools in the list.

Paramount's Top

Paramount touched a new top yesterday of 117¾, fractionally above its January peak of 117⅜, representing the renewal of aggressive pool operations. The setback from 117 to 111 apparently disposed of weak trailers, and the pool is in the saddle again.

Nobody looks for a wide swing up at this time, the situation being unfavorable for bull manipulation. Last week, on large transactions, Paramount was up over 4 points. The fourth quarter statement, which was a disappointment, is now out of the way.

Loew went through another of its periodical moves up past 62, and then eased off. Yesterday it swung between 61 and 62. Pressure of banking influence against sensational market exploitation is a brake on the Loew pool's operations, for nobody any longer resists the idea that the stock is being handled by a clique of some sort. Promise of sensational advance in Loew is still heard, but is attracting less following because of the percentage against any wide bull upturn.

Fox about held its own, selling ex the rights to purchase new stock at the rate of one new for four old. This privilege sold independent of the stock at from 1 to 1⅛. New stock is offered at 75 a share. The four fractional rights at 1¼ makes up the difference between current quotations of about 80 and the price of new stock (75) to old holders.

Warner at 29

Following the sharp recovery of Warner Bros.' bonds on the curb there was a brisk upturn in the listed stock, which touched 29 yesterday. Company's statement for fourth quarter shows profit of about $100,000, compared with a loss of almost exactly the same amount for the same quarter of the preceding year. Also there are reports of new interests allying themselves with the company, and increased activity in Vitaphone (profits on "Jazz Singer" are noted) gives the concern a more hopeful aspect.

Metro-Goldwyn was traded in during the week at 27, a new top for that usually steady issue. Paying $1.89, Metro-Goldwyn, with its accumulated profits, makes an attractive investment security.

Shubert was bid up from 61¼ to 63 late in the week, but the turnover was not of a size to impress as important or significant.

Md. Censors Only Stopped 2 of 7,000 Films

Baltimore, Feb. 14.

Maryland State Board of Censors only barred two of the 7,000 films reviewed last year. Parts of 355 others were snipped by the shears. The system of volunteer censors has been discontinued in Baltimore, but is being retained in the counties.

Number of cuts, $55, is far less than the $84 recorded the year before.

Fox's $46,000 Remake

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Several months ago Frank O'Conner directed a picture for Fox entitled "Why Sailors Go Wrong," co-featuring Sammy Cohen and the late Ted McNamara. This picture was made at a cost of $110,000, and then ordered scrapped.

Last month Henry Lehrman returned to Fox as a director, and was assigned to remake this picture. At the finish he had about 300 feet of the original picture. Cost of remaking was $46,000, and the picture will be released on the current year's program.

Lehrman has also been assigned to direct "Mr. Romeo" for the same firm.

Cast headed by Lucien Littlefield.

Labor's Own Theatres?

An Associated Press story Monday stated that the February issue of the Electrical Workers' "Journal" stated that labor unions may have a chain of 1,500 theatres under their control.

These "theatres" are to be in labor halls or other meeting places.

In the "Journal's story is also mentioned that "union labor may form its own producing companies and produce the pictures as well as exhibit them."

Some one should cable England.

Bad Business Conditions Felt in N. Y. Neighborhoods

Owing to unusual unemployment conditions, five picture houses on the East Side are closed and three others reported in the red.

As far as can be ascertained only two of the 60 Loew houses in Greater New York ever operated unprofitably. There are now three Commodore, Canal and Avenue B, it is said. And this despite the film booking competition on the East Side has been somewhat modified, the Loew houses splitting product evenly with M. & S. and S. & B.

In addition to general unemployment the East Side has been affected by difficulties in the textile industry from which the majority of the East Siders gain livelihood.

All East Side show places have been hit, including the Yiddish theatres. Immigration is negligible while, meantime, the former East Side population has scattered to other parts of the city. The residents who still live in that part of the town now make Broadway for entertainment.

Unfavorable business conditions have also hurt grosses at the Warwick, Melba, Bedford and Universal, Brooklyn. Some other New York neighborhoods are also off.

Theatre operators estimate from 85 to 100 second and subsequent run houses in Greater New York have been affected by a drop in business ranging from 10 to 35 percent.

Kane's $62,000 Charge

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Robert Kane paid $40,000 for the screen rights to "Harold Teen," and is only using the title. A studio overhead charge of $22,000 was added before he started to write a story, bringing the total up to $62,000 and more before a crank was turned.

Picture is being produced by Kane for First National.

RUDOLPH PROMOTED

Chicago, Feb. 14.

William Rudolph, manager of the local United Artists theatre, has been promoted to district manager and will spend his time between the new theatre in Detroit and here.

BROOKH'RT BILL INTERESTING TO CONGRESSMEN

Besides 3 Members of the House Already Introducing, 9 Others Approach

Senator Brookhart, father of the Brookhart Bill, of such intense interest to the picture trade, states that within the week nine Congressmen have approached him with the suggestion that they be permitted to introduce his bill into the House.

This is besides the three members of Congress who have already filed the Brookhart Bill.

It indicates, says the Senator, that the House is lining up to his measure, which, he feels confident, will be favorably acted upon in the Senate.

The matter of the hearings before the Interstate Commerce Committee has not been as yet set.

Washington, Feb. 14.

Now there are three members of the House sponsoring the Brookhart bill, to stop block booking, in the lower legislative branch of Congress.

Latest to introduce the measure is Grant M. Hudson (R) Mich., who has followed the lead of Clarence Cannon (D) Mo., and omitted Section 2 and 3 of the Senate bill. These sections, as has been set forth, aim to establish the interstate commerce phase of the industry.

Political significance now takes on a 50-50 aspect. Brookhart, insurgent Republican in the Senate; Cannon and Celler, Democrats, and Hudson, Republican, in the House.

Nothing yet has been settled as to hearings in either the Senate or House.

Fox, Stanley and Newark

Newark, N. J., Feb. 14.

Insiders are puzzling over the apparent indecision of William Fox to proceed with his announced 4,000-seat picture theatre in this city.

They appear to connect this in a way with the Fablans' recent request to withdraw from the Stanley Company chain, a request not complied with to date.

Only Two Regular Units for Capitol

Publix-Loew units playing the Capitol, New York, will take up routes so long as new houses continue to open to complete and round out the bookings. Following these out of town premiers, the stage acts appearing at the Capitol will be produced solely for that house.

The current Capitol unit, "The Fast Mail," goes to Buffalo next week and this coming Saturday's (Feb. 18) unit will go to the new Loew's, Syracuse, N. Y., after playing the M-G-M Broadway house. This is due to the openings at Syracuse and Columbus, O.

It is after these two units are out of the way that the Loew-Publix production staff will start turning out weekly material, just for the Capitol's consumption.

Christie Shut Down

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Christie studios will close down this week for three months.

The length of the shutdown is due to the fact that the company had finished its entire production for the '27-'28 season and has not laid out a schedule for next year.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Dolores Costello, laying off since the Warner studio closed in December, will return to work for that organization again in April.

She is to be starred in a special production.

Rex King's First

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Fox begins production on its first western, featuring Rex King, under title "Wild West Romance." R. L. Hough directing.

King has several years' experience as a cowboy actor.

CENTRALIZATION SURVEY ON STUDIOS AIMS FOR SWEEPING ECONOMIES; A. M. P. P. MEETING

Industrial Engineers Working on Collective Buying of Materials, Interchanging of Sets, Lights and Wardrobe, With Central Garage for Transportation—Figure to Save $2,000,000 of Annual $15,000,000 for Materials and $500,000 on Costumes—Plan in Operation May 1

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Those belonging to the Association of Motion Picture Producers, when they attended their annual meeting here, were informed by Will Hays, honorary president of the organization, that a plan was on foot for the consolidation of general activities designed to increase the efficiency of their respective organizations and to effect economy.

Hays declared that Ernst & Ernst, industrial engineers, had been making a survey of conditions in all of the studios for more than a week and from reports turned in to the industrial economy committee, of which Fred W. Beetson is chairman, there are indications of increased efficiency and unusual savings in purchasing and other departments.

$2,000,000 Saving

It was pointed out by Hays that the survey which is being made shows that $15,000,000 alone is expended every year by the studios for building material. He stated that the plan being worked on will provide for collective buying by the studios of all materials. Each purchasing agent is to have a budget prepared six months in advance with a list of materials to be needed for production. With the various studios using similar materials for this work, it is calculated that instead of each studio doing its buying from middlemen and jobbers they can do their purchasing direct from the factories and producers of these articles.

It has been figured that by collective buying through a central source, the studios will easily save around $2,000,000 a year on the construction end alone.

At the same time Hays informed the producers present that he will continue as president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, with whom he has a contract to run another nine years. He told members that all loose cogs had been tightened and that he had assurance of full support and co-operation.

Elections

Cecil B. De Mille was elected president of the local organization with Watterson Rothacker first vice-president. Henry Henrickson is second vice-president, and Fred W. Beetson was re-elected to the posts of executive vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Members of the committee working with Beetson on the efficiency and economy plan are Ben Jackson, Fox; Walter Stern, Universal; M. E. Greenwood, M-G; George Voelck, De Mille, and Frank Brandow, Paramount. This committee holds meetings several times a week with various studio heads to ascertain conditions in their respective departments.

The survey being made by Ernst & Ernst will not be confined to the purchase of building materials. That firm will look into the operation of all departments such as casting, auditing, transportation, wardrobe, property, executive and publicity, and report back the studio which they think is operating the most satisfactory and efficiently.

Interchanging Sets and Lights

The plan being worked on also calls for a clearing house which will enable the producers to exchange sets, properties, wardrobe, etc. Beetson's idea is to have pictures taken of all standing sets and properties and keep on file as well as sending duplicates to all members. Rentals on these properties will be set at a net figure instead of on the percentage of the cost basis as is used at present. Photographs and rental prices of railroad cars, New York and European street sets will also be sent out with rental price plainly marked and not to be regulated as to what particular person uses it.

Another plan will be for the interchange of electrical equipment. Many studios are overstocked while others have not enough when working at full capacity. In the past this equipment has been obtained from the outside. It is figured that with the centralization plan the studios will be able to save themselves about 40 per cent. of the present electric investment through the courtesy system.

Wardrobe

One of the biggest problems will be the matter of a central wardrobe and costume department. In the past producers have been giving one concern $90,000 a year for costume rental, and after the stuff was turned back had no benefit from it. For the past six months the studios have been increasing their wardrobe departments and it is calculated that when inventory is taken the interchange system will be feasible, saving $500,000 a year by using each other's garments.

Then the matter of trucking and transportation will be taken up. Many of the studios own their own transportation equipment, while others have been paying from $300 to $1,500 for the use of trucks and cars. It is believed that a central garage can be established with the producers buying their own transportation equipment and then being charged pro-rata as they use the transportation facilities they provide for themselves.

It is expected that the survey will be completed by March 1 with the collective plan of operation in use about May 1, when the studios are in full swing from a production standpoint.

Wampas Nominations

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Mark Larkin, press agent for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, was the only candidate presented for the post of president of the Wampas by the nominating committee.

Candidates for the other offices include Harold Hurley, Jeff Lazarus, Bob Yost and Barrett Kelsling, for first and second vice-presidents; Le Roy Johnston, James Loughborough and Charles West, for secretary; Sam Jacobson, Ray Jones and George Thomas, for treasurer.

Nominated for the board of directors are H. F. Arnold, H. H. Beall, Oliver Garver, Carroll Graham, Charles Kurtzman, George Landy, J. F. Murray, Russell Phelps, Neville Reay, Joe Reddy, Joe Steele, E. O. Van Pelt, H. B. Wright and Hal Wallis.

MORE TOURISTS

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

The number of picture people going abroad this season is increasing.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Jane Winton have already left for the Continent, and Florence Vidor will sail in four weeks after completing her next picture.

Julius Bernheim, production superior at Universal, will also trip to Europe during the shut down at U City.

WOMAN PRODUCER IN N. Y.

Henrietta Cohn, of Paramount, the only woman in charge of a producing unit, will arrive in New York this week.

This is her first visit since leaving for the coast as assistant to B. P. Shulberg.

Anne Nichols Eastbound

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

With the film version of "Able" completed by Paramount, Anne Nichols and her general manager, William de Lignemare, leave for New York Feb. 29.

They will take back a print of the completed picture.

McCarthy is preparing an untitled production, and Col. Tim McCoy will do a western, Nick Grinde directing.

MAZDAS IN LOBBY

Hotel Demonstration for Bulb Lighting—G. E. Engineers on Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Engineers and experts from General Electric Co. are here watching the mazda light studio demonstrations being sponsored by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The list includes S. E. Gates, R. E. Farnham, I. H. Van Horn, L. C. Porter and Dr. M. Luckiesh.

Demonstrations are being conducted by the American Society of Cinematographers twice weekly at one of the large studios. Lights, make-up, equipment, raw stock and laboratory work are donated by various dealers. Producers' association is standing all charges for labor during the demonstrations.

One demonstration was in the lobby of a Hollywood hotel, to show the adaptability of mazda lighting for interior locations other than studio stages.

BALKED ON COSTUME FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Pathe-De Mille wanted Rod La Rocque to do another costume picture, an adaptation of a Sir Walter Scott story, but he balked, preferring his present story he is now making, "The Ticket Chopper."

Work on this picture will take La Rocque to New York at the time his wife, Vilma Banky, returns from Europe. William K. Howard directing.

Lux and Film Names

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Manufacturers of Lux hand soap have the Coast picture crowd thoroughly covered and have obtained more than 300 endorsements of the soap from prominent stars, directors and featured players. The agreements cover a period of three years, and do not allow the endorsers to recommend any other hand soap during that period.

The endorsements are used in advertisements for Lux in newspapers, magazines and billboard display. The national advertising campaign for Lux runs over $1,000,000 a year, and the advertisements for the picture gang will be framed similar to the current "Lucky Strike" endorsement ads.

In addition to giving the endorsers the breaks in advertising, the Lux company also supplies each one with the hand soap for use at home and in the studio. A number of studios which have most of their people on the endorsing list, are also supplied gratis with the soap, with studio getting over a gross a month.

Talker Scoring by G. E. For F. B. O. and Pathe Film

General Electric, through its Television experiments and development, through its rights to patents held by practically every company pushing the different brands of "talkers," is aiming to make its own talker, now called the Kanetophone.

The agreement for an exchange of certain patents among General, Western, Westinghouse and the Radio Corporation of America is one of years' standing. It is G. E's. idea to have one method of talker accessible to all producers and others interested.

As General and RCA have bought an interest in F. B. O., a first move in marketing its own talker will be for G. E. to score pictures from the two-reeler to the Gold Bond in the forthcoming group under the F. B. O. banner. Special apparatus has been ordered to the West Coast for that purpose.

The F. B. O. studio recording will come under the supervision of G. E's. representatives. It is said Joseph P. Kennedy and J. J. Murdock have conferred of late on the subject of F. B. O.'s talker method being applied to Pathe pictures. The first Pathe picture which may be scored under the understanding is DeMille's "The Godless Girl."

TWO MORE RUSSIANS

Zakoro Film Corporation, handling "Potemkin," the first Russian picture brought to the United States, will also release "The Bear's Wedding" and "The Station Master" made by Amkino, the film-making subsidiary of the Soviet government.

Zakoro releases on a state right basis, but handles its own physical distribution in the metropolitan area.

LUBITSCH 8 DAYS AHEAD

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Ernst Lubitsch, directing Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" for Paramount, is eight days ahead of shooting schedule, with three more weeks to go.

Production started Jan. 3, with the schedule originally laid out for eight weeks.

FOX RE-SIGNS FORD

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

John Ford, who directed "Four Sons" and is now making "Hangman's House," has been given a new contract by Fox.

The agreement is for another year.

MIDNITE SHOW STOPPED BY UP-STATE MGRS.

Action May Split Rochester Ass'n—Prevented "Gaucho" Sunday

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 14.

Cancellation of a midnight premiere of "The Gaucho" (Fairbanks) by the authorities on complaint of members of the managers' association has split the organization.

A. Fennevessy, manager of the Rochester theatre, where the midnight show was scheduled, threatened to resign as president of the managers' body because of the action of his fellow theatre men.

"The Gaucho" was advertised to open at the Rochester at 11:30 Saturday evening. Rival theatre men pointed out to Curtis W. Baker, director of police, that the law forbade picture exhibition before 2 p. m. Sundays, and the showing would run into Sunday morning. On that basis the official stopped the picture, although tickets had already been sold for the performance.

Fennevessy protests that he was not notified of the proposed action, members of the association having been called by phone. A week ago Fennevessy put on a midnight show of Gilda Gray film and this is supposed to have inspired the opposition of the other house managers.

AL'S FLYING 8

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Al Christie has lost eight of his leading actresses to other producers in the last 12 months.

They are: Ann Christy, now leading lady for Harold Lloyd; Doris Dawson, now under contract to First National; Mariam Byron, with Buster Keaton on latter's new M-G contract; Requel Torres, with M-G under a five-year contract; Edna Marian, offered more money by Hal Roach and moved; Ann Carter, left to play leads for U westerns; Natalie Joyce, offered lead opposite Tom Mix and now free lancing; Caryl Lincoln, accepted Fox contract.

Pathe Enticing Miss Joy, And Crisp Unit Due East

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Despite an unsettled inside condition, with Leatrice Joy's contract expiring March 1, Pathe-De Mille is preparing to make it more interesting for her to remain by selecting such stories as "Man-Made Woman," "Craig's Wife" and "Ned McCobb's Daughter." The first of these is now in production with John Boles playing the male lead.

William Boyd, principal member of the cast, and Donald Crisp, director, now producing "The Cop" at this studio, will leave for New York to shoot the actual New York police background in the story. Troupe leaves here about Feb. 20 to round out one of the pictures scheduled, no matter what happens.

Finance Airing

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Finances in picture making were aired in superior court before Judge Sproul when D. F. Griff and H. A. Bellgood testified in their suit against Harold M. Lewis and J. P. McGowan.

According to complaint and testimony, Griff and Bellgood bought a third interest in the production of 16 films which Lewis and McGowan were to make through Anchor Film Distributors of Hollywood. Griff and Bellgood claimed they sank $5,000 in the deal and produced a contract to that effect.

Other two men denied having received this money and set up a separate defense that the contract was usurious. Case under advisement by the court.

Studio Name Change

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Former Richard Thomas studios are now operating under the name of Carl Art Studios.

This action is by the owners of the property who cancelled Thomas' lease.

THE CHANGES WITH YEARS

with the old Metro company back in 1917.

Lewis J. Selznick

Lewis J. Selznick, organizer and head of the recent defunct Selznick Pictures Corporation, is now conducting and financing a loan office in Los Angeles. Howard Selznick, his youngest son, is associated with his father in this new line of endeavor. The elder Selznick at one time was looked upon as one of picture's most promising executives.

Charles Swickard

Charles Swickard, another director of features for the old Metro company, is one of the few old-timers who abandoned pictures at the right time when he had enough money to buy a raisin ranch, which he is operating in Fresno county.

His brother, Josef, stepped into the limelight as a picture actor just at the time Charles quit and is now doing his share to perpetuate the name of Swickard in the picture business.

A. L. Teagarden, formerly auditor of General Films, is working in the credit department of a Los Angeles department store.

Frank Dyer

Frank Dyer, at one time president of the General Films, is back at his original profession of patent attorney, and is doing business on Wall street, New York.

Jack Clarke, organizer of the old Kalem company and a powerful figure at that time, responsible for giving many of the big men in the business today their first chance, is now eking out a living by playing extra parts about the Hollywood studios.

F. B. Warren, organizer of the old Goldwyn company, is in the perfume business in New York city.

B. A. Rolfe, organizer of the old Metro company, is conducting and operating a band in New York picture houses and night clubs.

Walter McNamara

Walter McNamara wrote "Traffic in Souls," which made the first million dollars for Universal, and later through the same writing efforts brought the late George Loane Tucker into the limelight, as well as other present-day stars. He is now working for the city of Los Angeles, editing a municipal organ.

Billy Garwood

Billy Garwood, at one time a big Universal star, is selling clothing in a local gent's furnishing store, and claims to be very contented.

Gladden James, another picture star for the Vitagraph company, is now a hotel clerk in the Warner-Kelton Hotel, Hollywood.

1st Film in Calif

O. M. Gove, known to the profession as Senator Gove, one of the early directors and cameraman for Biograph and Kalem, was the first to make a picture in California, "The California Hold-Up." He is now in Hollywood, where he recently sold his last camera to Louis B. Mayer and said he was ready to retire.

J. Stuart Blackton

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton always identified wherever his name appeared as the one and only real pioneer of the picture business, is now sales manager for the selling of memberships in the Southern California Athletic and Country Club.

This club was started several years ago, but through lack of organization stopped at the excavation for a pretentious club house. The building will be resumed as soon as sufficient memberships are subscribed, which should be in short time under the direction of the Commodore, who is known for organizing a similar club in Chicago.

Katherine MacDonald

Katherine MacDonald, one of the big stars of her time and described as the most beautiful girl in America, is now conducting a beauty parlor in Hollywood.

Mary Fuller

Mary Fuller, formerly Edison star, is one of the few feminine stars who saved her money and invested it wisely. She is said to have made a big fortune by speculating in stocks and bonds, and is believed to be the richest picture actress to survive the business.

Ruth Roland

Ruth Roland is another example of making the best of the game by investing her earnings in real estate having made investments at the proper time. She is now rated as a wealthy operator of pay dirt, with one of the most exclusive residential districts in Los Angeles named after her for no other reason than she bought it at hay-fild prices.

Miss Roland keeps in touch with theatricals by an occasional tour in vaudeville, and can be heard every once in a while broadcasting her "Blue" songs over one of the local radio stations. These, however, are broadcast in the interest of promoting her real estate business.

J. J. Kennedy

J. J. Kennedy, one of the big men in General Films, at one time its president when G. F. was called "The Trust," and always an engineer, has given up the picture business entirely. He is reported at present in the construction line.

Doc Willat

Doc Willat started in the picture business with Carl Laemmle in the old Imp days. Doc was the first to experiment in this country with technicolor films. He is now in the real estate business.

Campbell McCulloch

Campbell McCulloch, pioneer theatrical agent and later publicity director for the old Trianglc, is now in Hollywood writing for the Christian Science Monitor.

John A. Barry, assistant to D. W. Griffith on "The Birth of a Nation," is now a member of the firm of Barry & Barry, realtors, in northeast Hollywood.

Horkheimers

The Horkheimer brothers, organizers of the Balboa Pictures Corporation at Long Beach, Calif., are now engaged in the real estate business in Hollywood.

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company is retired from the picture business, active in real estate dealings in Los Angeles.

William Jenner, former film distributor and later responsible for elevating Harry Langdon into the feature comedy ficld, is delving into real estate. He is said to possess a large orange grove in Orange county, Cal.

George K. Spoor

George K. Spoor, one of the organizers of Essanay, abandoned the producing of pictures to become an inventor. He is said to have spent some six or seven million dollars in trying to perfect stereoscopic pictures, while his former partner, Broncho Billy Anderson, is reported to be somewhere in San Francisco directing stage plays.

Col. W. H. Selig

Col. W. H. Selig, one of the earliest film producers, is more or less retired from the show business, with vast real estate holdings in Los Angeles. He derives a nice income from the Selig Zoo, where people are allowed to enter and look at the animals for so much a head.

This list is not complete. It will be added to in future issues of Variety.

Educat'l Closing Mar. 15

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Educational Studios close March 15 for two months. Closing is brought about through entire product for this season being already made, and a good portion of next season's product completed.

U. A. BORROWS LA ROCQUE

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

United Artists has borrowed Rod La Rocque from DeMille for "La Plava," to be directed by Fred Niblo.

This picture was to have been a starring production for Gloria Swanson. She, however, elected not to do it and Lupe Velez will play the feminine lead.

BROOKS-ARLEN AS TEAM

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Louise Brooks and Richard Arlen will be featured in "Beggars of Life," Jim Tully's story.

William Wellman to direct for Paramount with production in April.

This takes Arlen out of the new Fields-Conklin comedy.

KERRY'S FIRST M-G

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Norman Kerry's first chore as a free lance actor, since expiration of his contract with Universal, is for M-G as lead in "Tides of Empire."

Al Rogell, former First National director, will megaphone.

Bill Leyser Resigns

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Billy Leyscr, assistant publicity director at DeMille studios, has resigned, effective Feb. 18.

Leyser, former Cleveland newspaperman, has been with the company for about two years.

GREAT STATES ADDING THREE NEW HOUSES

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Great States Theatres, Inc., subsidiary of Publix, is completing plans for several new houses during 1928 and will acquire others.

Acquisition of the La Salle theatre, La Salle, Ill., occurred last week, with the house's former owner, E. G. Newman, retained as manager. Great States also has the Majestic, in this town, playing pictures, Vitaphone and Sunday stage shows. Included on the 1928 building program are two new houses, one at Decatur and one in Aurora, Ill.

Decatur's new house is to be carried by a presentation policy. The circuit's other house in Decatur, the Lincoln Square, has a straight picture policy. At Aurora the organization already has three houses, one of which will be razed for commercial purposes when the new theatre is completed. Aurora business men are financing, with Great States to lease and operate with a stage band policy.

Brenon-Thalberg Cutting "Clown" in New York

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Herbert Brenon has finished making "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" for M-G and arrives in New York this week to cut the picture. When it is assembled, he will go over it with Irving Thalberg, who is stopping off in New York for a few days before sailing for Europe.

Brenon is to remain in New York until the latter part of March, then returns here to resume his contract with United Artists.

Thalberg will take a print of "Trail" to Europe so that Robert W. Service, who inspired the story and is living abroad, can see it.

ELECTRICIAN KILLED

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Thomas Rafferty, 35, electrician at Fox studios, fell from a set on which he was working and was killed. He died at the Dickey and Cass Emergency Hospital in Hollywood.

Rafferty, an old studio employee, was wiring some lights from a runway atop a stage where Richard Rosson was directing. He lost his balance and toppled to the ground suffering a broken neck.

REINHARDT AND GISH

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Joseph M. Schenck announces that Max Reinhardt will be here in April to direct "The Miracle Woman" for United Artists. Lillian Gish will be starred.

Miss Gish has conferred with Reinhardt in New York and is expected here in several weeks.

McGOWAN'S VAUDE STORY

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Jack McGowan, author of "Excess Baggage" and brought to the coast by M-G, is writing an original with a vaudeville background for that company.

CASTING AGENCY'S OFFICERS

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Officers for the ensuing year of the Central Casting Corp., which supplies the extra talent to members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, are Fred W. Beetson, president; Irving G. Thalberg and Wm. R. Fraser, vice-presidents, and Saul Wurtzel, treasurer.

AILEEN PRINGLE'S CONTRACT

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Aileen Pringle has a new contract with M-G-M, providing for 26 consecutive weeks' work at $1,000 a week, with an option beyond that period.

Two of four pictures in which Miss Pringle will appear under the new terms will be as co-feature with Lew Cody.

English 6-Reeler in N. Y.

Six-reeler, "The Woman Tempted," made in England by the Ward-our Film Co., has reached New York for distribution.

The Aywon Film Exchange has taken the film and may handle it on state rights basis.

In the cast are Julienne Compton and Warwick Ward.

Seitz Directing "Storm"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

George Seitz will direct "After the Storm" for Columbia.

Hobart Bosworth is to be featured.

To the Letter

San Francisco, Feb. 14.

Fanchon and Marco's local production office received a booking and billing sheet from Los Angeles lining up a forthcoming show at the Granada. Closely following instruction to always enumerate "male" or "female" after acts' names, the sheet read, in part:

"Goebel's Lions, 3 M; Bernard's Dogs, 1 F, 2 M."

Numerous other M's and F's listed, but they were rightly so.

LOEW'S SYRACUSE OPENING

"West Point" as Film—A. Anderson as House Mgr—Opens Saturday

Syracuse, Feb. 14.

Loew's new State, opening Saturday morning, will have Andrew Anderson transferred to Syracuse from a Loew theatre in Dayton, O., as house manager. Anderson replaces G. A. Pennock, of Pittsburgh, originally selected for the local berth.

Sanford Forkus comes from Loew's State, St. Louis, as assistant manager, while William McGrath, transferred from Loew's Washington theatre, will handle publicity and advertising. Bruce Brummett and Ralph Pollock, both of Los Angeles, will serve as musical director and leader of the stage band, respectively. Paul M. Forster, whose prior local affiliations have been the Empire, and Eckel will be the featured organist.

Loew's faces hot opposition from local picture houses. The Strand starts a two-weeks' run of "The Circus," while the Eckel's counter attraction is "Patent Leather Kid." "King of Kings" comes to the Wieting Sunday. Loew's inaugural program embraces "West Point" (M-G) and a Publix unit.

Lord's Pathe Comics

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Del Lord is now dickering with Pathe to produce short subject comedies.

Negotiations were commenced after F. Richard Jones had turned down a proposition made by the company, claiming that he couldn't turn out suitable two-reel comedies at a maximum budget of $20,000.

Understanding is that negotiations with Lord will be closed this week.

Sennett's 4 For F. N.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Mack Sennett is reported negotiating with First National to produce four full-length features comedies for the '28-'29 program.

It is also likely that First National will release "The Goodbye Kiss," which Sennett produced on his own prior to closing his studio last month.

INSPIRATION'S "INSPIRATION"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

"Inspiration" is the title of a picture which Halperin Bros. will make for Inspiration release through United Artists. It's an original by Rupert Hughes.

William K. Howard will direct, although under a two-picture contract with DeMille, only one of which will be completed when he starts on "Inspiration."

ANOTHER "COHENS-KELLYS"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Another "Cohens and Kellys" will be made by Universal. This time the plot will be laid in Turkey.

Matt Taylor is making the screen treatment of story by Edward Montagne. Henry Pollard will direct.

CLARA BOW'S "FLEET"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Raymond Cannon and J. Walter Rubin are writing adaptation of "The Fleet's In" for Paramount.

Clara Bow will be starred, with production supervision by Ben Zeidman.

CHAPLIN'S "SUICIDE CLUB"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Charlie Chaplin expects to get into production on his next picture by March 1.

It will probably be "The Suicide Club."

4-Year-Old for "Gang"

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Mary Ann Jackson, four-year-old screen actress, was signed to a five-year contract by Hal Roach. She will appear in "Our Gang Comedies."

184,500 SEATS ON 181 SITES; WHOA DETROIT!

Racing Chi's Film Capacities—Localities Estimate 25% Overseated

Detroit, Feb. 14.

With 181 picture-playing theatres, representing an aggregate of 184,500 seats, and a liberal increase slated for the current and coming years, Detroit is speedily gaining on Chicago in the race for the inter-city over-seating championship of America.

While a local civic bureau was proudly divulging figures on theatres and seats last week, Detroit showmen were increasing the volume of their bewailments. Estimates released by the bureau embrace only such houses as play pictures.

According to gentlemen supposedly in the know, right now Detroit is over-seated by almost 25 per cent. Most of the complaints are due to a noticeable depression that began recently and still continues, though it is possible the slump itself is a direct cause of a temporary disinclination to attend theatres.

Kunsky's 10,550 Seats

The period most notably contributory to the town's seating capacity has been that of the past five years. During that time 60 new houses, or about 75,000 seats, have been added. The foremost contributor to local seating has been the Kunsky enterprises, who occupy a position here similar to that of Balaban & Katz in Chicago. This company has constructed in the past five years three downtown houses, Michigan, Capitol and State, numbering between them 10,550 chairs. These are in addition to other and older vaude-film and straight picture stands operated by Kunsky in the business district. The Michigan and Capitol play stage band presentations, while the State splits Loew vaude with films. Kunsky has discontinued building downtown lately, but is still very active in the neighborhoods.

Other large stands to open during that time are the Oriental, Miles-operated and local possessor of the Pan franchise, and the United Artists, seating 2,000, which recently opened. The new Fox house, seating 5,000 and replacing Fox's Washington, a smaller and older theatre and regarded as better suited for legit, is nearing completion for opening in the fall.

The Koppin circuit, an enterprising independent organization controlling 21 houses in and about Detroit, suddenly dropped all plans for the construction of three new theatres when the current general slump gained ominous proportions. That might be a true tip-off on the over-seating idea, in that it shows Koppin as unwilling to chance furthering the depression by increasing the number of seats.

CHRISTIANSON'S F. N. FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

First National has signed Benjamin Christiansen to direct Milton Sills in "Night Birds," underworld story. J. T. O'Donohue, adapting, with Wid Gunning unit producer.

Christiansen was brought to this country from Sweden by M-G a couple of years ago, directed two pictures for that company, but did not have his contract renewed.

CHANEY'S NEXT

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

"The Bugle Sound," a story of North Africa, by General Zinovi Petchkoff, will be Lon Chaney's next.

George Hill is to direct.

The cast of "His Country," featuring Rudolph Schildkraut for De Mille, includes Louis Netheaux, Fritz Feld, Louise Dresser, Lucien Littlefield, Robert Edeson, Milton Holmes and Linda Landa.

Cecil B. De Mille will adapt "Celebrity," stage play by Willard Keefe for the screen. William Boyd starred.

BRITISH FILM FIELD

End of the L. T. V. Circuit—Kine-Vaudeville Coming —200 Theatres Aimed At—The Big and the Little Circuit Plan—Ingram for "British" Pictures? — Star-Finding and Tests — Wembley, Harrow and Some Others—About Folk

By Frank Tilley

London, Feb. 5.

It is a curious freak of fate that the L. T. V. houses should have come back, even nominally, to Walter Gibbons. For it was out of the one-time Gibbons Circuit that Charles Gulliver expanded and created the L. T. V. chain, some of which passes now under Gibbons' control to form part of the 200 theatre circuit at which Szarvasy, Beaverbrook, the Standard Film Company and Provincial Cinematograph Theatres are aiming.

Some $3,850,000 is being paid for the Palladium, Holborn Empire, Ponge Empire, and the stock of the Variety Theatres Controlling Co., which the L. T. V. owned. Additionally, $550,000 is being paid for the freehold of the land on which the Palladium stands. Out of this money all encumbrances, mortgages, debentures and other liabilities have to be met. Deposited on this deal is $375,000, and the balance has to be paid by Feb. 11.

This finally disposes of the L. T. V. theatres, 17 of which were sold some time ago to Summers Brown, Sidney Bernstein and others for $4,000,000, $1,000,000 in cash and the rest in debentures.

Other Acquisitions

Additionally, the group for which Gibbons is operating is declared to have purchased the Gordon Circuit, involving the Lyric Super Cinema, Mere Lane Super, Homer Cinema, Grosvenor Picture House, Rice Lane Picture House, and the Royal Picture House, all in Liverpool; the Royal Hippodrome, and the new Rialto, Liverpool; the Haigh houses, which include 10 in Liverpool, two in Birkenhead, and one in Wallasey; the Shapeero theatres at Nottingham; the Levy circuit, which consists of 15 theatres in London, Birmingham, Birkenhead, Liverpool, Leeds, Newcastle, Middlesbrough, and Nuneaton, and five of the seven Hyams' theatres, including the newly opened Broadway, Stratford, the Canterbury, Lambeth, the Imperial, Stratford, and two houses at Hoxton. These latter are all neighborhood houses in London, and the purchase price is said to have been $2,300,000.

Further deals are in progress, and a start has been made towards getting together the executive to run this circuit. Harold Lipson, formerly in charge of the Goldwyn Liverpool branch office, and lately with Producers' Distributing Co., has left this week to join the Gibbons' outfit, and Adney Gibbons, son of Sir Walter and god-son of the late Adney Payne (who, curiously, at one time owned the Canterbury theatre, now bought by the Gibbons' combine), is being sent to New York and Chicago to look at the theatres there, especially those running films and vaudeville, to see what it is all about.

The Financial End

According to Gibbons, the group behind these deals have a capital of $50,000,000. Maybe he means that will be the capital of the ultimate company. Meanwhile, an investment trust has been floated, under the title of the 1928 Investment Trust, Ltd., with a capital of $2,250,000, and it is to be the holding company for these theatre interests.

Its directors include F. A. Szarvasy, admittedly the real operator behind the theatre buying. The financial house of Marcus Samuel & Co. is making the issue, and the chairman is Viscount Bearstead, a director of Marcus Samuel, and himself a member of the Samuel family. Others on the board are Col. Bertram, Abel Smith, of Marcus Samuel Co.; the Hon. James Moncrieff Balfour, O.B.E., chairman of the Stockholders' Investment Trust; Lionel Arthur Stride, of the Industrial and General Trust, and Rudolph Edgar Francis de Trafford, a partner in Higginson Co., merchant bankers.

This flotation was subscribed to for $500,000 before the prospectus was issued, and the public was asked to buy the balance in $50 stock at par, convertible Aug. 1 this year into $6 preference stock and $4 ordinary. The issue was made and the lists closed before 10 in the morning of the same day, owing to over-subscription.

Some Other Ends

Despite the plain deductions to be made from the various connections of Szarvasy, a story was printed naming Lord Rothermere as behind this theatre combine. As Rothermere owns the "Daily Mail," "Daily Mirror," "Evening News," "Sunday Pictorial" and a number of other "over a million a day" circulation newspapers, is at the moment [illegible] in America, but his [illegible] there tell me there is no truth whatever in the story and a denial is being made in Rothermere's papers.

Denials coming from film executives are one thing. A denial coming in published form from the "Daily Mail" centre is another. And can be accepted.

Only suggestion I can offer for the circulation of the story coupling Rothermere with the Szarvasy group is that it was either kite flying or to draw attention away from the real operators.

Meantime, fresh deals go on every day, and the purchases already amount to over 200 theatres. Some of these are small houses, not all the buying being confined to key and first-run halls.

I think, from all the moves and the fragments of evidence procurable the main idea is this:

To form two chains, one composed of the pick of the Provincial Cinematograph houses, plus the best and biggest of those now being acquired, which include in London the Astoria, Capitol, Palladium, New Gallery, Palace, and, just outside the West End, the Kensington. With these a pre-release and key theatre chain will be formed, playing ahead of first runs, and using flash presentations and perhaps vaudeville acts of the feature type.

With the smaller houses a second chain will be linked to the first, to be used for neighborhood first runs in the case of the best of these houses, and for second and third run in the matter of the rest.

Thus, with around 400 theatres, such a combine would have practically all the cream of the release in bulk to offer to a distributor, and if, as seems self-evident, the new combine is allied with the P. C. T.-First National-Pathe-Standard-Metro Goldwyn-United Artists' theatres mergers it will have sufficient product under its own control to be independent of the other distributors, even of Paramount, except on its own terms.

How Paramount would react to such a situation remains to be seen. But at the moment they affirm they are not going into the theatre field here save to the key house extent they are already in, and figure there will ultimately be three big circuits here controlling all the picture houses, one of which will have to go to Paramount to assure itself a regular line of product.

This is likely to bring about the position which nearly came through when Picture Playhouses was being formed in 1919, and Famous was accused of going into the theatre field and denied it. All they were doing was to arrange a contract on which Picture Playhouses would agree to take the Famous program for 21 years.

Another line of houses coming into the Gibbons-Szarvasy group, by the way, is expected to be the Mears' houses. These include the Kensington, the pre-release house of London's finest West End suburb; the Richmond Hippodrome and two picture houses in the same town, and another at East Sheen.

Already, apart from any connection with Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, the Szarvasy circuit has hopelessly outclassed the Gaumont-British theatres end, with whom in several cases their theatres will be in direct competition, for of the only Gaumont-British two big houses in town the Marble Arch Pavilion is out of date and the Shepherd's Bush Pavilion is cut into by the Kensington.

Gaumont-British have, I understand, partly checked this latter position by acquiring the West Kensington and the Shepherd's Bush Pavilion.

A Test Library

For some time there have been fragmentary discussions among the film group of the Federation of British Industries as to the need for forming some kind of centralized library of film tests, storing all tests made by directors, as well as footage cut out of films in the making. But no one appears to get down to it, and any outside suggestion of carrying the thing through is received coldly.

Now, Fred Aifred, a film broker, well known on both sides of the Atlantic, is going to do it on his own account and run it in conjunction with a casting agency. Dealing in foreign rights of British films and in United Kingdom rights of foreign films, he has a projection theatre which he has equipped as a test studio, and is frankly going out to find new talent, give it tests and exploit it at his own expense and risk.

Somebody has got to find some native stars, anyway, if we are going through with the compulsory film making forced on us by a beneficent government. Unless we go on paying high salaries to American stars whose exhibition value has passed its zenith.

Where Are the Pictures?

Stockholders in some of the recent promotions are beginning to ask when some work is going to be started which does not involve expensive trips on the part of the executive to Nice and other delectable spots on the Continent.

One company has got so far as to put Gertrude Lawrence under contract and ship Marshall Neilan over to direct her. That's British Filmcraft. Another has rented floor space at Islington from Piccadilly Pictures, and is to make a start on "The Ringer" as soon as Frances Marillo delivers the scenario. That's British Lion. Another is casting for "Juan Jose," and sending folk over to Paris so the director can make screen tests there before contracting them. That's Whitehall Films. Another has Alice Joyce under contract, paying her $2,500 a week. They haven't started yet, but figure to get to the beginning of "The Rising Generation" shortly. Also dickering for Dolores del Rio for the part of Tondoleyo in "White Cargo." That's W. P. Films-Neoart, not yet floated on the public, but coming.

Julius Hagen, who walked out on W. P. Films Jan. 1 after grossing them over $400,000 on their two films, "The Fake" and "The Further Adventures of the Flag Lieutenant," and his associates have a part negative cost and continental distribution arrangement with Nordisk of Copenhagen, and are dickering with the studios and a star director before they go to the public for money.

Altogether there's lots of talk, much figuring on the lunchtime tablecloth, and mighty little picture making at the present time. A rush is predicted around the middle of March.

But who'll get the rushing?

Wembley Again

Cropping up again, this is. Seems Rupert Mason wanted to have Lord Wemyss on the board, so he asked Ralph Pugh to step off. Pugh didn't see why, but finally agreed, subject to putting a nominee in his place. Put one Dickson, associated with A. E. Abrahams.

Then Mason went along, with one Well, to promote. Went around. Rather hi-hatted British Authors' Productions Company, though it owns 95 per cent of the stock of the Wembley company. Bit of an egoist, Mason appears to be. Anyway.

Things have veered Pugh's way again. He is back on the board, claims he has the finance, and it looks like Mason may get left out. But you never can tell.

Second thought: You can tell, but you don't always tell right! Wishing Pugh the best for a hard worker if nothing else.

A Harrowing Story

Fellow named Herbert Wilcox directed "Madame Pompadour," "London" and "Tiptoes." Better forget the last two. Promoting now. With Nelson Keyes. Nelson and Herbert handing each other bouquets. Got a good press agent. Billy Batten. Used to be news editor of the "Weekly Dispatch."

Made a film called "Dawn," Around the story of Nurse Cavell. Pauline Frederick was to have played lead, and didn't. Sybil Thorndike did. Now, with the picture finished, and some land at Harrow, and some stories and plays, including "When Knights Were Bold," they're promoting a $2,000,000 company. And they'll probably get the money.

Whozoo!

Appears a newspaperman fixed the Ingram-Terry-Blattner contract. Better not say who, or the Critics' Circle will start going round and round again.

Ses E. A. Baughan, dear old chap, he being film critic for the "Daily News," ses he to me, "Why do you write for 'Variety,' that dreadful paper?" Which, coming from him, is the best compliment I've had yet.

Even when a fellow like Harry Rowson, regular commuter between here and New York, tells me "Variety" carries more British film news than all the trade papers in this territory it doesn't give me a bigger thrill than a pan from one of the circle!

British Filmcraft starts shooting Feb. 20, with Mickey Neilan directing Gertrude Lawrence in a story by Edmund Goulding, working title "Sometime, Somehow." Ain't any of these fellows got a sense of humor?

Harry and Jack Warner have been in London, and have now gone to Nice. Nothing to say, as usual.

The Thames isn't the only flood. There's Archie Selwyn, Blanche Sweet, Holmes Walton, Alice Joyce and Monty Banks, all here or on their way. And Alec Francis, Vilma Banky, Holmes Herbert, old Uncle Tom Cobley and more to come.

A. E. Newbould, formerly member of Parliament for West Leyton, and an early president of the C. E. A., has come back into the film business as publicity manager for P. C. T. and its allied companies. He also runs a printing business as Palmer Newbould. No relation to Walton Newbould, the Communist M. P.

In May, 1925, Hersch Bear Abraham Rosenheim, an unnaturalized Roumanian who renamed himself Harry Rose, formed a private company with a capital of $8,000, alloting himself 4,000 20-cent shares. Later he sold his interest to another director for $200.

Now he has failed for $25,200.

Manchester branch of the Exhibitors' Association has just had to foot a bill for $2,000, cost of its die-hard agitation against the film bill.

There are being discovered lots of ways of driving a freight train clean through the film bill. Producing firm offers a writer $8,000 to write a script. Then discovers he isn't a British subject, as called for by the bill. He just gets someone to give their name to a contract and allbi his work for a coupla hundred bucks, and he pouches the rest.

Then as to booking ahead, contracts are being made with dates left blank, and another contract is made on the side agreeing to close the first contract on a date which will bring the booking within the law. Thus the salesman still gets his far ahead bookings, despite legislation and all that.

Jacques D'Auray, one-time picture actor in Hollywood, is here with Sidney Olcott as his assistant.

British Instructional Film Company, New Era Film Co., and Gaumont signed with British Dominions Proprietary Co. of Melbourne, Australia, to release 20 British films in the Antipodes. The Australian company is semi-government supported.

Latest deal of the Gibbons-Szarvasy combine is for the Thompson-Collins circuit, Newcastle-on-Tyne. There are seven theatres in this circuit, and the purchase price is believed to be $1,250,000. The two brothers Collins formerly ran the Famous Players' northern territory offices.

Stories of an ape-man scaring women and children in London suburbs are being reported to the police almost daily. Suspect this is being planted for advance publicity on "Moulin Rouge."

If so, this is about the surest way invented of getting in wrong with the press and the authorities since Harry Reichenbach pulled his "Wanted for Bigamy" police bills here some six years ago.

Newspapers Want to Play

Several of the London dailies are trying to tie up with producing companies on story schemes. Want to run competitions for stories which the papers will serialize, the producing company taking the screen rights.

Dailies figure it would be a good circulation stunt for them and also publicize a picture ahead. But as they want the producers to put up the money they have drawn blank so far.

One paper, believed to be the "Daily Mail," has suggested the producer furnish $5,000 for prize money and take the film rights in return. But not even British International sees the point from the picture angle on such a scheme.

The Quota Full

Though the quota only calls for some 70 films at the average rate of our yearly consumption, there are already over 100 productions scheduled for this year and new production companies are growing all over the place, some overnight, some underground.

So there won't be any difficulty in choosing stuff to fill the distributors' end of the quota. But it will be mighty interesting to see what and from where Famous, Fox, Universal and Warners take their necessary British stuff. The rest of the American organizations seem to be taken care of already by their affiliations.

Welwyn Deal Closed

Foreshadowed by Variety, the deal between A. E. Bundy's company, British Instructional Films, and the Welwyn Garden City authorities, has now been closed, and is one of some magnitude.

Two studios are to be built at once, arrangements having been made between the company and the city authorities for work to go on day and night so John Buchan's "Conquest" can be shot during July, next.

Site is 20 acres, near to the Great North Road and adjoining the North-Eastern Railway, with a rapid rail service to London. The town already possesses iron works, modellers' shops and ferro-concrete plants, and its recently built picture theatre, which seats 1,200, is to remain closed in the afternoon so it can be used for projecting rushes.

Welwyn Garden City is run by a limited liability company, headed by Sir Theodore Chambers, K.B.E. Back of the placing of these studios there is the idea of further promotion of housing schemes, the chief function of the Garden City company.

Looks like it will be a question of rivalry between Elstree and Welwyn, as the main idea on which the former place is being operated is real estate promotion and selling.

John Maxwell, of British International, is back from Berlin. Oystering, but something to do with Dupont first and the Ufa product next, probably.

Harley Knoles starts shooting for Westminster Films, on "The Rising Generation." Alice Joyce and Jamcson Thomas as the leads. "The White Shelk," which Knoles made for British International, is to be pre-viewed Tuesday.

Georg Jacoby, German director who made "The Fake," is to direct Henry Arthur Jones' "The Physician" for Gaumont.

BRITISH FILM IMPORTS DOUBLE—EXPORTS DROP

Washington, Feb. 14.

British import on film for the first 11 months of 1927 amounted to more than twice the footage of the same period in 1926, according to the Department of Commerce.

United Kingdom's imports of all kinds of film, raw, negative and positive, from all countries, ran to 78,000,000 linear feet against 32,000,000 the previous year.

Of this, 73,000,000 feet was raw film. There was an approximate gain of 2,000,000 feet in positives.

Exports over the same period disclose a drop for 1927 under 1926.

"Parade's" Texas 25c

Houston, Tex., Feb. 14.

"The Big Parade," which M-G declared would play all this season at 50 cents top, is now making a tour of the wards at a price not exceeding half that amount. The four and 500 seaters, playing the super 70-30 and 60-40 and sometimes, it is said, on flat rentals, expected big results.

Scotch Exhib Joins Co.

London, Feb. 14.

Robert Buchanan, prominent Scotch exhibitor, joins the Welsh Pearson company, to be floated shortly.

Strikes and Spares Break Up Maine Love Scenes

Freeport, Me., Feb. 14.

Rattle of falling pins on bowling alleys may be fitting accompaniment to battle scenes, but it's disquieting during the love stuff. Patrons of the Nordica theatre say that unless they can enjoy their movies without strikes and spares, they'll seek their amusement elsewhere.

So Leon P. Gorman has filed a bill in equity against the bowling alley proprietor next door which would enjoin the alleys from operating on three nights a week, when the shows are in progress.

HOUSE MGR. ROBBED

St. Louis, Feb. 14.

Frank Griffin, manager of the Lowell, north side neighborhood house, was preparing to drive home from the theatre Wednesday night when a bandit jumped into his car and forced him to drive to the Hall's Ferry road. Griffin was robbed of $146 and a revolver. A second car followed and the robber escaped in that machine.

Griffin had his car to drive back to town and notified the police.

W. C. NEW DIVISION

Portland, Ore., Feb. 14.

West Coast has separated the Portland and Seattle territory, with Richard Sier coming here from W. C., in California, as Oregon division manager in this section.

Herschel Stuart remains in charge of the Seattle district.

Doman, P. A., Changes Post

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Robert Doman, who left the post of publicity director at the United Artists theatre, is going to the Million Dollar in the same capacity.

Doman replaces Eddie Hitchcock, who will be sent to San Francisco.

INSIDE STUFF

ON PICTURES

Stanley Company's new president, Irving Rossheim, intends to build up a personal operating organization, it is said, with himself at the head. With all departments capably manned and co-ordinating, Rossheim believes, according to the story, that the Stanley in the executive fashion will be running properly.

Rossheim's friends say that as an executive he's efficient in every way; what knowledge he may lack in the direction of theatres or showmanship will be overcome by his departmental organization.

Meanwhile it's reported that the factional differences among the Stanley stockholders remain much the same as has been hitherto reported. None of the factions is outwardly making any undue efforts to control the company, with the Rossheim regime to be permitted to give an example of its prowess.

A report that some disappointment exists within Abe Sablosky and Jacob Fabian through not stepping into the office of Stanley's president is denied. Sablosky is vice-president and also J. J. McGuirk's partner in general business. With McGuirk leaving the Stanley presidency, to become chairman of its board, it was not anticipated Sablosky would wish to advance into what his partner had vacated. With Fabian it seemed a matter of not being able to please all of the factions with Fabian besides the large New Jersey theatre holder of the Stanley chain.

Rossheim's situation with Stanley is not unlike that of C. B. Hawley, president of First National, and looked upon as a Stanley appointment. Mr. Hawley walked into the picture producer's highest post from commercial (banking) life. With First National Mr. Hawley concerns himself only with the business end in New York and but nominally with the producing studios on the coast. He is reported to have a year's contract, probably with an option.

On a Fox site of many acres near Santa Monica, Calif., Winnie Sheehan is supervising, through expert consulting engineers, two talking picture and acoustical stages, each 325 x 200 feet. The stages will be 35 feet in height.

For sound proofness, the stages will be located in the centre of the site, midway between two boulevards and a half mile from either, to prevent extraneous sounds penetrating to the talking picture making apparatus.

In between the two stages will be a 100-foot wide building, containing the talking equipment control. This control, highly specialized and intensified, can let in or shut out any sound from among many. That is peculiarly aimed at off side remarks such as those frequently occurring in taking Movietone pictures.

The first dialog picture (characters speaking during the running of the film, which will be made by Fox as reported in more detail in Variety some months ago) may be "Dressed to Kill" and Bob Perry directing.

The special Fox stages will be the first the picture industry has had of the acoustical kind, with the engineers on acoustics giving that their undivided attention. Engineers have been gathered by Mr. Sheehan from all over the world for the talking picture stages.

Recovery from the Mississippi floods of last summer has just about been made by the Saenger circuit of that section, said the Saenger bunch in New York last week. They referred to the actual money loss, computed by the Saengers at around $600,000. The other and potential loss, of profit in the usual course of business, estimated at about $500,000, can never be recovered of course.

E. V. Richards, for the group, spoke in glowing words of the treatment and assistance given to the Saenger circuit by the entire picture industry during the calamity. He especially mentioned the good will expressed by the distributors in terms and prices for product. The Saenger circuit, said Mr. Richards, intends to make a public acknowledgment within a short time, as he stated it is due from the Saenger chain and the trade is entitled to it.

Acceptance of the French-made "Casanova" by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for distribution over here may do something to soften down the French attitude toward native importations of American pictures. A couple of influential Frenchmen were in New York for a month before the consummation of the Metro deal. "Casanova" over here will go out under another title.

Monta Bell, picture director, is in wrong in Washington, D. C., with a contingent of his home town's citizenry because of several shots in "Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G-M) recently at Loew's Palace. Story was an original by Bell and was first said to depict many of his own experiences on the papers here.

Holler centres around it "being highly immoral but that it also casts an unwarranted slur on the capital and the citizens thereof."

The quoted portion is from a telegram forwarded to Will Hays. He was asked to order the elimination of all scenes from the picture said to give Washington a blue color.

Sigmund Newfield claims a straight comedy no longer gets over. Thrills and daredevil stunts have to be injected.

M-G-M's "Rose-Marie" is credited to Lucien Hubbard for direction although Hubbard, who also supervised "Wings," is but the supervising director. Edmund Goulding did the actual megaphone wielding, and before him William Nigh was on the directorial end.

One of the picture distributors' advertising directors in New York says that in figuring up cost in his firm's advertising in the film trade papers, he has found the total at present, through increased ad rates now or shortly to arrive, exceeds the gross amount by some $200 weekly, previous to the "World"-"Herald" merger. His calculations are based upon advertising for one week at regular page rates in all of the five remaining trade sheets.

A production supervisor with one of the large producing companies on the coast has a blonde stenographer who is said to give her expert opinions on the stories turned in by writers working on the stories under the particular supervisor, with the latter nearly always accepting her opinion.

In a recent instance, a writer talked over a story with the supervisor, with the latter enthusiastic over parts of the yarn but agreeing with the writer that other sections of the story would have to be built up. The writer returned the next day to discuss building up the weak points of the story. But the production supervisor informed the scenarist that the story was not of sufficient strength to warrant spending any more time on it. When the writer asked about his statements of the day before, the supervisor answered he did not care for any part of it.

As a parting shot to the writer, the supervisor turned to his stenographer and asked her if there was any part of the story she liked and she answered in the negative.

Suspicion is never silent as to who are the simon-pure independent exhibitors; those without chain or other string attachment that would remove an indie from the pure class. In turmoils among the indie exhibs and their chain-producing competitors, such as have been abundant since the Federal Trade Commission's decision in the Famous Players investigation, the Trade Conference following and now the Brookhart bill, many of the professed simon-pures appear to want a little publicity, even if that's all they are after.

Trade papers know or should know the doubtful ones among the professed pure indies, while the outwardly doubtfuls are notorious of course so if the trade papers really want to win over the indies they had better not fall for some of the stuff the professing pures are trying to get away with.

It's not hard to ascertain who are the bad boys among indies. Nearly all indie exhibitors know, including the bad boys, and of course the chain or producing operators and frequently Mr. Hays—in person or through Charlie.

W. E. Riker, San Francisco capitalist and founder of Holy City, California, a retreat for curiosity seeking tourists, decided to become a picture producer to satisfy the whims of his secretary, Evelyn Rosencran. It appears Riker appraised her too highly in claiming that she was the "ideal woman" and would be the perfect type for his contemplated super picture production to be called "The Ideal Woman." Something happened before the picture could get under way and rather than see any other woman get the coveted role, she instituted court proceedings to hook an ideal bank roll amounting to $500,000 for breach of promise.

The director engaged to make this production must wait for the judge to decide who will get the 500 grand before he can start the picture.

A producer making westerns and dog pictures for a well known release which demands all release prints made in its own laboratories in New York City, thought he could patronize home industry by demanding his release prints be made by a Hollywood laboratory specializing in this kind of work.

The distributor agreed to the producer's demands but added that all prints had to be O. K.'d by the New York office. The local laboratory made up 40 prints at a cost of a half cent more per foot than the distributor's own plant would have charged. The prints were sent to the New York office and promptly returned because they did not come up to the distributor's standard of workmanship.

A recent report again said that Eastman is conducting talking picture experiments. The net of that is Eastman's laboratories were used some time ago by Western Electric for talking experiments, but without Eastman's having any interest in it or other talking devices.

Stories agree Fox will report a very large increase of returns on picture sales for this season. That is exclusive of Movietone receipts. Another large gainer in circulation for this season will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, from the sale stories. With M-G-M "Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" will increase its sales grosses, but this from September, last, only, and not for the entire year of 1927.

The independent picture producers are reported well satisfied with the new season to date, despite they are under many handicaps for circulation and rental prices.

Lucien Le Saint is the Pathe cameraman who shot the pictures of the French Foreign Legion. Le Saint got his instructions from the Paris office, and spent five weeks with the Legionnaires in the field and their camps.

Word has been received from Havana that John Barrymore is the favorite motion picture star among the cinema-goers of that city. In a contest that was held there, Barrymore received 2,963 votes, John Gilbert 2,355 votes and Ronald Colman 2,266 votes.

"Simba," the animal picture at the Carroll, represents an investment of about $250,000. That includes travel expenses by the Martin Johnsons who took the film in the African jungles. The Johnsons lately left New York for another visit to the same spots, accompanying the George Eastman party, with Eastman again making the trip, though he but shortly returned after six months of hunting in the same section.

When there before Eastman called on the Johnsons at their jungle built and protected camp. A scene in "Simba" shows the approach of the Eastman bunch. It was during that previous visit Eastman donated $25,000 on the spot toward the completion of the Johnsons' visit, their expedition funds at that time being low.

"The Jazz Singer" with Al Jolson on the Vitaphone has developed into a sales leader for the Warners. The picture has been holding over for a considerable term in what have been looked upon as impossible towns, even for a week's stand.

With the crush on for the Vita picture, the Warners have held it out for inclusion among group bookings. That has worked out very well. Besides "The Jazz Singer" has caused a revival in Vitaphone, its equipment and subjects, even among some houses that had allowed the wiring to grow rusty.

Production on "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" starring Richard Barthelmess for First National under the direction of Al Santell was scheduled for 36 days. The company has exceeded that time and it is figured another 30 days longer. The picture, special, will probably run $200,000 over budget.

The additional time is caused by the many trick shots which had to be taken and weather conditions governing certain scenes.

Film peddling or selling in the east in particular has proved a bonanza to some of the boys handling pictures while to others it has been poison. Some of the men who heretofore plied the trade selling film have found the going tougher and tougher. They have given up in despair and gone into for some other business.

In a checkup among three N. Y. exchanges the majority of deserters have dipped in real estate. Not one went into selling insurance.

Consolidated Amusement Enterprises picture houses in the Bronx, New York, have effected a tie-up with various merchandise houses in connection with their "Gift Nites," by which they receive merchandise free for distribution, with the proviso that the brand is emphasized.

Formerly the many articles handed out ran into good money. Under the new scheme, the only cost is that of the announcer.

John K. Hutchins is now reviewing pictures for the New York "Evening Post." Willella Waldorf is on the paper's dramatic desk.

As the result of a protest by the Portland, Me., post of Spanish-American War Veterans against the new Maine theatre using the slogan "Remember the Maine," Manager Leon P. Gorman announced he would drop it. The veterans opposed on the ground it was being used commercially.

United Artists is taking elaborate steps to maintain a distinction between "Sadie Thompson" and "Rain." A statement signed by Joe Schenck asks exhibitors to follow the United Artists press matter and not try to cash in on the reputation of the stage play, adapted from Maugham's short story, "Sadie Thompson."

As a result of the joint buying of raw stock arranged by Louis B. Mayer (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) among executives of producing companies at the beginning of the current season a saving of over $1,000,000 on film has been effected.

Mayer promoted the deal with Eastman after lining up the producers.

If everything comes through fine and dandy on the consorship thing, a foreign-made "Desires of Passion" may be road-showed and sold territorially by the New York men who have acquired the American distributing rights. The picture was made by UFA in Germany, but was not peddled to U. S. exhibs other than its distributive rights as a whole.

Independent producers making pictures on the Coast for shoe string state right distributors are beginning to rebel because of the latter's unethical method of doing business.

It is contended by the small producers that they are holding the sack

PUBLIX'S OWN MAN AS W. C. OBSERVER

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

R. E. Crahill, formerly attached to the New York office of Publix as a division house supervisor, has arrived here to take up his duties as home office representative for Publix Theatre interests on the slope.

Though West Coast Theatres Circuit operate all houses owned by Publix, Crahill, it is understood, is to be advised of and pass on general operation matters and policy of the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Oakland Publix holdings.

Crahill has no office at present, but is observing operation methods of the Metropolitan and Million Dollar here. It is understood he will travel along the coast to look over conditions for the next month or so, and then make his headquarters in Los Angeles.

Looks Like Chicago's Censor Bill Passing

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Representing 30,000 members of 30 women's organizations, a joint committee of 50 clubwomen appeared before the City Council Judiciary Committee Monday in opposition to Mayor Thompson's censorship ordinance now pending. It would remove the censor board from the Police Department and create a new board with chief commissioner appointed by the Mayor.

The committee claimed passage of the ordinance would nullify all censorship and permit the appointment of a man to work for the film interests. They recommended an alternate plan of a commission with three members with one a civil service reviewer in charge; one appointed by the Mayor and one assistant superintendent of schools.

The Judiciary committee declared this would be illegal and later indicated Thompson's original ordinance will be passed.

STANLEY, PITT., FEB. 22

Pittsburgh, Feb. 14.

New Stanley theatre, to be operated through the local subsidiary, Stanley-Davis-Clarke Corp., has announced it will open February 22.

The 4,000-seater will be managed by James Balmer, now operating the Grand here for the same company. Opening gives Loew's Penn its first big opposition.

LEO HERE AND THERE

Joe Leo, of the William Fox office, who has been attending to the reorganization of the Ascher Theatres in Chicago, now controlled by Fox, returns to New York Friday.

After a short stay he goes to the coast to join Harold Franklin.

DIRECTORS' OWN CASTING

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Gus Corda, casting director for Tiffany-Stahl, was relieved of his position with the company because of a new arrangement for casting.

Hereafter, directors producing for Tiffany-Stahl will do their own casting.

Whitman-Rice on Comedies

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Phil Whitman, former director for Mack Sennett, has been appointed assistant to George E. Marshall, supervisor of comedies, at Fox.

Andy Rice has also been appointed assistant supervisor and chief comedy writer for the Marshall department.

Boylan Coming East

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Fox will send Malcolm S. Boylan to New York next month to look over current Broadway shows for picture possibilities.

Boylan will be east for six weeks.

Tyler Brooke Featured

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Billy West will direct the next Van Bibber two-reel comedy (Fox) with Tyler Brooke featured.

West has directed four comedies for Fox since joining the comedy staff.

Shadur With M-G?

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Arthur Shadur, studio manager for Universal before becoming a producer for that company, has resigned.

He is negotiating with M-G for an executive position.

how Mr. and Mrs. 1928 pick their pictures

Mrs. 1928: "I won't waste my time on that sappy, old-fashioned stuff. I like something snappy and modern like 'GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES.' I adored the book."

Mr. 1928: "Yes, and real, red meat drama like 'OLD IRONSIDES,'* 'BEAU SABREUR,' Jannings in 'THE LAST COMMAND'and that roaring chap Bancroft in 'THE SHOWDOWN'."

Mrs. 1928: "HAROLD LLOYD is always good. He's coming in 'Speedy.' I love Clara Bow and Richard Dix too. And Grace writes me from Los Angeles that everybody's raving about 'LEGION OF THE CONDEMNED'."

FREE MASKED FILM AD FOR CAR CO., $28,000

Following up on its semi-masked advertising by getting "industrials" into the homes, Stanley Advertising Company, specializing in this work, is currently completing a subject for American Car and Foundry. It will cost that concern around $28,000 to make.

Issued on 16-m stock, the plug for A. C. & F. will go into the parlors on free of charge five 400-foot reels via mailing list, dealers, etc. The film company will spend five weeks' "shooting." To date, it has cameraed seven of the industrial concern's plants.

This branch of the Stanley corporation is also making two subjects for the Consolidated Gas Co., of New York. Each is in one reel.

Friend Owes $2,444,858, Goes Into Bankruptcy

Arthur S. Friend, realty and theatrical promoter and operator, of 145 West 86th street, New York, lists liabilities of $2,444,858 and assets of $22,267 in a voluntary bankruptcy petition.

Friend, a New York attorney, and head of the Arthur S. Friend Companies, Inc., recently became involved in some New England theatre holdings, encountering financial and legal snares. This week Loew's, Inc., entered a $26,000 judgment in New York against Friend and his corporation as a result of a joint theatre venture.

Friend was formerly an executive with Famous Players-Lasky Corp., resigning to resume his law practice and engage in independent ventures.

The Commodore-Hull, Derby, Conn., independent vaude stand operated by the A. S. Friend enterprise, closed last week when the house went into the hands of receivers.

The closing is said to be until the receivers can reorganize the house staff or possibly sell the house.

The Garde, New London, also of Friend chain has gone into receivership, but remains open. A. & B. Dow book.

Publix Units in 31 Houses by March 1

By March 1 Publix units will be playing in 31 houses in the United States and Canada.

Publix material will be introduced early next month in the Minnesota, Minneapolis; Loew's State, Columbus; Capitol, Montreal; Uptown, Toronto, and in Seattle and Portland.

This list will be strengthened by five or six other houses before early summer.

W-C STAFF SWITCHES

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

George Sheely, assistant manager at the Boulevard, has been made manager of the Vermont, succeeding Glen Harper. Latter has been brought into the general offices of West Coast Theatres, where he will work through J. J. Franklin's office.

Sheely was replaced at the Boulevard by Charles Jones, promoted from chief usher.

Hammerslough Resigns

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Charles Hammerslough resigned Saturday, after opening and managing the new United Artists theatre for a couple of weeks.

Shortly after its opening Nellie Revell, who has done the publicity for the house, also resigned.

I.A.T.S.E. IN DETROIT

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Bi-annual convention of the I. A. T. S. E., national representative organization of motion picture operators, stage hands and stage electricians unions, will be held here this year, week of June 4.

The convention of two years ago was held in Cleveland.

$1,100 Booth Fire

St. Louis, Feb. 14.

Fire in the operator's booth at the Palm theatre destroyed $600 worth of film and damaged musical instruments stored there only a few minutes before the blaze started. About $500 damage was done to the instruments, members of the orchestra said.

Edward Baker, the operator, was burned about the hands while trying to extinguish the flames before the fire department arrived.

PICTURE POSSIBILITIES

"Atlas and Eva"—Favorable

"ATLAS AND EVA" (Harry Delf, Mansfield theatre).

Though this serio-comedy does not promise much for the stage, it has running through it the spirit of a picture. A sad comic, even Chaplin, would be interested. Lait.

"Rain or Shine"—Favorable

"RAIN OR SHINE" (Jones & Green, Musical, Cohan).

While the story is familiar, has possibilities for embellishment and elaboration in view of the musical being a hit production and meriting attention because of its Broadway run.—Abel.

"Sunny Days"—Favorable

"SUNNY DAYS" (Musical, Hassard Short, Imperial).

Adapted from a French farce, book should have light comedy possibilities suitable to pictures with the usual liberties. Show's trouble is dialog, music and time it takes to plant the story. Sid.

"The Silent House"—Favorable

"THE SILENT HOUSE" (Melodrama, Lee Shubert, Morosco).

A thriller with a mystery play atmosphere. Ought to make a good trick picture. Ibee.

"Quicksand"—Unfavorable

"QUICKSAND" (Held, Jr., Comedy-Drama, Masque).

Thin stuff, generally familiar, and unlikely to click in legit. Abel.

"These Modern Women"—Unfavorable

"THESE MODERN WOMEN" (Comedy Drama, Macgowan & Rockmore, Eltinge).

Theme is that of a wife who believes she can be adulterous and yet hold her home together. Hardly for the screen. It is done on the stage in a way that is not offensive but for pictures, that's different. Ibee.

NO CHANGE— PLUNKETT

Strand, N. Y., After Good Pictures Only at Present, Says Director

Joseph Plunkett returning to the Strand, New York, after an absence of two weeks in the South, denied reports current, especially during the past week, that his house, a pioneer in elaborate presentations, would change to a grind policy at 50c.

"We contemplate no change in policy here," Mr. Plunkett stated. "All we want is good pictures," he added.

The Strand has not had a full-fledged presentation since the middle of December. At the theatre the reason for this is attributed to the length of pictures which have been shown since that time.

Another Ostrer Buy

London, Feb. 14.

Ostrer Brothers and Denman Trust are understood to have bought the National Electrical Theatres circuit here.

This chain consists of three London houses and four in the provinces.

U'S CONTEST WINNER

Universal's slogan contest for theatre owners and employees, announced in the Universal weekly in November, was closed last week and the awards made. Contest was held to determine the exhibitors' idea of an advertising catch line for Glenn Tryon.

The slogan which won and was awarded a $50 prize was "No Misfits with a Try On," by C. W. Crawford of the Gem Theatre, Washington, D. C.

ASH'S COLLAPSE

Chicago, Feb. 14.

While leading his stage band at the Oriental last Tuesday (Feb. 7), Paul Ash collapsed and was carried from the stage. The program proceeded.

Ash's condition was accredited to indigestion and overwork. He has returned to the theatre.

Franklin, Mass., House Burned

Franklin, Mass., Feb. 14.

Fire causing loss estimated at $300,000 destroyed the block in which the Morse opera house is located, the fire starting in the picture booth as the show was about to close at night.

The manager stepped to the stage and asked the audience to leave in order which they did.

Blumberg Remains With U

Milwaukee, Feb. 14.

Nate Blumberg withdrew his resignation from Universal as its division theatre manager here, at the request of the U office.

He is continuing here at U's local headquarters.

Friedman Succeeds Nellie

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Leon Friedman has joined the new United Artists theatre as press agent, the role originally occupied by Nellie Revell.

Friedman was among the victims of the sudden "Follies" closing.

NEWMAN RESIGNS

Leaving Publix March 15—Plans Six Months' Vacation

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Frank L. Newman, managing director of the Metropolitan, has tendered his resignation to Publix and to become effective March 15.

Newman came here three years ago after he sold his two houses—Newman and Royal—in Kansas City to Publix. He had supervision of three houses upon arrival here, but the Rialto was sold, and when West Coast took over operation for Publix, the Million Dollar was put under separate management.

Newman is very wealthy and contemplates taking a six months' vacation before resuming work again.

2 K-A B'way Houses Must Play Films Day and Date

Where the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit has pictures booked in the New York houses under its supervision, it has been specifically arranged that all circuit-booked pictures must play the Broadway and 5th Avenue theatres day and date.

Talker on 2-Reelers

"Ironing out" details in the Vocafilm-Educational tie-up may delay distribution under the arrangement for another six months. Educational may score some two-reelers with it.

55th St.'s Ufa's New Film

The 55th St. Cinema, another in the string of art picture houses, opens under Mike Mindlin's direction Friday night with the American premiere of an Ufa, "The Trial of Donald Westhof," directed by Fritz Wendhausen.

Louis Lusty is p. a. and managing director of the 55th St. Cinema which Mindlin's corporation took over from Jay David Blaufox, the previous owner.

Gibbs Follows Brill

Harry Gibbs, for three years exchange manager in New Haven, and who recently joined Tiffany-Stahl, has assumed managerial direction of Tiffany-Stahl's New York exchange.

Gibbs succeeds Dave Brill, who resigned to become manager of the newly-created eastern exchange by UFA.

33% Tax May Close All Jugoslavik Houses

Washington, Feb. 14.

Excessive taxation, amounting to approximately 33 per cent. of the gross, is about to shut down permanently all picture theatres in Jugo-Slavik, reports Consul K. S. Patton, Belgrade, to the Department of Commerce.

In November, '27, the houses closed as a protest against these taxes without any benefit. They reopened with the threat that unless taxes were lowered a month's strike would take place. This threat was without avail, and now the Association of Motion Picture Theatres of the Kingdom are reported to have given up hope.

In Serbia the 33 per cent. tax prevails while in Croatia it amounts to 44 per cent., and is applicable to all pictures. No aim for discrimination against American films is involved.

Back to Straight Films

The Sheridan Square, New York, will pass up all special stage stuff and presentations for the present.

The house has reverted to a straight-picture policy.

PORTABLE CONSOLES FOR PUBLIX STAGES

Invention of Otto Gluth, Circuit Engineer, Due at Dallas Palace—$8,000 to Install

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 14.

A portable organ console for stage band presentations at the Palace, local Publix house, is promised here. The innovation is the work of Otto Gluth, Publix engineer, with the Palace to be the first house so equipped.

According to design the console may be rolled on or off a stage, like a piano. It will be connected to the regular pipe sets by flexible cables. Installation costs, including a new set of tibia pipes, will cost $8,000, according to an estimate by Gluth. The latter has marked the project as an experiment, but if it gets over there is a chance all Publix houses will fall in line.

With the console on the stage, the organist will be used as a regular part of the unit shows instead of as a separate attraction. It is believed that if the idea gets over it might eventually do away with stage bands, the organist becoming the m. c., both introducing and playing for the various specialties.

Dwight Brown is the Palace's head organist, a post he has held for five years.

Bargain Bequest

Providence, Feb. 14.

Frequently gifts and bequests to educational institutions have strings attached to them, but this is a new one.

Recently, Edward Fay, theatre owner of this city, announced bestowal of $500 to Providence College providing the students sold a certain number of tickets for two of his local houses.

28 SCREEN SPEED-LIMIT

Foreign Gov't Proposes Law on Fire Angle—Exhibs Howl

Washington, Feb. 14.

Bavarian Government is proposing to order that all pictures be projected at no greater speed than 28 frames per second, reports George Canty, picture trade commissioner, Paris. Exhibitors are strongly protesting and belittling the Government claim that faster projection raises fire hazards.

Another objection is on police action. An officer can establish himself in the booth throughout the entire performance if he desires.

HARRY CAREY QUITS

For London Vaude With Cowboy Troupe—Tells Friends in Denver

Denver, Feb. 14.

Harry Carey, of western films, now playing vaude and until recently under contract to M-G, admitted to friends here that he has quit Coast pictures.

Carey will organize a troup of cowboy players and make a tour of English "halls," he says, later making a few pictures for a British concern. He also says he has sold his California ranch and home, preparatory to jumping overseas upon completion of his present Orpheum tour.

His last important role is in "Trail of '98."

FRENCH FILM NOTES

Paris, Feb. 5.

The war picture, "La Grande Epreuve," being constituted by Duges-Delzescauts and Ryder for the Jacques Haik Corp., has been bought by Paramount for distribution.

The professional fencing champion, Aldo Nadi, is entering pictures. He will appear in a "Saturday Evening Post" story, "Splendid with Swords."

A Franco-German consortium will produce the picture, with First National distributing in the U. S.

WORKING ON PATHE

ganization as stated last week. He is reported due in New York from the coast within a day or so. It is said that Mr. Pearson will shortly thereafter leave the organization.

William Sistrom, of Pathe, who came east about 10 days ago, left for the coast Saturday. On the day he left the Pathe scenario department in New York is said to have received a general two weeks' notice, although the coast scenario department, with but four people, has not been disturbed so far. On Saturday also 10 artists in Pathe's art department, New York, were reported receiving notice.

Distribution Savings

Another move looking toward economizing Pathe distribution was reported made by Phil Reisman, general sales manager for Pathe, who served notice on around 60 of its road salesmen their services will not be required, and a similar notification to several Pathe district managers. This is thought to indicate that the Pathe distribution may be immediately taken over, in part at least by F. B. O., to cut down Pathe's heavy distribution overhead, reported to have been running at around $3,000,000 annually.

Another department wiped out in Pathe is said to have been the Educational and Non-Theatrical, although that department was reported working at a clear profit.

Other than those mentioned, it is stated there will be no change in the Pathe or DeMille executive staffs of any importance.

DeMille is absolutely by himself in the Pathe end, from selecting story to deciding upon appropriation. It's unlikely he will alter any condition.

A confusing announcement of the Kennedy-Pathe juncture was issued last week, through the banking interests, from understanding. It left the impression F. B. O. would merge with Pathe, although the trade understood to some extent the nature of the deal.

Murdock's Faith

A direct bearing upon the Murdock-Kennedy business friendliness is Murdock's faith in Kennedy as a picture producer and distributor, through Kennedy having built up F. B. O. to a profitable basis, after being obliged to take it over to protect his banking interests, which were behind it. While the Pathe pictures have been averaging around $175,000 in distribution grosses and much over that on production, F. B. O. has reached beyond $350,000 on circulation, with seldom making a picture costing over $70,000.

Should Kennedy work it all out as Murdock expects, it is anticipated that a merger of F. B. O. and Pathe will follow, with Kennedy at the head of the combine, if he cares to then accept that post. There is no time limit when this result will be known.

Meanwhile Murdock remains officially president of Pathe. As the report has been that Murdock draws no salary as such officer, his title means nothing either way as against the authority granted by him to Kennedy. Murdock is head over heels in work reconstructing the recently merged forces of Keith-Albee and Orpheum Circuits.

Mutual Admiration

An odd line of circumstances brought about this workout experiment by Kennedy, unique in any industry and the first time occurring in the film trade. Through a mutual appreciation of each other, it is said, Messrs. Murdock and Kennedy have of late been much thrown together. Into this situation happened the recently reported purchase of a part interest in F. B. O. by General Electric and the Radio Corporation of America.

With these happenings, the story relates, Kennedy saw in Murdock a showman with a substantial circuit of theatres behind him besides extraordinary executive capabilities, with Murdock seeing the same things in Kennedy, minus the theatres, but plus picture production ability.

F. B. O. is known as an independent producer and distributor. It operates without theatre attachment as a producer and seller only to the trade. F. B. O. is reported to have earned net last year over one million dollars.

Pathe is a merged concern, lately taking in P. D. C. and DeMille. Both the latter were previously taken over by Keith-Albee. With the Pathe merger K-A again took control through Murdock as president.

To what extent the bankers control Pathe is not known.

Liberty League Forcing Sunday Law Showdown

Baltimore, Feb. 14.

Sunday movie advocates are giving the 18th century blue law in this town plenty annoyance.

Making good their threat of several months standing, the Liberty Defense League leased the Broadway Garden theatre, a neighborhood two Sundays ago, and screened about 60 seconds of "Mockery." Then the police stepped up and arrested John G. Callan, president of the L. D. L., and state legislator; Charles F. Mules, vice-president, and Irving Schlossberg. Brought before a grand jury an indictment was refused and the case dismissed. Callan, however, immediately prepared for a second test and last Sunday leased the Harford theatre, another neighborhood, and announced "Dumb-bells" at 25 cents. The police stopped this one after the first 100 feet or so and the case is pending.

This time the grand jury indicted the exhibitor on the grounds of violation of the Sunday work law. It was decided that the selling of programs and the taking of tickets constituted work. The case now goes to jury trial, which is what Callan and the open Sunday advocates want.

OCHS' COMMISH. CASE

Must Be Tried in Elmira, N. Y.—Claim Arose With Keeney's Lease

The Southern Tier Theatre Co., of Elmira, N. Y., which leased its theatre property for a 21-year term to Loew's, Inc., which in turn sublet to Frank Keeney, won its motion for a trial of Lee A. Ochs' suit against the company in the Elmira courts.

Nathan Burkan, for Ochs, won in the lower court, but the Appellate Division reversed Ochs and ruled that the matter be tried up-state.

Ochs denied he was field man for Loew's, and computes a $55,125 commission claim as 5 per cent of $1,102,500, the total consideration for the 21-year lease.

CHICAGO ADJOURNMENT

Joint Meeting Adjourned to February 15

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Members of the joint committee of film exhibitors, producers and distributors called an adjournment of the meeting on Feb. 7 at the Congress hotel. No definite headway was made during the session, the purpose of which was to frame a new form of contract.

Plans of the committee call for re-convening of the conference on or about Feb. 15.

FILM NEWS OVER WORLD

Washington, Feb. 14.

Summary of reports received from abroad by the motion picture section of the Department of Commerce.

Recent statistics published in the Austrian film trade press indicate that there are 762 cinemas in Austria, and eight more are to be opened this year.

They operate as follows: 209 give daily performances; 100 open two or more times a week; 172 open once or twice a week; 164 open once a week; 18 open once to three times per month; 9 open irregularly, and 10 are closed temporarily.

Total footage submittted for censorship and approved by the British Board of Film Censors during 1927 amounted to 6,593,995 linear feet, and embraced 1,758. This is an increase over the films censored and approved during 1926, when the total footage amounted to 6,288,176 linear feet, on 1,718 subjects.

Received from Trade Commissioner George R. Canty, Paris:

Twelve big features are scheduled for next season's Aafa program. Rudolf Walter-Fein, Max Obal and Dr. Johannes Guter will direct; other directors to be angaged. The Aafa Company, producers of popular German film comedies, will again pay, as last year, 10 per cent. dividend, perhaps more.

Cinema operators from different parts of Germany met in Berlin last week. Their association is still very small, counting less than 300 members, but they are trying to affiliate with a bigger trade association.

Personal Ballyhoo for Sales

"Bossy" Gillis, the ex-sailor mayor of Newburyport, who blew in and out of the local night clubs a couple of weeks ago, is being piloted by Rube Wardell, head of the "Big News Features," a new syndicate backed by Bernarr Macfadden.

Wardell took "Bossy" out to Chicago to meet Bill Thompson, mayor of the zephyr-swept village. Wardell's idea is that the newspaper feature market is glutted and that theatrical press agent methods have to be used to sell editors on a "feature" like the Gillis boy.

Hershfield Starting

W. R. Hearst officially okayed Harry Hershfield's New York column primed for the "Journal" and Harry braved the denizens of South street by invading that East River waterfront boulevard where the "American" and "Journal" plants are situated to confer on terms, policy, etc., with the "American" executives. Hershfield, while a "Journal" cartoonist, is contracted to King Features (Hearst) and does his stuff uptown near civilization on West 58th street and Broadway.

Encouraging "Pipes"

From the manner in which the New York "Daily Mirror," Hearst tabloid, has spread a couple of phony stories lately, there is a suspicion that the tab is not adverse to anything in the pipey line, even to encouraging that sort of a "story."

Monday it spread all over the front and 3 pages the story of the dancer who jumped into Central Park at 7 o'clock Sunday morning, to help business at the Lopez nite club for the rest of the week or less. The club had spent much money during the week advertising a Parisian dancing pair and maybe the couple thought it would be only a fit return to give the place a boost. Though it was very cold at 7 a. m. Sunday morning.

The other was the story "The Mirror" yelled an exclusive on, of the Archduke Leopold slamming and getting slammed at the Beaux Arts Ball at the Hotel Astor. The Archduke, who is no panic as an actor, is in Fox's "Four Sons," a special picture. It opened at the Gaiety, New York, Monday, a few days after "The Mirror" screamed about the double sock. Leopold has been in other pictures and without notice.

An ordinary impression would be that "The Mirror" is sorta sinking on the selling end. Maybe caused by too much Hearst, too much Ziegfeld or any other too much you prefer. Victor Watson, up to yesterday, was its managing editor or something. Maybe today yet too.

Young and Meant Well

A young man from a wealthy and somewhat socially prominent family, recently out of college, got the idea that he would like to work on the dramatic staff of a New York daily. Despite he had no experience with or knowledge of the theatre, he managed to get a tryout on one of the evening papers.

His ignorance of conditions sponsored a few "bones." The d. e. warned him that he'd have to be more careful or else——: He followed up a tip that a certain young and highly successful producer was planning a revival of "King Lear" and that Louis Wolheim was going to quit the movies to play the title role. He called up the producer and asked him whether the report was true.

"Yes," the producer told him, "I am going to do 'King Lear,' but not with Louis Wolheim. It's Louis Weitzenkorn who's playing Lear."

"Louis Weitzenkorn?" asked the young man, unfamiliar with the Sunday "World's" editorial staff, "who is he?"

"Don't you know?" said the producer. "Why, he's the greatest Shakespearean actor in Germany."

The assistant made him promise not to give the story to anyone else, wrote it and sent it to the composing room, and then, elated, called his chief on the phone and woke him out of a sound sleep at two a. m. to tell him the glad tidings.

They just managed to kill the yarn before the paper went to press.

P. S.—He lost the job.

Howey's "Beauty Culture"

Trade Publications, organized by Walter Howey and Verne Porter, with offices at 501 5th avenue, New York, has taken over the Joe Bryne trade papers, "Beauty Cuture" and "Barber's Journal."

Messrs. Howey and Porter are now publishing about eight trade weeklies or monthlies. They were financed by a downtown banking house and are understood to have available capital to increase their holdings at any time. Both men were formerly with the Hearst forces. Howey, with an established rep as a crackerjack newspaper man, having made his record as managing editor of Hearst dailies, surprised his friends when digging into the trade paper field.

Both of the principals appear satisfied with their venture. The first consolidation with all titles retained and separate staffs comprised six traders. Of these the results were about 50-50, three looking good and the other three in doubt. One of the doubtfuls was pulled over to the right side. It was a musical paper and Deems Taylor was installed as editor. The first story Taylor used was a whale and a clean beat about the Metropolitan. He is still editing it with the size increased from 16 to 44 pages.

"Beauty Culture" has its field to itself and is not altogether in the trade class, although ostensibly devoted to the beauty parlors. It's susceptible of a national circulation through its ever highly interesting material, to women.

Among the group are about three in exclusive fields. One is a perfumery publication and probably the handsomest printed monthly in the country. Entirely of pictorial announcements with unusually fancy art work and all in colors.

"Reverting to Type"

Variety was wrong about the Brooklyn "Eagle" having a new columnist in William Weer. Weer was succeeded by Rian James, whose department has the swell title "Reverting to Type."

cated with a new column, written and illustrated by himself, under the title "Broadway Unlimited." Hershfield is rated one of the busiest mixers on the main drag, with a quaint style backed up by philosophical human interest leanings. He is a famous gagger also.

Hearst's Panning Ed

They're talking about the recent New York "American" editorial which is interpreted as a slap by William Randolph Hearst at M. Koenigsberg, head of Kings Features, Inc., who was given a French decoration recently as a Legionaire of Honor. The "American" editorial stated that no Hearst employee or ally could afford foreign entaglements by decoration, distinction or other honor.

It's probably the first time in weeks W. R. had time to forget Mexico.

Envious of Women

The antagonism of the old-time road agents toward the younger element is becoming more and more marked as the ranks are being filled by the rising generation. This is true when the younger ones also happen to be women. A few weeks ago a clever young Chicago newspaper woman was engaged by a producer to do special publicity on one of his shows, with a woman star and a woman author. The newspaper girl, with many friends on papers throughout the middle west, was getting lots of extra space and not interfering with the regular advance man, working mostly a week behind him, breaking into the society and woman's pages.

The agent, an old-timer, resented her presence and didn't hesitate to let her know it, even going so far as to tell her he'd have her out of the job inside of a month. The girl kept her silence and her mind on the job and continued to get space where he failed. All of which riled him so much that he sent the producer a wire, saying that if the girl weren't fired he'd quit. Much to his astonishment, the producer wired back that his resignation was accepted.

The girl is now handling the show and will continue to do so for the rest of the season. The old-timer is out with another outfit.

Catherine Brody's Story

Catherine Brody, who has contributed to "Liberty" and the "American Mercury," has sold her first novel on Jewish life in New York to the "Century," in which it will be run as a serial.

Fawcett's Ed Changes

A recent shakeup among the editorial force of the Fawcett Publications has resulted in two of its editors being let out, with Minneapolis newspapermen going in in their places. Douglas Lurton, former city editor of the Minneapolis "Star," is the new editor of "Battle Stories." Francis Bosworth, movie editor of the Minneapolis "Journal," has succeeded Donna Fisher as editor of "Screen Secrets," a film fan monthly. Miss Fisher only lasted some three months. The Fawcett Publications have their headquarters at Robbinsdale, Minn., not far from Minneapolis. Their latest mag, small size, is called "Smokehouse Monthly."

Otis Wiese editing "McCall's Magazine," succeeding H. P. Burton. He formerly assisted his predecessor.

Maugham's Rewrites

W. Somerset Maugham, the English story writer and playwright, author of the play "The Letter," and the story of "Sadie Thompson," from which "Rain" was dramatized, among others, is having so big a vogue his publishers have prevailed upon him to rewrite some of his older works. The first is "Mrs. Chaddock," novel, published about 20 years ago. It has been brought out by Doubleday, Doran & Co.

"HAPPINESS" A POSITIVE KNOCKOUT

WITH

WM. FOX'S "FOUR SONS," CARTHAY CIRCLE THEATRE, LOS ANGELES

PRESS—STARS—PUBLIC, UNANIMOUS

L. A. "TIMES," Edwin Schallert.—Jack Laughlin's "Happiness" is the major entertainment. A positive sensation of art-color and the remarkable Laughlin finesse.

L. A. "EXPRESS," Munroe Lathrop.—Worth the price of admission is Jack Laughlin's stage show, "Happiness." It has beauty, speed, originality and amazed the most critical audience ever. Laughlin gave them a knockout.

L. A. "HERALD," Harrison Campbell.—Jack Laughlin's production is excellent. Laughlin is a disciple of speed, color and originality.

"FILMOGRAPH."—The Laughlin show is the greatest produced here by this genius or any of the OTHER producers—it is tremendous.

"CALIFORNIAN."—Jack Laughlin's "Happiness," the seventh of his great Carthay Circle shows with Wm. Fox super-specials, stamps this boy Laughlin as the genius of prologue producers. If he is not directing some of our best motion pictures within the year, it is his own fault. Some motion picture corporation will find this fellow and he will create a tremendous picture that will put him at the top where he belongs.

PERSONAL MANAGEMENT OF MR. FRED A. MILLER

THE BATTLES OF CORONEL AND FALKLAND ISLANDS

(British Made)

British Instructional Corporation production. Presented by A. C. Bundy. Released for America through Artlee Pictures Corporation. Directed by Walter Sanders with J. V. C. Arton, assistant director. Picture's supervisor, H. Bruce Wolfe. At Cameo, New York, week Feb. 12. Running time, around 80 minutes.

Billing

Actual reproduction of these vivid and historical naval engagements, created with co-operation of British admiralty and Navy league.

37 Battleships—37,000 Men

Including the following battleship actors: H. M. S. Barham for H. M. S. Invincible H. M. S. Malaya for H. M. S. Inflexible. H. M. S. Cardiff for H. M. S. Good Hope. H. M. S. Concord for H. M. S. Monmouth. H. M. S. Conquest for H. M. S. Glasgow. H. M. S. Coventry for S. M. S. Sharnhorst. H. M. S. Seres for S. M. S. Gneisenau.

None of the ships that were in either engagement still existed at the time of the making of this film, with the exception of one. All were sung by enemy action and the remaining one was broken up at the conclusion of the war.

This pictured reproduction of a couple of naval engagements between England and Germany early in the war amounts here to a couple of hot scenes stretched out to 9,000 feet or so. In between for the padded footage are some useless scenes and considerably of that inane. As, for instance, at one time using perhaps 50 feet to show an anchor being weighed.

High interest in the picture will be with the English and the Germans. Over here those who went to war on land or sea may want to see it and that leaves for its draw an 85 per cent male audience. Its title should attract boys curious to see even a picture battle of the cruisers.

Much may depend upon the press work and there should be plenty handy with the subject, the memories it can recall and the people engaged. Although the picture's own billing is incredibly extravagant and should be toned down to facts. It says 37 warships and 37,000 men. As a matter of fact both engagements on the water involved 12 battle boats and there are not enough extras by some 36,000 to live up to the billing.

There are two actual engagements that will break even for those concerned. In the first engagement at Coronel, the Germans defeated the English, sinking two English boats with the odds five Germans to two English ships. At Falkland Islands, where each had five warships, the English wiped out the entire German fleet, without a ship's casualty of its own.

Of propaganda may have been of record or inserted at Falkland Islands, to bring out the humaneness of the English in attempting to give the Germans a chance to surrender, also the English sailor boys saving the Germans who went overboard from their boats. Again at Coronel a bit is interjected that places the Germans in a favorable light, and again when the German admiral, in accepting a bouquet at the celebration of his victory, tersely remarked, "These will be handy when it comes my turn."

In between the battle scene are wide spaces, filled in by what not, including the First Sea Lord's office in London and the Sea Lord himself, Lord Fisher, and well played by the unnamed actor. If there are impersonations here of the originals of the ships' highest officers, including the rear admirals and admirals, Americans cannot detect it. Besides, the names of the players are not programed.

In acting Admiral Sudcree (English) gave the best performance.

In warfare the engagements were about limited as could be expected to flashes from the big guns aboard the boats, with the usual cut offs. Sinking of boats may be seen in the dim distance, suggesting camera trickery in that of course. Smokestacks toppling over and supposedly into the ocean with nothing but the stacks seen would be a simple studio operation in California.
